

BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

1942

LIBRARY
OF THE
SAN FRANCISCO THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
SAN ANSELMO
CALIFORNIA

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2026

THE BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

THIRTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL CUMULATION

MARCH 1942 TO FEBRUARY 1943 INCLUSIVE

EDITED BY MERTICE M. JAMES
AND DOROTHY BROWN

MANAGING EDITOR
SADIE BRACHFELD

Property of Graduate Theological Union Return to San Francisco Theological Seminary

NEW YORK
THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY

1943

Printed in the U. S. A.

TO THE LIBRARY OF THE UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF
THE ARMY
WASHINGTON, D. C.

PREFACE

This, the thirty-eighth, Annual volume of the BOOK REVIEW DIGEST contains in one alphabet the information regarding books of 1941 and 1942 imprint appearing in the monthly issues of the DIGEST from March 1942 to January 1943 inclusive, plus 197 titles not previously included. Approximately 3700 books are included in all. All books with 1943 imprint will be found in current issues of the DIGEST beginning with March 1943.

This annual volume necessarily covers only reviews published prior to February 15, 1943. Additional reviews of 1942 books included that appear after this date will be added in the issue for August 1943, if outstanding, or if needed to give the book adequate representation.

The list of periodicals from which reviews are clipped and digested remains the same as for the previous year, with the addition of the Boston Globe.

A new feature appears in this annual volume as an experiment: for the books that have appeared on the various "Best Seller" lists, a record of the lists on which each book appeared, with the number of times on each, is given on a separate line, between the descriptive note and the excerpts from reviews. A sample entry and list of abbreviations used will be found under the heading Explanations, on page VI.

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are made

- Am Anthropol—American Anthropologist. $6. American Anthropological Association, E. Weitzner, American Museum of Natural History, New York
- Am Chem Soc J—Journal of the American Chemical Society. $8.50. Charles L. Parsons, sec, 1155 16th St, NW, Washington, D.C.
- Am Econ R—American Economic Review. Paul T. Homan, managing ed. $5; free to members. American Economic Assn, Evanston, Ill.
- Am Hist R—American Historical Review. Guy Stanton Ford, managing ed. $5; free to members of the American Historical Assn. Macmillan Co, 60 Fifth Av, New York
- Am J Psychol—American Journal of Psychology. $6.50. Morrill Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.
- Am J Pub Health—American Journal of Public Health and Nation's Health. H. S. Mustard, ed. $5. American Public Health Assn, 1790 Broadway, New York
- Am J Soc—American Journal of Sociology. Herbert Blumer, ed. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- Am Pol Sci R—American Political Science Review. Frederic A. Ogg, managing ed. $5; free to members. American Political Science Assn, 450-458 Ahnapp St, Menasha, Wis.
- Am Soc R—American Sociological Review. $4 (to libraries $3; to students $2.50). American Sociological Society, H. A. Phelps, University of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh
- Ann Am Acad—Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. Thorsten Sellin, ed. $5; free to members. 3457 Walnut St, Philadelphia
- Atlantic—Atlantic Bookshelf of the Atlantic Monthly. $5. Atlantic Monthly Co, 8 Arlington St, Boston
- Booklist—Booklist. $3. American Library Assn, 520 N Michigan Av, Chicago
- Bookmark—Bookmark. 50c New York State Library, University of the State of New York press, Albany
- Books—New York Herald Tribune Books. $1. N Y Tribune, Inc, Publisher, 230 W 41st St, New York
- Boston Globe—Boston Globe $5.40 P.O. Box 189, Boston, Mass.
- Canadian Forum—Canadian Forum. Eleanor Godfrey, managing ed. $2. Canadian Forum, Ltd, 28 Wellington St, W, Toronto 5, Canada
- Canadian Hist R—Canadian Historical Review. $2. University of Toronto Press, Toronto
- Cath World—Catholic World. James M. Gillis, ed. $4. Missionary Society of St Paul the Apostle, 411 W 59th St, New York
- Chem & Eng N—Chemical and Engineering News. $2. American Chemical Society, Charles L. Parsons, sec, 1155 16th St, NW, Washington, D.C.
- Chem & Met Eng—Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering. $3. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York
- Christian Century—Christian Century. Charles Clayton Morrison, ed. $4. Christian Century Press, 407 S Dearborn St, Chicago
- Christian Science Monitor (Atlantic ed)—Christian Science Monitor. $12. Christian Science Publishing Society, 1 Norway St, Boston
- Churchman—Churchman. $5. Churchman Company, 425 Fourth Av, New York
- Class Philol—Classical Philology. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- Commonweal—Commonweal. Edward Skillin, jr., ed. $5. Commonweal Pub. Co, Inc, 386 Fourth Av, New York
- Crozer Q—Crozer Quarterly. $1.50. Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa.
- Current Hist—Current History. Spencer Brodneyn, ed. $2. Events Pub. Co, Inc, 225 Varick St, New York
- Current History (founded 1914) combined with The Forum and The Century Magazine, May 23, 1940; Current History and Forum combined with Events, July 21, 1941, and the name Current History restored, beginning with the issue, September, 1941.
- Economist. £3. Economist Newspaper, Ltd, Brettenham House, Lancaster Place, London, WC 2
- El School J—Elementary School Journal. R. W. Tyler and others, eds. $2.50. Dept. of Education, University of Chicago, Chicago
- Eng N—Engineering News-Record. $5. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York
- Eng Hist R—English Historical Review. 32s. Longmans, Green & Co, Ltd, 43 Albert Drive, London, SW 19 ($7.50. 55 Fifth Av, New York)
- Ethics—Ethics. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- Foreign Affairs—Foreign Affairs. Hamilton Fish Armstrong, ed. $5. Council on Foreign Relations, Inc, 45 E 65th St, New York
- Forum. See Current Hist & Forum
Merged with Current History, July 1940
- Geog R—Geographical Review. $5. American Geographical Society, Broadway & 156th St, New York
- Harvard Business R—Harvard Business Review. $5. McGraw-Hill Book Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York
- Hibbert J—Hibbert Journal. 10s. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd, 40 Museum St, London, WC 1 ($2.50. Leroy Phillips, 178 Tremont St, Boston)
- Horn Bk—Horn Book. Bertha E. Mahony, ed. $2.50. Horn Book, Inc, 264 Boylston St, Boston
- J Geol—Journal of Geology. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- J Home Econ—Journal of Home Economics. Helen P. Hostetter, ed. $2.50. American Home Economics Assn, 620 Mills Bldg, Washington, D.C.
- J Philos—Journal of Philosophy. $4. 515 W 116th St, New York
- J Phys Chem—The Journal of Physical Chemistry. $10. Williams & Wilkins Co, Mt Royal & Guilford Aves, Baltimore, Md.
- J Pol Econ—Journal of Political Economy. Jacob Viner and F. H. Knight, eds. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- J Religion—Journal of Religion. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- Library J—Library Journal. Bertine E. Weston, ed. $5. R. R. Bowker Co, 62 W 45th St, New York
- Library Q—Library Quarterly. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- Management R—Management Review. $5. American Management Assn, 330 W 42d St, New York
- Manchester Guardian—Manchester Guardian. 78s. Manchester Guardian, 3 Cross St, Manchester; Guardian Newspapers, Inc, 220 W 42d St, New York
- Mod Philol—Modern Philology. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- Nation—Nation. Freda Kirchwey, ed. $5. Nation, Inc, 55 Fifth Av, New York

- Nature—Nature. £4 10s. Macmillan & Co, Ltd, St Martin's St, London, WC 2 ($22.50 Macmillan Co, 60 Fifth Av, New York)
- New Eng Q—New England Quarterly. $4. M. Ellis, 200 Stevens Hall, Orono, Me.
- New Repub—New Republic. Bruce Bliven and others, eds. $5. Editorial Publications, Inc, 40 E 49th St, New York
- New Statesman & Nation—New Statesman and Nation. 32s 6d. 10 Great Turnstile, London, WC 1
- N Y New Tech Bks—New York Public Library New Technical Books. 25c N Y Public Library, Fifth Av & 42d St, N.Y.
- N Y Times—New York Times Book Review. $2. N Y Times Co, Pub, 229 W 43d St, New York
- New Yorker—New Yorker. H. W. Ross, ed. $6. F-R. Pub. Corp, 25 W 43d St, New York
- News Ed—News Edition (American Chemical Society) $2; single numbers 15c. American Chemical Society, Mills Bldg, 1709 G St, N.W., Washington, D.C.
- Name changed to Chemical and Engineering News, January 10, 1942
- No Am—North American Review. $4. North American Review Corp, 420 Madison Av, New York
- Pacific Affairs—Pacific Affairs. $2. 129 E 52d St, New York
- Poetry—Poetry. Peter DeVries and Jessica Nelson North, eds. $3. 232 E Erie St, Chicago
- Pol Sci Q—Political Science Quarterly. John A. Krout, managing ed. $5; free to members. Academy of Political Science, Columbia University, New York
- Sat R of Lit—Saturday Review of Literature. Norman Cousins, ed. $4. Saturday Review Associates, Inc, 25 W 45th St, New York
- School & Society—School and Society. William C. Bagley, ed. $5. free to members of the Society for the Advancement of Education. Science Press, N Queen St and McGovern Av, Lancaster, Pa.
- School Arts—School Arts. Pedro deLemos, ed. $4. School Arts, Printers Bldg, 44 Portland St, Worcester, Mass.
- School R—School Review. R. W. Tyler and others, eds. $2.50. Dept. of Education, University of Chicago, 5835 Kimbark Av, Chicago
- Scientific Bk Club R—Scientific Book Club Review. Subscription. Scientific Book Club, Inc, 80 Lafayette St, New York
- Social Educ—Social Education. $2. 1201 Sixteenth St, NW, Washington, D.C.
- Social Forces—Social Forces. $4. Williams & Wilkins Co, Baltimore
- Social Studies—Social Studies. $2. McKinley Publishing Co, 809-811 N 19th St, Philadelphia
- Special Libraries—Special Libraries. $5. Special Libraries Assn, 31 East Tenth St, New York
- Spec—Spectator. The Spectator, Ltd. 30s. 99 Gower St, London, WC 1
- Springf'd Republican—Springfield Republican. $11. Republican Publishing Co, 32 Cypress St, Springfield, Mass.
- Copies of this paper came in irregularly from February 19, 1942 until October 1st.
- Subscription Bks Bul—Subscription Books Bulletin. $2. American Library Association, 520 N Michigan Av, Chicago
- Survey—Survey Midmonthly. Paul Kellogg, ed. $3. Survey Associates, Inc, 112 E 19th St, New York
- Survey G—Survey Graphic. Paul Kellogg, ed. $3. Survey Associates, Inc, 112 E 19th St, New York
- Theatre Arts—Theatre Arts. Edith J. R. Isaacs, ed. $3.50. Theatre Arts, Inc, 40 E 49th St, New York
- Time—Time. Henry R. Luce, ed. $5. Time, Inc, 330 E 22d St, Chicago
- Times [London] Lit Sup—Times Literary Supplement. 17s 4d. Times Publishing Co, Ltd, Printing House Square, London, E.C. 4; $4.15. The Times (London), North American Office, 280 Broadway, New York
- Yale R ns—Yale Review. Helen MacAfee, managing ed. $3. Yale University Press, 143 Elm St, New Haven, Conn.

In addition to the above list the Book Review Digest sometimes quotes from Cleveland Open Shelf; Columbia Law Review; Harvard Law Review; Pratt Institute Quarterly; Publishers' Weekly; Review of Scientific Instruments; Wisconsin Library Bulletin; Yale Law Journal; and other bulletins and papers.

Explanations

The descriptive note is separated from critical notices of a book by a dash.

The plus and minus signs preceding the name of the magazine indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the entire review.

In the reference to a magazine, the first number refers to the volume, the next to the page, the letters to the date and the last figures to the number of words in the review.

(W) Sets of Wilson catalog cards are available for all books marked with this symbol. Publishers' directory will be found at the end of this number.

For the books in this volume which have appeared on various "Best Seller" lists, a record of the lists on which the book appeared, with the number of times in each, in parentheses, is printed after the descriptive note; for example see the following sample entry:

JENNINGS, JOHN EDWARD. Gentleman ranker. 565p $2.75 Reynal (W) 42-20097

Appeared on Best Seller list in: B & T(1) Books(10) RB(1) Times (10)

The following symbols indicate the journals from which best seller lists have been taken

ALA—American Library Association Bulletin

B & T—Baker & Taylor Outstanding Books

Books—Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

PW—Publishers' Weekly

RB—Retail Bookseller

S—Saturday Review of Literature

SB—Scientific Book Club

Times—New York Times Book Review

W—Wilson Library Bulletin

Book Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Literature

Cumulation of monthly numbers March 1942—February 1943

ABBEY, KIERAN, pseud. And let the coffin pass. 237p $2 Scribner

42-10294

Detective story.

Booklist 38:369 Je 1 '42

"This one is sober-sided, dark, devious and expertly riddled, without recourse to comic relief. Readers who want to suffer with a likely heroine will rejoice from the start, while those who wish to concentrate on the puzzle will be triply rewarded." Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 Ap 19 '42 200w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 Ap 12 '42 240w

"Good but very winding story."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 My '23 '42 50w

ABBOTT, GRACE. From relief to social security; the development of the new public welfare services and their administration [ed. by Edith Abbott]. 388p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

361.6 Charities—U.S. Social work. Charity laws and legislation 42-2234

Collected papers of a social worker, who was professor of Public welfare administration at the University of Chicago, and chief of the United States Children's bureau. Practically all of the papers were written during the last ten years. Part 1, is called Toward an adequate public assistance program; part 2, is Some administrative problems of the public welfare services. Index.

Reviewed by J. P. C. Carey

Am Pol Sci R 36:963 O '42 550w

Reviewed by Marietta Stevenson

Ann Am Acad 221:236 My '42 700w

Booklist 38:203 F 15 '42

"If the reader peruses this heterogeneous collection of materials with a sympathetic eye, he will discover much in it of lasting interest. . . Enough is included about the history of public welfare and concerning some of the theoretical problems involved in the transition from relief to social security, to make it of general interest to students of social problems as well as to those specializing in public welfare administration." Murray Ross

+ Pol Sci Q 57:478 S '42 330w

"In editing a series of papers written by her sister Grace, Edith Abbott has earned the gratitude of those interested in public welfare developments during the last decade. . . To those who knew her and admired her forceful leadership and clear vision, these papers must recall the many times they heard her speak forthrightly and vigorously. Those who had the privilege of working with her will feel particularly indebted to Edith Abbott for making these papers available." Marietta Stevenson

+ Survey 78:93 Mr '42 330w

ABBOTT, NABIA. Aishah, the beloved of Mohammed. 230p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Aishah

42-25320

A biography of Aishah, one of Mohammed's many wives. Married to the middle-aged prophet at the age of six, Aishah became a widow at eighteen, and during the fifty years that followed before her own death, she wielded considerable influence due to her reputation as the "beloved wife of the prophet" and to the fact that she was the daughter of the first caliph, Abū Bakr. Index.

"Miss Abbott bases her study on untranslated Arabic sources, and weighs the evidence on many obscure and controversial points. Her narrative, which is the first complete biography of Aishah, not only contains much that is of general interest but is a scholarly piece of original research."

+ Christian Century 60:19 Ja 6 '43 420w

"Author, born in Turkey, came to this country in 1924 and is now assistant professor of Islamic studies at Chicago University. Her book, showing careful sifting of traditional sources, should be of considerable interest to students of Mohammedan world." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 67:949 N 1 '42 130w

"The book has not only the merit of being the first monograph ever written on Aishah, but it is also a contribution to our literature on Arabia. In our time, when the East has gained such an immediate importance, Miss Abbott's book fills a real need and should be widely read." Ilse Lichtenstadter

+ N Y Times p29 Ja 24 '43 700w

ABEND, HALLETT. Ramparts of the Pacific. 322p il $3.50 Doubleday

919 Oceania. World war, 1939—Oceania. Eastern question (Far East) (W) 42-36213

Just three months before Pearl Harbor, the author, who was for many years the New York Times correspondent in the Far East, took a 40,000 mile air trip from Washington, D.C., to Batavia and back. En route he stopped at Los Angeles, Honolulu, Canton Island, Naumea, Auckland, Sydney, Darwin, Bali, and Surabaya. In his account of the trip he discusses defenses, economics, and war strategy, in the light of his own previous knowledge of the East and the observations which he made at the time. Parts of the book have appeared in magazines. Index.

"With no little confusion of arrangement, it weaves together a rather commonplace discussion of general problems of the Pacific, and a record of things seen and heard during this last-minute survey. This record is of keen interest, and parts of it will have a permanent historical value." T. H. Thomas

ABEND, HALLETT—Continued

+ Atlantic J1 '42 300w

Booklist 38:344 My 15 '42

"In the Dutch Indies and the Philippines Mr. Abend did a painstaking job of reporting and has written very pleasantly about his adventures and encounters. . . . The sections of Mr. Abend's book on Australia and New Zealand are . . . the sprightliest; but there is a lot of new information about territories in which the Japanese now have the upper hand, which will make the daily news from that part of the world more intelligible and interesting. There are also revelations which will be important items in the future histories of what has already happened. Abend has been wooed by his exciting plane jaunt to the best descriptive writing that he has ever done." Rodney Gilbert

+ Books p3 My 3 '42 1450w

"Gripping and well-documented, the book gives a lively picture of how war came to the world's largest ocean, and describes its ram-parts of freedom." R. H. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 28 '42 450w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 20w

Manchester Guardian p3 S 11 '42 330w

Reviewed by Joseph Newman

Nation 154:715 Je 20 '42 750w

Reviewed by G. E. Taylor

New Repub 106:738 My 25 '42 300w

"Mr. Abend's good reporting, together with his frank but constructive criticism, makes interesting reading and won't hurt any one's morale." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 My 3 '42 1550w

"Some excellent background material. Crisply written and in certain respects almost bitterly frank."

+ New Yorker 18:79 Ap 25 '42 70w

Pratt p22 D '42

"Abend is a good reporter. His writing may sometimes be completely inconsequential; at other times it may be buckling under the load of facts. But whatever he has to say is straightforward, simple, and interesting. . . . The book may neither be deep nor sparkling, but it is timely and its roots lie firm in solid fact. It is the best of the post-Pearl Harbor reportorial books on the southwest Pacific." Mark Gayn

+ Sat R of Lit 25:13 My 9 '42 550w

"The presentation of obtruse conflicts in a simple yet dramatic guise fulfilled in its time a useful function; the Gunthers, the Abends, the Reynolds, certainly deserve the gratitude of plain men. But in the fourth year of the war we need something more substantial than the article built round a telling headline. For this reason Mr. Abend's book, lively and intelligent though it is, leaves one with a strange feeling of political insufficiency. It is another matter when he is content to describe his own visual experiences, without drawing any political implications from them. . . . As a picture of the other hemisphere on the verge of war, Ramparts of the Pacific is well worth reading. As a contribution to our understanding of the Pacific war, its value is perhaps less obvious." Simon Harcourt-Smith

+ Spec 169:318 O 2 '42 380w

"This book, best perhaps in its angry parts, deserves wide reading." E. O. Hauser

+ Survey G 31:364 Ag '42 130w

"Among this book's merits is the exactness of its figures on Japanese planes and plane production."

+ Time 39:88 My 25 '42 60w

"This book is very well worth reading. Mr. Abend has added to the expert analysis of the Far Eastern situation and the personal contacts of a leading journalist the interest of the traveller."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p482 O 3 '42 700w

Wis Lib Bul 38:95 Je '42

ACOMB, EVELYN MARTHA. The French laic laws (1879-1889) the first anti-clerical campaign of the third French republic. 282p $3.50 Columbia univ. press

261.7 Roman Catholic church in France. France—Politics and government. Church and state in France

41-24522

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"Throughout the monograph Dr. Acomb has used the materials—often violently partisan in nature—with a scholarly, detached care that makes her contribution useful to anyone interested in nineteenth century French history." J. B. Wolf

+ Am Hist R 47:604 Ap '42 490w

"This is a clear, detailed, and reasonably objective account of the secularization of education, the re-establishment of divorce, the expulsion of the Jesuits, and other anti-clerical legislation in France during the period covered. The causal analysis is chiefly original in the importance ascribed to the Comtean philosophy, and to motives of political expediency." Emile Benoit-Smullyan

+ Am Soc R 7:128 F '42 200w

"Dr. Acomb has performed a difficult task and has rendered a valuable contribution to an understanding of this phase of French history. France has never been happy under the domination of Rome." R. E. E. Harkness

+ Crozer Q 19:170 Ap '42 250w

"It is scarcely accurate to include the Jesuits among 'monks' (p. 17), and it is a little surprising to find 'Leo Taxil' described as 'a reformed mason, whose word, it is true, was not always trustworthy' (p. 116). This is something of an understatement, considering the career of that egregious liar. What he wrote about the Masons should surely have been explained in the light of his celebrated exposure of himself and his dupes on April 19, 1897, of which event Miss Acomb seems strangely unaware. Nor does she mention his real name (G. Jogand-Pagès). But the book as a whole deserves the respect of scholars." J. T. McNeill

+ J Religion 22:329 J1 '42 180w

"The second part of this work has those virtues which we can always expect in a good doctoral dissertation: diligent examination of the available materials, attention to detail, meticulous comparison of different authorities. . . . The first half of the volume has the chief weaknesses which we have come to expect even in the better doctoral dissertations: lack of historical perspective and failure to generalize." Carroll Quigley

+ Social Studies 33:92 F '42 360w

ACRE, STEPHEN. Yellow overcoat. 232p $2

Dodd

42-23433

Detective story.

Booklist 39:225 F 1 '43

"This has that wonderful flavor and plenty of merriment in the telling. Much easier to read than most yarns in its bracket." Will Cuppy

+ Books p31 N 8 '42 150w

"Good."

+ Boston Globe p19 O 28 '42 40w

"The tale is amusing and entertaining, a clever variation on the tough-and-funny type. There is an intoxicated detective, but he is a variation, too." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p18 O 18 '42 120w

ADAMIC, LOUIS. What's your name? 248p $2.50 Harper

929.4 Names, Personal. U.S.—Emigration and immigration (W) 42-21195

An informal treatise on the subject of European-American surnames; why do some immigrants change or Anglicize their names, why do others not do so, and what effect does the change or the lack of it have upon their lives and fortunes.

Booklist 39:31 O 1 '42

"Because the problem of name-changing is in the final analysis intensely subjective Mr. Adamic concludes his book with a novella-length case history of young Sobuchanowsky who changed his name to Nichols. Aside from its value as an individualized consideration of all the emotional and psychological elements involved in a change, this is a first-rate narrative, as vivid as fiction and more convincing. What happened to Nichols-Sobuchanowsky is about as revealing a tale of a second-generation American as I know." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p3 S 6 '42 1300w

Commonweal 37:20 O 23 '42 140w

New Repub 107:357 S 21 '42 60w

Reviewed by F. E. Hirsch

N Y Times p12 S 27 '42 1050w

"Third installment in the author's valuable Nation of Nations Series, which has to do with the divers ethnic backgrounds of Americans. This volume is . . . perhaps not quite so solid as the earlier books, but a warm contribution to our national understanding."

+ New Yorker 18:60 S 5 '42 90w

"The American simply cannot understand why a man called Adamciewicz wants to keep his name in the navy, or why the numerous Krzyzanowskis want to hold on to that impossible designation in the army. . . . Mr. Adamic does not try to give the solution. That is not possible for anyone, so much depends upon individual feelings and temperament, upon customs, traditions, and loyalties. . . . He gives all sides of the case and not merely his own interpretations. One thing that makes this book so readable, and at times exciting and pathetic, is that he tells story after story in the words of those who have written or related their experiences to him." O. G. Villard

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 S 26 '42 800w

School & Society 56:168 Ag 29 '42 50w

"Readers of My America, Native's Return, and other works of Mr. Adamic will probably prefer them to this more specialized work. It should, however, make good, easy reading for any teacher, and especially good reading for teachers whose classes contain many children of recent immigrant stock. Occasionally the reader will be impressed with an excess of detail, and he may miss an index, but he will find the book as a whole informative, fascinating, and highly provocative." L. S. Kenworthy

+ Social Educ 6:376 D '42 450w

Reviewed by Agnes Addison

Social Studies 33:375 D '42 390w

Reviewed by J. P. Gavitt

Survey G 31:600 D '42 600w

Wis Lib Bul 38:132 O '42

ADAMS, CHARLOTTE. Run of the house.

271p $2.25 Macmillan

640 Home economics (W) 42-36245

Advice, some general, some detailed, on how to run a house whether with one maid, four, or none; on an income of $2,000 or $10,000; with or without children, husband, and guests. The author conducts a column on food in the New York newspaper, PM. Index.

Booklist 38:421 J1 1 '42

"The advice is personal and there is a flow of happy anecdote drawn from personal experience. A bride will save herself confusion through its sensible ideas on organization, and an experienced housekeeper enjoy its evident pleasure in keeping house."

+ Books p21 Je 7 '42 230w

"Remarkably comprehensive and intelligent book on housekeeping."

+ Christian Century 59:757 Je 10 '42 200w

"Style chatty, confidential, humorous. Very readable. Recommended for all libraries." E. F. Kelly

+ Library J 67:367 Ap 15 '42 60w

Wis Lib Bul 38:116 J1 '42

ADAMS, CLEVE F. Private eye. 284p $2 Reynal

42-21434

Detective story.

"Those sterling citizens who crave hardboiled mystery should yell for 'The Private Eye' without delay. It has all the merits of 'Sabotage,' 'Decoy' and other works by Cleve F. Adams, and it struck us as a better mixture, somehow—a truly worthwhile example of the swearing, fleshly, pandemonium school of art, with a clever jigsaw and all to match." Will Cuppy

+ Books p25 S 27 '42 230w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p10 S 27 '42 200w

"Fast and tough."

New Yorker 18:80 S 26 '42 70w

"Hair-trigger stuff."

Sat R of Lit 25:19 O 5 '42 40w

ADAMS, CLEVE F. What price murder. 251p $2 Dutton

42-14361

Detective story.

"An adherent of the hardboiled school, Mr. Adams piles on the savagery in a way that may finally irk the carriage trade unless he moderates his passions." Will Cuppy

Books p13 My 31 '42 150w

"Rough stuff, and plenty of it, will endear this book to those who like that sort of thing." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 My 31 '42 240w

"Copious gun-play, slugging and similar activities. General rough house from word go, with surprise ending and unflagging action. Tough 'un."

Sat R of Lit 25:18 Je 6 '42 40w

ADAMS, EUGENE TAYLOR, and others. American idea. 278p $2.50; school ed $1.75 Harper

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. Democracy

(W) 42-2873

Contents: Introduction, by E. T. Adams; The historical background of American political democracy, by C. R. Wilson; American democracy and American government, by A. H. Garretson; Democracy in the American economy, by T. H. Robinson; The spirit of American science, by S. J. French; The spirit of American art, by Alfred Krakusin; The spirit of modern American literature, by J. B. Hoben; Education in American democracy, by G. E. Schlesler; The spirit of American religion, by H. B. Jefferson; The spirit of American philosophy, by E. T. Adams; Postscript: On some enemies of democracy, by E. T. Adams; Bibliography.

Reviewed by O. D. Weeks

Am Pol Sci R 36:583 Je '42 230w

Reviewed by H. E. Wildes

Ann Am Acad 222:190 J1 '42 450w

"One thing is certain—they can all write. The pages of this book, practically without exception, are luminous. The styles are various, of course, since nine different men did the writing, but they all have clarity and force. . . . The weaknesses of the book are matters of detail. In the main, that is to say, as a criticism of the way of life adopted by the American people, it is reasonably sound. Above all, it deserves praise for its courage in essaying a task of such proportions and for carrying it out in an intelligent, good-humored and tolerant manner. The very people who may read it with most profit are those who will disagree with it in certain details." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p7 Mr 8 '42 1750w

Social Studies 33:239 My '42 10w

"Nine members of the faculty of Colgate University are the authors of this book, one of the most admirable of the recent crop of writing that has come to this reviewer's attention. The style is not really popular; neither is it heavy. The reader, earnestly seeking a quick but clear view of what has taken place and is happening in American life, will peruse it to the end with pleasure and enlightenment. Any reader afflicted with the disease of orthodoxy will not agree with this or any other endorsement of it, but he should remember that America is one of the few places where there is no official orthodoxy." N. H. Dearborn

ADAMS, E. T.—Continued

+ Survey G 31:267 My '42 300w

ADAMS, FRANKLIN PIERCE, ed. Innocent merriment; an anthology of light verse. (Whittlesey house publications) 523p $3 McGraw

821.08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections. Humor (W) 42-23369

An anthology of light verse—burlesque, parody, nonsense, satire, etc.—collected by the editor of The Conning Tower. Contains indexes of authors, titles, and first lines.

"A superb anthology. . . Take a look at Innocent Merriment, F.P.A. You will find that it is a good anthology with a good introduction, in which its author champions light verse against all who dare to patronize it as merely 'good of its kind.'" H. A. Larrabee
+ Atlantic 170:170 D '42 240w

Booklist 39:65 N 1 '42

"There are plenty of old favorites which may be found elsewhere, but many recent verses, too. A large number here included had their first appearance in Mr. Adams's Conning Tower. This may help to make people know even more generally than they do, that he has been, for this age, the Great Ringmaster of the Many-Ringed Circus of Light Verse. F.P.A., take your bow."

+ Books p33 O 25 '42 330w

Reviewed by Irwin Edman

Books p4 D 20 '42 200w

"Of any anthology it can be said that it contains and omits much fine material—suffice it then to report that this collection is not unworthy of its author's reputation. Neither is it unworthy of its title. Here as elsewhere fastidious lovers of real wit and humor will be content with F. P. A.'s intelligent and discriminating standards in selecting verses."

+ Cath World 156:507 Ja '43 230w

"An anthology of light verse about as good as they come."

+ New Repub 107:618 N 9 '42 120w

"All in all, 'Innocent Merriment' is just what Mr. Adams claims it is—an amiable, informed, unexciting collection of (for the most part) well-tailored songs by the trade. You pay your money and you takes your choice."

Phyllis McGinley

N Y Times p3 O 11 '42 1100w

"Franklin P. Adams, a wit, has selected the tenderer portions of some two hundred and twenty other wits for his new light-verse anthology, entitled 'Innocent Merriment.' This would seem to be a form of cannibalism, and I wish him joy of it. I know I got my joy out of it. Who but Mr. Adams could make the swing all the way from the man who wasn't there to Donne's 'Go and catch a falling star,' from 'Giuseppe, da barber' to E. B. White's superb 'Affidavit in Platitudes,' and from Congreve's pious Selinda to Hoffenstein's still almost incomparable 'Poems in Praise of Practically Nothing'? None, say I." Vincent McHugh
+ New Yorker 18:81 O 24 '42 270w

"Highly salubrious volume. . . Here are burlesque, parody, nonsense rhyme, and satire; translation, paraphrase, and song and story. They come at a good time. If you can't get a lot of enjoyment out of 'Innocent Merriment,' you ought to have either your head or your glands examined. I want this book to be widely distributed." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 25:13 N 7 '42 600w

"F. P. A. says flatly that these are his very personal choice and it's just too bad if others do not agree with him. It is the custom to speak of Mr Adams nowadays as merely (what a word!) a brilliant member of the 'Information Please' cast. Those of us who have been reading and enjoying poetry for a long time think of him, rather, as one of the few defenders of its high estate: as a stickler for careful technic; as a scholar and a skillful writer of this type of poetry. It is largely because he has insisted upon high standards that we have light verse rather than doggerel in this country. And, to this reader at least, his taste is impeccable."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 1 '42 300w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 31:599 D '42 80w

Wis Lib Bul 38:183 D '42

ADAMS, GEORGE PLIMPTON. Wartime price control; foreword by Charles O. Hardy, 153p $3; pa $2.50 Am. council on public affairs

338.5 Prices. European war, 1914-1918—Economic aspects 42-16857

"Dr. Adams' monograph is devoted chiefly to characterizing and appraising the experience of the United States with price control during World War I. This excellent discussion is introduced, however, by a general analysis of economic mobilization in time of war and followed by (1) an examination of the proposals for control in this country in the interval between the two World Wars, and (2) a general interpretation of the role of price fixing in a war economy." Ann Am Acad

"It is unfortunate that Wartime Price Control was not published a year or two earlier. It deserves a wide audience because of its sound scholarship and highly commendatory brevity, directness, and clarity of exposition."

E. T. Greher

+ Ann Am Acad 224:223 N '42 450w

"Well rounded study."

+ New Repub 107:389 S 28 '42 100w

ADAMS, GRACE KINCKLE, (MRS EDWARD HUTTER), and HUTTER, EDWARD. Mad forties. 294p $2.50 Harper

917.3 U.S.—Social life and customs 42-23509

Chapters on the extravagant isms, water cures, philosophies, anti-rent troubles, women's rights, phrenology, and other oddities of the United States in the 1840's. Mary Gove Nichols, who went thru many of these upheavals and wrote and lectured about them, is a recurring character thruout the book.

"The canvas of this delightful book is crowded with figures. . . Mary Gove Nichols, who begins the book by coming to New York for a water cure, ends it by tearfully departing for London to write her autobiography in a less embattled atmosphere. It is a fitting finish for a book so packed with credulous characters chasing after this and that theory, so filled with well-concealed scholarship and so wittily told." Richardson Wright
+ Books p2 N 1 '42 1500w

"An oddity in Americana, and hardly the package of innocent fun the wrapper indicates."

New Repub 107:585 N 2 '42 120w

Reviewed by E. F. Allen

N Y Times p40 N 29 '42 700w

"Done with a good deal of wit and sense."

+ New Yorker 18:83 O 31 '42 40w

"The facts about all this intellectual and emotional upheaval of the eighteen-forties are not misquoted in this hilarious narrative. Of course they are presented with some inevitable distortion, since ridicule demands that kind of emphasis. The authors, however, have never let their sense of fun run away with their honesty. They have laughed at everything but their laughter is sympathetic and without malice." C. D. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 N 7 '42 500w

ADAMS, JEAN; KIMBALL, MARGARET, and EATON, JEANETTE. Heroines of the sky. 295p il $2.50 Doubleday

920 Women in aeronautics. Aviators

(W) 42-25405

Brief accounts of some of the world's outstanding women pioneers of aviation. They are: Harriet Quimby and Mathilde Moisant, Katherine Stinson, Ruth Bancroft Law, Phoebe Fairgrave Omlie, Ruth Nichols, Louise Thaden, Mae Hazlip and Blanche Wilcox Noyes, Amelia Earhart, Elinor Smith, Frances Harrell Marshall, and Helen Richey, Laura Ingalls, Anne Lindbergh, Jacqueline Cochran, Gladys O'Donnell.

Booklist 39:143 D 15 '42

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 19 '42 90w

"This is an important book for girls."

+ Horn Bk 19:41 Ja '43 80w

"Interesting style. Worth having in any young people's and intermediate collection."

Katherine Graves

+ Library J 68:38 Ja 1 '43 100w

ADAMS, JOHN CLINTON. Flight in winter. 281p $3 Princeton univ. press

940.4256 European war, 1914-1918—Serbia. 42-9244

Epic story of the retreat of the Serbian army thru the mountains of Albania during the winter of 1915 and 1916, and their gallant effort to escape destruction or capture at the hands of the Austro-German and Bulgarian forces. Short bibliography. Index.

"A work that is both scholarly and readable. Mr. Adams has marshaled a great mass of facts, but he never lets them run away from him, and his story moves straightforwardly toward its goal. He has some idiosyncrasies of style that are apt to become irritating. And one is finally bored by his constant references to Mackensen as the 'handsome general.'" John Elliott

+ — Books p14 Mr 8 '42 800w

"We can state without hesitation that it is rare to encounter such a high degree of reportorial factualness mellowed by an exceptional creative historical talent. Not only Serbs but all specialists in history are under obligation to Adams for fulfilling Macaulay's requirement that history be not only truthful but also rival the novel in interest." J. S. Roucek

+ Commonweal 35:517 Mr 13 '42 320w

"A useful book to read under present circumstances. Some may feel, however, that the author, assistant professor of history at Dartmouth college, has not succeeded in making an entirely happy compromise between the scholarly and the popular approach." R. G. Woolbert

+ — Foreign Affairs 20:783 Jl '42 80w

"The book is well written and ought to appeal to a fairly wide audience. The only major short-coming is Adams' apparent lack of impartiality." F. E. Hirsch

+ — Library J 67:85 Ja 15 '42 100w

Reviewed by J. T. Whitaker

New Repub 106:436 Mr 30 '42 850w

"Although factually accurate, in its style it is a dramatic story told by a master storyteller. In some parts of the book the author goes into minute detail, so his story reads more like a diary, but he is never tiresome, and succeeds throughout in keeping the interest of his readers." Eugen Kovacs

+ N Y Times p8 F 15 '42 1050w

"A moving history, at once scholarly and dramatic."

+ New Yorker 18:70 F 21 '42 40w

"It was a tale worth telling and it has been well told." René Albrecht-Carrié

+ Pol Sci Q 57:445 S '42 420w

Reviewed by Carlo Sforza

Sat R of Lit 25:11 Mr 28 '42 1150w

ADAMS, JOHN CRANFORD. The Globe playhouse; its design and equipment. 420p il $5 Harvard univ. press

792 Southwark, England. Globe theatre A 42-3479

"This reconstruction of Shakespeare's Globe seems to be the definitive study of the Elizabethan playhouse. . . Reconstruction of the theater is made from contemporary prints, building contracts, journals, and internal evidence of the plays themselves." Library J

"This is an admirable piece of literary and archeological detective work. To scholars it is invaluable, and the general public that still reads Shakespeare will find that the study of it will enhance their understanding and appreciation of the plays." S. C. Chew

+ Books p14 Ag 2 '42 850w

"A prime necessity where any detailed study of Shakespeare is given. Recommended for all college and larger school and public libraries."

George Freedley

+ Library J 67:627 Jl '42 90w

Nation 155:198 S 5 '42 360w

Reviewed by John Corbin

N Y Times p34 S 27 '42 750w

"From Mr. Adams' patient marshaling and evaluation of minutiae there emerges a vivid picture of the many-leveled, complex and flexible Elizabethan stage. His book is a comprehensive presentation of all that scholarship has learned to date about the physical structure within which England's greatest drama came to light." Rosamond Gilder

+ Theatre Arts 26:730 N '42 250w

ADAMS, SAMUEL HOPKINS. Harvey girls. 327p $2.50 Random house

(W) 42-25509

Novel based on the influence of the Fred Harvey restaurants and the girls who worked in them, upon the development of the West. In this case the restaurant is in Sandrock, in "Mountain Territory"; the time is 1891. The fortunes of a handful of Harvey girls from New York and Ohio are followed during their first year in Sandrock, and the book ends with a reunion fifty years later.

Booklist 39:184 Ja 1 '43

"It has the makings of a rip-roaring picture and it will undoubtedly be on the screen soon. Meanwhile, here is the book, and it's a sure-fire mixture of rough goings-on and honest sentiment. . . It is all touching and sentimental, and come to think of it, pretty thoroughly borne out by the actual life stories of the Harvey House girls. Notwithstanding all the stock characters, all the material in this book, from the restaurant lingo to the geography, has an authentic ring. Even the jokes are the real thing." Stanley Walker

+ Books p6 O 25 '42 1250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '42

"In a season of somber and prodigiously long novels—or, if any one should insist on the point, in a somber season—a story like 'The Harvey Girls' is a welcome interlude in any reader's life. No one, with the possible exception of the public relations department of the Fred Harvey Restaurants, will be inclined to take it very seriously. Nor does Mr. Adams intend that any one should. . . It may be worth remarking in this connection that Samuel Hopkins Adams knows his business. He was telling good stories when some of our highly regarded novelists were still playing with building blocks." M. W.

+ N Y Times p28 O 25 '42 700w

"As a novel it is somewhat disappointing, living up neither to its gay title and jacket nor to the author's reputation for swift narrative and his charming gift for enlivening history with scandal. It is a cheerful and hearty book, however, an amusing footnote on Western history. For the most part its treatment is sane and unromantic; the cinematic, emotional touches near the end will not be taken seriously east of Pasadena." R. A. Cordell

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:38 O 24 '42 500w

ADAMS, SAMUEL HOPKINS. Tambay gold. 243p $2 Messner

42-23560

Mom Baumer, an ex-carnival queen, has taken to the road with her trailer-diner. Wherever she finds a tangled situation to be straightened out Mom settles down for a time.

ADAMS, S. H.—Continued

In the Carolinas she finds a beautiful girl with a past, living on an impoverished plantation. There Mom sets up her diner and feeds the truck drivers and the college boys from the nearby town, and gives Jane Ann the benefit of her company and her wholesome common sense.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p28 O 25 '42 350w

"A robust story." Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p28 N 1 '42 320w

ADDAMS, CHARLES. Drawn and quartered [an album of drawings] with a foreword by Boris Karloff. unp $2.50 Random house
741 Caricatures and cartoons 42-24940

Book of cartoons, nearly all of which have appeared in the New Yorker magazine. Many of the drawings verge on the macabre.

Reviewed by Iris Barry

Books p6 D 13 '42 350w

"Not recommended for those apt to be intimidated by were-wolves, haunted houses, and the supernatural in general, but probably quite an experience for everybody else."
New Yorker 18:84 O 24 '42 50w

"Cannibals and all, it's a top-notch Christmas present; the kind one can sample mirthfully before wrapping."
+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 1 '42 110w

ADDISON, JAMES THAYER. Christian approach to the Moslem; a historical study. 365p $3.75 Columbia univ. press

297 Christianity and other religions—Mohammedanism 42-14254

"This book surveys from the beginning to the present time the missionary efforts of the Christian church to approach the Moslem. It does not pretend to be a complete history of such missions; but, in a way no other book does, it attempts to marshal what is most significant or typical throughout the range of Christianity's long contact with Islam. . . . The first seven chapters are given to a condensed but illuminating historical survey of the twelve centuries preceding the modern period. Part II gives a summary of modern missions to Moslems in eight typical countries. The last section deals with problems and policies." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

"Professor Addison's book contributes to our understanding of the Moslem, and diplomats, as well as missionaries, should read it." F. Dun-calf

+ Am Hist R 48:298 Ja '43 490w

"This book will be a most valuable help to candidates and missionaries approaching Islam; the historian will be interested in the rapid, reliable review of the thirteen hundred years of conflict and in the causes of repeated and wide-spread, though not total, failure; and the general reader will get a stimulating insight into two great monotheistic and missionary religions from the thought of one who gives evidence throughout of his deep conviction that the Moslem needs the gospel through Jesus Christ. The usefulness of the book is further enhanced by nineteen pages of bibliography, and an index of twenty-one pages." D. J. Fleming

+ Christian Century 59:861 Jl 8 '42 600w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller

Churchman 156:17 N 1 '42 240w

"The author has been professor of the history of religion and missions in the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass. His work is that of a calm, thorough, earnest, fair scholar." W. O. Carver

+ Crozer Q 19:331 O '42 420w

"Professor James Thayer Addison, who has served a distinguished career at the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Massachusetts, writes from a background of sound historical knowledge, illuminated by keen observation at first hand of modern mission work. . . . One's only fear is that the book, because it is so solid and not written for a 'popular' constituency, will not affect the rank and file of the church population—which most desperately needs to read it and digest it." H. E. Allen

+ J Religion 22:447 O '42 550w

ADDISON, JOSEPH. Letters; ed. by Walter Graham. 527p $8 (30s) Oxford

B or 92

A42-368

"Mr. Graham's edition is the first separate publication of Addison's correspondence; it is also the first with any valid pretensions to completeness or scholarly equipment. It increases the two hundred letters collected by Bohn to seven hundred, it corrects a number of earlier errors of fact, and it provides the letters with much-needed documentation. The materials have been collected from a wide variety of sources, public and private." Mod Philol

"Although it cannot be said that the letters here published alter our conception of Addison's character, they supply a number of details which are of interest to the student of Addison's life. . . . It is not Mr. Graham's fault that so many of the letters of Addison are tedious and utterly without the essayist's charm. Even the more personal too often degenerate into summaries of news. . . . Since so many of the originals are no longer available, it is impossible to pass judgment on the accuracy of all the texts, but the few which I have been able to check are by no means free from error. . . . One can only regret that an edition upon which so much labor has been expended should reveal so many demonstrable errors. It is inconceivable that another recension of Addison's letters will be contemplated for a long time to come, if ever; consequently, a reliable text—so far as is humanly possible—would seem to be an editor's first concern." D. F. Bond
Mod Philol 40:107 Ag '42 1700w

"The letters, being full of factual detail, are of interest to the historian; they will help a future biographer to fill in dates, but in the main they are the dullest lot of letters imaginable. There is hardly an idea or a vivid scene, and such as there are appear in the earliest ones." Bonamy Dobree
— + Spec 167:207 Ag 29 '41 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p456 S 13 '41 650w

ADLER, MORTIMER JEROME. Dialectic of morals; towards the foundations of political philosophy. 117p $1.80 Review of politics, Univ. of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, Ind.

170 Ethics

41-25778

"The author calls this volume a 'distillation of actual arguments which President Hutchins and I have had with students in courses devoted to reading the great works in Ethics and Politics.' There is no effort, however, to preserve the details of student opinion, nor could there be in such brief space. The presumably diverse views of students become views of 'the' student—one whom the author considers typical of this generation. This student, misled by the positivists, the psychologists, and the social scientists, has become a 'moral skeptic.' . . . The author's purpose is to 'engage the skeptic on his own grounds.' Beginning with simple premises which the student admits, he endeavors, by 'inductive use of dialectic,' to develop a modernization of Aristotelian and Thomistic ethics that will provide a basis for eternally valid moral rules." J Philos

Reviewed by F. H. Knight

Am J Soc 47:997 My '42 350w

"This is an unusual book in several important respects: first, because it recognizes that the major problem of our day is moral skepticism; second, because it seeks to meet moral skepticism in purely rational terms; third, because it uses the general dialectical, i.e., inductive, method of classical Greek philosophy; fourth, because it recognizes the relevance of the Christian doctrine of knowledge, though without developing it. Any book which sets its feet on such roads as these is, by definition, a serious and sober volume." Harold Bosley

+ Christian Century 59:1355 N 4 '42 1050w

"As a brief presentation of the author's philosophical theories and educational aims, the volume will doubtless serve a useful purpose. And for those who are habituated to a metaphysical type of thought, it may afford incentive to further speculation. It is doubtful, however, that the volume will succeed in leading positivistically inclined students to alter their views." C. L. Stevenson

J Philos 39:48 Ja 15 '42 1400w
School & Society 54:480 N 22 '41 30w

ADVANCES in enzymology and related subjects, 1941-1942; ed. by F. F. Nord and C. H. Werkman. (v 1-2) 2v il ea $5.50 Interscience 612.0151 Enzymes (41-9213)

A collection of independent monographs, presenting material on a wide range of subjects of a general biochemical nature. Contents: Protein structure, by H. B. Bull; Physikalisch-chemische Gesichtspunkte zum Problem der Virusaktivität, by Luise Holzapfel; The specificity of proteinases, by Max Bergmann and J. S. Fruton; Metabolic generation and utilization of phosphate bond energy, by Fritz Lipmann; The chemical nature of catalase, by J. B. Sumner; Enzymes and trace substances, by D. E. Green; Photosynthesis, facts and interpretations, by J. Franck and H. Gaffron; The bacterial photosyntheses and their importance for the general problem of photosynthesis, by C. B. Van Niel; Untersuchung enzymatischer Prozesse in der lebenden Pflanze, by A. L. Kurssanov; Die Verdauung bei den niederen Vertebraten, by H. J. Vonk. In the second volume "as in the previous volume, specialized topics in the field of enzymology and related subjects are discussed by competent workers." (Chem & Eng N)

"This first American volume is indeed welcome as it considers the progress made in the field of enzyme chemistry since the last volume of 'Ergebnisse der Enzymforschung' appeared in 1939. It is also encouraging to see this type of publication originate in the United States. . . It is valuable to have an up-to-date report of the recent progress in the study of the specificity of proteinases, by M. Bergmann and J. S. Fruton. The treatment here is, in the writer's opinion, the best of several recent reviews by the same authors." W. T. Ross
Am Chem Soc J 63:3547 D '41 550w

"Biochemists and nutritionists interested in the newer conception of the vitamins as inherent parts of enzyme systems will find this work informative and stimulating. The book is up to date, and the large number of references carefully selected by each author provides a critical review of recent pertinent literature. Approximately one fourth of the volume is published in German. All the mechanical features of the book are satisfactory, and the general make-up is good." C. N. Frey & W. R. Johnston
+ Chem & Chem Eng N 19:798 Jl 24 '41 350w

"The book not only is valuable to the enzyme chemist, but, in spite of the title, it is of sufficient general interest to warrant a place in any biochemical library." Bernard Axelrod & M. W. Kies + Chem & Eng N 20:1598 D 10 '42 650w (Review of v 2)

N Y New Tech Bks 27:7 Ja '42

AGAR, HERBERT. A time for greatness. 301p $2.50 Little

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Economic policy. Democracy (W) 42-36297

"A call to America to rededicate herself, before it's too late, to the application of democratic ideals of liberty and equality to her way of life. Mr. Agar makes a strong case for the responsibility of the United States for the present war by her failure to apply these principles to economic, social, political, and spiritual life and to international relationships." Library J

Appeared on Best Seller list in: ALA (1) Books (10) N Y Times (10)

"Because of its sound ethical core, A Time for Greatness deserves earnest reading by every American. Unfortunately, Mr. Agar's practical devotion to the cause of democracy has not given him the leisure to establish any fresh lines of thought on the concrete political and economic issues opened up by the war. Hence the chapters on the role of business and labor after the war are both superficial in their analysis and a little highhanded in their dismissal of less traditional views than Mr. Agar holds." Lewis Mumford

+ Atlantic 170:134 N '42 700w

Booklist 39:27 O 1 '42

"Any one who delights in lively vigorous English will find it in this book. Any one who delights in a flashing, headlong attack will find it. Any one who is fascinated by the rapier thrust as well as by the crash of the battle-axe will find both here. Any one, in short, who is looking for engrossing intellectual entertainment can hardly do better than turn to Mr. Agar's book. But people who are searching for chart and compass during this stormy weather may not find it as satisfactory. Mr. Agar has some curious obsessions." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p5 O 4 '42 1600w

"Mr. Agar's latest book—and it is a brilliant one—might have done better with another 'name.' The title, 'A Time for Greatness,' is a noble challenge, but the idea of the book would perhaps have been better expressed in the two words, 'Pater Peccavi,' 'Father, I have sinned.' This is what Mr. Agar's fascinating message amounts to." O. Z.

+ Boston Globe p19 O 28 '42 350w

Reviewed by J. F. Coffey
Cath World 156:239 N '42 700w

Reviewed by H. S. Tigner
Christian Century 59:1353 N 4 '42 650w

"Few books have struck so accurate a moral balance between the forces represented on the one hand by the United Nations and on the other by the aggressors. While Mr. Agar devotes much space to self-examination the effect of his study never becomes negative, as did so much of our prewar introspection. How the weaknesses which we as individuals permitted to develop in our society at last invited attack upon us is clearly and movingly set down in this volume." C. W. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p24 O 28 '42 500w

"It has been said that this is the people's war. A Time for Greatness is the people's book. It is a book which every American should read, as a reminder in case he has forgotten, or as a text in case he never knew, just what a truly democratic America should stand for." E. M. Geraghty

+ Churchman 156:14 N 15 '42 210w

Reviewed by J. N. Moody
Commonweal 37:18 O 23 '42 850w

Reviewed by J. S. Gurley
Current Hist 3:449 Ja '43 1000w

"Concrete, conservative, and dynamic, this book deserves wide reading." G. W. Hill
+ Library J 67:793 S 15 '42 100w

Reviewed by Frank Kingdon
Nation 155:351 O 10 '42 700w
New Repub 107:801 D 14 '42 120w

"This book isn't just another anti-Nazi tract, nor is it a parlor think-piece on how to win the war and the peace. . . I'd like to see this one read by every wrong-thinking American. That's where it would do the most good—in the hands of Americans, for instance, who think that wars 'never settle anything.' . . 'A Time for Greatness' is basically a preaching by a layman, for laymen. But it is a preaching that goes down easily as you are reading." Rex Stout

+ N Y Times p1 O 4 '42 1000w

"On our problems at home, Mr. Agar can be both particular and witty. His study of the social attitudes behind the whole question of labor relations is a masterly job of its kind. In economics, he inclines toward the sensible pluralism of the Swedes; in government, he appears to favor theories looking toward increasing the policy-making functions of the executive. As to some of Mr. Agar's larger proposals, the first question many Americans will ask him is: How? The question, in itself, need not be ironic or skeptical, nor does it call for a nice, full set of blueprints." Vincent McHugh

AGAR, HERBERT—Continued

New Yorker 18:70 O 10 '42 400w
Pratt p22 D '42

"There is a great deal in this book that this reviewer most decidedly accepts and cheers. But there are unresolved conflicts in Agar's thought and a tendency to avoid the really troublesome questions. . . 'A Time for Greatness' is an outstanding document of our time. It reflects brilliantly the feeling of liberal Americans who do not like war, yet like slavery and barbarism even less. Agar's exalted sense of the role of politics is genuinely reassuring, as is his profound sense of our own weakness." C. T. Friedrich

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 O 10 '42 1600w
Time 40:100 N 9 '42 950w

AGARD, WALTER RAYMOND. What democracy meant to the Greeks. 278p $3 Univ. of N.C. press

321.4 Democracy. Greece—Politics and government. Political science—History 42-13647

Traces the development of democracy, as a natural outgrowth of the ancient Greek pattern of culture, and shows the similarities between Greek social and economic developments and those of our own day. Chronology. Bibliography. Index.

"This [is an] admirably organized and clearly written book, fully equipped for that use in the classroom which it richly deserves." W. A. Oldfather & L. R. Lind

+ Am Hist R 48:394 Ja '43 320w

"In fairness, it should be said that Mr. Agard seriously intends to present the bad as well as the good. In sum, his indictment of the deficiencies of Greek democracy is pretty formidable. . . In one major respect, however, I believe that Mr. Agard's account of political ideals is historically unsound. The ideal of political equality in any inclusive sense was not, I think, included among the ideals of the city-state; it was the creation, not of the classical, but of the Hellenistic age. It seems to me to be profoundly misleading to say that to the Athenians the word 'barbarians' meant little more than foreigners,' especially when the word was used with a political connotation." G. H. Sabine

+ — Am Pol Sci R 36:752 Ag '42 1050w

"This volume will have special value for those who desire an introduction to Greek democracy that is sane and free from cant. Although the book lacks the pungency and mordant style necessary for wide popular appeal, it has wearing qualities that compensate for lack of pyrotechnics, a cumulative force of skillfully marshalled evidence, quiet dignity and true Greek excellence." R. A. Schermerhorn

+ Am Soc R 7:737 O '42 1050w

Reviewed by C. C. Maxey

Ann Am Acad 223:222 S '42 380w

"Mr. Agard's excessive zeal in communicating admiration for one of the most remarkable and decisive democratic experiments in history is understandable. He is wise, persuasive and sound, I think, in reminding us how, within the limits of its economic and social presumptions and resources, Greece, specifically Athens, was a democracy. . . One of the reasons Mr. Agard seems to me not to have made quite clear what democracy meant to the Greeks is because he draws too many lessons as to what democracy means to us. One advantage the Greeks had was that they kept their eyes on their subject matter, democratic or not. Such a procedure would be useful to modern democracies, too." Irwin Edman

+ — Books p14 Ag 23 '42 800w

"There are few people who will not find this an interesting subject, and still fewer who will not learn a great deal of value from Mr. Agard's book. Modern minds are so rootless that any man who refers this country to past experience, and can make Americans realize that the forces molding society did not begin with the Treaty of Versailles or Karl Marx is greatly to our profit. But nevertheless this is not so good a book as it ought to be." E. P. Richardson

+ — Commonweal 36:258 Jl 3 '42 800w

Ethics 52:511 Jl '42 160w

"Although tending to be popular rather than scholarly, book will prove useful chiefly in institutions of higher learning and big public libraries." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 67:475 My 15 '42 100w

"This is an extremely well-written popular survey of the history of democracy in ancient Greece. . . Every sentence shows that the author has a thorough first-hand knowledge of all the ancient sources. Most interesting are those chapters in which he deals with related subjects which are somewhat off the beaten track; for instance, the development of the legend of Theseus under the influence of changing political ideals." Kurt von Fritz

+ Pol Sci Q 57:450 S '42 600w

"Professor Agard, writing in a pleasant and general way, turns a critical eye toward some of [the Greeks'] achievements and failures; fortunately democracy to him means not only political institutions, but also art and literature and the opportunity for justice. It will benefit our own Republic if many of its citizens read and ponder this small volume." C. A. Robinson, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 25:13 Ag 15 '42 700w

AGETON, ARTHUR AINSLEY. Manual of celestial navigation. 103p $1.85 Van Nostrand 527 Nautical astronomy. Navigation 42-13188

"Written for students like those of the United States Naval Academy and is therefore suited only for those who must use formulas and tables. No concessions are made to the reader who has had no course in algebra and trigonometry." N Y Times

N Y New Tech Bks 27:42 Jl '42

"Despite its practical purpose, Commander Ageton's text is simple, given the necessary background. The purpose is to facilitate the computing data for lines of position in Commander Ageton's own easy way." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p35 N 22 '42 90w

AGUS, JACOB BERNARD. Modern philosophies of Judaism. 390p $3 Behrman's 296 Jews—Religion. Philosophy, Jewish 42-17193

"The present volume, the author informs us in the preface, is 'an elaboration and popularization of a doctoral thesis, entitled, 'The Relation of Man to God in the Philosophies of Hermann Cohen and Martin Buber,' which was submitted to Harvard University in the spring of 1939.' To this original thesis have been added brief chapters on the contributions made to the philosophy of Judaism by Abraham Geiger, Ludwig Solomon Steinheim, Samuel Hirsch and Solomon Formstecher; also, a review of the development of nationalism in Judaism as expounded by Smolenskin, Krochmal and Achad Ha'am. . . To the original thesis, further, the author has added chapters on the thought of Franz Rosenzweig and Mordecai M. Kaplan. He brings his volume to a conclusion with a discussion of 'the common core of modern Jewish philosophy' and 'theses for a philosophy of religion.'" Christian Century

"The volume retains throughout an objective spirit. It is beyond special pleading. The nature of the subject is such that differences of opinion are inevitable. . . One wishes that the author had presented his subjects against the historic background more organically. He is no doubt aware of the historic forces that sent these men in search of the holy candelabrum; he does not bring them to the attention of his readers. His subjects dangle on the single string of metaphysics." B. D. Cohen

+ — Christian Century 59:728 Je 3 '42 600w

"A much needed service in present-day Judaism has been performed by Rabbi Agus. At a time when Judaism has become primarily a matter of contention and debate, vicious attacks and noisy defense, Rabbi Agus comes in the spirit of the scholar and speaks of the creative intellectual forces that have woven the pattern of modern Judaism. The traffic of the world is silenced; the tumult and the shouting has ceased; we are in the scholar's study back of the pulpit." B. D. Cohon

+ Christian Century 60:17 Ja 6 '43 550w

"The analyses are clear, the criticisms acute, and the presentation illuminating. One could wish for greater care in the spelling, especially of German names and book titles." E. E. Aubrey

+ J Religion 22:430 O '42 700w

AIKEN, CONRAD POTTER. Brownstone eclogues, and other poems. 99p $2 Duell

811 42-51524

This volume contains a number of short poems and one longer poem, Blues for Ruby Matrix, all dealing with the city and city life.

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 67:949 N 1 '42 50w

"It is curious that, with all his changes and variations, the old Aiken is always there, and never a new character. He substitutes rhetoric for character when he tries to write of any one but himself. And what he does for Ruby he does in his poem on Granada (Homage to Lorca). Colorful, descriptive, emotional, long and unmemorable, it does say everything that one would want said, but never sharply nor shortly, never quite in original poetic design. I still read Mr. Aiken's poetry as I read his novels, for what he has to say about himself, not, in spite of this book, for his creation of character or action or phrase." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p11 Ja 3 '43 750w

AIKEN, WILLIAM APPLETON (WILLIAM, earl of NORWICH, pseud), ed. The conduct of the Earl of Nottingham; being a continuation by several hands of Mr Archdeacon Echard's History of England. 182p $3 Yale Univ. press [18s 6d Oxford]

942.068 Great Britain—History—1689-1714 41-19533

"In this volume Dr. Aiken has printed fourteen manuscripts dealing with Daniel Finch, second earl of Nottingham; but instead of editing them in orthodox fashion he has woven them into a narrative, after a fashion much in vogue with eighteenth century writers. This explains the extraordinary title. The introduction, textual notes and appendix indicate exactly how the documents were used; and it is a tribute to Dr. Aiken's ingenuity that he was able to carry through his historical ghost-writing with almost no violation of the exacting rules that bind the editor of historical texts. Of the manuscripts seven were written by Nottingham, and the longest and most important are two collections of notes set down by him late in life in order to provide a sympathetic historian with firsthand data on events in which Nottingham had played a prominent part." Am Hist R

Reviewed by Robert Walcott, jr.

Am Hist R 47:672 Ap '42 280w

"The historian consulting Dr. Aiken's work in search of the new material it contains will not, of course, find the sort of presentation of evidence to which he is accustomed or which he can most easily use. But the textual annotations are lucid and careful, the editor's own contributions are clearly differentiated from the original matter, and it seems that the whole of the manuscript sources used, in so far as they relate to the period at all, has been printed, and can with patience be traced and restored to its primitive state."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p178 Ad 4 '42 850w

AIKIN, WILFORD MERTON. Story of the eight-year study; with conclusions and recommendations. (Progressive educ. assn. Comm. on the relation of school and college. Adventure in Am. educ. v 1) 157p $1.75 Harper

373 Education, Secondary 42-36126

"The over-all report of the study from the beginning in 1930 to the end in 1941. This volume includes an analysis of the defects of secondary education which made the study necessary, a concise report of what went on in the 30 schools that were freed from college-entrance requirements and a summary statement of findings and their implications for secondary and higher education." (School & Society) Index.

Booklist 38:267 Ap 1 '42

School & Society 55:224 F 21 '42 50w

Reviewed by H. R. Anderson

Social Educ 7:43 Ja '43 550w

Reviewed by A. L. Brush

Survey 78:350 D '42 650w

ALAJALOV, CONSTANTIN, il. Conversation pieces; commentary by Janet Flanner. 104p $3.50 Studio

741.5 Drawings 42-50398

"A collection of drawings, many in color, by a Russian artist. . . Nearly two-thirds of Mr. Alajalov's pictures were published in The New Yorker, principally as cover designs." New Yorker

"As Miss Janet Flanner says, this artist draws charmingly things which, in print, would be too unkind. He makes fun of opera singers, sailors, brides, sportsmen and—most especially—women in general. His pictures are elegant and some of them are the kind one could well frame." Iris Barry

+ Books p6 D 13 '42 90w

New Yorker 18:99 N 21 '42 70w

ALBERT, ABRAHAM ADRIAN. Introduction to algebraic theories. 137p $1.75 Univ. of Chicago press [10s 6d Cambridge]

512 Algebra. Matrices 41-3957

"Prof. A. Adrian Albert has been concerned with the obviously serious gap existing in the mode of thought between the intuitive treatment of the theory of equations and the essentially rigorous and abstract methods of the 'Modern Higher Algebra'. In spite of the attempt to bridge the gulf by the publication of several more abstract presentations of the theory of equations, Prof. Albert felt that the only satisfactory course was to provide a new introduction to algebraic theories, and the present volume is the result. The text begins with polynomials and then passes to a full discussion of the theory of matrices with simple modern proofs." (Nature) Index.

"The six chapters are written with great clarity and are well illustrated by many new types of numerical exercises. The last chapter—on fundamental concepts—is a noteworthy and illuminating introduction to the study of abstract algebra. Any student who has a good knowledge of the usual theory of equations and of determinants will be able to follow the course without difficulty. To those interested in the application of the theory of matrices to statistics, economics and psychology, this book should also be very useful."

+ Nature 148:212 Ag 23 '41 240w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:58 O '41

ALBRAND, MARTHA. No surrender. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 299p $2.50 Little

(W) 42-22267

A story of the underground movement in Holland working against the Nazi invaders.

Booklist 39:71 N 1 '42

Bookmark 4:15 N '42

ALBRAND, MARTHA—Continued

"The characters are drawn with exceptional skill and the novel reflects the Dutch spirit with eloquence and fidelity. The book has some of the qualities of John Steinbeck's 'The Moon is Down.'" Lisle Bell
+ Books p10 O 25 '42 550w

"By the conduct of a few chosen characters in a novel, the essential quality of a whole race can be symbolized and can be as clearly revealed as in a factual statement. To an understanding of the Dutch people under German occupation a novel by Martha Albrand called 'No Surrender' makes such a contribution." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 14 '42 550w

Commonweal 36:597 O 9 '42 110w

"Structurally the novel is first-rate. It has the heightened drama and suspense and the accelerated pace demanded by its subject. It has integrity. . . . It is a beautiful love story; almost unbearably pitiful but strong and very tender. It is a cleverly plotted story of 'Underground' activities. It is the story of a great Dutchman's quiet heroism. And it is worked out, with undeviating rectitude, along lines of unyielding realism. Also—and this is no anticlimax—it has an adorable American heroine." J. S. Southern
+ N Y Times p23 O 11 '42 550w

ALBRIGHT, SPENCER DELANCEY. American ballot; foreword by O. Douglas Weeks. 153p $2.50; pa $2 Am. council on public affairs

324.25 Ballot. Election law 42-25091

"Dr. Albright has attacked primarily the problem of collecting and comparing in a comprehensive and careful fashion the facts in regard to the manifold ballot forms now in use in the United States, both in general and primary elections and in regard to the extent to which the voting machine has been adopted and the results attained in its use." Social Studies

"The student of American government will find this a useful manual of ballot forms and election laws. The general reader may find it difficult, because the text is literally peppered with facts and figures setting forth the variations in ballot features found in the states. Dr. Albright has compressed a large amount of research material in a comparatively small space." W. W. Crouch
+ Am Pol Sci R 36:1181 D '42 340w

"The ballot is of course one of the great tools of democracy. Yet the author pays so much attention to the structure of the tool and so little to its use that his book becomes a formal catalogue of the ballot laws in the various states."

New Repub 107:389 S 28 '42 90w

Social Studies 34:48 Ja '43 60w

ALDERSON, MRS NANNIE (TIFFANY). Bride goes west [as told to] Helena Huntington Smith; drawings by J. O'H. Cosgrave 2d. 273p $2.50 Farrar

B or 92 Frontier and pioneer life—Montana (W) 42-12918

Mrs Alderson's autobiography tells the story of how a gently reared Southern girl fared on a lonely Montana ranch in the eighteen-eighties. Life was hard and the young bride had to learn her housekeeping from her husband and the cowboys, but the years till her husband's death in 1895 were happy ones, too. After that there were even harder times, keeping a boarding house and running a ranch with only a boy's help, until her children were grown up and married.

Booklist 38:425 Jl 1 '42

Reviewed by S. L. White

+ Books p4 Je 14 '42 1300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '42

"Recommended for purchase." E. H. Crowell

+ Library J 67:533 Je 1 '42 40w

"Many personalities are in this record of experience; many exciting, generous, amusing, gallant incidents. The drawings by John O'Hara Cosgrave II are full of suggestion. Through all the book a dauntless little figure moves in courage and wisdom against the ever-amazing background that belongs now to history. But if this frontier West has vanished, its heritage remains with us." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 Je 14 '42 1300w

Wis Lib Bul 38:119 Jl '42

ALDIS, DOROTHY (KEELEY) (MRS GRAHAM ALDIS). Cindy; ill. by Peggy Bacon. 62p $1.50 Putnam

(W) 42-9588

Story of the gradual change of a tomboyish little girl, from a person who always wanted to play with the boys, into a rather reluctant admirer of dolls' houses and pink party dresses.

"If ever you knew a little girl like this, here she is to the life, and you will not be surprised at the sudden completeness of her reversal of policy and the naturalness with which it comes about. Mothers can learn from it, perhaps they will understand it better than little girls will."

+ Books p18 My 10 '42 250w

"Recommend for girls eight to ten, but not for reading to younger children in whom it will powerfully inspire imitation. Drawings are eloquent of 'roughneck' stage but, after tomboy's reform, lack balance and appeal of feminine ways." Maude Adams

Library J 67:476 My 15 '42 60w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:886 O 15 '42 30w

ALDIS, DOROTHY (KEELEY) (MRS GRAHAM ALDIS). Poor Susan. 204p $2 Putnam 42-24102

Susan was at the pest stage. She could not take her family for granted; her mother was not like other mothers, her brother annoyed her; the twins were "the brats." Poor Susan; she had a terrible time of it, until the day came when she learned to accept her family, and love them.

"As a heroine, Susan breaks the heroine's first and last law; the leading character of a novel must be able to keep people reading straight through it, and this—unless you have a family like this—Susan can't manage. She must be taken a little at a time, as in real life. Of one thing Susan's vocabulary makes one sure. The nursery discipline that involved washing out the mouth with soap was not practiced in Susan's nursery." M. L. Becker
+ — Books p16 N 8 '42 350w

"Susan was at the age when, if some asked her how old she was she replied she would be 15 in ten months. Girls her own age may not care much for her story, but their parents should like it very much. Mrs. Aldis has an eye and ear too keen for the comfort of the observed, but she makes them a source of innocent merriment for older people." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p41 N 22 '42 320w

ALDRICH, MRS BESS (STREETER). Lieutenant's lady. 275p $2 Appleton-Century (W) 42-20993

The story of the experiences of a young army wife on the Indian frontier seventy-five years ago. The story, based on a diary which recorded "innermost thoughts, daily happenings, and—chiefly, the weather," tells how Linnie Colsworth traveled up the Missouri and became the wife of the man her cousin had jilted, how they came to love and trust each other, of the happenings of the winter and finally of the hard trip back to civilization.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (13) B & T (1) N Y Times (7) RB (2)

Booklist 39:71 N 1 '42

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p24 S 27 '42 180w

Christian Century 59:1187 S 30 '42 50w

"A novel of slightly naive and wholly fresh and convincing quality. . . It is a strange little history, this story of an army wife on the American frontier. And perhaps if it were not true it would be none too credible. But Mrs. Aldrich, who is a good story-teller herself, has had the discretion to leave this material substantially unaltered. In all its simple and artless detail, as noted by Linnie herself, 'The Lieutenant's Lady' bears the unmistakable stamp of truth." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p34 O 4 '42 800w

Wis Lib Bul 38:162 N '42

ALDRICH, DONALD BRADSHAW, and STEVENS, WILLIAM OLIVER, eds. Golden book of prayer; an anthology of prayer. 275p $3 Dodd

264.1 Prayers

41-26726

Excerpts from devotional literature of all ages and sects, both prose and poetry. Brief introductions are given to many of the sections. Index of first lines, and general index.

Booklist 38:203 F 15 '42

"The title of this anthology of prayer is no exaggeration. This is a superb collection."

+ Christian Century 58:1640 D 31 '41 60w

"This book ought to be in every channel for use at services, and also in every parson's study, for it is full of sermon material, and some of the prayers are more helpful as guides to what men have prayed for than for actual use in public worship. The editor has appended many informative historical notes which add to the understanding of the prayers." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 156:17 Mr 1 '42 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '42

ALDRICH, RICHARD. Concert life in New York, 1902-1923 [ed. by Harold Johnson]. 795p $5 Putnam

780.73 Music—New York (city)

41-26614

Volume of musical criticism composed of articles contributed to the New York Times by Richard Aldrich during the twenty years of his connection with that paper, from 1902-1923. It contains information about and comment upon singers, instrumentalists, operas, orchestras, and other musical personalities and organizations. Comprehensive index.

"This book is a welcome addition to the history of New York's musical activities in some significant years. I say 'history' advisedly, for while the musical critic is not ordinarily thought of as an historian, that is precisely what Richard Aldrich was. He had, besides his facility in reading and playing music, and his fastidious taste, the equipment of an historian—the scholarship, the poise, the objectivity—and these reviews . . . constitute, among other things, a valuable record." Royal Cortissoz

+ Books p6 Mr 15 '42 950w

"Richard Aldrich was one of the country's best music critics in the Golden Age of that craft. . . The ideal music critic is a scholar, a practical performer or singer to some extent, a man of taste, perception, broad viewpoint, distinctive writing style and extraordinary absorptive powers. In Mr. Aldrich these attributes were combined to a remarkable degree." C. W. Durgin

+ Boston Globe p17 Ap 22 '42 260w

"Equipped with a wide knowledge of music and a background of general culture, Mr. Aldrich sustained his poise during those difficult years of World War I, and afterward, when musical decisions in many quarters were being violated by racial and other bigotries. To read this collection is to evoke in fancy some mighty spirits now vanished from the world's stage, and to view some present stars in the making." Margaret Meagher

+ Cath World 155:754 S '42 450w

"One lays down this book with a singular sense of emolument, and gratification that its material has been conserved in book form. For when Richard Aldrich ceased writing for The Times something precious and irreplaceable went with him." Olin Downes

+ N Y Times p5 My 31 '42 3050w

ALDRIDGE, JAMES. Signed with their honour. 392p $2.50 Little

(W) 42-17639

Novel of the R.A.F. in Greece and Libya during the present war. John Quayle, an English flying officer, is the hero; Helen Stangou, daughter of a Greek correspondent, is the heroine. The love story of these two, their marriage, and their attempt to work out their problems hampered by a world at war, ends with the death of Quayle, shot down over Mersa Matruh.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (11) B & T (1) N Y Times (11) PW (1) RB (2)

Booklist 39:11 S '42

"The twenty-three-year-old Australian author, James Aldridge, has piled up the screeching horrors and the muted emotions of today in a series of scenes which succeed each other as swiftly as one plane swoops past another in the air. There is perhaps too much mechanical detail of flying, in his descriptions of battle, for us who are earthbound. Also, the shadow of Hemingway hangs over the book which never reaches the banked power of 'A Farewell to Arms.' Yet 'Signed With Their Honour' wins its own place, not only because of the author's sharp perceptions in violence, but also because a dedication is implicit in his tale." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Books p3 S 13 '42 900w

"As a novelist, Mr. Aldridge has yet some things to learn, but as a reporter he is still one of the best that has come out of the war. His photographic mind and his eloquent pen combine to produce pictures—as unforgettable as they are vivid." L. L. Marchand

+ Boston Globe p19 S 23 '42 250w

"The dog fights in the air are vivid and compelling; the conversations are lively, and the record of events is probably exact, as the author has seen action as a war correspondent in Finland, Norway, Albania, Greece, Egypt, Crete, and Libya. But as a novel the book has no excuse for being." N. E. Monroe

+ Cath World 156:246 N '42 180w

"Many technical aviation terms and tedious dialogue, but may interest some readers because of locale. Not important; might go in libraries that buy war fiction generously." G. E. Brown

+ Library J 67:629 Jl '42 70w

"Air war has evoked no better novel than Signed With Their Honour. Superbly, heart-breakingly vivid, it tells of the R.A.F. in Greece, where, so few against so many. . . This is first an R.A.F. novel, strikingly lucid in describing air fighting. . . But it is also a novel of the Greek war, poignant in its admiration of the people's army of Greece, poignant in its story of Helen and Quayle." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 16 '42 230w

"The pattern of the book closely follows For Whom the Bell Tolls. . . The weakness of the Hemingway method is, in the fullest sense of the word, its superficiality. . . What is admirable is that Mr. Aldridge should have deliberately chosen to use an available style which suited his purpose. Plagiarism would be a foolish charge, for the style is exactly suited to the exciting, topical novel which he has wished to write: it is doubtful whether he could have invented a better one." Philip Toynbee

+ New Statesman & Nation 24:293 O 31 '42 550w

"One must pay tribute to Mr. Aldridge's adeptness in depicting spectacular air-battle scenes so lucidly that the untechnical reader has no difficulty in following the most complex manoeuvres. . . Here is a profoundly

ALDRIDGE, JAMES—Continued
moving romance which, as a first novel, sets a remarkably high standard of all-around excellence." Drake De Kay

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 2 '42 850w

N Y Times p2 O 4 '42 650w

"The air stuff is terrific, several cuts below Saint-Exupery for feeling but tops as pure, tense narrative. It rings true, too. The airmen sound like what they probably were in those days—tough, monosyllabic, deliberately stripped of emotion, and naive about the war." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:68 S 12 '42 270w

Pratt p11 D '42

"Superb and terrible experiences set down for the most part with a circumspection and accuracy which finely enhance emotion and hold the reader in sober attention and concern from its first anxious, uneasy, lively pages to the inevitable, tragic last. . . . But at his most uncertain, where he explores personal love, personal feeling, and when he is on the ground and confronted with the girl, he is sometimes too Hemingway to be bearable." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 169:416 O 30 '42 700w

Time 40:101 O 5 '42 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p509 O 17 '42 1000w

ALEXANDER, CARTER. How to locate educational information and data; a text and reference book. 2d ed rev and enl 439p $4 Teachers college

016.37 Education—Bibliography. Educational research (W) 41-20999

"Second edition, greatly revised, improved, and expanded." (Subtitle) "Covers several areas not treated in the first edition and introduces new library aids which represent recent developments in the field of library searching." (School & Society) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1936. Index.

Booklist 38:191 F 1 '42

School & Society 54:283 O 4 '41 20w

ALEXANDER, FRANZ. Our age of unreason; a study of the irrational forces in social life. 371p $3 Lippincott

301.15 Civilization. Psychology. Social psychology. Twentieth century 42-23133

"A Chicago psychoanalyst tells us something of what he has learned in the clinic and applies it to the broader problems of sociology, history, cultural lag, American neuroses [and] the world outlook." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:177 Ja 1 '43

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

Books p20 N 1 '42 1100w

"Franz Alexander has done an interesting job. In the first place he has a number of things to say, and in the second place he says them, for the most part, clearly and (for an analyst!) with definite word economy. Our Frankenstein pursuit of science and its present chaotic result is well depicted. . . . No book of Alexander's would be complete without at least one good crack at scholastic philosophy. The watchful reader will not be disappointed for the cracks are there (two of them replete with the rubber stamp). . . . However, overlooking these customary pleasantries, one can digest the balance of the book with considerable enjoyment, not to say profit." A. C. Washburne

+ Commonweal 37:184 D 4 '42 700w

"Because of technical terms, early parts of book are heavy going for the layman; but later chapters such as 'The Emotional Structure of Totalitarianism,' 'The Emotional Structure of Democracy,' 'Defeatism Concerning Democracy,' 'New Frontiers,' and 'Psychological Aspects of War and Peace,' are especially readable and fruitful for any mature reader. Valuable in a library serving educated readers." J. S. Cleavinger

+ Library J 67:793 S 15 '42 110w

Reviewed by George Soule

New Repub 107:797 D 12 '42 1500w

"Speculative and written in the more or less familiar post-Freudian lingo, but much of it makes brilliant sense and appears both helpful and hopeful besides."

+ New Yorker 18:67 O 3 '42 70w

Reviewed by B. D. Lewin, M.D.

Sat R of Lit 25:45 O 24 '42 850w

ALEXANDER, HOLMES MOSS. Selina. 339p $2.50 Harper

(W) 42-10683

Traces the complicated relationships between one of the first families of Maryland, and the descendants of a bluff ex-tug boat captain who lived nearby. The Bushrods had no money, but plenty of position; the Sutlers had money, but were not welcomed in the best society. Selina Bushrod and bluff old "Commodore" Suter were finally responsible for the end of the feud.

Booklist 38:346 My 15 '42

"It is a lively narrative, and Mr. Alexander has handled it expertly." Lisle Bell

+ Books p16 Ap 26 '42 370w

"The story is well written and entertaining, with plenty of incident and an exciting horse race to give it zest. Its characters are real people, neither heroes nor villains, largely conditioned by environment and inherited prejudices. There are moments when the reader feels that what young Gerry Lassiter most needs is a good hard shaking, but he has his trials and comes out of them considerably chastened and improved." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 8 '42 700w

Sat R of Lit 25:14 J1 18 '42 270w

"Holmes Alexander's style is smooth and facile, a trifle slick perhaps but only when he is filling in gaps, making conversation. His prose rises nobly to the dramatic. . . . For those who like stories with local color, who enjoy a love story, or who wish to dream away an afternoon in a hammock on a summer day, 'Selina' will make pleasant reading." Sarah Schiff

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 19 '42 390w

Wis Lib Bul 38:87 My '42

ALGER, MRS LECLAIRE. Dougal's wish; with pictures by Marc Simont. 244p $2 Harper

(W) 42-20649

The discovery of an old book of Scottish legends in a Pennsylvania shop was the beginning of strange events in the lives of Dougal and his brother and sister, not to mention the kelpie. For ages eight to ten.

Booklist 39:52 O 15 '42

"A lively and completely 'different' tale. Perhaps its liveliness is partly due to the Scottish talk: the housekeeper's and that of Auld Gregson who lives near by. But the 'different' feature is that its charms, fairies and general feats of magic are not explained away." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 10 '43 360w

"This well-written story combining reality and magic carries back to ancient Scottish charms and superstitions." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:332 S '42 70w

"Realism and fancy are smoothly blended in fast and funny story for ten-year-olds about a pleasant family on modern Pennsylvania chicken farm. The ancient, bewhiskered, and perverse Scottish kelpie materializes only when reader's interest is so thoroughly captured that even one who resents a fairy story will be unable to put it down. Characterization exceptionally good. Illustrations negligible. Recommended." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 67:847 O 1 '42 100w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:892 O 15 '42 10w

"Even if you sniff at the very idea of a kelpie, so skillfully is the story told, and so well written, that you will believe, temporarily at least, in this homesick trouble-maker. The very homeliness of background, of peaceful beloved farm land, peopled by comfortable, friendly elders, rich personalities in themselves, enhances the eeriness and the comedy of the children's disconcerting adventures. This is an original and highly diverting tale for those with first-class imaginations." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 S 6 '42 360w

ALGER, MRS LECLAIRE. Golden summer; pictures by Aldren Watson. 205p $2 Harper (W) 42-10320

The golden summer was full of adventure for little Andrušik who went to live in Poruba with his cousin, Pan Doktor. It was the same summer when Fanya came to live with Pan Doktor while her father and mother undertook a dangerous mission to America for their Slovakian homeland. And at the end of the summer a letter from America announced the safe arrival of Fanya's parents, and asked Pan Doktor to bring Andrušik and Fanya to their new country.

Booklist 38:348 My 15 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '42

"It's a joyous, carefree summer the two children have who live with Pan Doktor in a little Slovak village. . . The three-day walking trip that forty unaccompanied children take to compete in a music festival is equally exciting, to say nothing of the prizes carried away. Threat of war seems of little concern, and opportunity to leave their native country for America crowns the children's happiness." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 67:415 My 1 '42 80w

"A Slovakian story peopled with very real, appealing children." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 67:885 O 15 '42 20w

"There is the ring of truth in this story; told in unaffected, spontaneous fashion, it conveys something of the charm and simplicity of life in a Slovak village." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 Ag 2 '42 440w

"This charming book about Slovak village life in the days just before the war assembles a lovable cast of characters. . . The writing is so good that young readers will have a sense of participation in the life of this remote and golden village. The book is also particularly well designed and illustrated."

+ New Yorker 18:75 My 23 '42 90w

ALGREN, NELSON. Never come morning; with an introd. by Richard Wright. 284p $2.50 Harper

42-11112

Story of poverty and crime among the Poles of Chicago's West side. The protagonist is Bruno Bicek, a young pugilist and near-gangster, whose poverty and code of "play straight with the gang" leads him into trouble, and he is arrested for murder in the midst of his first successful prize fight. Beside his story runs that of his girl, Steffi, who is forced by Bruno's code into becoming a member of Mama Tomek's brothel.

"People who have never read Algren and want to know what he is like had best think of James T. Farrell, the acknowledged master of the Chicago school of realism to which Algren belongs. Algren however, is no mere timid disciple. He is a powerful story teller in his own right whose every bitter page derives from personal experiences and observation. Those gifted with strong stomachs and a large acceptance of the tragedies of submerged slum existence will find ample rewards in reading him." Milton Hindus

Books p10 Ap 26 '42 650w

"Algren may become one of the best writers in America. He has genuine vision and the ability to depict what he sees with clarity and vigor. Most important, he has the intelligence, probity and good taste that, it is to be hoped, will eventually guide him in shaping the facts of social documentation into satisfying works of art." Adam Margoshes

+ Current Hist 2:467 Ag '42 470w

"The whole narrative is pervaded by a feeling of loss rather than of bitterness or horror. And Algren's realism is so paced as to avoid the tedium of the naturalistic stereotype, of the literal copying of surfaces. He knows how to select, how to employ factual details without letting himself be swamped by them, and, finally, how to put the slang his characters speak to creative uses so that it ceases to be an element of mere documentation and turns into an element of style." Philip Rahv

+ Nation 154:466 Ap 18 '42 550w

"It is the poetry of familiar things that is missing in the other Chicago novels and that shows the direction of Algren's talent. In spite of the violent story he tells—and tells convincingly—he is not by instinct a novelist. He is a poet of the Chicago slums, and he might well be Sandburg's successor." Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 106:613 My 4 '42 850w

"Algren has forged an effective style; I'm for the style, but by the same token I find the writing often stylized. There's a good deal of self-consciousness in this writing. But it has moments in passages you are not likely to forget. . . I question not the verity but the completeness of the story even within its limits. But this is an unusual book and a brilliant book. For those who can take it, it should prove also an exciting story." F. T. Marsh

+ — N Y Times p6 My 10 '42 700w

"Mr. Algren writes with calculated and relentless brutality, sparing neither his miserable characters nor his horrified readers. He is out to shock, but he does so without seeming to sensationalize. At any rate, I, for one, found myself believing his hellish descriptions of police lineups, jail inmates, street murders, and life as lived in a cheap brothel. An ugly, effective slice of low life, carrying plenty of concealed and, one hopes, salutary propaganda." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 18:75 Ap 18 '42 180w

"Mr. Algren's new novel is a knockout. Like a flare of light, it illumines one of our big industries—the crime racket. But the illumination is in human terms, the method of Richard Wright, and not of W. R. Burnett or James Cain. . . 'Never Come Morning' towers head and shoulders over most novels as 'Native Son' towered over most novels in its publication year." Benjamin Appel

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 Ap 18 '42 700w

ALLEE, MARJORIE (HILL) (MRS W. C. ALLEE). Winter's mischief; il. by George Gillett Whitney. 217p $2 Houghton

(W) 42-20274

A co-educational boarding school in Pennsylvania is the scene of this story for grades seven to nine. Clemency Brown, a first year student interested in natural science is the heroine. Berne, the school ghost, adds a touch of interest.

Booklist 39:15 S '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 S 6 '42 210w

"An unusually good boarding school story about natural children, under excellent supervision, becoming better fitted to live happily with others." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:337 S '42 110w

"Refreshing school story because of its unhackneyed plot and unstereotyped characters; disappointing, however, because it moves slowly and is only mildly exciting. Would buy only if school stories are in great demand." Claire Nolte

+ — Library J 67:795 S 15 '42 80w

"A better than usual school story." P. D. Edie

+ Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 10w

Wis Lib Bul 38:142 O '42

ALLEN, ADAM, pseud. of SAMUEL EPSTEIN and BERYL WILLIAMS. Dynamo farm; a 4-H story; il. by Juan Oliver; foreword by Dorothy Canfield Fisher. 283p $2 Lippincott

(W) 42-13304

Terry Dunham was fifteen years old when he and his mother were forced to leave the city and go to live on a run-down farm Mrs Dunham had inherited. Terry put up a good front but inwardly he disliked it all—country living, country school, country people, and particularly the 4-H club. This story tells how Terry outgrew his dislikes and what the 4-H club meant to him in the end.

ALLEN, ADAM—Continued

Booklist 38:372 Je 1 '42

"It does not take long to learn that this man knows what he is talking about."

+ Books p20 My 10 '42 280w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 13 '42 90w

"Significant and timely story of present-day American youth. . . The 4-H principles are admirably presented in story that is worth while and convincing, though not outstanding in style." E. A. Groves

+ Library J 67:534 Je 1 '42 80w

School & Society 55:483 Ap 25 '42 30w

Wis Lib Bul 38:142 O '42

ALLEN, BETTY, and BRIGGS, MITCHELL PIRIE. If you please! a book of manners for young moderns; drawings by Charles Malcolm Allen. 239p $2; school ed $1.40 Lip-pincott

395 Etiquet. Youth (W) 42-5324

A companion volume to Behave Yourself (Book Review Digest, 1937). This gives supplementary advice on dinner table manners, on dates, on school etiquette, on travel, and many other matters interesting to young people. Index.

Booklist 39:141 D 15 '42

"Although the spate of etiquette books for youth has subsided, the flow is not over—fortunately, for this is one of the best for those who will use it, to be put immediately to use. It is for self-training in character and conduct; beginning with personality, it never lets go that thought, but devotes advice and examples, horrible and otherwise, to fitting one's personality into the social scheme of youth without too much strain on individual or society." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 S 27 '42 250w

J Home Econ 36:486 S '42 40w

ALLEN, HUGH. Story of the airship (non-rigid) a study of one of America's lesser known defense weapons. 74p il maps $1 Goodyear tire & rubber co, inc, Akron, Ohio 629.13327 Airships 42-10327

"Considers the value of the airship in peace and war. The author relates the activities of the German submarines in American waters during the first World War, British airships as convoys and as scouts against mines and U-boats, American activities and the training of men, &c., airship improvements between the wars, the experiments of the Goodyear fleet, and the vulnerability of airships." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by Wolfgang Langewiesche

Books p18 Je 7 '42 430w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:20 Ap '42

ALLEN, JOHN ROBINS, and BURSLEY, JOSEPH ALDRICH. Heat engines; steam, gas, steam turbines and their auxiliaries. 5th ed 576p il $4 McGraw

621.1 Heat engines 41-18907

"In this new edition the authors have given particular attention to the chapters on boiler auxiliaries, steam turbines, and internal-combustion engines. The text has been largely rewritten and new illustrations have replaced older ones." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 38:98 N 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:56 O '41

ALLEN, LUCY GRACE. A book of hors d'oeuvre. new ed 141p il $1.75 Little

641.8 Cookery (hors d'oeuvres) 41-21298

Enlarged edition of a book published in 1925 (Book Review Digest, 1926). The recipes are arranged according to use: to go with cocktails; to serve as pierced savories; as hors d'oeuvres for special dishes; and as first course. Index.

Booklist 38:191 F 1 '42

J Home Econ 34:120 F '42 40w

ALLEN, MERRITT PARMELEE. Green cockade; il. by Henry S. Gillette. 199p $2 Longmans

42-23556

A story of the feuds over the New Hampshire Grants and the battles of Ethan Allen's Green Mountain boys with the Yorkers before the Revolution, and on the side of the Colonies during the war. The hero is an American youth, Hal Stonebridge, whose father had been murdered in the trouble with the Yorkers. For older boys.

Booklist 39:123 D 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 N 1 '42 400w

"Well written. Recommended for boys who need more books of this type." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 67:1069 D 1 '42 70w

"This story of courage is told with humor and a fine sense of the times. The lusty backwoods trader and the indomitable pioneer woman take their places beside the well-drawn figures of Ethan Allen and Dan Morgan, and though action fills its pages, there is room for Hal's growing sense of the meaning of a free country." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 O 18 '42 320w

Springfd Republican p7e Ja 3 '43 70w

ALLEN, ROBERT JOSEPH. Life in eighteenth century England. (Museum extension publications. Reconstructing the past; illustrative set) 38p pl $5.20 Boston museum of fine arts

914.2 England—Social life and customs

A portfolio of 12 plates with explanatory captions and a 40-page interpretive booklet.

"The accompanying brief text by Professor Robert J. Allen of Williams College furnishes an interpretative commentary on the tastes, trends, and social life of eighteenth century England. His skill and knowledge of the literature and life of the day make it much more than a guide to a picture gallery."

+ Am Hist R 47:934 Jl '42 90w

Booklist 38:304 Ap 15 '42

ALLEN, ROY MORRIS. Photo-micrography. 365p il $5.50 Van Nostrand

578.4 Photomicrography. Microphotography 41-24047

"The present work starts immediately with a discussion of the principles of photo-micrography. Equipment, both commercially available and homemade, is described. Technique, processes and materials are all adequately covered. A section of 50 illustrative photomicrographs with exposure and other data given, show what can be accomplished with various magnifications, filters, exposures, etc." (Chem & Met Eng) Index.

"The usefulness of the book is increased by a comprehensive index and the numerous graphs and illustrations which are scattered throughout the text. It can be recommended, not only to microscopists but also to engineers who wish to apply photomicrography to their control or research problems."

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:165 Ja '42 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:10 Ja '42

"While not a comprehensive treatise on the technique of photomicrography this book should be of great value to non-professional photographers because of the wealth of information and helpful hints it contains, collected from the author's extensive experience. . . As a whole the book should be a valuable addition to any relatively non-technical, how-to-do-it library." L. A. Chambers
 + R of Scientific Instruments 13:167 Ap '42 420w

ALLEN, SALLY ELLIOTT. Not hers alone. 336p $2.50 Liveright

42-25505

"The background is a small college town. However, not much is told about the place, as the story is focused almost exclusively upon two families, the Donahues and the Andersons: Lute Donahue . . . his young daughter, Dee, his image in many ways . . . Dagmar Anderson, wife of a college professor and mother of Dan, who is Dee's closest friend." N Y Times

Booklist 39:201 Ja 15 '43

"'Not Hers Alone' is not a stereotyped story, and its virtue is that you will prefer to lay it down, now and then, and let your mind dwell on the thoughts and impressions it evokes. . . The essence of the novel is in the telling, and particularly in the cadence of dialogue." Lisle Bell

+ Books p28 O 25 '42 400w

"Sally Allen tells her story without haste, in a composed, thoughtful manner that gives her book its own gentle rhythm. It is a rounded story, closely confined within immediate emotions, introspective, yet too honest and warm to ever grow narrow." Marianne Hauser
 + N Y Times p16 O 18 '42 750w

ALLIS, MARGUERITE. Splendor stays. 497p $2.75 Putnam

42-24491

This novel of the first half of the nineteenth century is based on old diaries, letters, records, and hearsay, and is about the seven daughters of Captain Elisha Hart of Saybrook, Connecticut. Chiefly it is about Ann Hart, who married Isaac Hull, captain of the famous frigate Constitution; Elizabeth who married Heman Allen, first American minister to Chile; and Jeannette, who almost married Simon Bolivar.

Booklist 39:138 D 15 '42

Reviewed by Rose Feld

Books p4 N 8 '42 1000w

"One feels that Miss Allis has been constricted a little by her duties as historian and that she has forgotten her obligations as a novelist. Throughout the book, too, there are episodes which seem trivial, overexploited, unnecessary—to wit, Jeannette's recurring difficulties with Isaac's amorous lieutenants, who are villains of the deepest dye! Despite all this, though, 'The Splendour Stays' is a novel of real charm and substance—and one which justifies the method which Miss Allis has twice used so well." E. H. Walton
 + N Y Times p12 N 8 '42 1100w

"An engrossing story. It vividly recalls the Monroe Doctrine's difficult birth and underlines its incalculable influence on history. Its breathless pace halts only long enough to orient the reader in the early 1800s. From then on he has to hold on to his chair." A. W. Hinshaw
 + Sat R of Lit 25:9 N 21 '42 470w

ALLISON, JOHN MAUDGRIDGE SNOWDEN. ed. See Sophia Christina Charlotte, princess of Nassau-Saarbruck. Concerning the education of a prince

ALLPORT, GORDON WILLARD. Use of personal documents in psychological science; prepared for the Committee on appraisal of research. 210p pa $1.50 Social science research council

150.182 Psychology—Methodology 42-14430

"The book wrestles with two of the most difficult problems encountered by the psychologist and the sociologist: the gathering of trustworthy reports of the subjective experiences of men and women and the interpreting of such material accurately and adequately. It is obvious that a thoroughgoing study of human behavior demands this tapping of the minds of people and then raises the question how to value these gleanings from individuals. The book seeks to improve the appraisal of the self-revealing records of personal experience through an analysis of the form and content-value of examples illustrating the various types of personal documents." Social Forces

Reviewed by R. E. Park

Am Soc R 7:435 Je '42 1250w

"Certain to prove an important contribution to the furthering of the progress of research in the social sciences. . . The author has given his fellow workers a timely and significant discussion of one of the most puzzling and important of methodological questions. The volume has a sizeable and discriminating bibliography." E. R. Groves
 + Social Forces 21:120 O '42 260w

ALSOP, GULIELMA FELL, and MCBRIDE, MARY FRANCES. She's off to marriage; a guide to success and happiness in married life. 268p $2.50 Vanguard

173.1 Marriage (W) 42-15500

Sensible discussion of entertaining, emotional adjustments, and mental attitudes for young women about to marry. Partial contents: Parental attitudes; The proposal; Engagement time; Your fiancé—your most important in-law; Apartment hunting; Furnishing the home; The wedding; The wedding night; The honeymoon; War brides; Homemaking; The nutrition and health of the family; Motherhood. Short bibliography.

Booklist 38:420 Jl 1 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '42

ALVES, JULIET. Huldah. 365p $2.50 Scribner 42-19940

The portrait of a vigorous, red-haired woman from the backwoods of North Carolina, who married an aristocratic Virginian captain, shortly after the Revolution. Together they went to the Kentucky frontier to build their home on the captain's Treasury-warrant land, and very soon found that the captain was supremely unprepared for pioneer life. But Huldah exulted in her new life, and developed into a magnificent pioneer mother, albeit slightly less holy and righteous than the usual type pictured in fiction of the frontier.

"Mrs. Alves's briskly told story of life on the frontier gives a picture of a pioneer mother considerably less conventional than those to which the memorial statues have accustomed us." Mary Ross
 + Books p8 Ag 23 '42 650w

"'Huldah' is not an imposing book, or perhaps even a very important one, but it contains its fair share of lively color and it is always pleasingly and unpretentiously honest." T. Q. Curtiss
 + N Y Times p20 Ag 23 '42 460w

AMERICA in action; twelve one-act plays for young people, dealing with freedom and democracy. 339p $2 Crowell

812.08 American drama—Collections (W) 42-36000

Twelve one-act plays which present episodes from American history, and stress freedom and democracy. They require very simple scenery and costumes, and are all non-royalty for nonprofessional groups. Senior and junior high schools.

AMERICA in action—Continued

Booklist 38:194 F 1 '42

"Useful for high schools; strongly patriotic, unrelieved by comedy. . . This is a small, thick volume whose paper and binding reflect the new quality reductions in book publishing: the back breaks easily and the inner margins are narrow for rebinding." Maude Adams
Library J 67:86 Ja 15 '42 100w
Wis Lib Bul 38:44 Mr '42

AMERICA organizes to win the war; a handbook on the American war effort; President Roosevelt [and others]. 369p maps $2; college ed $1.50; high school ed $1.20 Harcourt
940.5373 World war, 1939—U.S. U.S.—Defenses (W) 42-36147

Partial contents: What are the fundamental issues of the war? by H. S. Commager; How does this war differ from other American wars? by Max Lerner; How is the Navy organized to fight the war? by Paul Schubert; How can America co-operate with its allies? by H. M. Vinacke; How can American labor help the war effort? by John Chamberlain; How can we pay for the war? by D. C. Coyle; How can individuals keep a healthy morale in wartime? by A. U. Pope; How can artists and writers help the war effort? by D. C. Fisher; What are we fighting for? by Winston Churchill and F. D. Roosevelt; Foundations of the peace, by H. A. Wallace. Index.

Reviewed by R. S. Rankin

Am Pol Sci R 36:785 Ag '42 230w

Booklist 38:306 Ap 15 '42

"The one glaring weakness of this book is on the economic side. Though the farmers' task and the industrial machine are given brief attention, these two sections are far from being sufficient to cover our economic mobilization. Three or four more short chapters should have been written by expert industrialists and economists. But despite this shortcoming, the book is as valuable as it is timely. It bears the name of no editor, but it has been skillfully planned and carefully put together." Allan Nevins

+ — Books p2 My 24 '42 1050w

"It should help build morale by helping to build understanding." H. W. Harris
+ Boston Globe p19 My 6 '42 120w

Christian Century 59:498 Ap 15 '42 130w

"Writers and speakers will find this book an excellent source of information on the diverse phases of the present struggle." J. B. Parrish
+ Churchman 156:31 Jl 1 '42 150w

J Home Econ 34:385 Je '42 180w

"'America Organizes to Win the War' is a well-selected collection of 20 chapters dealing with the United States and the war, all prepared by leading authorities in the respective fields covered. The material is new, and as up-to-date as book publication deadline requirements permit. The one exception to this is a chapter containing selected quotations from addresses by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill." D. K. Beckley

+ Management R 31:150 Ap '42 550w

New Repub 106:774 Je 1 '42 100w

New Yorker 18:88 Ap 11 '42 30w

"Designed as 'a handbook on the American war effort', it is an admirable publishing achievement and a noteworthy contribution to a better understanding of the cause for which we are fighting." S. I. Pomerantz

+ Pol Sci Q 57:631 D '42 390w

School & Society 55:372 Mr 28 '42 50w

"This is a fine book for many junior and senior classes. Dr. Hunt has done an excellent job of selection and arrangement. Most of the factual material has appeared other places for adult readers but it is gathered together here for school use." Julia Emery

+ Social Studies 33:334 N '42 500w

Reviewed by Phillips Bradley

Survey G 32:26 Ja '43 90w

Wis Lib Bul 38:118 Jl '42

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION. American youth commission. Youth and the future; general report. 296p $2.50 The council 362.7 Youth (W) 42-36043

Collection of articles on the Commission's program of action for modern youth in peace and war. Partial contents: Work programs for youth in the future; The problem of full employment; Education; Occupational adjustment; Action in communities; The place of the federal government; Responsibility for planning in relation to action; Meaning for life. Index.

Booklist 38:225 Mr 1 '42

Bookmark 3:4 My '42

J Home Econ 34:253 Ap '42 150w

"The report as a whole is compact and concrete. Its concluding section looks beyond the particular to the general, and beneath specific activities to the inner meaning and purpose of life."

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 29 '42 480w

"The only possible criticism which the younger reader might make is that only brief mention is made of the potentialities of self-initiated responsibility on the part of youth for the solution of their own problems. In its entirety, however, the report demonstrates careful and thorough research. The representative character of the Commission, which includes people from many walks of life, proves the value of their thesis that by cooperative effort America can and will solve the problems of youth and the future." Louise Morley

+ Sat R of Lit 25:24 Mr 7 '42 470w

School & Society 55:196 F 14 '42 40w

"It is an excellent, though brief, discussion of what can and should be done to plan and coordinate existing and new efforts at the community level, at the state level, and at the federal level." W. B. Featherstone

+ Social Educ 6:241 My '42 1000w

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION. Committee on motion pictures in education. Selected educational motion pictures; a descriptive encyclopedia. 372p $3 The council 371.33 Moving pictures in education 42-17170

"Detailed content descriptions and educational values, the full title, length, and sources are given for nearly five hundred 16-mm films. Supplements to the book are planned. . . As the introduction declares, 'An attempt has been made to include all appropriate information on these films so the classroom teacher may make an intelligent selection of motion pictures which will contribute to the curriculum objectives, fit into the subject matter of the unit, and be appropriate to the age and grade level of the class.'" (J Home Econ) Indexes.

Booklist 39:95 N 15 '42

"Valuable for every library." I. S. Sunderlin

+ J Home Econ 34:742 D '42 100w

AMERICAN GIRL MAGAZINE. Lots of laughs; jokes sel. from the Magazine and il. by Elizabeth Ripley. [51p] 50c Oxford

817 Humor—Juvenile literature 42-16272

Small joke book, comprising about fifty jokes, for readers aged from seven to twelve.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p9 S 13 '42 170w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 67:793 S 15 '42 50w

Reviewed by P. D. Edle

Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 20w

"For many years readers of the American Girl Magazine have sent in their favorite jokes and from these Miss Ripley has selected the cream. This explains why certain old-time favorites reappear to delight boys and girls of today, while they bring a reminiscent joy to their elders." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p11 S 27 '42 150w

AMERICAN HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION. War as a social institution. See Clarkson, J. D., and Cochran, T. C., eds.

AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION. Committee on library work with children. Right book for the right child. 3d ed 285p $3 Day
028.5 Children's literature—Bibliography (W) 42-36321

"An enlarged up-to-date edition, with more accurate grading of books in terms of reading ability. The book selection was done by a committee of children's librarians, the grading by the Research department of the Winnetka (Illinois) public schools. The Pre-school list was made by a committee of the Association for childhood education. The system used in grading the books is explained in the introduction by Carleton W. Washburne." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1933.

Booklist 39:51 O 15 '42

"The annotations are informative; the selection is comprehensive, including a judicious sprinkling of classics for almost all ages and a few adult titles for older children, especially from the field of biography. In spite of the most painstaking search, I can find very few omissions." Betsy Hutchison

+ Nation 155:548 N 21 '42 210w

School & Society 56:392 O 24 '42 20w

AMERICAN PUBLIC HEALTH ASSOCIATION. Committee on the hygiene of housing. Housing for health; papers. 221p pa $1 The committee, 310 Cedar st, New Haven, Conn.

331.833 Housing—U.S. Public health—U.S. 42-14059

"Papers presented under the auspices of the Committee." (Subtitle) Contents: Health and housing, by C.-E.A. Winslow; Enforcement and subsidy in the control of slums, by L. M. Graves and A. F. Fletcher; An experiment in housing survey and inspection procedures for health departments, by G. C. Ruhland; Housing codes, by M. G. Lloyd; Health centers and health services in housing projects, by J. C. Luekhardt; Heating, lighting, and noise conditions in recent housing projects, by A. A. Twichell; Heating and ventilation of the home, by C.-E. A. Winslow; New possibilities in low-cost home construction, by R. L. Davison; Planning for recreation, by F. J. Adams; Family life as the basis for home planning, by S. H. Riemer; Social effects of good housing, by F. S. Chapin; Certain characteristics of urban housing and their relation to illness and accidents, by R. H. Britten, J. E. Brown and Isidore Altman.

Reviewed by Abel Wolman

Am J Pub Health 32:1177 O '42 600w

Reviewed by Joseph Hirsh

Social Forces 20:507 My '42 150w

AMERICAN PUBLIC WORKS ASSOCIATION. Committee on refuse collection and disposal. Refuse collection practice. 659p il $5 The association

628.44 Refuse and refuse disposal 41-25871

"This volume is the first comprehensive treatise on this important service published since 1921. It is the result of almost two years' research on the part of the Association and it presents an analysis and appraisal of refuse collection practice based upon information from 190 cities of the United States and Canada. The book also contains detailed tabulations of practices, cost data, a selected bibliography, and is completely indexed." Am J Pub Health

Reviewed by A. P. Miller

Am J Pub Health 32:427 Ap '42 70w

Booklist 38:380 Je 15 '42

Eng N 128:96 Ap 9 '42 160w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:7 Ja '42

AMERICAN YOUTH COMMISSION. See American council on education. American youth commission

AMICK, CHARLES L. Fluorescent lighting manual. 312p il $3 McGraw

621.327 Electric lighting (W) 42-13661

"This manual is written for everyone interested in fluorescent lighting—manufacturers, contractors, dealers, installers, and users—with the hope that greater understanding will help point the way to more effective installations and maximum customer satisfaction. To this end, fundamental 'background' knowledge and practical installation design and servicing information are presented in simple language. The writer also attempted to interpret some of the basic philosophy of illuminating engineering with regard to footcandle standards and lighting quality for the benefit of those readers whose interest in lighting is of fairly recent origin." (Pref) Glossary, recommended levels of illumination, tables, and index.

Booklist 38:421 Jl 1 '42

Eng N 128:96 Je 4 '42 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:40 Jl '42

Pratt p10 D '42

AMRINE, MICHAEL. All sons must say goodbye. 309p $2.50 Harper

42-21687

Story of the coming of age of a Kansas boy, the son of a puritanical Kansas lawyer, in the years 1934 and 1935. His first visit away from home, his first experiences with college, love, ideas, drink, and sex are sympathetically told.

"It is a fine book, a book full of warm pages in which many a reader may recognize his own early aspirations, frustrations and fulfillments." Milton Hindus

+ Books p10 S 20 '42 750w

"This is a sincere, earnest and sympathetic story. . . Mr. Amrine writes with candor, with spontaneity, and often with lyrical beauty." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p22 S 13 '42 550w

"Now that Mr. Amrine has this novel out of his system perhaps he will go on to write a book that will give us a better view of his talents. . . This kind of novel has to have a streak of originality, or a touch of genius, in it to live, and Mr. Amrine has not included either. 'All Sons Must Say Goodbye' remains, then, the usual farewell to a young man's first fine careless raptures, too much like too many others. Mr. Amrine writes a swift and emotional prose which ought to show up to much greater advantage in his next book." N. L. R.

+ Sat R of Lit 25:12 S 12 '42 140w

ANDERSEN, HANS CHRISTIAN. Snow queen; il. by Doris and George Hauman. 63p $2 Macmillan

(W) 42-21644

"A favorite fairy tale beautifully redecorated in soft, rich colors by two well-known artists." Booklist

Booklist 39:37 O 1 '42

Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 10w

"There is a clear, crystalline quality about the pictures and a real fairy-tale feeling that make them right for this favorite story." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 67:884 O 15 '42 30w

"There is good drawing, delicate detail, and lovely color in each of [the illustrators'] six full-page drawings and numerous chapter headings, and, in their interpretation of the story, they have expressed admirably the fusion of fairy and human qualities which is so essentially Andersen." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 67:910 O 15 '42 80w

Wis Lib Bul 38:192 D '42

ANDERSON, CLARENCE WILLIAM. Thoroughbreds; story and pictures by [the author]. 72p $2 Macmillan 636.1 Horses (W) 42-22284

"Mr. Anderson calls this new book about horses an A B C of thoroughbreds. . . Here are the origins of that breed which has given us most of the great names of horse history, from Eclipse to Man o' War. Presupposing the rudiments of horse knowledge if not much else, he shows the young, and those whose enthusiasm out-runs their knowledge, the fundamental principles of judging a horse, in non-technical language. . . There are discussions on aspects of heredity and breeding, on the estimation of speed, and the part, often over-estimated, played by jockeys in a horse's triumphs and defeats, and briefly, of steeplechasers and hunters. Here is elementary information about this most popular of horse breeds, but perhaps the most appealing part of all is the anecdotes of horses which were great personalities as well as winners." N Y Times

Booklist 39:52 O 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 O 11 '42 300w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p16 D 10 '42 110w

"Splendid sketches of individual horses and clear descriptive text unite to show the value of good breeding. . . For horse lovers, old and young." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 18:426 N '42 50w

"Though simply presented, the subject matter is for adults, and most libraries will prefer to place in adult rather than juvenile collection. Author's lithographs were never more lifelike, beautiful, and distinguished." M. N. Miller
+ Library J 67:912 O 15 '42 90w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p9 S 6 '42 260w

ANDERSON, DEWEY. California state government. 350p $2.90 Stanford univ. press 353.9794 California—Politics and government 42-3978

Study of the government of the state of California. Four chapters are devoted to voters, political parties, elections, the legislature, the lobby and pressure politics, and direct legislation. Three chapters deal with the organizations and functions of the executive and administrative agencies. The last chapter summarizes current governmental problems. Index.

"A readable and practical book on the government of the state of California. . . Designed for students in high schools and colleges, the volume can also be used profitably by public officials and citizens who wish to understand and to improve the government of their state." F. M. Stewart
+ Am Pol Sci R 36:762 Ag '42 340w

"The reviewer finds this volume disappointing in one respect. The interesting treatment given to elections, the governor, the legislator, and the like is not carried over into the administrative side of California's government. . . On the 'government' side, however, the volume is excellent. It is written simply and understandably, and ought to prove usable in civics and political science classes on all levels in the California school system. There ought to be available a study of this type for each of our forty-eight states, in order that state government may be taught in terms of actuality. Only then does the study of government have meaning for the student. If similar projects are undertaken in other states, the reviewer hopes it may be by people as well qualified as Mr. Anderson. His experiences as a teacher, a legislator, and a state administrator are reflected in the excellence of his book." C. L. Larsen
+ Ann Am Acad 222:220 J1 '42 400w

ANDERSON, HOBSON DEWEY, and DAVIDSON, PERCY ERWIN. American job trends. 48p il pa 50c Science research

331.7 Occupations. Labor and laboring classes—U.S. U.S.—Industries and resources 41-13904

"This booklet is based on the 600-page study, 'Occupational Trends in the United States,' by the same authors. It covers shifts in the labor market in 10 broad fields: agriculture, forestry and fishing, mining, manufacturing and building, distribution, trade, public service, professional service, domestic and personal service, and clerical work. Illustrated by charts and tables." Management R

Management R 31:72 F '42 50w

School & Society 54:64 J1 26 '41 10w

ANDERSON, LONZO. Bag of smoke; the story of the first balloon; il. by Adrienne Adams. 179p $2 Viking

629.13 Aeronautics—Juvenile literature. Balloons. Montgolfier, Joseph. Michel. Montgolfier, Jacques Etienne (W) 42-22637

Story of the Montgolfier brothers and their early balloon experiments and triumphs in France in the 1780s, with some anecdotes of other early experiments. For eleven and twelve year olds.

Booklist 39:73 N 1 '42

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p12 D 24 '42 160w

Churchman 156:16 N 15 '42 10w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 37:118 N 20 '42 20w

"This delightfully informal record of an unusually gifted family gives glimpses of the France Benjamin Franklin knew. Attractive line drawings interpret the text." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 18:345 S '42 90w

"It is not a must book where pennies have to be watched, but it certainly provides good reading and, at the same time, enriches the background of eleven- and twelve-year-old aviation enthusiasts." M. B. Snow
+ Library J 67:912 O 15 '42 110w

"This well-written book has a real place as history, and furthermore is a delightful period piece with some rarely appropriate illustrations. From these it gains humor and flavor. It will be a happy discovery for many young readers." I. S.
+ N Y Times p42 N 15 '42 300w

"As entertaining as it is informative. A sly humor enlivens both the text and the delicate pen-and-ink illustrations. The whole book has style and period flavor and is factual enough to satisfy the most exacting young aero-mechanic of ten or older." K. S. W.
+ New Yorker 18:113 D 12 '42 70w

ANDERSON, MAXWELL. Eve of St Mark; a play in two acts. 108p $2.50 Anderson house
812 World war, 1939—Drama (W) 42-23612

Drama based on the present war. It portrays the course of an American farm boy who goes to war, leaving his father, mother, younger brothers and the girl he loves on the farm. After a one-day furlough he is shipped from San Francisco, to make a last stand at Bataan. The Eve of St Mark is the night on which his beloved Janet realizes that Quizz will not come back.

Booklist 39:98 N 15 '42

"Its eloquence comes from its simplicity. There are two scenes in which the soldier appears in spirit to his mother and his sweetheart, which are somehow out of key with the rest of the play. But its total effect is unforced eloquence, a tribute to the heroic spirit of man when the great crisis faces him." W. P. Eaton
+ Books p25 Ja 24 '43 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

"Best play of early part of 1942-43 season in New York. . . Highly recommended."
+ Library J 67:1013 N 15 '42 50w

ANDERSON, NANCY MAE. Swede homestead. 188p il $2.50 Caxton printers

917.96 Anderson, Louie B. Frontier and pioneer life—Idaho 42-17531

A story of pioneering in the Lake Coeur d'Alene district of Idaho, beginning in 1893. The proprietor of the Swede homestead was Louie Anderson, a Swedish immigrant, who homesteaded and built his cabin, while his wife worked in Spokane to earn money to enable them to carry on. Illustrated with photographs.

Am Hist R 48:434 Ja '43 20w

Booklist 39:47 O 15 '42

"There are some exciting adventures and narrow escapes, but on the whole it is a narrative of homely details and humorous episodes, told simply in a style in keeping with the subject."

+ Wis Lib Bul 38:135 O '42

ANDERSON, NELS. Desert saints; the Mormon frontier in Utah. 459p il maps $4 Univ. of Chicago press

239.3 Mormons and Mormonism 42-9220

The author, a well known writer on sociological questions, tho not born a Mormon, became a Mormon in his youth and still holds a nominal affiliation with the Church of the Latter-Day Saints. This study of the sociological aspects of the early Mormon community and family life is concerned chiefly with the Mormon attempt to establish an "insular economy." The author believes that the polygamy issue was only a minor factor in the conflict with the Gentiles, and that economic and political differences were of greater importance. Bibliography. Index.

"The sociological interest in the book is secondary to the historical account, but there is much on the sociology of religious sects which will interest scholars. And, because the book is happily free from the technical jargon sometimes encountered, the book will interest and profit anyone who wishes to read a fresh account of this unique chapter in our national past." Ellsworth Feris

+ Am J Soc 48:522 Ja '43 650w

"When I opened this book and observed that it was published by the University of Chicago Press and written with the financial aid of two great foundations I hoped to find in it the book about Mormonism that should be done. I expected it to be a dispassionate and penetrating study of one of the most unusual chapters in American history. Though it is not that book by a long way, it is nevertheless one of the best books on the subject. . . I do not wish to give the impression that Anderson's book is not worthy of a serious reading—and particularly its copious footnotes. It is in most respects a satisfactory summary as far as it goes. If its author had been more scholar and less Mormon it would have gone a lot farther." Vardis Fisher

+ — Am Soc R 7:730 O '42 1250w

Reviewed by Lowry Nelson

Ann Am Acad 222:224 JI '42 700w

"It is refreshing to find a history of the Mormons written with a completely dispassionate attitude. And it is surprising for a reader accustomed to numerous rehassings of church history, to find in Nels Anderson's 'Desert Saints' so much that is quite new." Virginia Sorensen

+ Books p10 JI 26 '42 400w

"This is a solid and interesting and extremely useful study. It is a pity that Mr. Anderson's style doesn't have a bit more zest in it, but even so this is almost the most useful single volume on the Mormons that has been written." Wallace Stegner

+ — Boston Globe p17 S 2 '42 550w

Christian Century 59:1458 N 25 '42 230w

"Nels Anderson is nominally a Desert Saint and writes with admiration but with the frankness of an honest researcher in the field of social science." A. L. Murray
Churchman 156:14 My 15 '42 180w

"Anderson's style is unadorned, and occasionally he is repetitious, but his book is a mine of information and is well worth reading."

+ — Commonweal 36:116 My 22 '42 130w

Reviewed by M. E. Clark

Library J 67:317 Ap 1 '42 50w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

Nation 154:658 Je 6 '42 850w

ANDERSON, SHERWOOD. Memoirs. 507p $3.75 Harcourt

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 42-11377

"When Sherwood Anderson died unexpectedly at Colon, he had been writing his reminiscences with the object of issuing them in book form. From time to time he would describe an event or a period in his life and publish it in a magazine; thus parts of the book had been appearing since 1927. These parts have been assembled, and, together with unpublished chapters judiciously chosen from his manuscripts, are now being issued as 'Sherwood Anderson's Memoirs.'" Sat R of Lit

"The best part of the book is that which tells of Anderson's youth in the small town. Here the picture is most appealing, of a boy naïf, blundering, curious, and so eager for experience. I like also those chapters in which you see the ambitious writer struggling so desperately to master his medium and be himself. But I cannot avoid the conclusion that the parts of this book are more meaningful than the sum." Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic My '42 170w

Booklist 38:329 My 1 '42

"These memoirs must be taken as a book of fiction, and, taken that way, the book contains a great deal of truth about its author. It is, like all his other books, a piece of self-revelation, extraordinarily candid, often touching and beautiful; and in its early pages, which seem to be the last written, there emerges a new quality never seen in his earlier writings—humor about Sherwood Anderson. He was beginning to learn how to laugh at himself, and these are among the best pages he has written." Floyd Dell

Books p1 Ap 12 '42 2100w

"Sherwood Anderson in these Memoirs has left us—or so it seems to the present reviewer—the best book of his career. His stories all too often failed to come off. There are, if you like, such characters as he wrote about in every American small town: there are not so many of them in any one small town. That is why 'Winesburg, Ohio' is not representative of the small town, not wholly successful. The man himself is more interesting than his fiction." J. K. Paulding

+ Commonweal 36:19 Ap 24 '42 420w

Library J 67:320 Ap 1 '42 20w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

Nation 154:574 My 16 '42 550w

"These memoirs are something more than Sherwood Anderson's story about himself. They constitute a kind of one-volume edition of his works, complete with prefaces and explanatory matter of every sort. It seems impossible that any future critic of Anderson need go beyond them for his materials. . . These recollections might almost be a boil-down of the novels, the stories, the verse and all the odds and ends of Anderson's output since 1916. And in his case, of course, more than in that of any other American writer, they happen also to be the absolute essentials of autobiography." Max Gissen

+ New Repub 106:548 Ap 20 '42 1550w

"His memoirs are in themselves a work of art, in no way a true factual autobiography, but something better—the story of a man's emotional evolution. It is perhaps a great autobiography, despite the inclusion of some material—rhapsodic, or anecdotal, or of passing interest—which rigorous editing would have taken out. It is, at least, unique." R. L. Duffus

ANDERSON, SHERWOOD—Continued
+ N Y Times p3 Ap 12 '42 1700w

"This volume contains little that is not to be found in his other books, except a few rather pointless literary reminiscences and some odd, vague stories of his early sexual life. Some may find a certain fuzziness in the writing, but the book has its charm."

— + New Yorker 18:87 Ap 11 '42 50w
Pratt p5 D '42

"Sherwood Anderson's Memoirs [are] informal, genial, and dealing more factually with events that he had already kneaded into literary substance. . . . His book is more than literary gossip, though it has the flavor of that; it is revelation. Here the man who was forever trying to penetrate the human enigma, reveals himself. He is consistent in his vagaries, his gropings, his hesitations." Harry Hansen
+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 Ap 11 '42 1750w

"The peculiar and important thing about this new, and conspicuously informal, American classic is that it belongs far less to the literate reader than to those who read so little that talk can still mean more to them than print—provided it be plain and friendly, sensible talking. For Sherwood Anderson's life story has many things in common with their own, and so has his way of telling it."

+ Time 39:90 Ap 20 '42 350w

Wis Lib Bul 38:84 My '42

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar

Yale R ns 32:183 autumn '42 850w

ANDREWS, CHARLES FREER. Sermon on the Mount; with a foreword by Rabindranath Tagore. 175p $2 Macmillan [6s; pa 3s 6d Allen, G]

226.2 Sermon on the Mount. Jesus Christ
—Teaching [42-25609]

After the author's death in 1940 the manuscript of this book was found on his desk. It had been his intention to write a life of Christ, but the work was never completed, and these reflections on part of the Sermon on the Mount may have been part of the larger proposed work.

Christian Century 59:1258 O 14 '42 100w

"It was the most natural thing in the world for C. F. Andrews to write a book on the Sermon on the Mount, and all his friends will be glad to have it. No man has lived more in the spirit of the 'sermon' than he, and for that reason he is a good expositor of it." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 156:14 N 15 '42 170w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 10 '42 350w

"Often the author's comment is profoundly illuminating because it rests on experience rather than scholarship, and he allows the reader to see that, however improbable the success of this or that principle might seem in the real world, Andrews had put it into action and found it true."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p388 Ag 8 '42 330w

ANDREWS, MARSHALL. Our new army. 225p $1.50 Little

355 U.S.—Army (W) 42-36306

"A small book carrying a big punch, this tells the story of how farmers, haberdashers, and clerks are being transformed into an army as tough as any on earth. They're all here: paratroopers, tank destroyers and drivers, airmen, cavalry, and infantry, plus the ideas that lie behind their up-to-the-minute training." New Yorker

Booklist 39:27 O 1 '42

"For the selectee and his family in particular, and for any reader seeking a concise and clear picture of how our millions of men are being trained, Mr. Andrews has written a book of definite value."

+ Books p55 D 6 '42 130w

"Mr. Andrews [has] put in everything he can print about the new types of training. His treatment of the subject matter is breezy and optimistic. Reading the book is a must for any one contemplating enlisting."

+ Boston Globe p21 N 18 '42 150w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p10 S 20 '42 120w

New Yorker 18:71 S 12 '42 50w

Reviewed by R. E. Dupuy

Sat R of Lit 25:18 O 5 '42 500w

ANGELL, JAMES WATERHOUSE. Investment and business cycles. 363p $3.50 McGraw

330.1 Business cycles. Investments. U.S.—
Economic conditions (W) 41-10740

"The chief purpose of this book is to develop a general explanation of business cycles. Taking for granted the principal and widely-accepted statistical facts about business cycles, the author shows how changes in individual anticipations with respect to the economic future alter the current volumes of investment and national incomes; how current changes in economic activity themselves alter the levels of current anticipations; and how the interplay of these two sets of forces necessarily gives rise to self-generating business cycles." (Management R) Index.

Reviewed by H. S. Ellis

Am Econ R 32:378 Je '42 2300w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:375 Ja '42 30w

Reviewed by M. F. Millikan

J Pol Econ 50:945 D '42 1100w

Management R 30:236 Je '41 80w

ANGELL, SIR NORMAN. Let the people know. 245p $2.50 Viking

940.53 World war, 1939—. International cooperation (W) 42-25462

"The purpose of this book is to help the average busy citizen, professing no expert knowledge of foreign affairs, to play the most effective part possible in the shaping of policy for the winning of the war, and afterwards, in the right use of victory. . . . Mr. Angell, author of The Great Illusion and winner of Nobel Peace Prize in 1933, achieves his purpose with exceptional effectiveness by asking and answering questions, doubts, and misgivings about the war which were asked prior to Pearl Harbor, but not since, although they still bother many earnest people." Library J

Booklist 39:198 Ja 15 '43

Reviewed by Hiram Motherwell

Books p5 Ja 24 '43 1100w

Reviewed by J. F. Mulholland

Christian Century 60:18 Ja 6 '43 500w

"Isolationists' doubts and questions are clearly presented, so that they can be strongly refuted. Important book honestly meeting issues of the war and the peace." J. M. Flexner
+ Library J 67:1011 N 15 '42 110w

"Norman Angell's method is that of Socrates, as of every great teacher: carefully, patiently, candidly he extracts and assembles the questions that bother the plain man. Stating them fairly, he draws out their often unconscious emotional associations. Then he subjects them to an analysis as vigorous as it is frank. Names vanish; things emerge. A mass of confused particulars is finally assembled into a significant pattern. His new book is, I think, the most successful and the most useful example he has given us of the application of this method." M. A. Hamilton

+ Nation 156:133 Ja 23 '43 800w

New Repub 108:126 Ja 25 '43 220w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 18:67 Ja 23 '43 240w

"If I had the time and money and a little assistance, I would like to hire a sound truck and play out, from one end of the country to the other, phonograph records consisting of choice passages from this book. For Norman Angell does more than merely let the people know; he tells them what they are waiting to hear. Not that he is whispering the sweet nothings of lulling optimism. It just happens that Norman Angell is a prophet with honor, a positivist who can look the future full in the face, see what has to be done, and tell you about it with the straightforward persuasiveness of a man who speaks as though getting his message across clearly was a matter of life and death. And because this book represents such clear speaking and clear thinking, it will serve admirably as a primer for the future, or, to be more specific, a primer for the future of the United Nations idea." Norman Cousins

+ Sat R of Lit 26:5 Ja 30 '43 850w
Reviewed by Marshall Eragdon
Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 23 '43 650w
Time 41:90 Ja 25 '43 500w

ANGELO, VALENTI. Hill of little miracles; il. by [the author]. 200p $2 Viking

(W) 42-36294

Story of an Italian boy, crippled by infantile paralysis, living with his parents, brother, and sisters on Telegraph Hill in California. The shoemaker makes a pair of corrective shoes for Ricco which are very comfortable and start him on a series of little adventures. For grades five to seven.

Booklist 39:15 S '42

"I have called this a respectable Tortilla Flat with the charm left in: it remains to add that parents who read it before giving it to ten-year-olds for Christmas should do so behind closed doors, for they will laugh too heartily to keep the gift a secret." M. L. Becker

+ Books p16 N 15 '42 390w

Cath World 156:380 D '42 90w

Churchman 156:16 N 15 '42 10w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:120 N 20 '42 20w

"Here is a lively, sunny book about real people." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:337 S '42 110w

Reviewed by A. M. Wetherell

Library J 67:795 S 15 '42 80w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 10w

"Valenti Angelo has written another story of Italian family life so true, so touched with gentle humor and kindness, that once again the reader feels that he has enlarged his circle of friends and added to his human experience." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p42 N 15 '42 410w

New Yorker 18:111 D 12 '42 30w

Wis Lib Bul 38:188 D '42

ANGYAL, ANDRAS. Foundations for a science of personality. 398p $2.25 Commonwealth fund 136 Personality 42-3548

"The need for a broad theoretical frame of reference for the integration of the manifold aspects of human nature and behavior into a unified picture of man gave the incentive for the present study. It was intended to construct a consistent system embodying the principles that were thought to be fundamental for the problem of personality. . . . This book is not addressed to any particular group of specialists. It deals with general problems of personality, problems on which psychiatrists, biologists, psychologists, and social anthropologists can competently and profitably exchange views. . . . The greater part of the contents of this book was presented early in 1937 at the Henry Phipps Psychiatric Clinic, Johns Hopkins University." (Pref) Index.

"While the author neglected wide areas of knowledge in the fields of sociology and social psychology, his book contains highly useful notions for the study of personality." S. M. Strong

+ Am J Soc 48:143 J1 '42 600w

Reviewed by Ellsworth Faris

Am Soc R 7:276 Ap '42 1050w

"The biological emphasis in this book is such that the societal and cultural factors are not adequately treated. The author's discussion of culture is the weakest part of the book. For instance, the technological-economic order is discussed as a form of social symbiosis as if it were independent of culture. Moreover, Angyal actually equates culture to the moral order when he says that the introjection of culture into the individual induces what Freud called the superego. Such identification of culture with the moral code restricts its use beyond anything which contemporary anthropology or sociology would consider valid. . . . Yet in spite of these limitations, this volume should serve to indicate the dynamics of organism-environment relations, should help to offset the recent undue stress on the effects of culture upon personality to the neglect of other factors, and should aid, especially, to correct the persistent tendency to treat human personality as a mere aggregate of specific traits and abilities." Kimball Young

+ Ann Am Acad 225:256 Ja '43 900w

"It is doubtful whether the author does justice to holistic theories of personality that have been developed independently of the Gestalt school; and his remarks about the need for a new logic of systems to replace the logic of relations may indicate unfamiliarity with the recent developments in symbolic logic. If he cannot use the logic of Peirce and Russell in his systemic analysis, Dr. Angyal must be looking for a logic that will make it possible to psychology to be a less empirical science than chemistry. To these critical comments I would add a word of caution. The careless reader may miss the author's carefully qualified meanings, for the terminology of this theory of personality is rather tricky. . . . This is a book that will make its readers think, but it will not make it especially easy for them to think straight." W. A. R. Leys

Christian Century 59:284 Mr 4 '42 750w

"The book is studded with apt comments on human idiosyncrasies, and displays, as it should, given its point of view, an unusual awareness of the interpenetration of mental and physical processes. While it is to be doubted that the author has well and truly laid the foundations of a science of personality, he has unquestionably cleared some of the ground, and marked off some of the intermediate boundary lines of the vast and intricate project." H. A. L.

+ J Philo 39:335 Je 4 '42 700w

School & Society 55:84 Ja 17 '42 90w

"Dr. Angyal does not simplify matters but tends to clutter his own system by somewhat cumbersome language. Nevertheless he offers a useful exposition to those unfamiliar with the effect of life upon the living. He helps those who only regard persons as a part of their cultures. He can serve those who do not see the reversible actions that go on between the individual and his environment, and their special effects upon personality." I. S. Wile, M.D.

+ Survey 79:30 Ja '43 700w

ANNETT, RONALD ROSS. Especially Babe. 263p $2 Appleton-Century

42-18850

Story of a courageous dust-bowl farmer, struggling to feed and educate his children in the way his dead wife would have approved. Babe, the charming seven-year-old daughter, and drunken Uncle Pete, with his shrewd resourcefulness, are the most memorable characters.

Booklist 39:48 O 15 '42

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p13 Ag 16 '42 130w

"Recommended for libraries that can afford this slight bit of fiction." Esther Potter

Library J 67:629 J1 '42 50w

"The book is an appealing chronicle of misadventure, some on the tragic side, but all ending with triumph and a good many with laughter." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p22 J1 26 '42 240w

Wis Lib Bul 38:137 O '42

ANSHEN, MELVIN LEON. Introduction to business. 640p $4 Macmillan

650 Business. Industry 42-20050

Textbook on the fundamentals of business organization, designed for the first year of college. The structural organization is divided into thirty chapters under seven parts: Business and society (4 chapters); The basic tools of management (8 chapters); Production (4 chapters); Marketing (4 chapters); Finance (4 chapters); Competition and risk (3 chapters); Business and government (3 chapters). The text is not planned for specific training in any area of the major fields of business. "It is the panoramic view, the social setting, the economic function, which are presented." (Ann Am Acad) Chapter bibliographies, questions, problems, and projects. Index.

Reviewed by H. T. Hovde
Ann Am Acad 225:252 Ja '43 340w
Social Studies 33:335 N '42 40w

ANSHEN, MRS RUTH NANDA, ed. Science and man. 494p $4 Harcourt

504 Science (W) 42-36205

Twenty-four essays on the problem of science in its relation to man. Contents: Man as an element of every experiment, by R. N. Anshen; Problem of human evolution, by Aleš Hrdlička; Religion and action, by Reinhold Niebuhr; Science and wisdom, by Jacques Maritain; No retreat from reason, by A. E. Cohn; The purpose of science, by A. H. Compton; Science, the machine and democracy, by Waldemar Kaempfert; Mechanism and culture, by J. T. Shotwell; The position of science in modern industry, by H. C. Urey; The psychologist among the scientists, by K. Koffka; Fact, value, and science, by Brand Ellanshard; The scientific approach to the study of man, by Bronislaw Malinowski; The function of the social sciences, by C. L. Becker; Science, natural and social, by Julian Huxley; The body physiologic and the body politic, by W. B. Cannon; Man and technology, by K. T. Compton; Fact and value in social science, by F. H. Knight; Looking forward, by Lewis Mumford; International law and totalitarian war, by P. C. Jessup; Conditions of international justice, by Hans Kelsen; The commonwealth of science, by H. D. Lasswell; Intellectual evolution, by Jean Piaget; Human behavior, by C. G. Jung; Science and ethics, by E. G. Conklin; The science of value and the value of science, by R. B. Perry; Man, the microcosm, by R. N. Anshen. Index.

Reviewed by F. H. Hankins
Ann Am Acad 223:254 S '42 600w
Booklist 33:342 My 15 '42

"A few of the essays, like Waldemar Kaempfert's sober contribution, emphasize the social determinants of scientific researches; but several papers are no more than trite expositions of the 'wonder of modern science' or repetitions of thrice-familiar distinctions dressed up in polysyllabic terminology. At least one essay, that of Professor Malinowsky, is a substantial contribution to social science. He formulates a systematic set of distinctions which repeatedly turn up in anthropological studies, and thereby shows how physical, biological and social factors are involved in any adequate theory of human behavior." Ernest Nagel

+ — Books p17 Je 7 '42 1000w

Reviewed by R. W. Gerard
Christian Century 59:727 Je 3 '42 600w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 156:16 Ag 1 '42 180w

Reviewed by J. Mc A. Kater
Commonweal 36:211 Je 19 '42 750w

"The essays for the most part maintain a high level of thinking and writing and many of them are valuable as statements of the current scientific outlook, though others are attempts to patch threadbare garments."

+ Current Hist 2:303 Je '42 330w
New Repub 107:30 Jl 6 '42 90w
N Y New Tech Bks 27:44 Jl '42

"Unfortunately, distinguished names on a title page do not always guarantee equally distinguished writing in what is to follow. But to read the present volume is to recognize that the twenty-four contributors whom Dr. Anshen has enlisted have felt deeply the significance of their problem and have made a sincere effort to deal effectively with some phase of its solution. The selection of writers is admirable." Clifford Barrett

+ N Y Times p3 My 17 '42 1300w

"A most important contribution to the philosophy of science."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 Ap '42 390w
Wis Lib Bul 38:116 Jl '42

"Almost any kind of observation on the dilemma of man might crop up under so far-flung a title as this one, and in this instance almost every kind does. The work is a symposium of twenty-four essays in a wide variety of subjects by twenty-four widely assorted scholars. . . . Despite the determination of the contributors to throw off the categorical restrictions of their several fields of learning, one finds some of the traditional clichés which cling to those fields. But one also finds so much fresh and stimulating thought that it is almost unkind to mention anything else." J. H. Bradley

+ Yale R n s 31:337 summer '42 900w

ANTHOLOGIA GRAECA. More poems from the Palatine anthology in English paraphrase by Dudley Fitts. [31]p $1; pa 50c New directions

881.08 Greek poetry—Translations into English 42-1647

"A new collection in English paraphrase. . . . These epitaphs, inscriptions, brief dialogues and pastorals present facets of an ancient civilization that have humanly universal values." Books

"Clear-cut, fresh, timely. Much of the charm of the selections lies in their wit." Ruth Lechlitter

+ Books p13 Jl 19 '42 100w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 17:69 F 14 '42 30w

ANTHOLOGY of magazine verse for 1938-1942; and Yearbook of American poetry; ed. by Alan F. Pater; introd. by John Holmes. 630p $10 Paebair

811.08 American poetry—Collections (36-27220)

Anthology of magazine poetry for the years 1938-1942. Contains a table of poems arranged alphabetically by author; list of magazines publishing poetry; book publishers publishing poetry; volumes of poems published during 1938-1941; anthologies and collections of verse published during 1938-1941; index of titles and of first lines. An earlier volume is listed under editor's name in the Book Review Digest, 1936.

Christian Century 36:1029 Ag 26 '42 200w

"The book could do with more adult mind poems, more wit, less standard 'poetic' stuff, fewer simple studies of the simple light on the simple farmer's barn. The book is somewhat lacking in moral intensity and in creative flame: i.e., there is too much smug preaching and too much prose. On the other hand, there is little of the actually phony, of such out and out bad as 'I Remember the Block Party' and the jargon titled 'Apocrypha.'" Tom Boggs

+ Commonweal 36:308 Jl 17 '42 180w

Reviewed by Frank Jones
Nation 155:725 D 26 '42 240w

APPLEGARTH, MARGARET TYSON. Bound in the bundle of life; worship services for adult church groups. 186p il pa $1.50 Harper 268.72 Liturgies 42-7608

"A series of unconventional services built upon the truth that whatever has to do with life has to do with religion. The materials include everything from the vacuum sweeper to the star-spangled banner." Christian Century

"Leaders of worship will find it quickening to the imagination. Well worth buying, studying, using."

+ Christian Century 58:1178 S 24 '41 50w

Reviewed by Ross Snyder

J Religion 22:120 Ja '42 280w

APTEKAR, HERBERT H. Basic concepts in social case work. 201p $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press

361.8 Social work 41-22986

"This book is restricted to a discussion of certain concepts used in the practice of social case workers who derive their working principles from the teachings of Dr. Otto Rank." (Survey) Index.

"Mr. Aptekar is a forceful writer, a stimulating thinker, and shows considerable familiarity with case-work practice. The reader, whether student or worker, would have profited by a brief bibliography or by footnote references to the literature in the field." P. V. Young

+ Am J Soc 48:282 S '42 330w

Reviewed by Regina Feiner

Am Soc R 7:570 Ag '42 700w

"To the student of the social sciences, much of the thinking and many of the concepts of social case work seem anything but clear. Not only does there seem to be confusion as to what social case work is or does, but there is considerable evidence of strongly opposed schools of thought that to the uninitiated must seem quite baffling. In this highly readable volume, Mr. Aptekar, a practicing social worker, presents some fundamental concepts and proceeds to illustrate them with an abundance of pertinent case material." A. E. Fink

+ Ann Am Acad 220:264 Mr '42 470w

"This book is provocative in the best sense. It is written in clear, positive, and nonargumentative style. At first the reviewer reacted against the simplicity of this style as carrying a note of condescension to a presumably intelligent audience, but it is also possible to appreciate this simplicity as the expression of unusually clear and comprehensive thinking." Muriel McLaughlin

+ Social Forces 20:413 Mr '42 320w

"Mr. Aptekar writes in an easy, pleasing style which makes it possible to concentrate on the professional issues. They are issues demanding and warranting thoughtful consideration and frank discussion." Jeanette Regensburg

Survey 78:93 Mr '42 650w

ARASON, STEINGRIMUR. Smoky Bay; the story of a small boy of Iceland; il. by Gertrude Howe. 190p $2 Macmillan

Children in Iceland (W) 42-25238

Story of a small boy in Iceland, who longed to go to the great land of America, where his uncle was going. His father reminded him that Iceland was a wonderful land too, and Nonni knew that, but all thru a long year he thought of America. In the end his wish was granted.

Booklist 39:143 D 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p22 N 15 '42 400w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:889 O 15 '42 40w

"Whole picture is very real and convincing. Distinct contribution to children's literature of other countries." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 68:37 Ja 1 '43 70w

"The author, who is an Icelander, has called on the memories of his own boyhood, with the result that he draws a vivid, convincing picture of life in his country. . . . Now that the war has brought Iceland closer to us, this book with its authentic picture of an interesting country is doubly welcome. The attractive drawings have the liveliness and atmosphere of the text." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 10 '43 420w

ARCHER, PETER. Christian calendar and the Gregorian reform. 124p $3.50 Fordham univ. press

529.4 Calendar

41-15354

"Detailed history of the Christian luni-solar calendar and of its Gregorian correction in 1582. . . . Scores of tables in this volume enable us to find the golden numbers, the Dominical letters, the annual epacts, the date of Easter in any given year, the day of the week for a given date, etc." (Cath World) Index.

"This helpful handbook will be welcomed by all who need to determine exact dates and by those who delight in mathematical puzzles." G. C. Boyce

+ Am Hist R 47:920 J1 '42 110w

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 154:762 Mr '42 360w

ARCHER, ROBERT. Case of the vanishing women. 320p $2 Howell, Soskin

42-18849

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p9 S 6 '42 100w

"This is not a top-notch yarn, but it will do." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 Ag 2 '42 200w

ARCINIEGAS, GERMAN. Knight of El Dorado. 301p $3 Viking

B or 92 Jiménez de Quesada, Gonzalo. Colombia—History (W) 42-14518

The life of Don Gonzalo de Quesada, discoverer of what is now Colombia, describing his journey to America, his conquest of New Granada (Colombia) and the founding of the city of Bogota. Bibliography.

"A distinguished piece of work this—a real thriller for highbrows." John Cournos

+ Atlantic J1 '42 250w

Booklist 38:383 Je 15 '42

"Mr. Arciniegas has written a delightful book, at once realistic and speculative, satiric and vivid. And, in painting his subtle portrait of the founder of Bogota, the founder of the state which was to become in time the Republic of Colombia, he has done a service not only to his own country and its history but to all who are interested in the history of the New World." S. V. Benet

+ Books pl Je 7 '42 850w

"The author has captured the essence and spirit of the conquest which comes alive before the reader's eyes, unfolding swiftly and vividly." L. V. Vila

+ Commonweal 36:377 Ag 7 '42 700w

"Careful and entertaining study of Don Gonzalo and period in which he lived. Slow-moving style and delicate choice of words make book resemble bit of old tapestry. Mildred Adams, translator, has accomplished fine piece of work. Recommended. Especially timely." E. M. Olcott

+ Library J 67:413 My 1 '42 90w

Reviewed by M. J. Benardete

Nation 154:740 Je 27 '42 650w

"Done with a good deal of imaginative lyricism, but at times too informal and hard to follow. Respectable translation."

+ New Yorker 18:68 My 30 '42 80w

"On the whole, this is a good book and fine in its craftsmanship. Señor Arciniegas displays in his style some of the best attributes of Spanish writing and not a few of its failings as well. He handles images in profusion, and equally abounds in conceptual terms; but in the rush of words natural to the Spanish temperament he often loses sight of architectural lines of composition. So he appears redundant at times, a little confused as to meaning at others. The translator had a tough job in hand, no doubt, but discharged it faithfully, as far as one can ascertain without benefit of the original volume." Ernesto Montenegro

+ N Y Times p8 My 31 '42 1750w

"Señor Arciniegas is an unbiased historian. Whether his book supports or contradicts the 'black legend' of Spain, it would be difficult to determine. "The Knight of El Dorado" is a serene appraisal of some of the human ingredients that destiny took from the medieval Spain of Doña Juana la Loca and mixed with native stock to form the basic elements of the future man of Hispano America." Eduardo Cardenas

ARCINIEGAS, GERMAN—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 Je 6 '42 500w

ARIES, LEONARD P. Let's talk it over! a manual on our American way; with a foreword by William Heard Kilpatrick. 85p $1 Willett

321.8 Liberty. National characteristics, American 41-26212

Manual to serve as an introduction in the field of better human relations. Contents: What is an American? Propaganda and its analysis; Refugees; Prejudice and understanding; What can we do in a world of crisis?

Christian Century 59:187 F 11 '42 100w

"Classes within the church school, young people's groups, and forums would profit by its use. Try it out on your midweek prayer service!" F. B. Iglar

+ Crozer Q 19:169 Ap '42 250w

ARLITT, ADA HART. Family relationships. 277p $2.50 McGraw

392.3 Family. Marriage 42-12360

Non-technical discussion of family problems based on case histories collected at the consultation center conducted in the Department of child care and training at the University of Cincinnati. Chapters are included on Courtship and marriage; Preparation for marriage; Husband and wife relationships; Parent-child relationships; The position of relatives; Trends in family organization. Index.

Booklist 38:341 My 15 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '42

J Home Econ 34:385 Je '42 60w

School & Society 55:428 Ap 11 '42 30w

ARMFIELD, MRS CONSTANCE (SMEDLEY). Peter in Sweden. 179p il $1.50 Warne [4s Epworth]

"A book about a little English boy spending a year in Sweden with his aunt and cousins." Horn Bk

Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 31 '41 160w

Reviewed by Marcia Dalphin

Horn Bk 18:sup 11 N '42 30w

"Though slightly sentimental in places, Peter's friendly philosophy of life leaves you with kindly feeling. Excellent background of manners and customs. For children eight to ten." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 67:847 O 1 '42 70w

"A book that gives an authentic picture of Swedish Christmas customs which children from 8 to 10 find good reading." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p7 D 20 '42 250w

ARMI, ANNA MARIA, pseud. See Ascoli, A. M. M. P. G. C.

ARMITAGE, JOHN JAMES RICHARD. To Christian England. 105p pa $2 (5s) Longmans
261 Sociology, Christian 42-24293

"If the title indicates the audience to which this book is addressed, it may also be taken as stating the objective to which it is directed. After a theologically sound and socially realistic discussion of aspects of the social gospel that are especially relevant at this time, the author reviews the Malvern declaration and goes beyond it to suggest specific measures for its implementation, ending with the thoroughly practical suggestion for the organization of a continuing process of 'Christian research.'" Christian Century

+ Christian Century 59:1030 Ag 26 '42 90w

"This book actually does, as the dust cover says, succeed in offering some 'definite and practical suggestions' for Christian action. But I wish the author had curbed his taste for what one may call general invective. I cannot help thinking that if he had let his manuscript lie for a week or ten days and then re-read it he would have seen that one or two expressions in it are really not fair—indeed, possibly not true."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 13 '42 130w

"Mr. Armitage's call towards a Christian England is a fruit of the Church leaders' letter in The Times (December 21, 1940) and of the Malvern Conference. It often overstates the case, but as a courageous attempt to apply the Gospel to social questions it may be warmly commended."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p316 Je 27 '42 480w

ARMOUR, RICHARD WILLARD. Yours for the asking; a book of light verse. 160p $2 Humphries

811 42-20285

Collection of light verse, mainly from the pages of the New Yorker. The subjects are the ways of women and children, the tedium of week-end visits, the discomforts of the country, etc.

"It is as the Eliot Paul character said, a close thing to decide, this publishing of light verse in book form. But in the present case the courage of the author must be applauded as wisdom, and it is to be hoped that, after the initial excitement wears off, he will settle down and live happily ever after." Thomas Sugrue

+ Books p27 N 1 '42 200w

"A combination of the ostentatiously blasé, the scornfully urban, the proudly incompetent and the generally wicked in a mild 1920 pattern." S. E. Hyman

— New Repub 107:92 Jl 20 '42 70w

ARMSTRONG, CHARLOTTE. Lay on Mac Duff! 250p $2 Coward-McCann

42-6829

Detective story.

Booklist 38:347 My 15 '42

"There are plenty of clues and questions in this soft-boiled and generally pleasing item, not too difficult to guess. As for the title, people were always saying that to MacDougall Duff and he didn't think much of it." Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 Mr 22 '42 120w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hull

Boston Globe p15 My 20 '42 100w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 Mr 22 '42 240w

"Well constructed and exciting baffle, engagingly told by country-bred ingenue, with neat plot-twists and detective with interesting method. Refreshing."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 Mr 14 '42 40w

ARMSTRONG, EDWARD ALLWORTHY. Bird display. 381p il $5.50 Macmillan [21s Cambridge]

598.2 Birds. Psychology, Comparative

"An introduction to the study of bird psychology." (Subtitle) The author studies bird display chiefly, making that the main clue to the conclusions which he reaches. Bibliography. Index.

"A scholarly and serious review of a subject which in recent years has attracted the interest of many ornithologists. [The author] shows a wide knowledge of bird literature, and the source of each fact or theory is fully documented so that the student himself may follow up any line of thought which specially appeals to him. . . This valuable and important book should do much to stimulate interest in a subject which has received comparatively little attention from many in the growing band of amateur bird-observers. There are forty excellent photographs." A. W. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 21 '42 200w
New Statesman & Nation 24:310 N 7 '42 220w

"Mr. Armstrong is not dogmatic; he wishes the student to be able to test the original evidence and be prepared to differ from his conclusions. With all this strictly scientific approach the book is so easily written that the general reader will find its interest well within his scope."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p21 Ja 9 '43 700w

ARNO, PETER. Cartoon revue. $2 Simon & Schuster

741 Caricatures and cartoons 41-26817

"A selection from this cartoonist's work in The New Yorker during the last five years, embellished with a courteous introduction by W. Somerset Maugham and even with a handsome photograph of the artist himself." New Yorker

"Sires and sirens, Boy Scouts and babies, firemen and brides, do just what they are there to do in these translations, into New York idiom, of the traditions of the Almanach du Rire." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 D 21 '41 200w

New Yorker 17:88 O 4 '42 30w

ARNOLD, ELLIOTT. Commandos. 300p $2.50 Duell

(W) 42-15034

An American officer, leader of a Commando group located in Scotland makes devastating surprise raids on the Norwegian coast. Helping him is the woman he loves, a beautiful Norwegian widow, who pretends to be a Quisling, but is in reality leader of the Norwegian underground activities. The American is captured and tortured by the Nazis, but makes his getaway. The author, who is on the staff of The New York World-Telegram, says "every single large incident in it is entirely authentic, and the minor details have probably happened a hundred times."

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (18) N Y Times (7) P W (1) R B (2)

"The raids are told in lean, hard prose, and they are the best of the book. The love-making . . . and much of the dialogue are patterned on Hemingway. And I notice one weakness which recurs in these adventure stories—one which I am sure John Buchan would not repeat: the tendency to make the Germans more stupid than they are." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 170:132 S '42 150w

"Here is a novel which, as they say in the movies, has everything—timeliness, excitement and suspense, and a passionate love affair. . . 'The Commandos' is usually good reading because it goes into technical detail and, in the best journalistic style, gives the reader precise information both about the organization and training of these latter-day Robin Hoods and about the minute experiences of brave men and women in grave peril." Iris Barry

+ Books p3 My 24 '42 750w

"The author of 'For Whom the Bell Tolls' still has nothing to fear from his disciples, but his influence has done a good deal to raise books like this above the common level of adventure fiction."

Nation 154:664 Je 6 '42 120w

"The Commandos' is white-hot history served up on a literary platter of dramatic intensity. It has, also, a philosophy that goes to the root of things." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 My 31 '42 700w

New Yorker 18:66 My 30 '42 60w

Pratt p12 O '42

"As thrilling reading as has come out of the war. 'The Commandos' has a Steinbeckish flavor in its telling and the background is reminiscent of 'The Moon Is Down,' with its accurately depicted Norwegians resolutely sacrificing life and liberty to sabotage the Nazi war effort, repay in kind and with interest the savagries of Hitler's soldiers, and break the shackles of their bondage." R. E. Porter

+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 My 30 '42 600w

Time 40:90 J1 13 '42 130w

ARNOLD, HENRY HARLEY, and EAKER, IRA CLARENCE. Army flyer. 299p $2.50 Harper

358.4 Aeronautics, Military. U.S.—Army—Air corps (W) 42-11460

"A flying officer's primer from headquarters, in which the Commanding General and a Brigadier General of the Army Air Forces explain the duties and rewards of a pilot's career from flying cadet to air general." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 38:361 Je 1 '42

"How two men as busy as Lieutenant General H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, and Brigadier General Ira C. Eaker, one of his principal aides, could have written a book in the last year and a half is a mystery, but the result, 'Army Flyer,' is worth all the much-needed sleep they must have lost over it. The co-authors, who have written other books together, describe it as a primer for the hastily trained young officers who must carry the burden of our aerial warfare. But it is also a book every young soldier in any branch can learn from, and one that his friends and relatives should read to understand his problems."

+ Books p18 Ap 26 '42 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '42

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:36 J1 '42

"Pithy, sensible, and worth-while reading for civilians too. Very little overlapping with Lieutenant Colonel Hartney's book."

+ New Yorker 18:72 My 2 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:115 J1 '42

ARNOLD, JULIAN BIDDULPH. Giants in dressing gowns [reminiscences]. 240p $3 Argus

920

42-14901

"The literary son of an English writer, knighted for his [eminence] in the field of literature, Sir Edwin Arnold, forty years editor of a great London paper, writes of the great men and women he has known intimately: Disraeli, Gladstone, Andrew Carnegie, Bib Ingersoll, Joseph Pulitzer, Grover Cleveland, Garibaldi, Sir William Crooks, Tennyson, Browning, Darwin, Sir Henry Stanley, Josh Billings, William Jennings Bryan, Northcliffe, Conan Doyle, Cardinal Mercier, Dean Frederick Wm. Farrar, Queen Victoria, Dame Ellen Terry, Adeline Patti, Carrie Jacobs Bond and others." Churchman

"It is seldom that this reviewer falls upon a modern book to which he may with good conscience attach the word literature. This is such a volume. . . The volume is kept witty and brilliant and intriguing throughout, as one celebrity after another is brought before the reader in a few scintillating and discriminating paragraphs." T. F. Opie

+ Churchman 156:17 S 1 '42 180w

"Mr. Arnold's pleasant book of recollections and anecdote suffers from an excess of modesty. He does not tell us his age, his adventures, his career, nor even how long he has lived in this country. It is a refreshment to read his frank and filial praise of his father who, whatever he thought of the merits of 'The Light of Asia,' was a first-rate editor, a great leader-writer, and a very likable man." R. E. Roberts

Sat R of Lit 25:17 Je 13 '42 360w

ARNOLD, THURMAN WESLEY. Democracy and free enterprise. 82p $1 Univ. of Okla. press

330.973 U.S.—Industries and resources. Restraint of trade. World war, 1939—Economic aspects 42-10963

"More than 30 examples of monopolistic control by industry, labor and agriculture, retarding American war effort, are cited... Arnold, who recently arraigned both industry and labor in statements before Senate committees investigating war production, charges that 'through the failure to use, or through the improper use of, patents, production has been retarded, patents have been pooled or exchanged subject to revision, or arbitrarily withheld from use' in magnesium, plastic glass, synthetic rubber, zinc, machine tools, military optical instruments, acetic acid, nitrogen and beryllium dies." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by R. J. Harris

Am Pol Sci R 36:784 Ag '42 260w

Booklist 38:341 My 15 '42

"This little book, composed of a series of four lectures delivered at the University of Omaha by our redoubtable Assistant Attorney General, is one of the most heartening political-economic tracts that have come out of the war." L. M. Hacker

+ Books p2 Ag 16 '42 950w

Christian Century 59:562 Ap 29 '42 230w

Reviewed by Bernard Taper

Nation 154:660 Je 6 '42 700w

Reviewed by A. R. Sweezy

New Repub 106:803 Je 8 '42 1500w

Reviewed by Henry Hazlitt

N Y Times p30 D 13 '42 700w

Pratt p10 O '42

Springf'd Republican p6 My 11 '42 440w

Reviewed by Phillips Bradley

Survey G 32:26 Ja '43 200w

ARTUCIO, HUGO FERNANDEZ. See Fernandez Artucio, H.

ASBURY, HERBERT. Golden flood; an informal history of America's first oil field. 339p il $3.50 Knopf

665.5 Petroleum industry and trade

(W) 42-9702

The author of The Barbary Coast, the story of San Francisco's underworld, here tells the story of America's first oil field, discovered and opened up in western Pennsylvania in the middle of the nineteenth century. Selected bibliography. Index.

"The history is strictly 'informal' and, insofar as it is historical is familiar. Sin among the derricks is the real theme, and how the author does revel in all the details!"

Am Hist R 48:198 O '42 70w

"The history is well, if informally, told, and the reader can acquire much useful information about the nature of oil in and out of the ground." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic My '42 170w

Booklist 38:324 My 1 '42

"The story of oil has been told before, usually in a thoroughly dull manner. But with his feeling for the reasons for things and his sure eye for the preposterous, the tragic, the heroic, or merely the witty in American life and times, Mr. Asbury has accomplished what I have not seen before—a really entertaining and at the same time sound account of the founding and early days of one of America's greatest industries. The book is illustrated from old photographs and many prints which have the right tone, and there is a good index." Stewart Holbrook

+ Books p5 Ap 26 '42 1550w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 67:181 F 15 '42 100w

New Repub 106:742 My 25 '42 50w

"Herbert Asbury would not protest probably if some one told him that this is 'popular' history and that no prospective Ph.D. will use 'The Golden Flood' as a source book—although teachers of history may use it as an anecdotal source for making more savory their lectures to the still immature. And the purely entertaining does, after all, instruct and inform to some extent. What is more, it may stimulate to more serious search for the facts of things past and for their meaning. The Asbury collection of oil-country anecdotes is rich and full." Francis Brown

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 26 '42 1050w

"Extravagant doings, recounted with both sense and gusto."

+ New Yorker 18:87 Ap 11 '42 60w

"This is a tale, neither critical nor analytical, told for its color. It is the bright flashes which interest Mr. Asbury. He makes no serious effort to etch out or understand the essential pattern of the industry developed in this early day. . . . The 'Selected Bibliography' which accompanies this work is not very critical. Two recent works essential to any reasonably complete consideration of the subject are omitted. I refer to Paul H. Giddens's scholarly 'The Birth of the Oil Industry,' and Allan Nevins's biography, 'John D. Rockefeller.' One closes 'The Golden Flood' with a distinct feeling of regret. It is not that it is not a good tale well told but that it has been as well or better told before." E. L. DeGolyer

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ap 18 '42 650w

ASCH, SHALOM. Children of Abraham; tr. by Maurice Samuel. 433p $2.50 Putnam

(W) 42-11242

Twenty-nine short stories ranging in time and scene from Rome in the middle ages to Germany in Hitler's day. The main characters are all Jewish, and typify the patient suffering of that race.

"Mr. Asch's writing is so free from both anger and comment, and—without affectation—so apparently ingenuous, as to suggest that he is one of the great writers of our time. Some of these stories are simply heart-wringing, and yet they are never without beauty." R. M. Gay

+ Atlantic Jl '42 150w

"'Children of Abraham' has altitude and yet warmth: the altitude is in its visionary intensity, its soaring spiritual affirmation; the warmth is in its mellow understanding of earthly affairs." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p2 Ap 26 '42 900w

"There is rich imagination in these stories, pity and pride, realism, and simple humanity. . . . Because the stories are so strongly racial they lack something of universality. Emphasis is most often on ways in which the race differs, rather than on the common experience of mankind. Yet there are notable exceptions, as in the story that tells about a man in middle age who fell in love all over again with his own wife. That might happen anywhere. It is amazing how great a variety there can be in stories which, for the most part, in one way or another, are stories of age-long Dispersal."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 8 '42 650w

Churchman 156:14 My 15 '42 70w

New Repub 106:774 Je 1 '42 60w

"In general, this book is a record of Jewish tragedy the world over. But it also records Israel's aspirations, and dreams, the eternal longing of Abraham's children to be accounted men amongst men. Sholem Asch is a powerful writer; these stories are scarcely less distinguished than his longer narratives." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 26 '42 700w

"Sounds more like history than fiction."

New Yorker 18:78 Ap 25 '42 60w

"There are three stories that ought to be especially noted: 'The Boy Saint,' 'De Profundis,' 'Young Years.' . . . These three rank in artistry with the best of Asch's work. Yet they do not therefore stand alone in the book."

They are, as I have said, everywhere built up and supported by the mass of legend and folk tale around them, and we may even, in fancy, break down the separate titling and arrangement and let them all flow together into their real integration; a narrative poem of the children of Abraham." N. L. Rothman
+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 My 9 '42 450w

ASCOLI, MRS ANNA MARIA MADDALENA POALINA GIACINTA (COCHETTI) (ANNA MARIA ARMI, pseud.). Poems. 164p $2 Random house

811

42-2364

"Miss Armi is an Italian, publishing her first book after ten years' residence in this country." (N Y Times) The book contains translations from Horace, Catullus, Petrarch and Michelangelo, and some original poems. Index of first lines.

"Miss Armi's lyrical style, so far, tends to philosophical and reflective statement; she has still to learn how the English language may be put to singing use, how to make it sharp and incisive, how to relieve allegory by getting more significant work out of the symbol. It is to be hoped that in the next ten years her work will find occasional publication, not merely accumulate, and that editors will not only welcome her original poems but use her excellent talent as translator. There can't be too many good translations of Horace and Catullus." Rolfe Humphries
+ — Nation 154:97 Ja 24 '42 550w

"Some of her lighter moods fall into a witty facility reminiscent of Auden; and like Auden her taste is for symbols that have both private and public meanings. At times one is more interested in the first than the second. But in her best, more serious poems, such as 'The Wild Duck,' 'Confession,' 'The Kings,' 'The Hunt,' Miss Armi comes closer to a style and a language that are her own: clear, stately and sonorous. Even at her clearest, however, she is no simple poet." Lloyd Frankenberg
+ New Repub 106:371 Mr 16 '42 180w

"Her translations show that she is a fine writer with a sense of style. The Petrarchian sonnets have been praised by Mark Van Doren and W. H. Auden, and indeed they read very well. About her original poetry one is inclined to say that she is publishing too much of it. There is a mixture of adolescent autobiography and immature metaphysics. . . No one poem is good enough by itself, and many should not have been printed at all; the general effect is fertile rather than felicitous; but Miss Armi will learn to write as carefully as she translates, and she has a great many things to write about." P. M. Jack
+ — N Y Times p5 Ja 4 '42 360w

"Miss Armi is a poet of unusual talent, as shown in both her original verse and in her translations. Her occasional failures, and perhaps I have overemphasized them, usually occur when she seems to be under the influence of Auden." Don Stanford + — Poetry 59:340 Mr '42 950w

ASGIS, ALFRED JOHN. Professional dentistry in American society; a historical and social approach to dental progress; an introd. text for students and professional health workers. student ed 175p il $3.50; ltd ed 260p $4.50 Clinical press, 1123 Broadway, N.Y. 617.6 Dentistry 42-11792

"In addition to urging society and dentistry to realize the necessity for shared responsibility and concerted effort, Dr. Agis relates events which lead to the recognition of dentistry as a profession. The pattern and trend of past and present dental education are traced and its future discussed." Am J Pub Health

"This book serves a useful purpose, and should be of particular aid to the non-dental health worker who may have an interest in or responsibility for the integration of dental activities in a general public health program." B. R. East
+ Am J Pub Health 32:659 Je '42 200w

School & Society 55:251 F 28 '42 20w

ASHER, LOUIS E., and HEAL, EDITH (MRS GIL MEYNIER). Send no money. 206p il $2.75 Argus

658.872 Sears, Richard Warren. Sears, Roebuck and co. 42-13887

Biography of the founder of Sears, Roebuck and company, and an account of the early years of the firm. Mr Asher was associated with Mr Sears for ten years, as advertising and catalog manager and eventually as general manager.

Booklist 38:425 Jl 1 '42

"An absorbing story, rich in 'inside dope.'" Aerol Arnold

+ Survey G 31:436 O '42 390w

ASHLEY-MONTAGU, MONTAGUE FRANCIS. Man's most dangerous myth: the fallacy of race; with a foreword by Aldous Huxley. 216p $2.25 Columbia univ. press

42-21794

"This book purports to be an examination of a contemporary aspect of 'race' theory, and seeks only to clarify the reader's thinking upon an important subject about which clear thinking is generally avoided. It would be quite beyond the powers of a single person to say all that there is to be said upon the subject. As Aldous Huxley has put it, 'The problem of race is as much a problem for historians and psychologists as for geneticists. Anything like a definite and authoritative solution of it must be cooperative. Also, to carry conviction, it should be official and international. The race theory claims to be scientific. It is surely, then, the business of science, as organized in the universities and learned societies of the civilized world, to investigate this claim.' It is as a contribution towards such an end from a scientist, who is a student both of human culture and human biology, that the present volume is offered." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Am Hist R 48:388 Ja '43 20w

"It is not to be supposed that the advocates and beneficiaries of race prejudice, at home or abroad, will take all this lying down. The book is disputatious and controversial. If it provokes controversy, so much the better, provided the discussion is in terms of scientific data and is not diverted into emotional channels. . . The Germans have no monopoly on the fallacy of superior and inferior races. America must face its own delusions on this subject. This book will be of the greatest value in helping it to do that." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 59:1257 O 14 '42 850w

"Today racial mythology has serious political implications. It may even prove to be a dangerous boomerang as the war aims of the Allied Nations become further crystallized. For this reason alone, Ashley Montagu's book deserves the most careful reading and reflection as a basis for action." A. I. Hallowell
+ Crozer Q 20:65 Ja '43 700w

Nation 156:68 Ja 9 '43 90w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 22 '42 60w

ASHMUN, HENRY EDWARD. Your legal and business matters and how to take care of them. 179p $1.75 Day

347 Law—U.S. Finance, Personal

(W) 42-15725

Clear, simple explanation of the legal details necessary in handling contracts, investments, insurance, wills, buying or building houses, lending or collecting money, personal injury and property damage, taxes, etc. Parts of the book appeared serially in the Christian Science Monitor. Index.

Booklist 39:27 O 1 '42

"If this little volume serves to prompt alertness and caution in conducting our ordinary day-by-day business transactions it will have accomplished about all the author intended. He is not acting as advance agent for any unfortunate lawyer out of a job." F. L. P.

Christian Science Monitor p20 Je 12 '42 360w

ASHTON, WINIFRED. See Dane, C., pseud.

ATHERTON, MRS GERTRUDE FRANKLIN (HORN). Horn of life. 299p $2.50 Appleton-Century

(W) 42-22141

Character sketch of Lynn Randolph, member of an old San Francisco family, which had come down in the world. The life of San Francisco in the Twenties forms the background for Lynn's attempts to decide which of her three admirers she will marry.

"Mrs. Atherton tells a congenial story with warmth and grace. 'The Horn of Life' will entertain almost everybody." George Conrad
+ Books p10 O 18 '42 380w

"To her now extensive history of San Francisco, Mrs. Atherton adds some new chapters in 'The Horn of Life.' No doubt in its own world the story will make its strongest appeal through its mild reconstruction of a time of change for a self-enamored, complacent society. Here is no significant social criticism, no irony to speak of. We can trust Mrs. Atherton, however, as an observer of the snug inner circle of 'first families' in the city that she loves. . . Readers who do not savor the tidbits of local allusion will find more to interest them in this novel than in some others of the general sort." O. B. White

+ Commonweal 37:259 D 25 '42 390w

"An entertaining, animated picture of San Francisco. . . Although the period of the story is less than a quarter of a century ago, it seems strangely remote." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p23 O 11 '42 900w

ATKINSON, CARROLL. The new deal: will it survive the war? 114p $1.50 Meador

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. U.S.—Economic policy. U.S.—Social conditions 42-11303

Criticism of the New Deal based on a sentence quoted from a speech the author heard delivered at a faculty meeting: To remain masters of government the people must support the government, and when government is required to or permitted to support the people, then government becomes the master.

School & Society 55:455 Ap 18 '42 40w

Social Studies 33:286 O '42 40w

ATKINSON, CARROLL. Public school broadcasting to the classroom. 144p $1.50 Meador

371.333 Radio in education 42-14061

Records of the experimental work and the achievements of a number of school systems throughout the country which give instruction over the radio. Index.

School & Society 55:568 My 16 '42 60w

"The main value of the book is that it is a source of secondary data on one aspect of educational broadcasting as developed in American public-school systems." A. W. Vander-Meer

School R 50:539 S '42 700w

ATKINSON, ERIC MILES. Behind the mask of medicine. 348p $3 Scribner

610 Medicine—History. Medical service 42-79

This study "is about Medicine in its broadest aspect, about its influence on the rise and fall of civilisations as well as about its influence upon the lives and deaths of citizens. It is perhaps as much as anything a declaration of belief in Medicine and what Medicine stands for, a creed." (Pref) The three main topics of the book are a history of medicine, some medical observations on the development of the science, and socialized medicine. Index.

Reviewed by M. P. Ravenel

Am J Pub Health 32:546 My '42 850w

"Two thirds of the book is written in the best conservative Harley Street tradition. And, be it said, it is extremely well written. . . His chapter, 'Socialized Medicine,' is worth the whole price of the book. It is important and should be widely read because it is written by one who has passed most of his professional life in the developing stages of socialized medicine under compulsory health insurance. He does not pull his punches and tells us frankly that the people of this country have been gravely misinformed by organized medicine as to the real functioning of health insurance in England. He squarely faces the implications of state medicine, and from his experience he finds it not so bad. . . The last third of this book might well be published separately and would fall upon fertile ground." Hugh Cabot, M.D.

+ Books p26 N 16 '41 500w

"The author is too cultured a gentleman to impress us as infallible. He dashes into such topics as insurance, compensation, euthanasia and consultants with all the courage in the world and succeeds in sounding a shade unauthorized on each of them." E. L. Keyes

Commonweal 35:349 Ja 23 '42 260w

"Good reading for the layman who wants to know how the physician works at his routine tasks."

+ New Repub 106:278 F 23 '42 90w

"Perhaps you are tired of reading about doctors, diseases, and medicine. Yet it would be a mistake to overlook this book, for Dr. Atkinson has quite a lot to say about this doctor business that is fresh, lively, and challenging. . . An entertaining book overflowing with humor and humane warmth." W. L. Rich

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 Ja 17 '42 400w

Spring'd Republican p6 Ja 27 '42 440w

"There are so many misconceptions about what is possible in medicine that his non-technical discussions of how physicians arrive at diagnosis, prognosis, and treatment will be found helpful. As a physician, the reviewer can assure the readers that Dr. Atkinson's comments present a true picture. Although many of the passages are obviously addressed to physicians, the book on the whole will not present anything new to doctors." D. C. Darrow, M.D.

+ Survey 78:63 F '42 200w

ATTEBERRY, GEORGE C.; AUBLE, JOHN L., and HUNT, ELGIN F. Introduction to social science; a survey of social problems; foreword by Louis Wirth. 2v 668,800p il maps v1 $3; v2 $4 Macmillan

300 Social sciences. Social problems 41-19551

"This two-volume work of almost 1,500 pages is intended as an introductory text for a general course in the social sciences on a collegiate level. The materials are organized in four parts: Basic Factors in Social Problems; Social Relations and Social Problems; the Competitive System and Social Problems; Government and Social Problems. As these subdivisions suggest, the authors have selected materials from three social sciences—sociology, economics and government." (Am Econ R) Index at end of each volume.

"If the authors fail substantially to carry out their first objective of a 'problem approach,' their lack of success is even more noticeable in seeking to treat the several social sciences in an integrated fashion. A sequential ordering of conventional chapters on sociology, economics and government does not insure integration, in fact does not even approach it. . . Atteberry et al. do two jobs well: they present many facts and figures about important contemporary institutions that should be at the command of every educated citizen; and they discuss these facts in a stimulating manner. Hence the work should find favor in adult educational classes and in finishing schools. But it is inadequate for the training of college students." Eli Ginsberg

+ — Am Econ R 32:569 S '42 700w

"Despite minor defects, the authors have produced an excellent text. They have demonstrated that cooperative effort can be fruitful. They have successfully breached the walls between the separate disciplines, thereby enabling young citizens more readily to understand and more confidently to attack the major social problems of their time." Howard White
+ — Am Pol Sci R 36:980 O '42 1100w

Reviewed by R. E. Keohane
School R 50:666 N '42 1000w

Reviewed by Robert Bierstedt
Social Educ 6:375 D '42 330w

Reviewed by J. F. Santee
Social Studies 33:43 Ja '42 420w (Review of v 1)

ATWATER, ELTON. American regulation of arms exports. 287p $2 Columbia univ. press 341.3 U.S.—Neutrality. U.S.—Foreign relations. Embargo. Munitions industry 42-5864

"This is a careful historical survey of our policies governing arms exports since 1793. Professor Atwater has divided his subject into three periods. The first was characterized by no regulation. . . This remained our consistent policy until 1905, when the second period commenced. . . The third period begins in 1934 and is characterized by a policy of regulating arms exports to discourage foreign wars and to keep the United States out of wars." Ann Am Acad

"The book is very well written in the best tradition of American scholarship. The arguments, which are carefully reasoned and clearly expressed, have been formulated only after painstaking research in both manuscript and printed documents. As a result the book will be of real value both in an analysis of water over the dam and in the anticipation of thorny problems which must be faced after the war." F. O. Wilcox

+ Am Hist R 48:372 Ja '43 420w

Reviewed by C. A. Riches
Am Pol Sci R 36:959 O '42 550w

"Professor Atwater's reasoning throughout seems sound and logical, and his material is well organized. My adverse criticisms are few. In the pursuit of clarity he at times becomes repetitious. The space (72 pages) devoted to Mexico seems disproportionately large. The 1937 neutrality law is the least satisfactorily handled. An appendix containing texts of our important neutrality legislation would have been welcome. But the book is scholarly and readable and should be required reading for the congressional committees which pass on our next neutrality legislation, if any." D. L. Kemmerer

+ — Ann Am Acad 223:243 S '42 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:780 Jl '42 10w

"The most fascinating are the two chapters on the Mexican embargoes, showing the kaleidoscopic oscillation of the American embargo policy. Also interesting is the author's treatment of the 'moral' embargoes on exports to Spain, Japan, and Russia during the Finnish war. In general, the author's approach puts the spotlight on the embargoes imposed in cases of civil strife, while the American policy during the many international wars of the nineteenth century is rather neglected. . . The author's research, though very extensive and productive of much unpublished material, seems to have been limited to American sources only, and very few if any foreign publications seem to have been consulted." L. B. Sohn

Harvard Law R 56:156 S '42 900w

"This objective study adheres to all the canons of conscientious scholarship. If its frequent summaries and repetitious language seem persistently tautological, they nevertheless have the effect of thoroughly drilling the subject into the reader's mind by the time he finishes the book. Again the Carnegie Endowment is to be congratulated on publishing an important volume. It is helpful to have pointed out the dangers, as well as the advantages to the cause of peace that can flow from embar-goes of arms, ammunition and implements of warfare. The book was published before Pearl Harbor." S. F. Bemis

+ Yale Law J 51:1230 My '42 1300w

ATWELL, RUTH. The blue and the jungle; il. by Philip L. Martin. 296p $2 Wilde

Animals, Legends and stories of 42-23979

Ten stories of baby animals living in the East African jungles or on the veldt. The animals are the rhinoceros, lion, hartebeest, leopard, giraffe, jackal, hippo, zebra, elephant and gorilla. For ages ten to thirteen.

"All interesting and skilfully told, with considerable humor and suspense. None has unhappy ending. Book would lend itself admirably to more colorful illustrations than the rather smudgy black-and-white ones provided by Philip Martin. However, these are sufficient to identify the animals. Recommended." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 68:40 Ja 1 '43 80w

"Author evidently knows her subject. However, style is poor; book lacks dramatic or exciting qualities that an animal story should have, and it does very little for the reader. Do not recommend for library purchase, as it would simply take up shelf space." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 68:40 Ja 1 '43 40w

"It is quite possible that Dad and Junior will be friendly rivals in enjoying these stories." I. L. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 27 '42 140w

ATWOOD, DASCOMB, pseud. See White, G. A.

AUGUST, JOHN, pseud. See De Voto, B. A.

AULAIRE, MRS INGRI (MORTENSON) D', and AULAIRE, EDGAR PARIN D', il. See Key, F. S. Star spangled banner

AUSTIN, MRS MARGOT. Effelli; il. by [the author]. [56p] $1.50 Dutton

42-1557

The adventures, grave and gay, of a small elephant, too insignificant to be of use in most zoos, but just the right size to appeal to a small girl named Lolly. With her grandfather and a raucous parrot named Lord Horatio Nelson, Lolly lived in a sort of moving van, and Effelli had a gay life when he joined the company. For children five to nine.

"The author of 'Peter Churchmouse' must have owned in her childhood one of those stuffed elephants that make such satisfactory nursery pets. Both story and pictures of her new book have the protective affection of a little child for a beloved toy, though these are, on the surface, the adventures of a real elephant. . . A jolly yarn." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 F 15 '42 160w

Boston Globe p17 Ap 22 '42 30w

"The book is full of childlike charm, humor and suspense. Delightful to read aloud. Many illustrations in black and white add much to the text." Elizabeth Babcock

+ Library J 67:182 F 15 '42 30w

"The story is a little on the cute side." New Yorker 18:72 My 23 '42 40w

"A charming story for the smaller fry. . . Grownups who read aloud the adventures of Effelli will enjoy them too."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 1 '42 110w
Wis Lib Bul 38:69 Ap '42

AUSTIN, MRS MARGOT. Gabriel Churchkit-ten; il. by [the author]. [36p] $1 Dutton

(W) 42-16714

Further adventures of the absent-minded Parson Pease-Porridge, and the little animals who lived in his church—Peter Churchmouse, Gabriel Churchkitten, and Trumpet, the little dog with three spots. Every night the parson gets up in his sleep, puts out food for the animals, then proceeds to eat it and spends the rest of the night playing on the organ. It works havoc on the poor animals until Gabriel puts on his "thinking hat" and reaches just the right conclusion. For first book see the author's Peter Churchmouse (Book Review Digest, 1941).

AUSTIN, MARGOT—Continued

"Gabriel thinks to some purpose, for, after a series of such repetitions as little children love, the mystery is solved. It is not a deep one; for four year-olds it need not be. The animals are not found in nature, but any baby knows and loves them." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 Ag 2 '42 250w

"Clever, nonsensical picture book that doubtless will enjoy the popularity of its predecessor. But the Churchmouse and Churchkitten foolery never attains high level of the pleasant idiocy of Winnie the Pooh, or Mary Poppins. Small children, however, might be led to higher fantasy through these quaintly illustrated easy books."

+ Library J 67:740 S 1 '42 60w

"'Gabriel Churchkitten,' though not quite so spontaneous as the first story of the absent-minded parson and the little animals who made themselves at home in his church, has much of the same droll fun and irresistible absurdity in text and drawings. As a matter of fact, Peter and Gabriel have so thoroughly established themselves as nursery favorites that adults as well as boys and girls will welcome news of their further adventures." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 30 '42 300w

Reviewed by Marjorie Flack
Sat R of Lit 25:25 N 14 '42 20w
Wis Lib Bul 38:139 O '42

AVERY, A. A. Anything for a quiet life. 306p $2 Farrar

42-15001

Detective story.

"Mr. Avery introduces enough hardboiled characters in his first few pages to please lovers of the tough school, also an abundance of swearing, with action on almost every page." Will Cuppy

Books p13 My 24 '42 100w

"The story is based in part on a huge financial scandal which made the headlines not many years ago. It is a swiftly paced yarn of the hard-boiled type, with very little subtlety but plenty of violent action." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 My 17 '42 180w

"Nice cops-and-robbers chase all over town."

New Yorker 18:76 My 16 '42 40w

Sat R of Lit 25:18 Je 6 '42 40w

AXELROD, AARON. Machine shop mathematics. 368p il $2.50 McGraw

621.75 Machine shop practice. Mathematics (W) 42-9629

"Fundamentals of mathematics, with problems relating to shop work and a brief review of algebra. Square root and differential indexing are omitted." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 38:342 My 15 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:40 Jl '42

AYDELOTTE, DORA. Measure of a man. 250p $2 Appleton-Century

(W) 42-14362

The story of a man and his family, living in a small Illinois town in the 1890's. John Patten is proprietor of the country store, a member of the school board, and one of the town's leading citizens. With business affairs and in town politics he takes a firm stand; but at home he finds himself outnumbered and out-manuevered by his charming, but firm wife, and his three growing daughters.

Booklist 38:426 Jl 1 '42

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p17 Jl 12 '42 250w

"Miss Aydelotte, author also of Across the Prairie, is daughter of country storekeeper, and story is authentic in detail and atmosphere. Reminiscent of Sarah Orne Jewett's work. Recommended." H. A. Carpenter

+ Library J 67:533 Je 1 '42 60w

"The story is simple, shrewd and solid." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p23 Je 28 '42 200w

Wis Lib Bul 38:137 O '42

AYLING, KEITH. Calling all women. 208p $2 Harper

$40.5315396 World war, 1939—Women's work. U.S.—Civilian defense (W) 42-17918

Comprehensive survey of the work American women can and are doing in the war emergency. Partial contents: Civilian defense; The National Red Cross; The U. S. O; The mechanical services; The protective services; Civilian defense at home.

Booklist 39:6 S '42

"A useful guide."

+ Books p13 Jl 26 '42 100w

N Y Times p26 S 27 '42 330w

Wis Lib Bul 38:133 O '42

B

BABSON, NAOMI LANE. Look down from heaven. 296p $2.50 Reynal

42-20275

The story of Mary, American born daughter of Finnish parents, and the days of her childhood and youth in a Massachusetts seaport village, during the years from 1905 to 1919.

Booklist 39:33 O 1 '42

"'Look Down From Heaven' has a rare kind of freshness—not that which derives from novelty of plot or setting, but the originality of a straightforward, quietly told tale which illuminates the persons of the story with sufficient clarity to reveal their uniqueness. Miss Babson has the storyteller's gift, which seems to me to stem from an untiring interest in human beings and respect for personality. Her present book is one you will not quickly forget." Mary Ross

+ Books p4 Ag 30 '42 850w

"The first part of the story is interesting and well done. The close relationship between Mary and Hannie is shown with sympathy and genuine feeling, while Mary's childish plays, her companions and her school are all clearly drawn. . . . But after Mary has grown up the novel follows conventional lines to an entirely conventional ending." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 S 6 '42 750w

"Miss Babson has written a moving and charming story. Her prose is delicately punctuated with lyric and poetic passages. She has maintained a remarkable unity in the novel as a whole through her three main divisions." M. T. Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 S 12 '42 320w

Wis Lib Bul 38:186 D '42

BACHER, WILLIAM A., ed. Treasury star parade; with an introd. by Henry Morgenthau, Jr. 379p $2.50 Farrar

792 Radio plays. World war, 1939—Drama (W) 42-24952

Twenty-seven radio plays, from the series commissioned by the treasury department for the purpose of selling bonds. Includes directions for background effects, and musical selections. Partial contents: Nightmare at noon, by S. V. Benét; The Jarvis Bay, by Gene Fowler; High flight, by J. G. Magee; The face of America, by Thomas Wolfe; The snow goose, by Paul Gallico; I speak for the women of America, by Violet Atkins; Miss Liberty goes to town, by Norman Rosten; So long, son, by H. V. O'Brien; A Christmas letter to the German people, by Thomas Mann; Chicago, Germany, by Arch Oboler; A lesson in Japanese, by Neal Hopkins; The price of free world victory, by H. A. Wallace.

Booklist 39:197 Ja 15 '43

"Although almost all of these dramas contain passages of striking prose or poetry, probably few read as well as they sounded on the air. For one thing, little characterization is possible in a fifteen-minute play, and, indeed, most of the characters represented are hardly more than figures in modern allegories. On the air much of this gap is filled by the evocations of mood created by orchestral settings and sound effects." Richard Match

+ Books p14 N 29 '42 450w

"Radio drama is growing up fast, and this volume can be recommended as a great aid to war effort for all libraries."

+ Library J 67:1013 N 15 '42 50w

BACON, FRANCIS LEONARD. Outwitting the hazards; youth attacks the accident problem. 446p il $1.80 Silver

614.8 Accidents—Prevention (W) 41-24469

Textbook in safety education for high schools. "This book attempts to point out the hazards of modern life and to give the best information and suggestions concerning how to outwit them which individuals, institutions, and organized groups have prepared in a national effort to protect human life. Attention is given to every phase of safety education, but since traffic accidents are the greatest cause of accidental deaths, particular consideration is given to pedestrian and driver education, and the traffic problem." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 38:363 Je 1 '42

School & Society 55:224 F 21 '42 50w

BACON, MARTHA (MRS PHILIP OLIVER-SMITH). Lament for the chieftains, and other poems. 54p $1.75 Coward-McCann

811

42-24277

A first book of verse by the daughter of Leonard Bacon.

"Each line is pruned and is both clear and subtle. The volume is pleasant to read."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 31 '42 90w

"This is one of the books of new verse that is well worth your reading. There is fire under the snow." W. R. Benet

+ Sat R of Lit 25:36 D 5 '42 400w

BADGER, WALTER LUCIUS, and BAKER, EDWIN MYRON. Inorganic chemical technology. 2d ed 237p il $2.50 McGraw

661 Chemicals—Manufacture. Chemistry, Technical. Chemistry, Inorganic 41-24453

New edition of a textbook first published in 1928 (Book Review Digest, 1929). "This very important book has been revised by substitution in many places and hence without any considerable enlargement. It presents the manufacture of important heavy chemicals, such as acids, alkalies and salts, from the viewpoint of the chemical engineer and under American conditions. Various unit operations particularly evaporation and absorption are skillfully and adequately tied in with the manufacturing sequences. To keep within its pages principally up-to-date procedure, older and obsolete processes have been omitted or revised in places." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

Booklist 38:191 F 1 '42

"Both the second and the first editions of this book have impressed the reviewer because of the clarity and skill with which the subjects have been presented. This book is not an all inclusive manual, but anyone interested in salt, alkali, sulfuric, nitric, and hydrochloric acids and evaporation should not fail to study the presentation made by Badger and Baker. As was true in the first edition, the illustrations are unusually well drawn and indeed one third of the present illustrations are new or have been revised." R. N. Shreve

+ Chem & Eng N 20:351 Mr 10 '42 180w

"This new edition of the original book by the same name is written purposefully, as was the first edition, for use as a chemical text. In this regard it has excellent composition and characteristics and is an important modernized improvement over the first edition, now 14 years old. . . One of the more pleasing sections of this second edition is the chapter on caustic soda, which now includes chlorine. . . The chapter on miscellaneous products has also been improved, but like the book as a whole, it is still kept within a reasonable length to best serve as a text. The reviewer recommends replacing the first edition with this second edition." C. O. Brown

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:159 Mr '42 650w

BAGBY, GEORGE A., pseud. Murder calling 50. 274p $2 Doubleday

42-20321

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p12 Ag 16 '42 180w

Boston Globe p19 Ag 12 '42 10w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p17 Ag 16 '42 160w

"Light mystery with logical solution."

New Yorker 18:56 Ag 8 '42 50w

"Careful murderer uses air raid drill to cover up crime but Schmitt out-guesses him in tale with many interesting and amusing characters. Lively."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ag 8 '42 40w

BAGLEY, JAMES WARREN. Aerophotography and aerosurveying. 324p il $3.50 McGraw 778 Photography, Aerial. Surveying, Aerial. Photography—Apparatus and supplies

(W) 42-855

Textbook covering aerial cameras and the technique of making and interpreting aerial photographs and maps. Includes laboratory practice and methods of using aerial photographs in making standard and exploratory maps, mosaics, and engineering surveys. Index.

Booklist 38:229 Mr 1 '42

"Constitutes one of the most important contributions to the literature in this field. The book provides a wealth of information concerning aerial photogrammetry, covering nearly every phase of the subject." Earl Church

+ Eng N 128:95 Ap 9 '42 400w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:20 Ap '42

Pratt p19 D '42

BAILEY, MRS BERNADINE FREEMAN. Abe Lincoln's other mother; the story of Sarah Bush Lincoln; il. by Howard Simon. 227p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Lincoln, Mrs Sarah (Bush) Johnston—Juvenile literature. Lincoln, Abraham—Juvenile literature 41-22999

Sarah Bush Lincoln, the stepmother of Abraham Lincoln, is the heroine of this story for young readers. This courageous young widow, with three children of her own, gave generously of her strength and efficiency in an attempt to make a real home for the two motherless Lincoln children and their father, as well as for her own brood, and was repaid with Abe's lasting love and devotion.

BAILEY, B. F.—Continued

"Though at times sentimental, the narrative is filled with familiar Lincoln episodes. Recommended for children ten to fourteen." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:42 Ja 1 '42 80w

"It is a pleasing picture of Lincoln's youth and family relationships, replete with details of period and region, and heart-warming with the affection and sympathy which Sarah Lincoln gave so freely as she helped the boy to achieve his dream of learning." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 1 '42 140w

Wis Lib Bul 38:69 Ap '42

BAILEY, CAROLYN SHERWIN (MRS EBEN S. HILL). Country-stop; il. by Grace Paull. 128p $2 Viking

(W) 42-36412

Tales of country life in New Hampshire in which Ann, aged nine, is the heroine. She shares in the country activities—checking mail order catalogs for Christmas presents, making valentines, celebrating a country Thanksgiving, helping at a donation party, among them. For children eight to ten.

Booklist 39:205 Ja 15 '43

"Little girls just beginning to read fluently will enjoy this book, and grandmothers who like to read to children should put it on their shopping lists. . . And every few pages a pang of passionate nostalgia strikes any one who has lived in such a country, for this is an authentic report of its life, idealized only as children live it and as city folks remember it." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ja 24 '43 320w

"For the little girls who like to read stories that seem true this will be a satisfying book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:420 N '42 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:386 O 15 '42 10w

"Describes with sensitivity New England characteristics and countryside; has fresh, unconscious, wholesome charm." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 68:37 Ja 1 '43 90w

BAILEY, HENRY CHRISTOPHER. The apprehensive dog [Eng title: No murder]. 294p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Gollancz]

(W) 42-7335

Detective story.

Booklist 38:310 Ap 15 '42

"You can trust Mr. Bailey to provide half a dozen well limned personae, including the somewhat revolting young sweethearts, Molly Caplar and Bony Frere, the vicar's son. The main effect is grand. No wars or rumors of wars in this one." Will Cuppy

+ Books p21 Mr 8 '42 240w

"It may be felt that the book is too much in the nature of a study in the anticlimax, but the story is told with all Mr. Bailey's accustomed skill." E. R. Punshon

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 27 '42 50w

"Reggie Fortune on the long, long trail of a full-length novel always gets puffed. His legs are too short; his mode of thought too elliptic and his manner too brusque to carry him easily over those great open pages. In No Murder he requires three post-mortems, and a couple of savage assaults to stay the course. Why so much bloodshed tots up to no murder in the end I leave the reader to discover for himself; but the explanation is quite sound, and one of the deaths shows considerable ingenuity on Mr. Bailey's part to invent and Reggie's to elucidate." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:149 F 28 '42 130w

"The Apprehensive Dog" is a thoroughly interesting mystery novel in the expert Mr. Bailey's characteristic vein. It has a delightful village atmosphere, clever talk and some charming characters; and the kindly and confident Mr. Fortune moves with sure skill on the very edge of whim. If the end fails somewhat in excitement—well, you've had a good time." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 8 '42 260w

New Yorker 18:64 Mr 7 '42 40w

"Two strange murders and couple of attempts tax Reggie's wits but he comes through, tardily, with colors flying. A-." + — Sat R of Lit 25:22 Mr 7 '42 30w

Reviewed by John Fairfield

Spec 168:334 Ap 3 '42 40w

Time 39:88 Ap 6 '42 60w

"Perhaps the mystery is less original than some of the unique problems which Mr. Fortune formerly solved, but 'No Murder' has the full flavour of Mr. Bailey's mellow, engaging style for all that."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p17 Ja 10 '42 160w

BAILEY, HENRY CHRISTOPHER. Meet Mr Fortune; a Reggie Fortune omnibus. 546p $2 Doubleday

(W) 42-15827

This Reggie Fortune omnibus contains one novel, The Bishop's Crime (Book Review Digest, 1941) and twelve short stories.

"A Reggie Fortune omnibus was a happy thought for these rather doddering days in the mystery field, providing as it does a vast and glittering bargain for all right-minded fans, a pleasant review of past joys for rabid Bailey addicts and a godsend for those who are fed up with knock-kneed plots, home talent deduction and wordage from the wrong side of the tracks." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 Jl 5 '42 420w

"These are among the best of all modern mystery stories. And in them Mr. Fortune is not only brilliant but lovable, the observant and persistent detective, the brilliant thinker, the stern enemy to cruelty and injustice, and the friend of man." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 5 '42 160w

New Yorker 18:68 Je 20 '42 30w

Sat R of Lit 25:16 Je 20 '42 30w

BAILEY, HENRY CHRISTOPHER. Nobody's vineyard; a Joshua Clunk story. 301p $2 Doubleday

(W) 42-22268

Detective story.

"This one is a Clunk as distinguished from a Reggie Fortune item. As such it should edify and entertain the better part of fandom without too much repining by those who want Dr. Fortune in every H. C. Bailey book. . . As for certain of Mr. Bailey's stylistic tantrums, one can hardly tell in spots whether they are just that or merely haste. The continuous skittishness, too, gets in the way of the story something fierce—but it's an extra dividend if you like it. Be that as it may, any H. C. Bailey story is a must for all amateur thinkers, and this one will keep you guessing at top speed." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p20 S 13 '42 330w

Reviewed by Kay Irvin

N Y Times p8 S 20 '42 220w

New Yorker 18:71 S 19 '42 30w

"Rampant villainy, pleasant romance, prime sleuthing, capital conversation, and Mr. Clunk at his most sanctimonious and slipperiest. First rate."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:30 S 19 '42 40w

Time 40:104 O 5 '42 40w

BAILEY, LIBERTY HYDE, and BAILEY, ETHEL ZOE, comps. Hortus second; a concise dictionary of gardening, general horticulture and cultivated plants in North America. 778p il $12 Macmillan

630.3 Gardening—Dictionaries. Botany—Dictionaries (W) 41-8469

"A concise dictionary of gardening, general horticulture and cultivated plants in North America. . . The present work is a new edition of the Hortus published in 1930 [Book Review Digest, 1931]. In 1935 a reprint with a supplement appeared. It is planned to issue new editions every ten years with possible supplements every five years. Mudge's note in Guide to Reference Books, sixth edition, 1936, gives the first Hortus as a supplement to the Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture. Many persons have helped in the preparation of the volume, chiefly those connected with the staff of Cornell university. Contributing specialists in other universities and fields are noted in the preface. Hortus Second attempts to register all the plants known to growers in North America up to the midyear of 1940." Subscription Bks Bul

"The format is good. The text is set in double column. The type varies as follows: Headings of main separate articles and genera in large capitals; secondary entries, cross references, definitions, vernacular terms in small capitals; species, synonyms, and varieties in black small type. The volume is bound in brown fabrikoid, the paper is satisfactory. Small and medium-sized libraries may not need this volume unless there is an interest in gardening. Hortus Second is recommended." + Subscription Bks Bul 13:14 Ap '42 500w

BAILEY, NEMADJI BETH (MRS J. A. MC-LEAN). The table graces; setting, service, and manners; for the American home without servants. 64p il pa 80c Manual arts

642 Table. Etiquet 41-8093

"This well-illustrated little book is adapted from the author's longer Meal Planning and Table Service [Book Review Digest, 1936] and is written for the American home without servants. Its six sections take up table equipment, table setting, table service for family and guest meals, meal service for special occasions, the art of entertaining and being entertained, and table etiquette." J Home Econ

+ J Home Econ 33:669 N '41 60w

Pratt p18 My '42

"It is a splendid book for American homes without servants."

+ School Arts 42:9a Ja '43 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:11 Ja '42

BAILEY, TEMPLE. Pink camellia. 232p $2 Houghton

42-19130

Love story of a beautiful girl from Arizona and the son of her employer, the last named a wealthy Eastern woman.

Booklist 39:103 N 15 '42

"To this battle of wits Temple Bailey brings her best efforts, and you will find the strategy all the more dramatic because it is carried on under a cloak of decorum." Lisle Bell

+ Books p13 Ag 16 '42 250w

"Temple Bailey always writes a good novel, agreeable in tone, smooth in style, sound in construction, never so tense in its situations as to subject the reader's nerves to serious strain."

+ Christian Century 59:935 JI 29 '42 100w

"Cecily herself was a frank, straightforward girl, but she had the bad luck to attract men whose methods were devious and whose manners and morals were not up to standard. . . The women were mostly cut from the same cloth as the men, and the puzzle for one reader is to figure out any way of ending the tale happily for the heroine. However, Miss Bailey manages it by working a reform in one of the men who will probably be the average reader's choice for her." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 JI 26 '42 200w

BAILLIE, JOHN. Invitation to pilgrimage. 134p $1.50 Scribner [fs Oxford]

239 Christianity—Evidences 42-24529

"An apologia for Christian faith addressed more particularly to the modern man who has lost his faith or to the Christian who feels the need of a firmer foundation under the faith that is still his. The method is to re-examine the forks in the road, where belief and unbelief diverge, and try to understand fully the alternatives presented." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:1322 O 28 '42 130w

"Having looked at the short notice on the inside of the dust-cover, I expected a book of popular apologetics. I found instead a closely reasoned defence of Christianity in which special stress is laid on the weakness of the alternatives which unbelief has to offer to the inquirer. The lecturer speaks on several occasions of friends and colleagues who do not accept Christianity. The book will appeal to them rather than to young people."

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 1 '42 100w

BAITSELL, GEORGE ALFRED. ed. Science in progress, by Harlow Shapley [and others] third series. 322 il $3 Yale univ. press

504 Science (39-14778)

"This is the third in an excellent annual series in which distinguished scientists make an effort to come out of the laboratory and report in semi-popular phraseology what they are doing. . . In this one the group includes such men as Shapley, Hubble, Bethe, Zworykin and Bridgman, and the themes include astronomy, the electron microscope, high pressures, the action of sulfanilamide, and synthetic rubber." (New Repub) Index.

"The most exciting books of recent years in the field of science—a field in which the most sensational things have happened and are happening—have been the successive volumes under the above title. The current volume seems to a lay reader to be even more stimulating and informative than its predecessors."

+ Christian Century 60:140 F 3 '43 330w

New Repub 107:866 D 28 '42 80w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert

Sat R of Lit 26:11 Ja 30 '43 500w

"Many illustrations add to the clarity of pages oftentimes technical. You take your science straight in this dignified, scholarly contribution that should be regarded, with its two preceding companions, as the backlog for the more popular presentations in your library." A. H. Comp-ton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:1 D '42 1300w

BAITY, MRS ELIZABETH (CHESLEY). Man is a weaver. 334p il maps $2.50 Viking

677 Weaving—History. Textile fabrics (W) 42-36048

History of the weaving of cloth from primitive times to the present, which provides also a history of mankind. Information on processes of fiber production, machinery, cloth-making by hand, definitions of kinds of cloth, cloth makers of North and South America are some of the subjects included. Altho intended for readers of ten to fifteen, would be of interest to adults also. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:253 Mr 15 '42

"The arrangement is such that this can be used for schools; undoubtedly, it will be. However, a child consulting it for some special project is not likely to stop with the chapter in which this is documented, for the style is stimulating and interest carries on so closely from one period to another that stopping is not easy. A point to be mentioned is that the subject and its necessary use of many pictures of different kinds bring on a trying problem of book design, the combination of photographs and line drawings of various sizes in such a way that they do not jar on each other. This problem has been met with such success that photographs of museum pieces or machines and the sixty-five lucid drawings and maps of C. B. Falls blend beautifully." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 F 22 '42 400w

Horn Bk M 18:114 Mr '42 120w

Reviewed by B. V. Morrison

J Home Econ 35:113 F '43 100w

BAITY, E. C.—Continued

"Fascinating subject matter presented in a simple, matter-of-fact style for readers of ten to fifteen, but of interest also to the adult. . . . Profusely illustrated with excellent drawings, maps, and photographs; well indexed; classified bibliographies. Splendid format. Invaluable for grammar school units on clothing." Maude Adams

+ Library J 67:226 Mr 1 '42 80w

"A wonderfully interesting book, generously illustrated." P. D. Edie

+ Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 30w

"This tale is told by Mrs. Baity with dramatic power and out of sound and thorough knowledge. 'Man Is a Weaver' is packed with information; at the same time it glows with imagination, for the periods of which it tells are vividly re-created for the reader. . . . It reads so well and easily that not only those with a definite interest in textiles but many other young readers will enjoy Mrs. Baity's book as a fascinating account of world history." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 8 '42 450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:88 My '42

BAKELESS, JOHN EDWIN. Tragically history of Christopher Marlowe. 2v 375;432p il $7.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Marlowe, Christopher

"This fine piece of English scholarship is the crown of two decades of industrious research devoted to the study of Marlowe and his plays and poems. On the way toward the present consummation of his activities Mr. Bakeless published five years ago a kind of interim report entitled 'Christopher Marlowe: the Man in His Time' [Book Review Digest, 1937]. Most of the material there presented has now been gathered up into this new definitive work, and a great deal of new matter has been added." Christian Science Monitor

"Something, though not much, has been lost. Mr. Bakeless seems to have felt that with regard to his subject's intellectual achievement and range of ideas he had had his say in the earlier book, and he does not here repeat all that he had previously written on that theme. On the other hand, he has greatly expanded his treatment of the problem of Marlowe's influence upon Shakespeare and upon the other Elizabethan and Jacobean dramatists. He has, indeed, assembled a most impressive amount of evidence in the way of imitation, allusion, conscious or unconscious echoes of phrase and rhythm, parody, and the like."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 26 '42 1100w

"I feel sure that in spite of minor quixotries, and in spite of such stylistic aberrations as the sentence that closes Chapter IV, and in spite of the absence of any attempt at a critical evaluation of the subject as poet, I am, nevertheless, sure that this must be one of the most informative books yet written on Christopher Marlowe. Indeed, I hope that the publishers have guessed right, and that this becomes 'the definitive life of the dramatist.' The biographical needs the apocryphal almost as much as vice versa." George Barker

+ Nation 156:66 Ja 9 '43 1150w

"Dr Bakeless has succeeded in the prodigious task to which he set himself and his work will be gratefully received by all students of Elizabethan drama. Not only has he cited all the evidence extant and provided new data from his own research, but he has presented it with remarkable fluidity. Not a stone has been left unturned; and to turn Elizabethan stones is the work of a courageous man." Helen Lowe

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ja 17 '43 1200w

BAKELESS, MRS KATHERINE (LITTLE). The birth of a nation's song. 64p il $1.50 Stokes

(W) 42-7114

Dramatic story of the writing of The Star-Spangled Banner, and the part in the event which was taken by two Baltimore children:

the girl who helped make the flag for Fort McHenry, and the boy who printed the handbills about "The Defense of Fort McHenry." For children eight to twelve.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 F 15 '42 370w

"This book is more than history, it is an inspiring story—dramatic and exciting—good to read these days, for it will deepen our appreciation for America and what this country stands for in this great struggle for world freedom." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 28 '42 180w

"Both from standpoint of current interest and present-day emphasis on [the] part youth may play in time of war, the story is recommended for school and public libraries." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 67:268 Mr 15 '42 50w

New Yorker 18:75 My 23 '42 50w

BAKER, ALBERT EDWARD, ed. Christian basis for the post-war world; a commentary on the ten peace points; by the Archbishop of Canterbury [and others] with a pref. by the Bishop of Carlisle. 123p pa $1 Morehouse [pa 2s 6d Student]

940.53144 Reconstruction (1939-). World war, 1939—Peace 42-22166

"The 'ten peace points' are the five enunciated by Pope Pius XII plus five more which were suggested in a letter to the London Times signed jointly by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York (Lang and Temple), the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Westminster (Cardinal Hinsley), and the moderator of the Free Church Council (W. H. Armstrong). The first five deal with fundamental principles: the rights of nations, disarmament, international organization, minorities, and the law of God. The last five cover more specific applications: possessions, education, the family, vocation in work, and international resources. The discussion of these themes was sponsored by a committee appointed by the Anglican Convocation of York. Archbishop Temple writes the introduction." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:1494 D 2 '42 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p232 My 9 '42 360w

BAKER, CHARLOTTE. Hope Hacienda; with il. by Vera Neville. 243p $2 Crowell 42-11247

"After their mother's death the three younger Everett children had lived with relatives in the United States, while Esteban, the oldest, remained with his father in Mexico. When the father dies Esteban finds it necessary to bring the sisters and brother from the United States to the house his father had intended for their home. The adjustment necessary and the hard work to establish a home form the background, while the gay dances and the kidnapping of the young brother, Louis, will hold the interest of boys and girls of junior high school age." Wis Lib Bul

"Full-page pictures carry out the general happiness of the tale." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 My 31 '42 420w

Wis Lib Bul 38:71 Ap '42

BAKER, CHARLOTTE. House of the Roses. 254p $2 Dutton 42-19137

Mystery story, the scene laid in Mexico City, and the story involving a haunted house, buried treasure, Nazi spies, and the death of a mysterious Austrian.

Booklist 39:71 N 1 '42

"Gay, sparkling, as spontaneous as sunshine, the story dances along at a lively irresponsible gait, full of people who are far too amusing to be forgotten when one turns the last page. The book belongs, no doubt, to mystery fiction, but how soon the detective-story addict spots the murderer is of secondary importance. Above all, the story is deft, light-hearted entertainment." Page Cooper

+ Books p8 S 6 '42 650w

"In its setting, modern Mexico, Miss Baker's second novel is like her first, 'A Sombbrero for Miss Brown.' Like it, too, this one is lively in its appreciation of the delightful country, the proud people and their vivid language and customs. 'Miss Brown' was a good story, and 'House of the Roses' is a better one." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p16 S 6 '42 420w

"It is diverting summer reading, with excellent atmosphere and some astute observations on the reactions of certain Mexicans toward America and Americans." R. L.

+ Sat R of Lit 25:13 S 12 '42 140w

BAKER, FRANK. Full score [Eng title: Allanayr]. 344p $2.50 Coward-McCann [9s Eyre]

42-13383

The scene of this novel is a small English village during the last year before the War. Home to his native country has come Harrison Bate, a composer, obscure, eccentric, but a genius. He is old, defeated, and his right arm is paralyzed, but two people believe in him and help him in his creation of more music; a young musician who serves as his amanuensis, and Joseph Becker, the head of the family with whom Bate lodges. The theme of the story is the interplay of influences between musical genius and common folk.

Bookmark 3:15 My '42

"To depict a composer of great music in the fever of creative effort in words that make you feel that a masterpiece is being produced is not an easy exercise of any novelist's talents. . . And so what is more notable—among the merits of 'Full Score'—is that Frank Baker convinces you that the composer who dominates the novel is actually inspired and that behind these hen tracks is the decipherable pattern of a genius at work. The figure of Harrison Bate—a composer whose greatness has had scant recognition and little material reward—is presented with warmth and intensity, and you believe thoroughly in his existence and share in his moods, thanks to Mr. Baker's skill as a delineator of character." Lisle Bell

+ Books p12 Ap 19 '42 550w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 S 19 '41 150w

"The author undoubtedly knows music, but when he gets his eccentric composer and amanuensis, a younger eccentric composer, into a context of ordinary people he runs through all the traditional romantic situations, including a pretty cheap clinch ending."

+ New Repub 106:550 Ap 20 '42 50w

"The book is interesting and very well written. Mr. Baker knows how to handle words, to create atmosphere, to express a great deal in a single phrase. . . The novel is by no means flawless; Stella does not quite come to life. . . The same comment applies to Matthew himself; it is his deficiencies that impress the reader, not his potentialities. Nevertheless, the novel is a notable one." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p21 Ap 5 '42 800w

"Mr. Baker has chosen a hard subject. This is not only a novel about a genius, it is a novel about a musical genius, but the untidy, violent, proud hero of this interesting and intelligent book is convincing both as a man and as a composer."

+ New Yorker 18:86 Ap 11 '42 50w

"In spite of the awful background, the author succeeds in interesting us both in minor family crises and in the eternal importance of music. It is difficult to think of a more readable novel about music which has appeared since George Moore's 'Evelyn Innes' of forty-four years ago. 'Full Score,' however, keeps its human interest first, and the narrative is never drowned out by music as 'Evelyn Innes' is at times." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ap 11 '42 400w

"Mr. Baker has narrative power, can create tension, and dissolve a situation neatly enough, but the ability to cope with genius needs deeper, less limited talent." John Hampson

+ Spec 167:316 S 26 '41 260w

"Mr. Baker writes so well and with such unusual knowledge of music and of the characters he presents, that he holds our attention by the sheer realism of his detail. Yet it cannot be said that he leaves the reader with any sense of satisfaction. There is no clear issue, such as the romantic writer might have provided by arousing our desire to have Bate's music performed and recognized. As it is, we are left doubtful whether or not this would be done, and are inclined to hope for the sake of the worthy little Becker and his family that it would not. We must applaud the cleverness of 'Allanayr,' but find it something of a disappointment after Mr. Baker's earlier novel 'Miss Hargreaves.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p473 S 20 '41 330w

BAKER, HERSCHEL CLAY. John Philip Kemble; the actor in his theatre. 414p $4 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Kemble, John Philip A42-1786

Biography of a famous eighteenth century actor-manager, Sarah Siddons' older brother John. The author is on the faculty of the University of Texas.

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p16 O 11 '42 500w

"Mr. Baker's findings contain a blending of scholarship and a warmly human record. As a result, John Philip Kemble emerges as a person not difficult to understand, even though the precision and objectivity of the portrait keep him thoroughly individualistic." E. C. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 13 '42 450w

"Had Mr. Baker ever been professionally connected with the theater, himself, he might have sifted from his copious information many fascinating details of theater management and stage business. As it is he has added very little to William Winter's estimate of Kemble's interpretation of Shakespeare. For the general reader it lacks romance, as the glow that irradiates the Kemble family seems mysteriously dulled in Mr. Baker's scholarly and accurate study." E. V. R. Wyatt

+ Commonweal 36:162 Je 5 '42 800w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 67:367 Ap 15 '42 80w

Manchester Guardian p3 O 21 '42 220w

Reviewed by Richard Jennings

New Statesman & Nation 24:224 O 3 '42 230w

"Mr. Baker traces every failure and every victory with painstaking diligence (the book seems to me a trifle over-documented), but he also presents a picture of John Kemble's London that will appeal to any reader interested in the boisterous, highly-colored, every-day life of the eighteenth century." Margaret Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 My 2 '42 500w

Theatre Arts 26:544 Ag '42 270w

Wis Lib Bul 38:119 Jl '42

BAKER, JOHN NEWTON. Sex education in high schools; introd. by William E. Cole. 155p $2 Emerson

612.6 Sex instruction 42-18385

A manual for teachers on why, when and how to give sex instruction to high school students. In pursuit of this objective the author has made a survey of the status of sex education in the various state systems and shows how specific schools are handling the problem. Appendix I gives some typical courses or units presented in high schools in 1939-1940. Bibliography. Index.

"The book is clearly written and attractively printed. It presents a good summary of the present situation." C. E. Turner

+ Am J Pub Health 32:1410 D '42 270w

BAKER, J. N.—Continued

"This is a special item but probably the first report in its field. Useful with teachers and schools considering or already giving such courses, and with parents and an uninformed, often prejudiced public."

+ Booklist 39:64 N 1 '42

Christian Century 59:886 J1 15 '42 40w

"High school teachers and school administrators concerned with problems of teaching sex in the school will find much helpful information in this book, which is based upon a comprehensive recent survey of the status of sex education in representative high schools of the country." B. K. Finn

+ J Home Econ 35:48 Ja '43 170w

Reviewed by V. H. Parker, M. D.

Survey 79:31 Ja '43 280w

BAKER, MRS KARLE (WILSON) (CHARLOTTE WILSON, pseud). Star of the wilderness. 508p $2.75 Coward-McCann

(W) 42-12646

Historical novel of early days in Texas. The chief characters are Paul MacAlpine and his wife Jessie who are persuaded by Paul's cousin, James Grant, to leave Cincinnati and try for fortune in the southwest. James Grant, a historical figure, involved Paul in the chaotic politics of the time and they died together in the uprising against Mexico.

Booklist 38:441 J1 15 '42

"Star of the Wilderness' is an interesting novel, with plenty of vivid scenes and exciting incidents as well as clearly drawn pictures of the manners and customs of those early days of the nineteenth century." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 26 '42 700w

"The novelist approaches her material with urbane standards. The seven or eight turbulent years of the story are seen through the eyes of her heroine, the gentle and cultivated Jessie MacAlpine. The result is a fresh insight, even for the most historically-minded of Texans, into the hearts, the motives and the actions of those who snatched the infant Republic of Texas from the clutches of the Serpent and the eagle." Sam Acheson

+ Sat R of Lit 25:33 My 16 '42 500w

BAKER, MARGARET. Tinker tailor, and other nonsense tales; with il. by Mary Baker. 127p $2 Dodd [5s Univ. of London press]

(W) 42-15600

Gay, whimsical stories for young readers, illustrated with silhouettes and drawings in black and white. Will be useful for story tellers.

"Try one of the little tales of their latest collection on children under ten. See how they listen, how they look over your shoulder at the pictures. They won't even know that some of the words are not in their school books because they are words out of the language of fable, with which every little child grows unconsciously familiar and consciously fond." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 J1 5 '42 300w

"Not outstanding nor very original but quite satisfactory, if another book of short stories is wanted or new material for story hour seems essential." Claire Nolte

Library J 67:685 Ag '42 70w

"Thoroughly satisfactory entertainment for boys and girls from 6 to 9, and incidentally for their elders. For some of the stories Mary Baker has made her inimitable silhouettes, for others her equally delightful line drawings. Story-tellers will find 'Tinker Tailor' helpful, and it will be an excellent book for Summer reading aloud. The boy or girl who has been accumulating a shelf of 'Baker books' to grow up with, and who can now add this volume to the rest, is a fortunate child."

A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 J1 26 '42 340w

BAKER, MRS NINA (BROWN). He wouldn't be king; the story of Simon Bolívar; with il. by Camilo Egas. 305p $2.50 Vanguard

B or 92 Bolívar, Simón—Juvenile literature (W) 41-23617

Biography of the great South American patriot, soldier and statesman, whose courageous leadership assured his country of freedom from Spain. Written for junior and senior high schools. Index.

Booklist 38:178 Ja 15 '42

"Its style is sober; the infrequent passages of conversation have the effect of quotations. Those moments in Bolívar's career where life seemed to set itself to outdo romance—the earthquake at Caracas, the amputation of Rook's arm, the incredible defense of Bolívar's sickroom by Manuela Saenz, known ever after as 'Liberatrix of the Liberator'—are so told that their truth carries conviction. The whole book carries conviction." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ja 25 '42 150w

"Written for young people, easy to read, sustaining interest satisfactorily, the book . . . adheres substantially to historical facts, although fanciful details are introduced to form a picturesque background." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 155:122 Ap '42 70w

"It would indeed be difficult, and is unnecessary, to make a final choice between Elizabeth Waugh's 'Simón Bolívar: A Story of Courage,' previously reviewed in this department and Nina Brown Baker's 'He Wouldn't Be King,' which has won the 1941 Intra-American Award annually presented by the Society for the Americas. Mrs. Baker's is, perhaps, more dramatic in its presentation of an essentially dramatic life, and certainly there is a twinkling humor to throw into perspective some of the lighter aspects of a career and a struggle which inevitably took on at times a certain comic opera flavor, which really emphasizes the size of the task performed." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 15 '42 320w

Wis Lib Bul 38:88 My '42

BAKER, MRS NINA (BROWN). Juárez, hero of Mexico; il. by Marion Greenwood. 316p $2.50 Vanguard

B or 92 Juárez, Benito Pablo—Juvenile literature (W) 42-22433

Life story of the full-blooded Zapotec Indian who became president of Mexico and a national hero. The story, told in semi-fictional form, is intended for high school students. Index.

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Atlantic 170:149 D '42 30w

Booklist 39:73 N 1 '42

"A magnanimous biography of Juárez, a difficult subject in many ways, handled as fairly as possible." H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:119 N 20 '42 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:433 N '42 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:896 O 15 '42 20w

"This is a distinguished biography which adults as well as youth will find extremely rewarding in its contribution to our understanding of Mexico's history and the perspective it thus gives to her problems of today." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p30 N 15 '42 340w

BAKER, RALPH HILLIS. National bituminous coal commission; administration of the Bituminous coal act, 1937-1941. 356p $3.50; pa $3 Johns Hopkins press

338.2 Coal trade—Laws and regulations

A42-1780

"This study [deals with] the legislative background and the administrative procedures and problems of the Bituminous Coal Commission, the Coal Division, and the Consumers' Counsel." Ann Am Acad

"The author's conclusions after four years of investigation are cautious. He is not satisfied with the success of the law. He is not happy about the administration of the law. He nevertheless believes that the coal industry and the public have benefited in some ways and that the two-year extension of the act to 1943 is justifiable. His study will find a ready place among the several investigations of public regulatory agencies made in the last decade." C. E. Hawley

Am Pol Sci R 36:557 Je '42 600w

Reviewed by M. E. Cameron

Ann Am Acad 224:216 N '42 500w

BAKER, RAY STANNARD (DAVID GRAYSON, pseud). Under my elm; country discoveries and reflections; il. by David Hendrickson. 278p $2 Doubleday

818 Country life (W) 42-21572

Further essays on the contentment of country living in which the author describes his adventures in growing onions and in beekeeping, among his other activities. Excerpts from various of the writer's favorite authors, especially Marcus Aurelius, are included.

Booklist 39:65 N 1 '42

Reviewed by Rose Feld

Books p16 N 1 '42 850w

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 7 '42 500w

"This book, to use the author's heading for one of the chapters, is a chronicle of small joys. Together they add up to the joy of living, which David Grayson seems to have discovered for himself and has the faculty of passing on to his readers. He is one of America's best tension-easers." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p5 O 18 '42 400w

"'Under My Elm,' is no mere sentimental glorification of country life. Rousseau's sensibility and enthusiasm are in Grayson balanced by those elements of New England common sense which make Thoreau's writings so memorable." R. J. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p8 N 3 '42 950w

Wis Lib Bul 38:183 D '42

BAKER, ROBERT LEE. Oil, blood and sand. 300p $2.50 Appleton-Century

940.535 World war, 1939—East (Near East) (W) 42-36289

The former editor of Living Age, who is director of publications division of the NICB, surveys the situation in the Middle East. He discusses the economic and political reasons for the Axis and Allied interest in the countries of the Middle East, and includes chapters on Axis propaganda in the Arab world and Turkey. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:6 S '42

Bookmark 4:10 N '42

"Mr. Baker sets forth clearly the essential facts in this complex picture. . . . To those who know nothing about the Middle East—and not one American out of a thousand does—the book can be immensely helpful and enlightening. As he has the gift of simple expression the details are in no sense wearing or confusing." Nicholas Roosevelt

+ Books p4 Ag 30 '42 1100w

"The text of the book is a more than pleasant surprise. It is an excellent description of a 'hot' battlefield. . . . Mr. Baker wrote with intimate knowledge not only of what he has seen but also what he has studied far from the scene. Many a correspondent has done an excellent job sending news stories and feature articles but he failed when he thought he had to write a book on his vacation. Mr. Baker, after widely traveling in Europe and the Middle East, has deeply penetrated his subject and he gives the reader a most valuable knowledge of facts rounded out of a sound opinion by clear and logical judgment."

+ Boston Globe p19 Ag 10 '42 180w

"By the layman who wishes to follow intelligently the war in the Middle East, as well as by editors and commentators who seek to interpret the war news, 'Oil, Blood and Sand,' by Robert I. Baker, must be thoughtfully considered. Fortunately, the author, who is especially well equipped for the task he has undertaken, writes well and clearly of a region where the problems of politics, economics, and war are exceedingly complex. Without burdening his readers with unnecessary historical detail, he succeeds in giving a lucid and comprehensive picture of the Middle East in the setting of the world conflict." W. Y.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 D 26 '42 360w

Reviewed by J. S. Gurley

Current Hist 3:165 O '42 1200w

"Timely book, well done, that presents much important information about a new war front almost unknown to most Americans. Recommended." R. S. Alvarez

+ Library J 67:679 Ag '42 80w

"Mr. Baker knows how to separate the facts from the headlines in a mass of clippings and tell an integrated story. But the book suffers by comparison with 'Retreat to Victory' by Allan Michie, who had the advantage of recent personal observation."

+ Nation 155:245 S 19 '42 300w

Reviewed by Leigh White

New Repub 107:292 S 7 '42 420w

"One must speak about this book with high praise. It deals with very important subjects of the day and perhaps of the age: the stakes and strategy in the Middle East. It is well informed and detailed, so that both the specialist and the layman can read it with profit. It is also very well written. The reader who wants to know about the political, economic and military objectives in the Middle East can really do no better than to turn to Robert L. Baker's book." Emil Lengyel

+ N Y Times p4 S 20 '42 600w

Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 S '42 420w

BALABAN, CARRIE (MRS A. J. BALABAN). Continuous performance; the story of A. J. Balaban, as told to his wife. 240p il $3.50; autog ed $10 Putnam

B or 92 Balaban, Abe J. 42-50255

Biography of one of Chicago's leading citizens of the theatrical world, Mr Balaban's wife traces her husband's career from his childhood, when he helped in his father's store, thru the days of his ownership of one of the early nickelodeons, to his present place in the movie world. Chronology. Index.

"'Continuous Performance' is not to be mistaken for literature. It is written in a loose, naive, semi-pro style by an adoring wife. It has the fresh charm of an adolescent love letter and the quaint conceit of a Hollywood house organ. As the success saga of Abe Balaban . . . it rates as a quickie production, but as a documented history of one of the lively arts it takes on importance and significance and becomes nothing less than super-duper-colossal!" Joseph Driscoll

+ — Books p44 N 15 '42 700w

"Were it not for the fact that Continuous Performance . . . purports to record a story important to the amusement world . . . the book would scarcely be worth reviewing. For it is badly written, rambling, shallow, and incomplete, a dull biography and a sketchy history. . . . [I]t is a somewhat pathetic and perhaps unconscious attempt to justify money making for the sake of money making." Bernard Sobel

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 D 19 '42 500w

Springf'd Republican p6 D 15 '42 300w

BALCH, GLENN. Indian paint, the story of an Indian pony; il. by Nils Hogner. 244p $2 Crowell

(W) 42-19568

"A stirring story of Little Falcon, of the Piños tribe, and the courage, patience and love which he showed in training the horse of his choice. Shadow, the pinto colt, chosen even before his birth, had all the qualities wanted by Little Falcon, but his strength and fire made his training all the more difficult." Horn Bk

Booklist 39:52 O 15 '42

BALCH, GLENN—Continued

"The figures of boy and horse are clear and distinct and the excellent drawings add to their reality." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:334 S '42 100w

"Character of Indian boy, with his resourcefulness in the woods, is excellently drawn. Literary quality not outstanding. Recommended." Elizabeth Babcock

+ Library J 67:795 S 15 '42 70w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 20w

Wis Lib Bul 38:190 D '42

BALDWIN, FAITH (MRS HUGH HAMLIN CUTHRELL). Blue Horizons. 278p $2 Farrar

The life and loves of Mrs Bobbie Rivers, whose Florida estate, Blue Horizons, is the scene of much of the story. It includes the story of Josephine Bruce, social secretary at Blue Horizons, which had once been her home. The life of an employee in her former home is further complicated by the fact that two of her employer's male relatives fall in love with her.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p14 F 1 '42 190w

"The love story, developing four angles, works up to a properly suspenseful plot. Dressed up in Miss Baldwin's smoothest style, it all seems very important at the moment and highly entertaining. The lush background of warm weather and pots of money, with various new and old poor angling for it, makes 'Blue Horizons' pleasant Winter pastime reading." Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p21 F 8 '42 340w

BALDWIN, FAITH (MRS HUGH HAMLIN CUTHRELL). Breath of life. 282p $2 Farrar 42-9790

A doctor's daughter, married to a doctor, is the heroine. Careless, lovely, demanding Lydia resents her husband's practice and his efficient office nurse, and her resentment gains such a hold on her that she very nearly wrecks her own life and her husband's career. The story of her uphill fight to regain her health and sanity has an unusual outcome.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p16 Je 7 '42 250w

"There is a lot of drinking, smart talk, and fast driving, and a lot of surgical technicality and hospital atmosphere, but with every opportunity to reach a conclusion through a fatal accident, the story, nevertheless, proceeds without benefit of coincidence to its end. Some readers may think Lydia fares better than she should, but the change from the usual is refreshing." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p17 My 31 '42 160w

BALDWIN, FAITH (MRS HUGH HAMLIN CUTHRELL). Five women in three novels. 357p $2.50 Farrar 42-19650

Three short novels, all written, the author explains, before the shadow of war made itself felt. The first, Star on her shoulder, is about a girl born with a lucky birthmark. The other two are both about women who must fight for their men with other women.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p18 S 13 '42 150w

Reviewed by L. M. Field

N Y Times p14 Ag 30 '42 600w

BALDWIN, HANSON WEIGHTMAN. Strategy for victory; a program to defeat the dictators. 172p $1.75 Norton 940.5401 Strategy. World war, 1939- (W) 42-36246

The New York Times editor on military and naval affairs discusses what part naval, land, air, economic and psychological forces must play in the total effort which is the only answer to Total war.

"A good book and a needed book." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic 170:142 S '42 230w

Booklist 38:423 J1 1 '42

Bookmark 4:10 N '42

"Realism has always been an outstanding characteristic of Hanson Baldwin, an ability to carry through factual analyses of military situations with precision and to present results with logical exactitude. He is never swayed by day-by-day fluctuations in battle, preferring to base judgment or prediction upon long-range view extending over all factors, psychological, political and economic as well as military. 'Strategy for Victory' is realism at its best, a study of present and future made without colored glasses, rosy or black." P. J. Searles

+ Books p3 Je 21 '42 1100w

"Mr. Baldwin, of course, is something more than a keen-sighted, logical and fearless critic. He is, by common acknowledgment, an authority in the field of military affairs. . . . An increasing number of people have ceased to pay attention to the comforting but illusory predictions of directed propagandists, sentimental public speakers, and interested politicians. These same realists are however, much encouraged when Mr. Baldwin indicates that real advances have been made. Being no pessimist, this is what he does when the facts justify it." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 155:630 Ag '42 700w

"Some newspaper reporters have described Hanson Baldwin as 'nerveless.' It would be more accurate to say that he has strong emotions—at times he writes feelingly, almost passionately—but that they do not in the least affect his cool, realistic mind. Save for an underestimation of the Soviet Union and an inability to foresee the full weakness of Italy in the Greek campaign—in both errors he had plenty of company—his analyses and predictions have come remarkably close to the truth. The Hanson Baldwin fans, of which this reviewer is one, will not discover a great deal that is new in 'Strategy for Victory.' It does offer an impersonal, hard-headed approach to the problem of winning the war." D. W. Mitchell

+ Nation 155:15 J1 4 '42 800w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 106:834 Je 15 '42 1100w

"To the military reader—the genuine military reader, the soldier or sailor who has thought beyond guides right and watch keeping—this will be no more than a kind of ready reference handbook of what he already knows. To the non-military reader it is likely to be a surprise and a disappointment." Fletcher Pratt

N Y Times p9 J1 5 '42 750w

"Terse, clear-cut, balanced, and thoroughly objective."

+ New Yorker 18:68 Je 20 '42 90w

Reviewed by Roger Shaw

Sat R of Lit 25:18 J1 4 '42 700w

BALL, HARRIET (MRS H. F. HALE). Each alone. 299p $2.50 Harper (W) 42-12026

Story of the week-end in which the Victors celebrated Grandfather's—and, incidentally, Grandmother's—golden wedding day. The week-end coincided with that during which Germany dropped bombs on Poland, and England and France declared war, but the war is in the background only and family tensions, old injuries and jealousies, as well as humor and love chiefly mark the days till the time comes for the big dinner followed by the departure of the trouble-makers.

Booklist 38:426 J1 1 '42

"Katherine Holly, lovable Benjie with his gift for escaping responsibilities, and especially Uncle Augustus, are fascinating people. Miss Ball is a shrewd, deft observer whose humor goes more than surface deep. To her, the undertones, involuntary gestures, irrelevant thoughts, are more significant than the thunder of events. Her people have a three-dimensional quality that will make them keep on living in your imagination long after you have closed the book on this particular family party." Page Cooper

+ Books p4 My 10 '42 850w

"Miss Ball writes cleverly, often humorously, using an unusual vocabulary and with ability to see working of people's minds. Recommended." H. R. Burdett

+ Library J 67:414 My 1 '42 80w

"The dialogue is neat, natural and revealing; the humor keen and rather on the bitter side, except in the case of Uncle Gussie. The difficult and complex family portrait is cleverly and entertainingly presented." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 My 10 '42 600w

New Yorker 18:79 My 9 '42 50w

"By its very virtues the book does not ever fuse into a narrative, which does not matter too much. There are several crises, about marriage relationships and remembered liaisons, but these are less real than the minds that feel and analyze them. A strongly subjective novel, this, and nicely done." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ag 1 '42 230w

BALLARD, W. T. Say yes to murder. 239p $2 Putnam

42-22990

Detective story.

"Multiple murder, California types and studio atmosphere keep the ball rolling in this tale, less frenzied than most in its bracket." Will Cuppy

Books p22 O 18 '42 100w

"The story runs along easily, and there's a real surprise at the end." Kay Irvin

N Y Times p10 O 18 '42 140w

"Good tough 'un."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20. O 31 '42 40w

BANNERMAN, MRS HELEN. Jumbo Sambo. 223p il $2.25 Stokes

(W) 42-18661

Contents: The Story of Little Black Sambo; The Story of Sambo and the Twins; The Story of Little Black Quasha; The Story of Little Black Bobtail; The Story of the Teasing Monkey; The Story of Little Kettle-head. "In libraries where the pocket-size books have a tendency to disappear, this larger volume should be welcome." Booklist

Booklist 39:18 S '42

New Yorker 18:116 D 12 '42 30w

School & Society 56:152 Ag 22 '42 40w

Wis Lib Bul 38:192 D '42

BANNING, KENDALL. Submarine! the story of undersea fighters; il. by Charles Rosner. 52p $1 Random house

359 Submarine boats. Submarine warfare

(W) 42-24607

"In this book an expert on naval subjects writes nontechnical descriptions of these vessels, from their earliest crude beginnings to the formidable present-day types. There are chapters on the crews that man these craft and how they are trained, on the control room: the brains of the modern 'pig boat' and the submarine in action today. Illustrations by Charles Rosner enliven and interpret the text." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 39:143 D 15 '42

Cath World 156:375 D '42 90w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 19 '42 90w

"Recommended for libraries that cannot afford more comprehensive Submarines, by H. S. Zim." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 67:1069 D 1 '42 110w

Reviewed by F. P. Graham

N Y Times p24 N 15 '42 240w

New Yorker 18:115 D 12 '42 10w

BANNING, MRS MARGARET (CULKIN).

Women for defense. 243p $2.50 Duell

940.5318396 World war, 1939—Women's work.

Women in the U.S. (W) 42-3937

This book is an attempt to appraise woman's part in the first World War, in other countries during this second war and in the United States.

Booklist 38:271 Ap 1 '42

"Margaret Culkin Banning has written one of the early and certainly not the last book on the contribution of women to war and defense. It is hard not to jest a little wryly about the gals who rush into uniform. . . . Although starting with this unrighteous prejudice, this reviewer has to report that Mrs. Banning has written a serious, sensible appraisal of woman power and its usefulness in this global war." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p18 Mr 8 '42 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '42

"Recommended." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 67:85 Ja 15 '42 70w

"An informative and stimulating book. . . . Mrs. Banning knows her countrywomen, knows how to write about and to them. This book should be read by women of every interest and circumstance, all over America."

+ N Y Times p3 F 22 '42 550w

"Truly excellent book. Mrs. Banning is no loose generalizer. Out of painstaking research she culls innumerable facts about women's activities, home, civic, industrial and civil defense, their organizations and programs of preparation and work. Somehow she has skipped over the American Red Cross—a sin of omission from the point of view of one familiar with its work. Her only other mistake from this reviewer's standpoint is her reference to Democratic and Republican women's clubs, vestigial remains of an earlier day for women have become a integral part of political organizations." M. E. Dewson

+ — Survey 78:207 J1 '42 500w

BARBER, WILLETTA ANN, and SCHABE-LITZ, RUDOLPH FREDERICK. Drawn conclusion. 301p il $2 Doubleday

(W) 42-203

Detective story.

Booklist 38:235 Mr 1 '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 Ja 11 '42 120w

"His sketch book is never far from the hand of Christopher Storm, and when he examines the sketches he has made he frequently sees details that are not as one would expect them to be. That is the secret of his success in solving crime puzzles that have baffled the police. And that is why the reader of the stories about him will do well to examine the sketches with which they are illustrated. There are clues in those sketches which are not mentioned in the text until the last chapter of the book—clues which the reader may, if his eyes and wits are sharp enough, interpret for himself." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 18 '42 240w

"Worthwhile."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ja 10 '42 40w

BARBER, WILLETTA ANN, and SCHABEL-ITZ, RUDOLPH FREDERICK. Murder enters the picture. 297p il $2 Doubleday

42-50588

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p48 D 6 '42 300w

"As was the case in the other Barber-Schabelitz books, Kit's sketches are reproduced so that the reader may try his hand at interpreting them. This is not the best of the stories produced by these two collaborators, but it affords good entertainment just the same." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 D 13 '42 220w

BARBOUR, HARRIOT BUXTON, and FREE-MAN, WARREN S. How to teach children to know music. 256p $2.50 Smith & Durrell

780.7 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation. Music—Instruction and study

42-25271

"A child's interest in music should be continued and enlarged as the child grows to maturity, they point out. Thus the system they propose is to provide the child through the parent and teacher with a definite listening program. Equipment involves a record player 'of sufficient high quality to give faithful reproduction of the music' and selected recordings. . . The program is carried through to high school days. Each composition is discussed in relation to its musical quality and recommended recordings." Springf'd Republican

Books p42 D 6 '42 220w

Reviewed by Milton Berliner

Springf'd Republican p6e D 13 '42 170w

BARCLAY, HARTLEY WADE, ed. How your business can help win the war; comp. by the staff of industrial specialists of the Conover-Mast periodicals, Mill and factory and Purchasing, under the editorial direction of Hartley W. Barclay; with an introd. by Donald M. Nelson. 111p maps pa $1 Simon & Schuster

351.71 Contracts. World war, 1939—Economic aspects—U.S. 42-3575

"A practical guide to conversion from non-defense to full-scale wartime production. Indicates how to avoid unnecessary delays in determining what to make, where to go, what kind of a contract to negotiate, and how to subcontract defense orders. A few case histories are included." Management R

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '42

Management R 31:71 F '42 50w

"Although any of the information contained in the booklet can probably be gotten through official sources in Washington, this compact survey is a welcome addition to the businessman's shelves."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 8 '42 330w

BARGERON, CARLISLE. Confusion on the Potomac; the alarming chaos and feuds of Washington. 248p $2.50 Funk, W.

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century 41-28037

"Carlisle Barger on sees the present national defense administration as a battle royal between the New Dealers and the Dollar-a-Year men. . . At the same time the two groups are also quarreling among themselves; men in high places are not speaking to each other if they can avoid it; office politics is the order of the day; instead of moving in one direction against Hitler, Washington's bureaucrats seek to undermine each other." Books

"Any one who has worked in Washington can confirm much of this book. The rest may gossip—but where would Washington be without gossip?" Joseph Driscoll

Books p12 D 14 '41 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:780 J1 '42 10w

"Mr. Barger on's book now has a different perspective—we trust—and it should be read with a mental change of tenses from 'is' to 'was.' As such, the picture he sketched is a useful object-lesson and should inspire many a reader to hope that if the situation Mr. Barger on describes ever returns, it will be slapped down by other non-feudists." S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p4 My 17 '42 260w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 30 '42 260w

BARKER, LEWELLYS FRANKLIN. Time and the physician. 350p il $3.50 Putnam

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 42-11786

Autobiography of a physician and medical authority who was identified for many years with

Johns Hopkins, where he succeeded Dr. Osler as head of the department of medicine. "Dr. Barker, son of Canadian Quakers in whose seminaries his father came to teach . . . came under Osler at Hopkins in 1891, studied in Germany (part of that day's pattern), saw poverty and plague on a commission to the Philippines and India (that thread is again in the weaving) and in 1900 went to the chair of anatomy at the University of Chicago. The story is rich in friendships, wide horizons, service, a panorama of medicine at the turn of the century." (Survey G) Index.

"Although author lacks distinction of style, his story is important because of what he has done . . . to develop upon sound basis such subjects as psychiatry, public health, medical research, full time professorships in medical schools, and cost of medical care. Medium and larger libraries will wish to add to list of biographies of Johns Hopkins men, which include those of Osler, Welch, Halsted, and others long familiar to American public." G. E. Brown

Library J 67:317 Ap 1 '42 100w

New Repub 106:902 Je 29 '42 100w

"The reader will not find in this volume either a garish success story or 'the usual brawn-and-pneumonia doctor book. Instead he will read the edifying and no less impressive description of a man's development in medicine." Saul Jarcho, M.D.

+ N Y Times p16 My 17 '42 460w

"There are no fireworks in this autobiography, no dramatic tales of famous patients, no sex, no diagrams of his unique contributions. Rather it is the carefully and quietly told life-story of a distinguished gentleman whose years were rich in accomplishment and honors but whose Quaker blood permits no dramatizing of either and little personal revelation." M. S. Ulrich

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 My 23 '42 360w

"One value of his autobiography is the reader's enhanced knowledge of the labor, genius, sacrifices, teamwork demanded of men to translate science and research into the practice of medicine." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 31:254 My '42 450w

BARKSDALE, LENA. First Thanksgiving; il by Lois Lenski. 57p $1.50 Knopf

Thanksgiving day—Juvenile literature

(W) 42-21306

Before they were married, and many years before this story begins, little Hannah's grandparents had been present at the very first Thanksgiving feast. So the year Hannah came down from Maine to stay with her grandparents, she was one of the many grandchildren to hear from Grandmother's lips the tale of that first day the Pilgrims and their Indian friends gave thanks for the harvest.

Booklist 39:107 N 15 '42

"The little girl's journey, the gowns, games and furniture that interest her, give an idea of this America before the story begins that cuts back to a beginning yet within the memory of living men. It is more than seasonal, this little book; it has year-round usefulness." M. L. Becker

+ Books p24 N 15 '42 200w

"A warm and friendly story."

+ Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 10w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 18:408 N '42 50w

"As pleasant an introduction to a New England Thanksgiving Day, for little children, as can be found." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:420 N '42 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:886 O 15 '42 30w

"Charming little story of olden days in America. . . Piquant illustrations and end papers by Lois Lenski. Recommended for children eight to ten." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:954 N 1 '42 70w

"[Here] we have for younger children a double story of Thanksgiving, of the first and of one when a tradition was in the making, a tradition doubly precious today, reminding us of other Americans who lived through dark days, their gratitude and their graciousness unimpaired." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 N 1 '42 260w
Wis Lib Bul 38:164 N '42

BARKSDALE, LENA. Milly and her dogs; pictures by Charlotte Steiner. unp $1 Doubleday 42-16022

Picture-story book about a small girl who lived in the country and loved all the animals, especially her dogs. Picture book age.

"Charlotte Steiner's pictures of children and animals have gentle humor all their own. . . Miss Barksdale's lovable little story [is] just right for very small children who love lots of dogs." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 5 '42 130w

"The easy-reading text does not really comprise a story; it is rather a legend for the animated pictures, gay with color, endearing with a certain quaintness, which are quite satisfying to young eyes in their lavish detail and multiplicity of animals—especially dogs." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p8 My 24 '42 200w

BARNARD, JOHN LAWRENCE. Land of promise. 268p $2 Doubleday 42-21236

Story of present day life in New York. George Watson and his young wife Abby were used to wealth, but when George's business folded up they were reduced to poverty. Their period of readjustment was complicated for both of them—George met a sympathetic feminine listener, and Abby began seeing the "man she should have married." George's interest in war work exceeded his interest in taking a good job, too, and the marriage was headed for divorce, before they learned to face issues sensibly.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p18 S 13 '42 250w

"Women and young girls will enjoy." Lena Ruppert

Library J 67:682 Ag '42 80w

"George's temporary flame, Tony, is artfully drawn, and Abby's refuge, John, is a really stunning bit of character work. The conversation is lifelike, and at the same time as amusing as good stage dialogue, and there are plenty of quick and surprising laughs." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 30 '42 280w

BARNE, KITTY (MRS ERIC STREATFIELD). May I keep dogs? 295p il $2 Dodd [7s 6d Hamilton, H]

(W) 42-16136

The three Lovell children were told that they must make their beloved home pay its own way when their father went to war. The older boy and girl were soon doing their part, but twelve-year-old Thirza was at loose ends. Her biggest asset was a love for dogs, so starting from that she established the Staplefields Kennels. The story is of her errors and successes in her chosen work. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 39:15 S '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 J1 26 '42 480w

Reviewed by Claire Nolte

Library J 67:685 Ag '42 90w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:889 O 15 '42 10w

"We need books like this just now. Aside from its inevitable appeal to those who consider dogs a necessary element of the good life, it emphasizes the responsibility of children to do, according to their abilities, something helpful in a wartime world, and thus it helps the young reader to feel himself a part of our struggle." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 23 '42 320w

"Every one who has undergone the stress of parting from his dog as a result of war service will be pleased with this book. . . The practical side of the book is sound, and all the terrors that beset an owner of kennels, as well as the skilled nature of dog-stripping, are given full weight. It is not a sentimental book, but it is very nearly tragic. A dog is the real hero of the book, as the little girl is the heroine, and their attachment is worked up to a crisis that has considerable emotional value, even though one may doubt whether in real life the dog's disability, which leads to the crisis, would have passed unnoticed."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p95 F 21 '42 270w

BARNES, HARRY ELMER, and RUEDI, GREEN MORRIS. American way of life; our institutional patterns and social problems; with the collaboration of Robert H. Ferguson. 802p il maps $5 Prentice-Hall

309.173 U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Social conditions (W) 42-18941

"This book is offered as an introduction to the state of American life in the current period of war and world change. It covers both our leading institutions and the outstanding social problems which beset us." (Pref) The text of the present volume is based on the author's Society in Transition (Book Review Digest, 1939), Social Institutions, and parts of the forthcoming book on Programs of Social and Economic Reconstruction. Selected references. Index.

"This is a first-rate book, valuable both to the general citizen and to the academic student in senior high school or junior college either as a text-book or as general required reading." A. J. Lien

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:1173 D '42 550w

"In spite of its avowed intentions, the work turns out to be just another un-unified omnibus book of problems. It carries an even greater assortment of unrelated passengers than any of the senior author's other recent productions. . . Although he may use his material to give a somewhat different emphasis from that of his other problem treatises, one can see little justification for serving up so obvious a rehash except to further potboiler ends for both author and publisher. . . Apart from these strictures, the book is a most excellent one of its kind. It is well written, well informed, generally accurate and sound in its data, reasonably objective in attitude, carefully organized, and arresting to the point of fascination in style and method of presentation. Those who use such texts will find it among the very best." N. L. Sims

+ Ann Am Acad 225:262 Ja '43 470w

Reviewed by R. S. Alvarez

Library J 67:627 J1 '42 80w

Wis Lib Bul 38:160 N '42

BARNES, IRSTON ROBERT. Economics of public utility regulation. 952p $5 Crofts

380.16 Public utilities—U.S. Holding companies 42-14332

"It is the author's conviction that the economics of public utility regulation can best be taught to college students on the basis of discussions and reports and that the 'case method' offers the most promise of developing significant class discussions. The present undertaking has, therefore, sought not only to produce a textbook that will meet all the needs of the instructor who prefers the conventional methods of teaching, but also to provide the essential background materials for the instructor who prefers to pursue the more difficult and rewarding case technique." (Pref) "The conventional approach is extended to the selection of topics. These include the following: the public utility concept; history; economic characteristics; corporate structure; state and federal responsibilities; instruments of regulation; franchises; accounting; rates; valuation; rate of return; expenses; holding companies; securities; service; Federal Power Commission; public relations; and public ownership." (Am Econ R) Bibliography. Index.

BARNES, I. R.—Continued

"The undertaking is a praiseworthy one. The book is meaty; usually well written, though not always clear, even to a specialist; and well documented. It has a table of cases (twenty-four pages of fine print), and a selected bibliography. The job of proofreading was carefully done; the number of errors is so few that it would be ungracious to list them." Eliot Jones

+ Am Econ R 32:910 D '42 900w

"Notwithstanding its limitations, this is the best book of its kind available. Written primarily to serve the needs of students and teachers by a combination of case material and critical analysis, it is a model of fine workmanship. The subject matter is explored thoroughly, the material is well organized, the writing is clear and concise, the reference facilities are excellent." H. M. Gray

+ Ann Am Acad 223:240 S '42 600w

BARNWELL, GEORGE WINCHESTER, ed.

New encyclopedia of machine shop practice; a guide to the principles and practice of machine shop procedure. 568p il $2 Grosset 621.75 Machine shop practice (W) 41-19618

A series of articles, compiled by various authors, dealing with bench work, metals in engineering production, the lathe, thread-cutting, taper-turning, knurling, milling and grinding, special machine tools, gears and gear cutting, jigs and fixtures, pressing, stamping, punching, heat-treatment of metals, welding, soldering, brazing, forging, foundry work, measuring and testing, and machine drawing. Also, an appendix of tables and useful data. Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 26:57 O '41

Pratt p13 F '42

"The outstanding feature of the book is the illustrative work which is fully and intelligently employed in describing various machines and operations. Much material for study is contained in the illustrations which text alone could never adequately present. . . The book is well written, interesting and easy to read. A comprehensive knowledge of its contents would vastly help any apprentice, machinist, engineer or designer." Robert Linton

+ Spring'd Republican p14 O 17 '41 400w

BARRER, RICHARD MALING. Diffusion in and through solids. 464p il $6.50 Macmillan [30s Cambridge]

539 Diffusion. Solids [A41-4929]

"A detailed discussion of this highly specialized branch of physics intended for the graduate student and the research worker. Subject matter includes the Diffusion equation; Stationary and non-stationary states of molecular flow; Diffusion of gases in metals; Structure-sensitive diffusion; and Permeation of gases in organic solids." N Y New Tech Bks

"The book can be recommended to the student for post-graduate work, to the teacher for reference, and to the technical man for valuable information." F. C. Nachod

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:183 N '41 170w

"One cannot read this book without being impressed by the tremendous scope and importance of diffusion phenomena. More than seven hundred references are given, of which the largest group concerns metals and ionic crystals. No scientist concerned with the fundamental properties of solids of any type can afford to neglect this book. The specialist might offer the criticism that too much area is covered with not enough depth, but the writer feels that the author has shown judgment and balance in his monograph." N. W. Taylor

+ J Phys Chem 46:533 Ap '42 650w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:6 Ja '42

"This excellent survey of the experimental and theoretical aspects of diffusion in solids by an experienced investigator is a very timely and valuable contribution to the physics of solids. . . The quality of paper in the book is rather low since the book was printed in England. Although this is obviously a disadvantage, the high quality of the written material adequately compensates for it." Frederick Seitz

+ R of Scientific Instruments 13:164 Ap '42 600w

BARRES, PHILIPPE. Charles de Gaulle. 260p $2 Doubleday [9s 6d Hutchinson]

B or 92 Gaulle, Charles André Joseph Marie de (W) 41-22873

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"A valuable book in view of the lack of material on the subject." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 20:576 Ap '42 40w

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 8 '42 330w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer

New Statesman & Nation 23:355 My 30 '42 700w

Reviewed by Eleanor Kittredge

N Y Times p17 F 8 '42 1150w

Pratt p11 F '42

Spec 168:483 My 22 '42 1350w

"Barres gives an accurate and rapid account of de Gaulle's brilliant career and his heart-breaking struggle since the surrender of France. . . This book is not only recommended for ordinary Americans that they may know one of our most brilliant military allies, but it is also recommended as compulsory reading for our Vichy-appeasers in the State Department that they may know what type of man leads the 'so-called Free French.'" Peter Stevens

+ Survey G 31:261 My '42 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p306 Je 20 '42 2250w

BARRETT, THEODORE. Your job and American victory. 249p $2.50 Stewart

371.425 Occupations. Profession, Choice of. World war, 1939—Economic aspects (W) 42-18698

A guide to opportunities for jobs in war work intended not only for young people but also for older men and women. Lists several thousand jobs and analyses hundreds in order to help the reader pick out the right job to help in the emergency and one that will also provide training for later life. Index.

Booklist 39:2 S '42

Books p19 Ag 23 '42 100w

Wis Lib Bul 38:133 O '42

BARRINGTON, MAURICE, pseud. See Brogan, D. W.BARROWS, MARJORIE. Let's fly to Bermuda; il. by Barbara Maynard, and by photographs. [64p] $1.50 Whitman, A.

42-25182

A picture story book about a trip to Bermuda by plane and a vacation spent there by American twins, Toby and Nan, aged eight.

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:118 N 20 '42 10w

"Should be considered as picture book and not as an informational travel book on Bermuda, and it is recommended from that viewpoint." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 68:83 Ja 15 '43 70w

BARRY, JEROME. Leopard cat's cradle. 277p $2 Doubleday

42-24666

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p22 O 18 '42 130w

"The story's patter tends to confusion, but the plot and 'atmosphere' are original." Kay Irvin

N Y Times p18 O 18 '42 120w

"Exhilarating."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 O 31 '42 40w

BARRY, RICHARD HAYES. Mr Rutledge of South Carolina. 430p il $3.75 Duell

B or 92 Rutledge, John. South Carolina—Politics and government 42-50932

A biography of a South Carolina lawyer who became a powerful figure first in local affairs and later throughout the country during Revolutionary days, in the Constitutional convention, and during Washington's presidency. Bibliography. Index.

"'Mr. Rutledge of South Carolina' should be read with a certain caution as to its reliability as history; but there is no gainsaying the fact that it is one of the most entertaining books dealing with its period." G. W. Johnson
+ — Books p11 D 27 '42 900w

"One who played such an important part in the making of the Republic deserves a complete and full biography. Mr. Barry attempts to survey the many phases of his subject's successful life as a lawyer, political strategist and public figure. Although he has searched deeply and widely, he has, unfortunately, failed to produce a biography of the first quality. It is light and in places colorful, but it is hardly substantial and penetrating." N. G. Goodman
— + N Y Times p25 Ja 10 '43 1200w

BARTH, KARL. This Christian cause (a letter to Great Britain from Switzerland) introd. by John A. MacKay [Eng title: Letter to Great Britain from Switzerland]. [62p] 75c Macmillan [1s 6d S.P.C.K.]

940.53152 World war, 1939—Religious aspects. War and religion 42-1828

"Barth, a Swiss living and lecturing in a theoretically neutral Switzerland, is in a doubly difficult position. During the former war he was a pacifist. Today he is ardently and passionately in favor of the war. It is possible that under different circumstances his old arguments for pacifism might hold. In the future he may dust them off and champion them again. But distinctly not now. Today Christians must not adopt the silence of pacifism. They must speak out, and their word must give no uncertain sound, must not be 'No' or 'Yes and no'; the only possible answer is an unqualified 'Yes.' . . . The little volume contains three letters: two to French Protestants, written in December 1939 and October 1940; one to Great Britain, written in April 1941. The same general point of view is to be seen; nonetheless certain quiet changes of emphasis evidence the amount of water that had flowed under the bridge in the interim. All three letters have been published separately. This volume is the American 'edition' of the English A Letter to Great Britain from Switzerland. Dr. Mackay of Princeton has written an appreciative and illuminating introduction to the American edition." Crozer Q

Christian Century 59:84 Ja 21 '42 40w

"This is one of the most amazing documents I have read for a long time—and a book editor sees some honeys! It is a compound: breadth and statesmanlike sanity of view with an impossible and weird theology, which it is no exaggeration to call a but very slightly modernized mediævalism." M. S. Enslin
Crozer Q 19:153 Ap '42 900w

Reviewed by John Knox
J Religion 22:331 Jl '42 50w

Reviewed by O. A. Piper
Survey G 31:331 Jl '42 460w

"The position to which the letters lead, and of course, much of the writing, are familiar enough; but the method of approach, and especially the repudiation of the case which rests upon 'natural law,' will be new to many people, and by its calm assertion of Christian doctrine, its freedom from the exaggeration that too often accompanies such writing, and the genuine appreciation of the just position and claims of the State, this volume should do much to illuminate English thought about the war."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p404 Ag 23 '41 800w

BARTLETT, ROBERT MERRILL. Discovery; a guide book for living. 160p $1.50 Assn. press

170.8 Conduct of life 42-13659

"Mr. Bartlett has specialized in the study of great characters to find what made them great. In this volume he selects, from the writings of more than a hundred men and women, passages (averaging a page or less) deemed to express the gist of their philosophies of life or at least some central idea. These are titled and organized to present an intelligible and coherent set of principles for worthy living." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 58:1545 D 10 '41 70w

"A useful little anthology."

+ Springfield Republican p7e F 8 '42 180w

BARTLETT, WILLIAM IRVING. Jones Very, Emerson's brave saint. 237p il $3 Duke univ. [18s, Cambridge]

B or 92 Very, Jones 42-17715

Biography of the Salem poet and mystic, whom Emerson called the "brave saint." "Mr. Bartlett has given the first study of Very's life and work, has been attentive also to the history of his reputation, and adds the text of sixty poems not previously published and a number of others hitherto printed only in periodicals now generally inaccessible. . . . As to the epithet, 'brave saint,' it is a fair description. Very lived a safe and uneventful life. His bravery consisted in daring to be a saint and a mystic in an age when sainthood had gone out of fashion and mysticism was in evil repute." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 59:934 Jl 29 '42 650w

"It is no indictment of Mr. Bartlett as a biographer to say that to anyone interested in Jones Very his book will be valuable chiefly for the large number of Very's poems it prints for the first time. Except spiritually, Very's life was hardly rich in incident; and the earlier memoirs, such as that of Andrews, conveyed an adequate idea of it. Mr. Bartlett has gone over all the available sources, however, assembled the facts, and presented them conscientiously and competently, and he is to be thanked for doing so. I can think of no quicker or more pleasant way to become acquainted with Very's life and poetry than to read the present study." Charles Weir, Jr.

+ New Eng Q 15:734 D '42 500w

BARTO, MRS EMILY NEWTON. Piper's son; drawings and foreword by Emily Barto. 56p 75c Longmans

42-21895

A contribution to children's literature, consisting of the whole of the old rhyme about the piper's son, an introduction tracing its historical background to the days of Owen Glendower, and drawings in keeping with its origin.

"The book is more important than you might think at first glance. It can be taken as amusement now and used later for information." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 16 '42 250w

"Foreword will be a help to students and no hindrance to a child small enough to enjoy the sheer sound and sight of the verse and pictures." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 67:740 S 1 '42 60w

BARUCH, BERNARD MANNES. American industry in the war; with a foreword by [the author] and an introd. by Hugh S. Johnson; ed. by Richard H. Hippeleuser. 498p $5; to schools $3.75 Prentice-Hall

330.973 U.S. War industries board. European war, 1914-1918—Economic aspects. War—Economic aspects. U.S.—Economic policy

(W) 41-10350

This volume includes "besides a reprint of the report of the War Industries Board of World War I, Mr. Baruch's own program for total mobilization of the nation as presented to the War Policies Commission in 1931, and current material on priorities and price fixing." (Subtitle) Indexes.

BARUCH, B. M.—Continued

"Those on the chemical front who fought even a part of the Battle of Washington in 1917-18, will find this reprint to Mr. Baruch's famous 1921 report of the War Industries Board an interesting reminder of earlier tussles with shortages, priorities and price fixing. For those who are immediately concerned with today's problems, this book should prove a valuable record of experience—a helpful guide to avoid some of the obstacles that still lie in the path of industrial mobilization." S. D. Kirkpatrick
+ Chem & Met Eng 49:159 Mr '42 400w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:380 Ja '42 40w

"This book is an important addition to the literature on war economics. It enables one to obtain an insight into our previous efforts as a belligerent, which becomes more necessary as we draw closer to a similar period. Although evaluation of the book is not difficult, reading it is not always easy." F. J. Van Antwerpen

+ — News Edition 19:1482 D 25 '41 700w

BARUCH, MRS DOROTHY (WALTER). Four airplanes; pictures by Lee Maril. pa $1 Holiday

Colored pictures and very simple, repetitious text describes the flights of four airplanes. For the very young children.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 Mr 29 '42 150w

"Essentially a picture book for very small children to look at and crow over." H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:110 N 21 '41 30w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 18:105 Mr '42 40w

BARUCH, MRS DOROTHY (WALTER). You, your children, and war. 234p $2 Appleton-Century

940.53161 Child study. World war, 1939—Children (W) 42-24563

Attempts to solve some of the problems of civilian morale, particularly in regard to children and young people. Partial contents: What can I do? Shall we speak of fear? Intolerance by any other name; Democracy needed; What of our schools? Boy-girl troubles; What I can do. Index.

Booklist 39:115 D 1 '42

Christian Century 59:1459 N 25 '42 100w

"Should be helpful to many parents, if judgment is used in applying its advice to differing temperaments. Author is professor of education at Whittier College, writer of several books for children and joint author of Personal Problems in Everyday Life." Isabel Douglas
+ Library J 67:907 O 15 '42 110w

"It is not too much to say that her book should have a place in every American family. But her manner of dealing with her subject is the reverse of academic. She is writing largely about children, and real and lively children they are. Incidentally, the book's photographs of children are lively, too. . . . A detailed, noble-spirited code for parents during war ends a fine book."

+ N Y Times p33 D 13 '42 380w

BASCH, ANTONIN. The new economic warfare [introd. by Horace Taylor]. 190p $1.75 Columbia univ. press

330.19355 War—Economic aspects. World war, 1939—Economic aspects 41-18422

"The present publication contains in extended and completed form a series of lectures delivered at Columbia University during the Summer Session of 1941. The main purpose of the series was to examine and illustrate the economic impact of a great modern total war, to outline the special preparation which such war involves, and to follow the transformation which the belligerent nations are compelled to adopt and which spreads to affect the entire world economy." (Foreword) Index.

Reviewed by Horst Mendershausen
Am Econ R 32:390 Je '42 1750w

Reviewed by M. S. Gordon
Ann Am Acad 220:205 Mr '42 500w

"Dr. Basch is at his best in the descriptive and historical sections of his book, particularly Chapters III and IV, which discuss the war economies of Germany and Great Britain and the recent evolution of economic warfare. Less successful, in the reviewer's judgment, is his attempt in the last chapter to clarify the problems of the next peace conference. He tells us clearly enough what will happen if the Axis wins, but in regard to the future of a world economy under democratic leadership, wishful thinking colors the picture." C. O. Hardy

+ — Books p16 Mr 8 '42 900w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:570 Ap '42 40w

"As an émigré, it is natural that Dr. Basch should center his attention on the European scene. Although writing in July, 1941, he has little to say about the defense program in the United States. Our experience with export control and the freezing of foreign funds is not mentioned. Given this limitation, he has succeeded admirably in dealing with the fundamentals of his extensive subject matter in a book of less than two hundred pages. He does not dodge important questions but handles them seriously and objectively." P. W. Bidwell
+ J Pol Econ 50:465 Je '42 550w

Reviewed by M. A. Gray
Library J 66:901 O 15 '41 100w

"The experience of Europe, especially of Germany and Great Britain, in preparing for war is described in a manner which permits the reader to draw clear-cut conclusions about the vast efforts that are still called for from the United States. Dr. Basch does not provide any soothing words for those addicted to the business-as-usual mentality. He explodes the fallacies on which this mentality is based just as ruthlessly as he lays bare the hollowness of various assertions about the imminent collapse of Germany through economic or financial causes." Thomas Reveille

+ Nation 154:72 Ja 17 '42 200w

"Based on a series of lectures which the author—a distinguished Czechoslovakian economist now in this country—delivered at Columbia University in 1941. While economics of modern war has until very recently been a neglected field, several textbooks on it have appeared since Pearl Harbor. Dr. Basch's book does not belong to the same category, and is both more thoughtful and more readable than most of these publications." A. T. Lauterbach

+ Pol Sci Q 57:466 S '42 450w

"This book by a distinguished Czechoslovakian economist gives a concise, readable summary of different aspects of economic warfare, as they appeared shortly after Germany attacked Russia in June, 1941."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p483 O 3 '42 450w

BASSETT, SARA WARE. Sea magic. 279p $2 Doubleday

(W) 42-15000

A quiet Cape Cod love story. A retired college professor living in the home of his spinster cousin, a collection of sea shells, and a charming young woman who comes to help with the professor's book, are the main ingredients of the story.

Booklist 39:103 N 15 '42

"The Cape Cod stories of this author are for readers who relish gossipy, neighborly, unhurried fiction. Her romances are as wholesome as the church suppers she loves to describe. . . . It's very restful." Lisle Bell

+ Books p13 Je 21 '42 80w

"Perhaps some of Miss Bassett's careful readers will be able to guess how she sorts the lot of lovers out, but she had one reader who was completely baffled." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p23 Je 28 '42 180w

BASSO, HAMILTON. Sun in Capricorn. 266p $2.50 Scribner

42-20992

"This is the story of how a power-mad politician undertook to wreck the lives of two young lovers because doing so would help smear an opponent who stood in the way of his ambition to be President. The scene is Louisiana, the time is the nineteen-twenties, and the protagonist [Gilgo Slade] is modeled upon Huey Long." Sat R of Lit

"Mr. Hamilton Basso, always entertaining, has never been more entertaining than in this novel about Gilgo Slade, political dictator of Louisiana. . . . Whether as a novel of power politics or as a love story, Sun in Capricorn is a highly satisfying performance." John Cournos

+ Atlantic 170:136 O '42 150w

"It is precisely because of the superiority of the novel that one complains of its failure to realize its full potentialities. It will stand as one of the most pertinent as well as most entertaining and appealing stories of the season." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p6 S 13 '42 650w

Reviewed by J. W. Riley
Boston Globe p21 O 14 '42 400w

"A certain rather capable man who had his good points as well as his bad has been written about, but Mr. Basso has dealt sparingly with the deceased in the matter of good points. Studying these would have called for more characters and more delicate etching. However, the book is compact, the story simple, the characters direct and, as the English 'majors' put it, nicely 'delineated.'" George Streator Commonwealth 36:570 O 2 '42 550w

Reviewed by H. A. Carpenter
Library J 67:682 Ag '42 70w

"The memory of Huey Long lingers on in an oddly dated little novel about violent politics in Louisiana. If it can happen again, and Mr. Basso must think it can or he wouldn't be writing a book about it, this isn't the novel to warn, terrify, or arm you for the future." Nation 155:278 S 26 '42 120w

"Mr. Basso's depiction of the South is singularly lucid, and free of miasma, mephitic atmosphere and fever-blister, for which the reader may be grateful. The most satisfying aspect of 'Sun in Capricorn' is the marriage of theme and story. The fictional problems are solved as if by nature: a good story, like a sound body, carries its correctives within itself. One might only ask of this, as of almost all fiction today, that it allow itself greater freedom in depicting the human animal." Isaac Rosenfeld

+ New Repub 107:520 O 19 '42 340w

"There is not much rhetoric in 'Sun in Capricorn.' It is a swift little narrative, stripped to its essential elements, written with a kind of casual hardness and accuracy more effective than any amount of heroics. The reader is left to draw his own moral. This, since the formula for dictators is invariable, is something he cannot well avoid doing. Mr. Basso's story is amusing to read, but it presents a case history not at all amusing to think about." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 S 13 '42 750w

"Mr. Basso, whose work improves quietly and regularly, supplies his best novel to date with this acid portrait of a potential dictator, American variety."

+ New Yorker 18:79 S 26 '42 60w

"Mr. Basso can write forcefully—the sights, noises, and odors of New Orleans and the Louisiana countryside are there all the time.

The scene where Slade receives his admirers in his hotel suite, and the political rally that climaxes the narrative, are both excellent. It's not all as good as this. When the young man meets the girl and falls in love with her, Mr. Basso seems to get embarrassed about the whole business." Gwen Bristow

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 S 19 '42 950w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 32:viii winter '43 160w

BATCHELDER, ANN. Ann Batchelder's own cook book. 232p il $2.50 Barrows

641.5 Cookery

41-27661

An unorthodox cook book based on the author's contributions to the Ladies Home Journal. It is composed of short essays, some poems, material on holiday entertaining, and receipts for appetizers, beverages, breads, cakes, egg and fish dishes, pastries, etc. Illustrated. Index.

"I daresay readers of the 'Ladies Home Journal,' where for many years Miss Batchelder's writings have appeared, are prepared for the folksy reminiscence, determinedly bright aphorisms, patriotic essays on homespun topics and sprightly recipes which make up 'Ann Batchelder's Own Cook Book.' For others this volume may be something of a shock but it undoubtedly will be treasured by all who care more about sentiment than flavor in their cooking." Sheila Hibben

Books p11 D 28 '41 70w

"It's just the kind of cookbook you'd expect Ann Batchelder to write—unorthodox and chatty and gastronomically sound."

+ J Home Econ 34:320 My '42 40w
Pratt p15 O '42

BATE, DON. Wang Ching Wei: puppet or patriot. 187p $1.50 Seymour

B or 92 Wang, Chao-ming

41-11308

"[An] account by an American newspaperman of the life of the man who has been placed by the Japanese army at the head of the puppet government of conquered Nanking." Christian Century

Christian Century 58:1380 N 5 '41 150w

"Don Bate, who is described on the jacket as an American newspaperman familiar with China, has put together a book which adds nothing to our understanding of Wang Ching-wei. . . . Those who are familiar with T'ang Leang-li's work will recognize it as a valuable discussion of the Chinese Revolution despite the author's interest in glorifying the career of Wang Ching-wei. Mr. Bate's method of summarizing T'ang through paraphrasing and copying of occasional paragraphs destroys everything of value in the detailed and coherent original. . . . His point of view is pro-Japanese throughout, although he carefully avoids clear-cut statements about Japan and occasionally seeks to appear impartial by remarking that 'history, not contemporary observers, will be the final judge' of Wang Ching-wei. All in all, this is a book whose only significance for those interested in the Far East is that it should have found an American publisher." L. K. Rosinger

— Pacific Affairs 15:116 Mr '42 850w

BATES, RALPH. The undiscoverables; and other stories. 304p $2.50 Random house

(W) 42-9573

Three long short stories. One is placed in Sicily just before Italy declared war; the second is a story of Mexican peasants; the third is a mystery story.

"There are real literary gifts in Mr. Bates, not fully realized, however, because he refuses to recognize that the function of a storyteller is to tell a story and not beat about the bush." John Cournos

+ Atlantic My '42 150w

Booklist 38:368 Je 1 '42

"Harsh in color, close woven and tough as horsehair cloth, these three stories by Mr. Bates have nothing in common with those volumes of short stories which garner up, from time to time, the minor writings of successful novelists. Had the term not fallen into ill repute, they ought more properly to be described as first-rate novelettes. Each one has range, a multiplicity of characters and a mounting succession of events." Iris Barry

BATES, RALPH—Continued

+ Books p2 Mr 22 '42 1050w

"Only the title story has much of what made 'Lean Men' exciting and 'The Olive Field' impressive; and even there one finds—as one does far more in the other stories—an unevenness, a lack of sustained power, or even a certain ebb and flow of interest. All through the book there is this ebb and flow; one is by turns impressed and irritated, brought close to reality and thrown back into a world of words. There is no want of talent, but there is a decided want of achievement." Louis Kronenberger

+ Nation 154:434 Ap 11 '42 650w

Reviewed by Kay Boyle

New Repub 106:513 Ap 13 '42 900w

"I have liked all Bates's books; expect to like future ones; do not like this one... To this reviewer the Bates style has become twisted and labored here; the writing tedious; the symbolism, always a striking element in the Bates story telling, a mistily meaningless; the mood and temper artificial, not in intention but in effect; the upshot a sense of profound dissatisfaction on the part of the readers... There are the fine touches throughout that only a superior story writer could give us, the sensitively rendered incidents and details characteristic of this author who, as a foreigner, has lived long and experienced deeply in Latin countries. Ralph Bates's powers of reducing observation to language rich in suggestion remain. But the stories seem neither to hold together nor stand up under the weight of this heavily larded style with its turbid symbolism." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 22 '42 1000w

"Mr. Bates is a very fine writer with a good eye and ear; he knows his subjects, his locales, his people. All three tales are good; the first, which shows the passionate, rebellious Italian peasant concealed behind the pompous and cruel stupidities of Fascismo, is altogether distinguished."

+ New Yorker 18:70 Mr 21 '42 80w

BATTENHOUSE, HENRY MARTIN. This seed of faith. 192p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

230 Christianity 42-18085

"The author, a Methodist minister who is professor of English at Albion College, defines the scope of his book as a study of 'our Christian faith in its fourfold aspect: first, as religious experience; second, as gospel legacy; third, as Christian theology; and fourth, as revelation in history.' It is a thoughtful and persuasive presentation of the nature and the essentials of faith." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:911 Jl 22 '42 70w

"The treatment is frequently not so systematic and sustained as one might wish. Instead, it tends toward the impressionistic and homiletical. This weakness is recognized by Professor Battenhouse himself, for he writes in the Foreword: 'I have not tried to write a theological treatise. The chapters are too informal for that, the courses of discussion too unpremeditated, the analyses too unexact-ing.' As a result of this weakness the mature Christian will find the book altogether too flighty and unsatisfying. Many will long for stronger meat... Not profound, nor too systematic, and certainly not too exhaustive, this impressionistic presentation of the Christian faith may yet be found valuable for lay reading and for use in a class in religion." G. W. Davis

+ Crozer Q 20:71 Ja '43 600w

BATTENHOUSE, ROY WESLEY. Marlowe's Tamburlaine; a study in renaissance moral philosophy. 266p $2.50 Vanderbilt univ. press, Kirkland hall, Nashville, Tenn.

822 Marlowe, Christopher. Renaissance. Religion in literature 42-8933

Study and reinterpretation of Tamburlaine, usually accounted the earliest great tragedy in English. The fact that the hero is a fourteenth century dictator makes the study of present-day interest. It provides a discussion "of 'Elizabethan religion and atheism' with special chapters on the religious views of Raleigh and Chapman, theories of fortune, fate and providence, the theory of punishment, and the moral uses of poetry. Further ramifications of the theme lead to the extrahistorical morality elements in Marlowe's work, and the influences of Spenser, Seneca and Machiavelli." (Christian Century) Index.

"Unusually good doctoral thesis. . . An error which Professor Battenhouse does not sufficiently guard against is the assumption that Elizabethan thought in general is to be identified with Elizabethan Protestant thought in particular. We need to remember that Ben Jonson, Robert Southwell (to mention only two) were Elizabethan Catholics whose valuable contributions to Elizabethan thought were of a tone and color wholly different from the Protestant pattern. . . But Professor Battenhouse has failed to grasp the distinction between Marlowe's morals and his politics and that is why he fails to convince us that Tamburlaine is a drama of fearful warning, like Lydgate's Fall of Princes. The value of Dr. Battenhouse's study is independent of his particular thesis regarding Tamburlaine." E. G. C.

+ Cath World 155:505 Jl '42 850w

"It would be unfortunate if this book should attract the attention only of students who have a burning interest in Marlowe. . . Without too much stretching of the imagination, Marlowe's 'Tamburlaine' might be considered an editorial on the battle of the Atlantic and the fall of Singapore. The fourteenth century Asiatic 'scourge of God' is a parable, and a warning, for world conquerors; and Marlowe's representation of him and Battenhouse's interpretation of Marlowe constitute a substantial study in moral and political philosophy. The author, well trained in theology, but with a Ph.D. in English and now teaching church history at Vanderbilt, has exceptional scholarly qualifications for his project. And besides, he can write."

+ Christian Century 59:250 F 25 '42 330w

"The stimulating book will interest both students of philosophy and of literature, and opens up the prospect for fruitful further investigation." P. O. K.

+ J Philos 39:556 S 24 '42 550w

BAUM, VICKI. Marion alive. 586p $2.75 Doubleday

(W) 42-36020

"Through the recollections of a woman as she ascends a difficult mountain peak in Switzerland, Miss Baum presents a bird's-eye view of our times, from 1900 to 1940. Vienna in the early nineteen-hundreds (when life was so charming for those who could afford it), the first World War, the years of revolution and inflation in Germany, the United States during prohibition and depression, the rise of Hitler, and the inevitable conflict." New Yorker

Booklist 38:209 F 15 '42

"Vicki Baum's style has an exuberance suited to her heroine's generous acceptance of life. It is as showy and robust as the narrative it embellishes." Frank Streight

Books p13 Ja 25 '42 320w

"The writing is skillful and smooth. Timely rather than distinguished. Libraries with not too limited a fiction list will buy and readers will wear it out." Catherine Van Dyne

+ Library J 66:793 S 15 '41 80w

"Marion Alive is as much a Vicki Baum story as any of her numerous novels. One might open it in the middle and grow fascinated at once without even knowing the beginning. And one might read it with equal interest from beginning to end. Vicki Baum is one of the few novelists who can write with one eye on the market and still turn out a solid, intelligent book. None of her works can be called outstanding from a literary point of view but all of them are exceptionally entertaining." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 25 '42 800w

"Full of human and touching incidents, sentimental but often thoroughly interesting."
+ New Yorker 17:66 Ja 24 '42 80w

Reviewed by Phil Stong
Sat R of Lit 25:14 F 14 '42 400w

"Extremely good entertainment. The subtle interweaving of glamor and realism, adventure and psychological insight which always marks her work has once more achieved its purpose—sustained reader interest." E. H. C.
+ Spring'd Republican p7e F 1 '42 400w
Time 39:94 Mr 16 '42 750w

BAUMER, WILLIAM HENRY. West Point, moulder of men. 264p il $3 Appleton-Century
355.07 U.S. Military academy, West Point (W) 42-16060

A comprehensive volume on West Point dealing briefly with its past history and extensively with its present, including qualifications for entrance, the life of plebes and upper classmen, courses of instruction, physical training and sports, etc. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:435 Jl 15 '42

Reviewed by Emmet Crozier
Books p25 O 4 '42 330w

"This is an interesting book. The thoroughness with which the author has compiled so much information makes it a very useful book."
W. C. Rivers

+ N Y Times p13 Jl 26 '42 750w
Wis Lib Bul 38:115 Jl '42

BAUR, BETTY. The White Queen. 491p $2.50
Viking

42-20809

An American girl educated at Cambridge, married to the conventional son of a wealthy English country family, discovers that she loves a young radical, friend of her Cambridge days. The three attempt to find a civilized way out of their difficulty. The time is 1937.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Drew
Atlantic 170:142 O '42 150w

"While Miss Baur has unmistakable talents as a writer, her book lacks intense excitement and spark and is overlong for its slim story."
Rose Feld

+ — Books p6 Ag 30 '42 800w

"Excellent picture of English country life just before present war. Recommended, if demand for English stories exists." E. F. Kelly

+ Library J 67:682 Ag '42 70w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 155:243 S 19 '42 300w

"When attraction between a man and a woman is the subject, Miss Baur scores either a bullseye or, at least, a target shot every time. It is quite evidently her strong suit. . . Socialistically the book has, so far as prose can have it, the uplifting, on-sweeping force of fine revolutionary verse." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 30 '42 750w

"This not unusual fictional setup is given vitality by the author's extremely sensitive characterization and her talent for descriptive detail, combined with a happy sense of timing. The heroine's sophomoric social consciousness and the author's itch to play with a rather forced social symbolism somewhat let the novel down, but there is no doubt that Miss Baur's writing has pace and skill and imagination."

+ — New Yorker 18:58 Ag 29 '42 130w

"Miss Baur's first novel is satisfying on a number of counts. Chief among them is her easy competence with everything she handles, and there are several themes handled here simultaneously, any one of which could provide serious difficulties. . . It may perhaps seem too neatly symbolic, but Miss Baur brushes this aside with her talent for characterization, for, quite apart from her preoccupation with world politics, she has a keen flair for individual analysis, so that every person in the story stands cleanly portrayed." N. L. R.

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 S 12 '42 250w

BAUS, HERBERT MICHAEL. Publicity; how to plan, produce and place it. 252p $3
Harper

301.154 Publicity

42-12058

"The book is designed to be of practical help to three classes of persons. The first class are those who practice publicity. . . The second class includes the large number of people who need publicity for their organization or cause and who should know something about it in order to be able more adequately to supervise the operation. This includes executives in all walks of life; general managers, army and navy officers, promoters, government officials, labor leaders, educational officials, club and organization leaders, and all others charged with the conduct of any organization. . . The third class are those members of the general public whose intelligence is whetted by an appetite to know what is going on in the world, and how and why." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 38:361 Je 1 '42

Management R 31:439 D '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:116 Jl '42

BAX, CLIFFORD, ed. Florence Farr, Bernard Shaw, W. B. Yeats; letters. 96p $2 Dodd
[18s Cuala]

B or 92 Farr, Florence (Mrs Edward Emery). Shaw, George Bernard. Yeats, William Butler 42-5636

A collection of letters written to the English actress, Florence Farr (Mrs Emery) by two famous English writers. The letters from Shaw deal in more or less flippant mood with personalities and the art of acting; they are dated from 1891 to 1909. Yeats' letters deal largely with occultism in which both were interested; fewer in number than the Shaw letters they are not so personal in tone. Miss Farr left England in 1912 for Ceylon where she died in 1917.

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 12 '42
750w

"In these letters Shaw shows, in addition to his affection, his charm, his capacity for adding to the general excitement of life for those around him. The letters are, in fact, Shaw at his best. Yeats's letters belong to a different world, mystical and magical, mediæval, beautiful, and occasionally incomprehensible. The presence of Shaw and Yeats side by side in the same volume helps to emphasise their contrast."

B. I. Evans

+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 3 '42 230w

"Shaw is arrogant and overbearing in manner, and he calls the tune throughout, but he is all the time intensely aware of the personality of his correspondent. He criticises her acting, calls her bluffs, exposes her weaknesses; he plays clown, pedagogue, genius and lover by turns; and yet, for all the seeming parade of himself his attention is concentrated on Florence Farr—so much so that a most vivid portrait of her emerges from these letters. On the other hand, Yeats' . . . letters to her are almost worthless except as a foil for the brilliance and magnanimity of Shaw."

New Statesman & Nation 23:47 Ja 17 '42 150w

N Y Times p9 Mr 1 '42 500w

Spec 168:312 Mr 27 '42 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p118 Mr 7 '42 1100w

BAYLES, ERNEST EDWARD, and BURNETT, RAYMOND WILL. Biology for better living; scientific drawings by Tex R. Miller; other drawings by Edmund Monroe. 754p $2.28 Silver

574 Biology

(W) 42-8394

Textbook for secondary schools "designed to promote scientific studies of the biological problems and the problems related to biology that confront all of us." Contents: Living things and how we learn about them; Problems of good land use; How are living things adapted for the lives they lead? How the body uses food and removes wastes; Plant and animal behavior; Personal and social health; The development and improvement of living things; The maintenance of kind; Conservation of our biologic wealth. Glossary. Index.

BAYLES, E. E.—Continued

"The book is clearly and simply written, well illustrated, and attractive in format." C. E. Turner

+ Am J Pub Health 32:882 Ag '42 120w

School & Society 55:455 Ap 18 '42 60w

"In both social emphasis and scientific content, this book is strictly up to date. Evidently great care has been taken to include the latest views on problems rather than those that have been handed down through generations of textbooks." J. C. Mayfield

+ School R 50:541 S '42 1250w

BAYNE, SPENCER, pseud. Agent extraordinary. 271p $2.50 Dutton

(W) 42-16142

A spy story with a Syrian background. An American archeologist impersonates a British agent who has disappeared, somewhere in Syria, in order to find his records and aid in the foiling of a German plot to conquer the country by infiltration. Part of the action takes place in the ancient desert city of Baalbek.

Booklist 38:443 Jl 15 '42

"Here's an author who seems to have found himself, as the saying goes. . . 'Agent Extraordinary' is crammed with local color, from the Convent of the Whirling Dervishes and the Mountain of Mohammed to a soft drink called gazoz and characters spouting picturesque talk. . . Mr. Bayne should thrive among spy authors. He speaks eleven languages, has a Ph.D. in psychology, and is consultant to 'one of the largest police departments in the world.'" Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 Jl 5 '42 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '42

"This book evidences in plot, characterization and descriptive power the professional touch. . . Although there are occasional serious interludes the book is primarily light entertainment of a sophisticated sort, with many playful intricacies and conceits." Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 5 '42 500w

"Fine spy story, deftly written."
+ New Yorker 18:56 Jl 4 '42 60w

BEARD, CHARLES AUSTIN, and BEARD, MRS MARY (RITTER). American spirit; a study of the idea of civilization in the United States. (Rise of American civilization) 696p $5 Macmillan

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. Civilization—Philosophy (W) 42-50003

"In the previous volumes of this series [the authors] dealt mainly, though by no means exclusively, with the outward aspects of civilization in the United States; with expressions in government, politics, economy, institutions, letters, arts, and sciences. In this volume, they emphasize the interior aspects of civilization in the United States since 1776. This volume represents an effort to grasp, through an examination of the written and spoken word, the intellectual and moral qualities that Americans have deemed necessary to civilization in the United States." (Pref) For volume three of the series see Book Review Digest, 1939. Bibliography. Index.

"This is inspiring writing. The reader will find many glowing passages and asseverations in a book that gets close to the core of the unique American spirit." L. M. Hacker

+ Books p1 Ja 3 '43 1800w

Reviewed by George Streator
Commonweal 37:330 Ja 15 '43 650w

Reviewed by D. F. Lucas
Library J 67:949 N 1 '42 110w

"Here is a study of American attitudes toward civilization almost seven hundred pages long which does not mention Thoreau or Melville, which gives only the slightest passing reference to William and Henry James, which says nothing of Hamlin Garland, which treats of Howells only as the author of 'A Traveler from Altruria,' which gives to Walt Whitman a scant three pages, which neglects altogether Theodore Dreiser and Sinclair Lewis and many others. It is not surprising that a study so designed should be unable to convey any feeling for the torment and confusion of American intellectual life or for the richness of its achievement. Surely the American spirit was more spirited than this." Richard Hofstadter

New Repub 108:27 Ja 4 '43 1500w

"A careful, scholarly, rather dull study of the origin and history of the concept of civilization and particularly of its development in our own country."

New Yorker 18:99 N 28 '42 70w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey G 32:25 Ja '43 1100w

Time 40:122 D 14 '42 1000w

BEATTIE, EDWARD W. jr. Freely to pass. 372p $3 Crowell

940.5481 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. World politics

42-36376

Records the impressions of an American journalist who from September 3, 1937, to January 7, 1941, kept just about one jump ahead of wars on both sides of the world, and sometimes found himself in the thick of things. "He watched the Sino-Japanese War while the International Settlement at Shanghai still provided a grand-stand seat. He was at Munich; six months later he saw the Czechs sing their national anthem into the teeth of the Nazi legions rolling through the streets of Prague. In Warsaw, when the first bombs of World War II began to fall, he fled with the American military attaché after the Polish Government had stolen away by night. He saw the mysterious whisperings in the Balkan capitals during the Sitzkrieg; then went to Helsinki. . . As a war correspondent accredited to the British Expeditionary Force he saw the French Army crumbling into ruin in June, 1940." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 39:118 D 1 '42

"His book is clear, informal, easy to read, and full of color and incident and much tragedy and some comedy. It is free of mawkishness, which makes it all the more moving, and it is scrupulously honest. Beattie never pretends to have seen everything and known everything either before, during or after it happened. This quality in 'Freely to Pass' heightens the tensions which draw tighter and tighter in every chapter. Most notably is this true of the opening chapter on the Far East. . . 'Freely to Pass' is above all the story of humanity uprooted, both physically and morally—but slowly putting new roots down into new earth. No better reporter's account of this greatest tragedy of modern times has yet appeared." W. R. Deuel

+ Books p7 O 25 '42 1800w

"Edward W. Beattie, Jr. brought to his work a rare combination of warm human feeling and a rigid honesty which shielded him from the two great pitfalls of the personal history writer—emotionalism and preoccupation with self." J. C. Harsch

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 N 13 '42 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '42

"It is true that it tells little that has not been told before, but it tells very well a story that will doubtless be retold a thousand times. Because he is a good reporter, with plenty of common sense leavened with a sense of humor, Mr. Beattie has written a highly readable account of the tragic things he saw in his pursuit of news." F. S. Adams

+ N Y Times p5 N 1 '42 900w

"In the very first sentence of his book Mr. Beattie writes that this is not a 'think piece.' Since he is best when describing action, it is probably to the good that he seldom strays from straight reporting. Yet, it may be a pity that this book is not more interpretative. The picture of recent events has become well fixed in the readers' minds and they like to have their authors suggest ideologies." Emil Lengyel

Sat R of Lit 25:24 D 5 '42 500w

BEATTY, RICHMOND CROOM. James Russell Lowell. 316p il $3 Vanderbilt univ. press

B or 92 Lowell, James Russell 42-18033

"No extended appraisal of Lowell has been attempted for nearly forty years, and nearly all the available studies of the man and his work have been written from inside the New England, or even the Harvard yard, tradition. . . Mr. Beatty, a professor of English at Vanderbilt University, has already written a model biography of Bayard Taylor, besides books on William Byrd of Westover and Lord Macaulay. . . [He here] traces very clearly and sympathetically the progress of Lowell's career from the time when he was a somewhat bumptious Harvard undergraduate until as an old man he dwindled into a charming raconteur in his Elmwood study and became a Cambridge legend." Books

"Mr. Beatty is a writer whose crisp judgments are set forth with finished charm of expression and whose scholarship is pervasive, but never obvious. As a Southerner, one of a group not as yet conspicuously grateful to the North for its help in removing the curse of slavery from the land, Mr. Beatty has undertaken a very difficult exercise in restraint and critical fairness in viewing the career of a New England reformer and abolitionist. His tact, I should say, has been almost equal to the occasion. Almost, but not quite." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p18 Ag 16 '42 750w

"Without debunking Lowell he shows him up and yet leaves him worth reading and worth reading about. If his culture was derivative it was real, and as for the core of the man, he himself asked: 'If I am not an American, who ever was?' To read about him in these pages is a pleasure."

+ Nation 155:521 N 14 '42 150w

"Dr. Beatty's is not quite the brilliant revaluation Lowell needs at this moment; but it is a sound job and a fresh one."

+ New Repub 107:293 S 7 '42 120w

BEATY, JOHN YOCUM. River book. 256p il 90c Beckley-Cardy

551.48 Rivers—Juvenile literature 42-14409

"It was on the Fox River in Illinois that the two boys made their journey of exploration with their uncle, but the things they learn about a river and its course, its plant and animal life, and the activities which go on along its banks are, as the uncle points out, common to all rivers. Good supplementary geography material." Wis Lib Bul

School & Society 50:624 My 30 '42 10w
Wis Lib Bul 38:166 N '42

BECHDOLT, JOHN ERNEST. Junior air raid wardens; il. by Richard Floethe. 175p $1.75 Lippincott

42-22146

Story of two young boys, sixteen and seventeen years old, who became junior air raid wardens and were instrumental in circumventing the work of a Fifth Columnist while at the same time they saw justice finally done to their good friend Tony.

Booklist 39:123 D 1 '42

"Useful little story for bringing seriousness of war home to young people and showing how they too can be helpful. . . Recommended for boys and girls ten to fourteen." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:954 N 1 '42 100w

School & Society 56:335 O 10 '42 40w

BECKER, CARL LOTUS. New liberties for old. 181p $2 Yale univ. press [12s Oxford]

320.4 Democracy. War 41-21585

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Reviewed by E. E. Robinson

Am Hist R 47:566 Ap '42 350w

"The author combines the historian's mastery of fact with the insight of the philosopher and the skill of the literary artist in the elucidation of his problem." J. M. Mecklin

+ Am J Soc 47:790 Mr '42 260w

"Like all collections of this kind, the book lacks a certain fundamental continuity and integration necessary to a systematic study of social and political philosophy, and the viewpoint of the writer as to the operation of democracy, particularly in America, will not win a friendly popular reception at a time when the American people are dedicating themselves to the preservation of the very ideals to which the author claims they yield only lip-service." E. A. Weber

Am Pol Sci R 36:596 Je '42 410w

"These essays, compact and incisive, themselves triumphs of rationality, are dedicated to the survival of the rule of law and to the universal triumph of reason over animal instinct." Edgar Kemler

+ Ann Am Acad 220:214 Mr '42 400w

"Becker's books are always events, because they set the reader to philosophizing on his own account. The delicate balancing of all accounts in these collected essays has indeed recalled to my mind a definition born of another occasion but remarked here to balance for Becker the elements of malevolence and benevolence in liberalism itself, to balance them upon the field of action: The Liberal is a man who in wartime can kick, or even kill, another man without despising him but who in peacetime can despise another man without kicking or even wishing to kick him." T. V. S.

+ Ethics 52:248 Ja '42 480w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:772 Jl '42 20w

"This volume of occasional papers on democracy conceals a massive scholarship behind a mind that combines profundity and charm with equal grace." H. J. Laski

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:244 Ap 11 '42 330w

BECKER, CHARLOTTE. Happy birthday, Judy! [il. by the author]. 75c Scribner

42-4721

Colored picture book for three to four year olds, describing Judy's fourth birthday, her presents, and the little friends who came to her tea party.

"Some of the most difficult book shopping is for four-year-olds; many books meant for that age must wait at least a year before they are useful. This need not wait; it is simple, brightly colored, with a few words so familiar the child soon gets them by heart, and a cumulation of objects that small folks love." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Mr 15 '42 150w

"A cheery picture-story-book for little people." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 27 '42 90w

"Perfect book for all pre-school collections; will appeal to children of three and four." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 67:268 Mr 15 '42 60w

BECKER, CHARLOTTE. Merry Christmas, Judy! [il. by the author] [32p] 75c Scribner

42-23974

"Judy's Christmas morning, with discovery of the fat red stocking and big Christmas tree, is told in simple story, accompanied by brightly colored pictures." Library J

BECKER, CHARLOTTE—Continued

"Brightly colored pictures on every page, and just enough reading, tell the story of Judy's Christmas morning happiness and surprises."

F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 D 14 '42 90w

Reviewed by R. W. Stewart

Library J 67:1068 D 1 '42 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 15 '42 60w

Wis Lib Bul 38:188 D '42

BECKER, WILLIAM J. Metalworking made easy. 135p il $1.63 Bruce pub.

671 Metal work

(W) 42-13745

"The projects in this book are primarily intended for the introductory metal shop. . . They have been written so that any boy of a satisfactory junior high school level should have no difficulty in following them. . . The jobs are divided into three main divisions—art metal, sheet metal, and ornamental iron—and are arranged in the order of difficulty." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 38:435 JI 15 '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:117 JI '42

BEDWELL, HARRY. The boomer; a story of the rails. 318p $2 Farrar

(W) 42-23951

Series of episodes in the life of a telegraph operator, a migratory railroad worker, named Eddie Sand, whose work took him into many adventures, and out again safely.

Reviewed by George Conrad

Books p10 JI 26 '42 350w

"[The] author conveys the 'feel' of the life, its fascination and its exciting emergencies. Not unusual, but written with understanding. Type of writing that might have appeared as short stories in a railroad magazine. Few books on this theme, so may be welcomed, especially in young people's departments." H. R. Burdett

+ Library J 67:629 JI '42 60w

"A pleasant, readable story, dealing knowledgeably with a world one knows little about, and not without thrill and adventure." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p4 JI 19 '42 650w

BEEBE, CATHERINE (MRS ROBB BEEBE). Bob's bike; pictures [by] Robb Beebe. 48p $1 Oxford

42-7637

Story of a small city boy whose greatest pleasure in life was riding his bicycle. When the family went to the country for the summer Bob was sad at leaving his bike, but he found just as exciting things to do in the country. For ages four to six.

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 27 '42 70w

"Slight story and not quite so well integrated as the author's Happily Ever Afterward and Just Around the Corner. However, the experiences related are familiar and children four to six will enjoy them, while an eight-year-old will take pleasure in doing the reading." E. G. Mullan

Library J 67:268 Mr 15 '42 60w

Wis Lib Bul 38:139 O '42

BEEBE, ELSWYTH THANE (RICKER) (MRS WILLIAM BEEBE) (ELSWYTH THANE, pseud). From this day forward. 364p $2.50 Duell

(W) 41-17618

The love story of a famous American ornithologist and the beautiful girl, from the wrong side of the railroad tracks, who had attained fame thru her dancing.

Booklist 38:309 Ap 15 '42

Bookmark 3:17 My '42

Reviewed by George Conrad

Books p10 Mr 29 '42 350w

"The novel is evidently intended as pleasant diversion for readers weary of war news. (The war is mentioned once, in connection with a radio broadcast.) It's a fairly lengthy bit of diversion, cluttered in the beginning with a lot of detail that might have been dispensed with. But its Mexican episodes offer plenty of excitement—fairly violent and melodramatic lotus-eating." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 JI 12 '42 450w

"Happily for the reader, it is the old hokum freshly put together, witty as well as smart; tender as well as sentimental, clever as well as glib. A streamlined job, in fact, recommended for early-spring blues."

+ New Yorker 18:78 Mr 28 '42 90w

BEEBE, LUCIUS MORRIS. Trains in transition. 210p il $5 Appleton-Century

385 Railroads—Trains

(W) 41-25873

Photographs of some 176 American trains, with some descriptive material, providing a survey of modern railroading in the United States.

Booklist 38:172 Ja 15 '42

"What Mr. Beebe has written in this volume—a rather rambling account of what the railways have done and are doing to meet the problems, competitive and otherwise, of these unstatic days—is, I suppose, adequate to its purpose of explaining things to the commoner, though it is upon occasion lit by fitful gleams of a prose style which must certainly be called at least majestic. Camera in hand, however, Mr. Beebe is a man transfigured, and the photographs he has selected from his own handiwork and that of other equally far-ranging aficionados comprise the best of the three collections he has so far published." R. E. M. Whitaker

+ Books p6 D 7 '41 700w

BEEBE, WILLIAM. Book of bays. 302p il $3.50 Harcourt

574.926 Zoology—Pacific coast. Zaca (yacht). Marine fauna. New York zoological society. Department of tropical research. 38th expedition (W) 42-36064

Popular account of the observations and adventures of a scientific expedition led by the author along the Pacific coast from Mexico to Colombia. "[The] chief object was to study as thoroughly as possible the fish, crabs and mollusks, from tide pools down to five hundred fathoms, with more emphasis placed on ecological relationships, colours and habits than collecting. Constantly in mind . . . was the accumulation of field data of use in evaluating the relationship of corresponding Atlantic and Pacific forms." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 38:247 Mr 15 '42

Bookmark 3:6 Mr '42

"The layman sometimes wonders if 'excuse' wouldn't be a more accurate term than 'real purpose,' and I have a suspicion that though Mr. Beebe would be properly indignant at the suggestion he would be just a little less indignant than some others would be under the same circumstances. To have seven new fishes is fine; but there were already an awful lot of them known—about 15,000, according to the nearest handbook—and there are not nearly that many travel books as interesting, as intelligent and as well written as the present. Maybe the 'real purpose' of the exhibition was to have a lot of fun and maybe its most 'important work' was the writing of the 'Book of Bays.'" J. W. Krutch

+ Books p3 Mr 1 '42 850w

Christian Century 59:322 Mr 11 '42 90w

Churchman 156:31 My 1 '42 40w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '42

Reviewed by E. D. Hart

Library J 67:181 F 15 '42 80w

"'Book of Bays' is almost as much a travel book as it is a book of natural history, and the general effect is that of a sort of super 'nature walk' conducted over a large and fascinating area by a highly competent guide."

+ Nation 154:377 Mr 28 '42 240w

"The results of the Beebe expeditions are carefully set forth in publications not intended for the general public. What Mr. Beebe gives the layman is the fun, with just enough rough weather, sandflies, mud, thorn-scrub and cactus spines to make it interesting. If more serious thoughts creep in they are jauntily disposed of." R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p9 Mr 1 '42 1150w

"Enchanting stories about fish, flesh, and fowl, in the author's best poetic-scientific blend."

+ New Yorker 18:60 F 28 '42 30w

"The 'Book of Bays' closely parallels the 'Sea of Cortez' by marine biologist Ricketts and novelist Steinbeck. . . Dr. Beebe's book is a great deal less startling, showy, bulky and anthropomorphically philosophic. It is also, to my taste, much sounder, many fold more digestible. It was interesting, often delightful, to see John Steinbeck discovering biological philosophy and having a grand romp with it. But Mr. Beebe, if he won't hate me for calling attention to it, is thirty years and more past his salad days as a scientist. He is a thoroughly seasoned traveler in Nature. And if he never pretended to the undoubtedly original literary gifts of Steinbeck, he can point to page after page of descriptive powers." D. C. Peattie

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 Mr 14 '42 750w

Scientific Bk Club R 13:2 Mr '42 460w

Wis Lib Bul 38:64 Ap '42

Reviewed by Daniel Merriman

Yale R n s 32:195 autumn '42 210w

BEECHER, JOHN. Here I stand. 1st ed 42p $1.50; autog ed $2.50 Twice a year press, 509 Madison av, N.Y.

811

41-28110

"John Beecher [is] a young American of a family whose name is illustrious in the annals of Protestant preaching. . . This autobiographical narrative in verse deals with the tragedy of the unavailable man." Nation

"Mr. Beecher's conviction is intense; his statement, however, is more apt to arouse pity than indignation: so its success as art seems inadvertent and its success as prophecy inadequate." Rolfe Humphries

Nation 154:662 Je 6 '42 120w

"I have found six briefly successful passages in the poem, the best of them on page 31, being one unfit for quotation in a decorous journal. Otherwise, 'Here I Stand' strikes me as being a humorless waste of at least forty pages of paper that might have been more usefully consumed." Dudley Fitts

— Sat R of Lit 25:13 Ap 25 '42 340w

BEEADING, FRANCIS, pseud. of JOHN LESLIE PALMER and HILARY AIDAN ST GEORGE SAUNDERS. Twelve disguises. 298p $2 Harper [8s 6d Hodder]

(W) 42-16141

Colonel Granby, head of the British Secret service, goes to occupied France in search of General Creighton, minister of propaganda, who is missing. An adept at disguise, Granby has to exercise all his ingenuity when he is spotted by the Gestapo.

Booklist 38:443 Jl 15 '42

"The author has laid himself out to make this a winner in the espionage class." Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 Je 14 '42 130w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hull

Boston Globe p17 Je 10 '42 40w

"It is Beeding at his best, and it is as nearly up to the minute as any novel based on the present war can be." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 Je 14 '42 160w

"Good thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 Je 13 '42 30w

"If badly done this would be the most hollow mockery of an untimely guide-book. But Colonel Granby always has some good reason for putting a photograph between loaves in a historic kitchen or substituting himself for a wax dummy in a suit of armour. There is no old-world leisuriness about his movements. This is Blitz espionage."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p237 My 9 '42 180w

Wis Lib Bul 38:119 Jl '42

BEGEMAN, MYRON LOUIS. Manufacturing processes. 579p il $4.50 Wiley [27s Chapman] 671 Metal work. Machine shop practice 42-8839

"Intended primarily for engineering students, this work includes the technical fundamentals of important manufacturing processes, i.e. foundry practice, pattern work, metal casting, die casting, plastic molding, heat treatment of steel, welding, soldering, hard surfacing, hot and cold forming of metals, measuring instruments and gages, lathe work, shapers and planers, and milling machines." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 38:302 Ap 15 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:26 Ap '42

BEIM, MRS LORRAINE (LEVEY), and BEIM, JERROLD. Snow Hill; il. by Nicholas Panesis. 230p $2 Harcourt

(W) 42-5826

Story of a new kind of school established on a Vermont farm by the parents of Spike and Ann Kenyon. The curriculum includes outdoor activities from horseback riding to sugaring-off, as well as indoor studies. The main interest of the story, however, is in the readjustments of the children to each other.

"It really is a moral tale, but, like the school, on a new model." M. L. Becker

Books p6 Mr 15 '42 350w

"While almost too much is made of fist fights and hair pulling, the book may be recommended for its refreshing outdoor atmosphere for children nine to twelve." Florence O'Gara

Library J 67:225 Mr 1 '42 80w

"The story contains plenty of incidents and a school setting is always of interest to 9 to 12 year olds. The book, however, is weak in characterization. The authors are not as interested in portraying real, natural children and telling a good story as they are in describing an experiment in group living and demonstrating that a group of boys and girls can live happily and comfortably together when they are willing to cooperate, but that they are overtaken by disaster when they fail to do so. The tale, in fact, is more than a little reminiscent of the moral stories of an earlier day. . . In the delightful illustrations by Nicholas Panesis the children of the story have the personality which they lack in the text."

+ — N Y Times p10 F 22 '42 350w

"The children seem real; their problems, derelictions, and excitements will interest other children. Skiing and maple-sugaring play quite a part in the plot."

+ New Yorker 18:74 My 23 '42 50w

BELL, RONALD PERCY. Acid-base catalysis. 211p $3.50 (12s 6d) Oxford 541.39 Catalysis 42-15882

"This book gives a clear, concise, yet comprehensive survey of the present status of one of the classical sections of classical physical chemistry, the catalysis of a variety of reactions by acids and bases. Those who were schooled in the concepts of hydrogen and hydroxyl ions as well as those more modernly trained in the acid-conjugate base concepts, developed largely by Brönsted, can read this volume with great profit." Chem & Eng N

BELL, R. P.—Continued

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor

+ Chem & Eng N 20:874 J1 10 '42 500w

"A mature and valuable new book which should be required reading for every modern physical chemist." F. C. Nachod

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:183 O '42 280w

BELLAMANN, HENRY. Floods of spring. 374p
$2.50 Simon & Schuster

(W) 42-13266

The scene of this new novel by the author of Kings Row, is again Missouri; the time, the years following the Civil war. The book is essentially a character study of Peter Ketting, a lonely, arrogant man who dominates his gentle wife, alienates his neighbors, fails to understand the intellectual strivings of his sons, until he finally finds himself stripped of everything except the land he has wrestled with for a life time.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (9)
LG (1) N Y Times (2) PW (1) RB (1) W (1)

Booklist 38:384 Je 15 '42

"The story is of a not unfamiliar kind to readers of American family and regional and period novels, frequently based on the author's own family history. Occasionally a story of this order rises to distinction. But the general run among those that achieve publication deserve praise and respect. Together they form a remarkable body of superior popular story telling and homely history, revealing, if only in glimpses and through a glass darkly, stretches of the way of our American past, and from as many points of view as there are authors. Together they are significant and important. 'Floods of Spring' is one of the good ones." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p5 My 24 '42 1050w

Reviewed by E. H. Crowell

Library J 67:368 Ap 15 '42 50w

"Because he is so good a writer, and because his portrait of Peter Ketting has a grave and somber distinction, this story of Mr. Bellamann's is less extravagant than it sounds, and is even at times curiously challenging and provocative. On the whole, however, 'Floods of Spring' is a disappointing novel—one whose real points and drifts are obscure. Somehow, one never gets to the bottom of what was wrong with Peter Ketting, nor really grasps what it was that he was striving for." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p7 My 17 '42 800w

"A ready-made job, not up to standard."

— New Yorker 18:66 My 30 '42 60w

"After the resounding success he achieved with 'Kings Row,' Mr. Bellamann is probably prepared for the demanding comparisons that any new book must face. From that point of view it may be said that 'Floods of Spring' is not quite as good; there are reasons for that, which I shall mention. Yet if it is possible to view the book alone, as a piece of work by a man we do not know, it will be seen to possess qualities and a richness all its own, and we should want to regard this man with great interest." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:7 My 23 '42 550w

"Peter is sympathetically realized, and he is surrounded by some refreshing characters. There are genuinely tender domestic scenes, and a deeply felt sense of what a house, a farm, a son, a grandchild can mean. Yet Floods of Spring, which sets out to be a philosophical novel, is more often an over-insistent tract."

+ — Time 39:96 Je 8 '42 180w

Wis Lib Bul 38:119 J1 '42

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Elizabeth: creature of circumstance [Eng title: Elizabethan commentary]. 258p il $2.75 Harper [7s 6d Cassell]

B or 92 Elizabeth, queen of England. Great Britain—History—Elizabeth, 1558-1603. Reformation (W) 42-19895

Study of the Reformation in England and the part played in it by Queen Elizabeth. It is a portrait of both Elizabeth the woman, and Elizabeth the queen, painted by a historian, who is a Roman Catholic. Index.

"There is enough wit and perspicacity in these Bellocian thrusts to make them stimulating. For the rest they make their point by minimizing the effect of many other forces at work in Elizabeth's time, one example of which is the revenues that lay interests were increasingly deriving from other than expropriated church property, and another the desuetude within the Catholic Church itself. Mr. Belloc recognizes such forces but confines them to a paragraph while the shortcomings of the Protestants raise their heads on every page. And yet Mr. Belloc manages to seem urbane, a contestant who dissembles resentment and solaces himself with the sorry condition of his opponent." Milton Rugoff

— + Books p12 Ag 23 '42 900w

"Mr. Belloc writes an interesting and exasperating book. It would perhaps be impossible to find, among the total company of literate Englishmen, a person more unfitted by temperament, prejudice, mental habit, dogmatic presuppositions and propagandist intent to write a reliable history of Queen Elizabeth and her times. A vivacious style and a very considerable accumulation of factual data, from which it is possible to select the items which lend color to his thesis while suppressing the rest, are enlisted to present the usual distorted Catholic picture of the English Reformation."

— + Christian Century 59:1006 Ag 19 '42 200w

Reviewed by J. G. Brunini

Commonweal 36:474 S 4 '42 420w

"As one would anticipate, Belloc writes with style and authority and definitely from Roman Catholic viewpoint. Valuable addition to material on Queen Elizabeth, but recommended for considered, rather than general, purchase." Jacqueline Overton

Library J 67:679 Ag '42 70w

"Every historian or biographer appears to have his own particular Elizabeth Tudor. . . There are degrees of prejudice in the historians or biographers, and sometimes we know what they are driving at and sometimes we don't. In the case of Hilaire Belloc we know, and we know also that in his writings we are going to find clever persuasion, dogmatic assertion and a confidence in his own premises that would be intolerable if the man were not so distinguished and suave a propagandist." Herbert Gorman

N Y Times p36 O 25 '42 1050w

"The importance of [this book] is that Mr. Belloc has taken a key-period in history and let his mind play on it in all its dizzying force, running off here and there in unimportant eddies, creating iridescent patterns elsewhere, and every so often, with one pure jet of insight, washing a whole street of the historic edifice clean and bright. Many people, myself among them, will wish that the iridescent patches were fewer, the direct jets more frequent. But all the same it is a great thing to have a writer like Mr. Belloc prancing about with a hose." C. V. Wedgwood

+ — Spec 168:334 Ap 3 '42 380w

"It would be a poor courtesy to a distinguished author to pretend that [this book] bears any relation to the best work of which he is capable. Some of the numerous verbal blunders are no doubt due to lack of revision. Only so could Mr. Belloc of all men become ungrammatical or obscure. . . Genealogical confusion is unfortunately sometimes matched by confusion of thought or even flat self-contradiction. . . There are, of course, flashes of the familiar fire. . . Few would deny, after the many years in which he has pleaded his case, that his paradoxes contain elements of truth that the standard historians have neglected. But no argument is here adduced that he has not formulated more cogently in his earlier books."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p178 Ap 4 '42 650w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Places. 239p $2.50 Sheed
824 Europe—Description and travel
(W) 42-1654

"All Europe and the countries of the Mediterranean are the scene of these short essays, in which the veteran traveler sets down impressions that have remained in his mind through the years. Mr. Belloc's philosophical, sometimes mystical, observations illuminate well his own distinction between wandering for the sake of distraction or diversion and traveling for 'a knowledge of places and the workings of the minds of men.' The essays have appeared in English periodicals." Library J

Booklist 38:305 Ap 15 '42

Bookmark 3:9 My '42

"An unsung casualty of the war has been casual travel. . . Yet we still have what was, even in peace time, the favorite mode of getting about for those over fifty—armchair travel. For this there has been and there still is no better companion than the solitary spirit of Hilaire Belloc, and if 'Places' has not the youthful exuberance of 'The Path to Rome,' it is even more rich in remembrance." M. L. Becker

+ Books p4 F 1 '42 600w

"Most of our travel these days must be retrospective and a book such as this is doubly welcome, for it enriches our knowledge of places already visited, complements our musings on countries and cities, welds and gives breadth and wholeness to scattered memories." D. H. Mosely

+ Commonweal 35:540 Mr 20 '42 450w

Reviewed by J. S. Cleavinger

Library J 67:39 Ja 1 '42 80w

Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 15 '42 230w

"The travels of a lifetime, as already suggested, have yielded their golden gleanings to this collection of fifty essays about places (the fifty-first is about something else), but the writing of them all is apparently recent, and the reader who feels the need of timeliness will not be troubled by any jarring lack of it, even though most of the recollections demand no dates."

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 22 '42 600w

Reviewed by M. W. Dishar

Spec 169:134 Ag 7 '42 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p334 Jl 4 '42 360w

BELTING, PAUL EVERETT, and BELTING, NATALIA MAREE. Modern high school curriculum. 276p $2.50 Garrard

373 High schools—Curricula 42-10216

"A comprehensive analysis of the curriculum. . . Based largely on experience in Illinois." Social Studies

School & Society 55:456 Ap 18 '42 20w

"The reviewer is unable to say for whom this book is written. The authors failed to include a preface in which their purpose might have been stated. It seems clear that the volume is not for teachers of the various subject fields who might be interested in building their own courses, for the treatment of these fields is too brief and too little documented to be of much help. Advanced students of the secondary-school curriculum will find neither new facts nor stimulating discussion. As a handbook for administrators who are content with rather typical high-school programs, the book may serve a need. It may also be useful to inexperienced teachers in securing an over-all view of the general content and activities of courses commonly taught in secondary schools." R. T. Gregg

+ School R 50:729 D '42 650w

Social Studies 33:286 O '42 40w

Reviewed by C. C. Peters

Social Studies 34:45 Ja '43 240w

BEMELMANS, LUDWIG. I love you, I love you, I love you; il. by the author. 207p $2.50 Viking

817

42-20660

Sketches, some of them semi-autobiographical, others probably fictional, by the author of My War with the United States. The sketches deal with far away scenes the author has visited, with strange characters he has met, and, frequently, with the character and personality of his small daughter, Barbara.

"Here are four brands of American humor—all good." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 170:144 D '42 70w

Booklist 39:29 O 1 '42

Reviewed by Virgilia Sapieha

Books p4 S 6 '42 600w

"Delightful, gay stories in author's inimitable manner; also an occasional grim tale told with a sly grin, such as that of his visit to Berchtesgaden where he imitated Hitler. . . Will be popular." E. H. Crowell

+ Library J 67:738 S 1 '42 60w

"Not Bemelmans at his best, but even Bemelmans at his second best is better than most."

+ Nation 155:245 S 19 '42 150w

"The writer is fascinated and pleased by the odd types he meets and grateful for the titillation they produce in his humorous soul. The reader shares his gentle pleasure and enjoys to the hilt the comradely feeling of joint appreciation. . . Bemelmans' humor shines like a good deed in a naughty world—no slight stunt, since it can be, and is, scurrilous, extravagant and rascally as well as blandly innocent." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p3 S 6 '42 1250w

"To tell the truth, none of the pieces is as successful as are those in his previous book 'Small Beer.' Here and there the fanciful note is forced and overfragile material is over-manipulated. As usual, a flock of absurd drawings complement the antic text." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:58 S 5 '42 230w

"In 'I Love You, I Love You, I Love You,' we find Ludwig Bemelmans at his best, and even to find Mr. Bemelmans at his less best, or, for that matter to find him at all, is to experience a very curious sort of emotional joy, the creating of which is his special gift." C. O. Skinner

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 O 17 '42 800w

Time 40:100 S 14 '42 650w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 32:viii winter '43 160w

BEMELMANS, LUDWIG. Rosebud [il. by the author]. 32p $1 Random house

42-24489

Nonsense story for the very young in simple prose and humorous drawings. Rosebud was a rabbit who was very happy in his lot until he read in a book that while other animals were big and strong, or courageous and fierce, the rabbit was a shy, hysterical creature. Rosebud was so mad he immediately set about to prove it wasn't so and when he got through, the Elephant and the Whale, at least, had reason to think the rabbit was the strongest creature they had ever met.

"This fable, related in colored pictures of Bemelmans' mad design, makes up for technique by extraordinary vigor, such as you might expect from the dynamic Rosebud." M. L. Becker

Books p12 N 22 '42 180w

Cath World 156:372 D '42 50w

"Pictures and text are absurd, but children will like this new funny book which has a certain folk tale quality, of African origin, according to Mr. Bemelmans." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:417 N '42 70w

BEMELMANS, LUDWIG—Continued

"Children will be quick to catch humor of story and the nonsense of the drawings." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 67:954 N 1 '42 60w

"The fable certainly seems to bear the earmarks of a genuine folktale, even dressed up in brisk dialogue which carries its own latter-day punch. The pictures are Mr. Bemelmans at his most extravagant, which in this case isn't Bemelmans at his best. You couldn't indeed, without information or a good deal of imagination identify Rosebud as a rabbit off-hand. But that perhaps is just doing arithmetic in the mouth of a merry little gift-horse, and certainly the colors, purple, blue and peppermint pink, are a delight to the eye." E. L. Buehl

+ N Y Times p35 O 4 '42 280w

New Yorker 18:105 D 12 '42 50w

"The story of an enraged pink rabbit is too sophisticated for most readers under eight, despite the bright charm of the illustrations, in which a blue elephant and a purple whale run riot."

Sat R of Lit 25:28 N 14 '42 50w

BENCHLEY, MRS BELLE (JENNINGS). My friends, the apes. 296p il $3 Little

599.8 Apes (W) 42-18418

Mrs Benchley, director of the San Diego zoo, tells in an interesting, informal, narrative style, what she has learned from the scientists and from her own observations, concerning the nature and habits of the four anthropoid ape families—the gibbons, the oranges, the chimpanzees and the gorillas.

Booklist 39:44 O 15 '42

Bookmark 4:6 N '42

"Mrs. Benchley's book deals with gibbons, chimpanzees, orangutans and gorillas. It concerns certain individuals of each species. It is bound to give the reader a warm feeling of friendliness toward these individuals, and before he realizes it he finds that he has absorbed a good deal of information about the species and also about the running of a zoo." R. B. Peck

+ Books p8 Ag 23 '42 650w

"This is an exceptional book. One of its exceptional characteristics is excellence. Another is that the author does exactly what she set out to do; its title even portends its real nature. Mrs. Benchley's purpose can best be given in her own words, quoted from the introduction, 'It is a simple, perhaps sentimental account of my own adventures with the apes, our next of kin.'" J. M. Kater

+ Commonweal 36:546 S 25 '42 280w

"Fine book to arouse interest and welcome additional book for zoo lovers. Highly recommended." H. R. Burdett

+ Library J 67:679 Ag '42 70w

"The book is illustrated with twenty-five excellent photographs, and is lively and interesting from beginning to end."

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 23 '42 480w

Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 S '42 300w

Wis Lib Bul 38:133 O '42

BENCHLEY, ROBERT CHARLES. Inside Benchley; pictures by Gluyas Williams. 316p $2.50 Harper

817 (W) 42-7219

Collection of humorous essays selected from the author's early books, with illustrations done in the spirit of the essays.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (8) PW (1) RB (1) W (1)

Booklist 38:305 Ap 15 '42

Bookmark 3:9 My '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '42

"Some unforgettable pieces have been inexpressibly left out ('Another Uncle Edith Christmas Story,' 'Happy Childhood Tales,' some of the fine and bitter book reviews from

'Love Conquers All,' etc.), but enough good things have been included. (The Opera Synopses, the Fascinating Crimes, 'Romance in Encyclopedia Land,' 'Paul Revere's Ride' and others) to make the book at least as good as the average Selected Works. Selections from Benchley are a fairly accurate cross-section of all New Yorker funny pieces, and include most of the forms." S. E. Hyman

New Repub 107:91 Jl 20 '42 300w

"There is no use trying to list the best ones; every one will have his own preference." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p15 Jl 5 '42 220w

"Highly satisfying anthology of Mr. Benchley's laughable pieces, as cheerful today as when they were written. The usual humorous and discerning illustrations by Gluyas Williams."

+ New Yorker 18:72 Mr 21 '42 30w

Wis Lib Bul 38:65 Ap '42

BENDINER, ROBERT. The riddle of the State department. 231p $2 Farrar

353.1 U.S. State department (W) 42-20414

A "sober analysis" of the United States Department of state by the managing editor of the Nation. "Mr. Bendiner's critique is hostile; but it is also 'sober,' judicious and as factual as it was possible to make it through the screens which surround and shelter the diplomatic mysteries. It is in two parts: an examination of the 'record' as revealed in the history of our foreign policy over the last few years, followed by a sketch of the backgrounds, structure, operation and leading personalities of the institution which had so large a part in the making of that history." (Books) Index.

Reviewed by S. F. Bemis

Ann Am Acad 225:241 Ja '43 500w

Booklist 39:27 O 1 '42

"[The author's] basic charge is that the department is an anachronism, an institution which is simply no longer well suited to perform, in this torrential new world, the duties which the times demand of it. That is an important charge, and whether or not Mr. Bendiner's judgments are well based, this seems to me an unusually valuable, interesting and significant study." Walter Millis

+ Books p4 Ag 23 '42 1750w

"No one who takes an interest in this nation's policy, no one who cares about the issue of this war and the nature of the reconstruction which must inevitably follow it, can afford to ignore 'The Riddle of the State Department.'" J. H. Powers

+ Boston Globe p17 S 2 '42 550w

"Aside from the book's one-sidedness, Mr. Bendiner's most serious fault is the continual reference to rumors and charges about people which the author admits he is unable to verify but which he is apparently glad to use. What makes this practice seem the less excusable is that, with a little effort, Mr. Bendiner could have gone to Washington and established for himself the truth or falsity of these reports." J. G. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 O 7 '42 300w

Library J 67:740 S 1 '42 20w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

Nation 155:195 S 5 '42 1200w

"In the last of his book, Bendiner calls the roll of those who guessed wrong. If anything, he is overkind, although he occasionally pins them painfully, as when he describes James Clement Dunn, Hull's adviser on political relations, as one 'cultivated in the social graces and backward in social thought.' Adolph Berle, alone among the policy-makers, may receive something less than his due from Bendiner's appraisal. . . . If I am overenthusiastic about the job that Bendiner has done, the reason may be that after a long time trying, I still can't understand what Hull is talking about." K. G. Crawford

+ New Repub 107:322 S 14 '42 650w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p11 S 20 '42 750w

"By no means conclusive, but earnest, carefully written, and fairly well balanced."
+ New Yorker 18:59 S 5 '42 140w

Pratt p19 D '42

"Mr. Bendiner's study cannot be dismissed as a political attack. It is too objective, wise, and balanced for that. But it is a campaign document in the best tradition of democracy, and it appears at a critical time when it will help strengthen by its exposure and appraisal the progressives and confound the Tories." Roger Baldwin

+ Sat R of Lit 25:30 O 24 '42 400w

"Here is a strange bouillabaisse of rumor, guess-work, prejudice, misconstruction, distortion, some reportage, and a lot of irrelevant narrative. In fact, the reader is inclined to wonder how Mr. Bendiner had the courage to quote Secretary Hull's famous characterization of a Japanese diplomatic note: 'I have never seen a document that was more crowded with infamous falsehoods and distortions.'" Jay Franklin

— Sat R of Lit 25:30 O 24 '42 400w

BENEDETTI-PICHLER, ANTON ALEXANDER. Introduction to the microtechnique of inorganic analysis. 302p il $3.50 Wiley 544.8 Microchemistry. Chemistry, Analytic. Chemistry, Inorganic 42-15880

"One of the country's outstanding authorities on microchemical methods presents a new textbook to supplant his earlier volume [Book Review Digest, 1936] which was concerned only with qualitative analysis. The new book begins with a brief discussion of apparatus for general use and introduces the student to the microscope and accessory equipment. The main part of the discussion is divided into sections on qualitative and quantitative analysis." (Chem & Met Eng) Index.

Chem & Met Eng 49:183 O '42 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:38 J1 '42

BENEDICT, AGNES ELIZABETH. Progress to freedom; the story of American education. 309p $3 Putnam

370.973 Education—U.S. 42-7303

"The absorbing tale of the schools of America, their hampered and primitive beginnings, their first liberators, their great men and their gradual development toward a new freedom." (School & Society) Index.

Bookmark 4:4 Nov '42

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman

New Repub 106:835 Je 15 '42 390w

"Miss Benedict's fine touch brings out with force the significant points that characterize the labor of the educational pioneers—from Thomas Jefferson and Horace Mann to John Dewey—in dealing with social and political conditions that changed with each generation. Her insight, her discrimination, and the manner in which each successive step in the development is proportioned and linked in an unbroken chain, give to the story its unique quality—its novelty, its absorbing interest and its dramatic force." A. C. Barnes

+ N Y Times p42 N 22 '42 1550w

Pratt p10 O '42

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 25:11 O 10 '42 350w

School & Society 55:308 Mr 14 '42 30w

"This book should be required reading. It makes information intelligible and reading pleasurable." M. S. Lewishon

+ Survey G 31:218 Ap '42 400w

BENET, LAURA. Come slowly, Eden; a novel about Emily Dickinson. 272p $2.50 Dodd

Dickinson, Emily—Fiction (W) 42-21082

Biographical novel based on the life of Emily Dickinson. Beginning with the years of her childhood in Amherst it traces the course of her gentle passage thru life, during her girlhood and young womanhood, and closes with the last visit of the man she loved.

"Miss Benét draws a pleasant picture of Emily Dickinson in her relaxed moments, but when it comes to the psychic crisis that made Emily a total poet the novelist's intuition is not powerful enough. Lifeblood was Emily Dickinson's element. Miss Benét gives us something consonant with teacups." G. F. Whicher

+ Atlantic 170:138 N '42 700w

Booklist 39:33 O 1 '42

"'Come Slowly, Eden,' does not extend—and, I judge, was not intended to extend—our knowledge of Emily Dickinson as a distinguished figure in American literature. Its unassuming charm, simplicity and good sense combine to provide a portrait that would have been significant if it had dealt merely with a fictitious personage and is the more so since it is drawn scrupulously from what we know of an actual person. It leads you back almost irresistibly to the poems, and I imagine Miss Benét would ask no higher compliment." Mary Ross

+ Books p10 S 13 '42 700w

"Emily Dickinson was elusive both as a poet and a woman. To portray her as a heroine of a biographical novel is a task to confound any writer; to succeed in any degree, a notable achievement. One makes obeisance, therefore, to Laura Benet for her book, 'Come Slowly Eden,' which, in spite of obvious defects rooted in the subject's reserve rather than the author's limitations, captures the spirit of this rare personality." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p6 S 20 '42 800w

"So closely does the style of the author follow the intriguing whimsicalities of 'dear Emily's' own writing, the reader unconsciously looks for the quotation marks that are not supplied. In other words, it is just that faithfully that Miss Benét succeeds in capturing the delicacy and artistic restraint of the poet herself. Original letters and poems—both quoted and paraphrased, or reproduced in spirit—shine through page after page." A. M. Jakeman

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 8 '42 330w

BENET, STEPHEN VINCENT. Selected works; v1, poetry; v2, prose. 2v 487;483p $5 Farrar 811 (W) 42-15523

Two volumes of selections from the works of Stephen Vincent Benét. The first, devoted to poetry, contains all of John Brown's Body, and selections from his other published ballads and verse. Volume two has all of his stories of American history, and selections from his other prose works.

"I salute [Benét] for his prescience of the coming war. In poems like his Ode to the Austrian Socialists and Nightmare at Noon he spoke out with the cold steel anger of a man aroused. It braces the spirit to read (or reread) Benét today." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic J1 '42 300w

Booklist 38:422 J1 '42

"Our contemporary literature and our national consciousness are both very much the better for Mr. Benet's 'Selected Works.'" J. W. Krutch

+ Books p1 Je 21 '42 1550w

"The short stories in three groups, 'Stories of American History,' 'Tales of Our Time,' and 'Fantasies and Prophecies,' with a long short story, 'Spanish Bayonet,' show a mellow approach, a perspective and sense of proportion, and an awareness of humanity which are prerequisite to good writing. The flavor and the humor are American. Of the tales with American history for background, 'The Devil and Daniel Webster' is outstanding. In the 'Fantasies and Prophecies' group, 'The King of the Cats' affords considerable delight, if not as much mystery as its beginning promises. Both prose and poetry in this edition are enjoyable."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 5 '42 360w

Reviewed by Frank Jones

Nation 155:217 S 12 '42 700w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum

N Y Times p4 O 11 '42 1700w

New Yorker 18:70 Je 13 '42 90w

Pratt p17 O '42

BENET, S. V.—Continued

"How satisfactory these volumes are! What a relief to find an author who doesn't maintain or imply that honorable behavior is a bore, that good taste is outworn convention, and that pathological sexuality is the only subject worthy the consideration of the intelligent. Nearly all the best of him is here, from 'Spanish Bayonet' and 'John Brown's Body' to 'By the Waters of Babylon' and 'Nightmare at Noon.' Rereading does no harm to them. There are great pure stretches of poetry and prose full of verve." Leonard Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 Ag 8 '42 500w
Wis Lib Bul 38:117 J1 '42

Reviewed by Robert Van Gelder
Yale R n s 32:385 winter '43 650w

BENGALÉE, MUTIUR RAHMAN. Life of Muhammad. 286p il $2 Moslem sunrise press, room 1010, 220 S. State st, Chicago

B or 92 Mohammad, the prophet 42-5460

"This new biography of Muhammad presents the life and character of the prophet as seen by one of his followers. The author, who has spent the last fifteen years in America, represents the Ahmadiyya movement in Islam, whose founder was Hazrat Ahmad, 'the promised Messiah and Mahdi.'" (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index and glossary.

"The historical value of the work is nil." Arthur Jeffery

— Am Hist R 48:173 O '42 210w
Christian Century 59:433 Ap 1 '42 70w

BENNETT, HUGH HAMMOND, and PRYOR, WILLIAM CLAYTON. This land we defend. 107p il maps $1.50 Longmans

631.45 Soils. Erosion (W) 42-21808

Study of the importance of land conservation, and methods of achieving it, written for junior and senior high school ages. Mr Bennett is head of the United States Soil conservation service, and Mr Pryor is in the information division of Soil conservation service. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

"This slim volume seeks to bring to the average layman the story of soil conservation. Its nineteen illustrations look like shots from 'The River' or 'The Plough that Broke the Plains.' I am certain that Mr. Pryor would take it as a compliment if I were to say that the style of the text is like that of the commentary to those pioneer documentary films." C. S. Ascher

+ Ann Am Acad 225:248 Ja '43 360w
Booklist 39:52 O 15 '42

"Earnest, simply worded but very important plea for conservation." L. M. Kinloch

+ Library J 67:679 Ag '42 100w
New Repub 107:866 D 28 '42 180w
Social Studies 33:380 D '42 30w

"It is a good book, well illustrated, authoritative and easy to read, and the average American would do well to heed its lessons and understand our soil resources from which we draw our daily sustenance and strength." C. B. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p8 O 27 '42 650w
Wis Lib Bul 38:158 N '42

BENNETT, JESSE LEE. Diffusion of science. 141p $2.25 Johns Hopkins press

504 Science 42-51023

"The author pleads for the application of scientific method to the whole problem of the diffusion of science. His book seeks to envisage the present situation and the general problem broadly and to offer one possible plan for more effective diffusion under the new conditions which have so rapidly evolved." School & Society

"The book is, as a whole, one of the most thorough condemnations of modern education that has been penned. And it would be difficult to refute the major arguments. Every literate person should read it and ponder its picture." J. McA. Kater

+ — Commonweal 37:260 D 25 '42 420w
Ethics 53:154 Ja '43 60w

"Judging from the date of its preface as well as from the light-hearted optimism of its contents, this book was completed not later than 1930. It is primarily an eloquent, and occasionally an ecstatic, appeal for the wider dissemination of the spirit and conclusions of modern science. . . . But however excellent the author's intentions may be, his evaluation of men and doctrines is somewhat less than judicious. For example, Korzybski is a star of no less magnitude than Whitehead in his intellectual armament; and he ventures to pass judgment on the historical uses of the theory of the divine right of kings without reference to the historical contexts in which that doctrine functioned." E. N.

J Philos 39:588 O 8 '42 240w

School & Society 56:87 J1 25 '42 50w

BENSON, MRS SALLY. Meet me in St Louis. 290p $2.50 Random house

(W) 42-36247

Anecdotes of the life of the Smith family of St Louis during the twelve months from June 1903 to May 1904. Tootie, youngest of the pretty Smith girls, is six years old and many of the tales concern her, her playmates, her interests, and her reactions to the teasing and affection she receives from her elders.

Booklist 38:426 J1 1 '42

Bookmark 4:16 N '42

"The sketches, or episodes, of family life in 'Meet Me in St. Louis' all are good. Tootie is the most endearing of the girls. She is not only Penrod; she is one of the red-headed Day boys and Huck Finn (fem.). . . 'Meet Me in St. Louis' is a book that is not merely one of those reminiscent books. It has high humor, and, as in the chapter in which Papa remains at home, a heartbreak. Recommended by one who has read it at least twice." F. P. Adams

+ Books p4 Je 7 '42 1350w

Reviewed by Dorothy Hillyer
Boston Globe p19 Je 3 '42 900w

"[Miss Benson's] stories are slender in narrative but rich in descriptive detail. She is concerned with the incidents of daily domestic life as they might have occurred in a family about the turn of the century. But she is concerned with them not so much for their value as ingredients of plot as for the entertaining light they throw on her characters and on the period. She weaves them together so skilfully, too, that a reader scarcely observes how slight the stories are." E. F. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 11 '42 550w

Reviewed by E. F. Kelly
Library J 67:414 My 1 '42 80w

Reviewed by S. E. Hyman
New Repub 107:92 J1 20 '42 240w

"A shrewd and accurate bit of not-too-early Americana." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p6 Je 7 '42 700w

New Yorker 18:79 Je 6 '42 50w

BENTLEY, JOHN. Mr Marlow takes to rye. 267p $2 Houghton

42-3943

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p10 Mr 15 '42 100w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hull
Boston Globe p19 Mr 11 '42 70w

"The book is recommended to those who like to read about drinking." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 F 15 '42 220w

Sat R of Lit 25:18 F 28 '42 40w

BENZ, FRANCIS E. Talking round the earth; the story of the telephone. 233p il $2 Dodd 621.385 Telephone—Juvenile literature. Bell, Alexander Graham (W) 42-5973

Combination of history of the invention and development of the telephone and a biography of Alexander Graham Bell. Contains a brief sketch of methods of communication used in pre-telephone days. A chronology is included, but no index. For grades six to eight.

Booklist 38:279 Ap 1 '42

"This is factual reading at its brightest for the early teens." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 19 '42 320w

Cath World 156:375 D '42 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:269 Jl '42 70w

"Useful as biography and as source material in study of communication. Recommended for boys and girls twelve to sixteen." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:269 Mr 15 '42 90w

BERCHIN, MICHEL, and BEN-HORIN, ELIA-HU. Red army. 277p il $3 Norton

355 Russia—Army. World war, 1939—Russia (W) 42-51053

An objective analysis of the origin, development and achievements of the Russian army, by two Russian journalists attached to western European newspapers. Index.

Booklist 39:177 Ja 1 '43

"Any book on the Red Army deserves attention, provided it poses the major question accurately. Michael Berchin and Eliahu Ben-Horin have written soberly and honestly. Their book is cautious in its treatment of facts and avoids sensational and ill-founded conclusions. But it is, on the other hand, a rather rudimentary and primitive book, based almost chiefly on newspaper information." Max Werner

+ Books p16 Ja 24 '43 850w

Reviewed by F. E. Hirsch

Library J 67:949 N 1 '42 110w

"It is impossible to write a really good book about the Red Army. The necessary materials are not accessible, even to high-ranking Soviet citizens. It is not surprising, therefore, that Messrs. Berchin and Ben-Horin, who are not versed in military matters anyway, have not been able to set down more than the usual collection of informational bric-a-brac. Yet the reader having even the slightest acquaintance with military life will find this book only a hazy sketch of the hard-fighting, disciplined force that astonished Hitler. . . Nevertheless, the authors' discussion is extremely interesting. And since the future of the world depends upon what course the Kremlin takes, the present book is valuable enough for the help it gives on these points." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 156:135 Ja 23 '43 600w

Reviewed by John Scott

New Repub 108:92 Ja 18 '43 1000w

"The effort has this to be said for it: it seeks to maintain a strictly objective attitude and suffers neither from emotional bias nor from any attempts to form half-baked and sensational conclusions. However, 'The Red Army' suffers perforce from the limited available material at the moment and from its closeness in time to many of the events discussed." C. L. Sulzberger

+ N Y Times p3 D 6 '42 1100w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 27 '42 460w

BERGER, MEYER. The eight million; journal of a New York correspondent; il. by Henry Berger. 334p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

917.471 New York (city) (W) 42-15707

"The papers in this book are mostly about the queer, the quaint, and the quizzical in New York City; fragments and sketches of people met or of places visited in journalistic wandering in the avenues and side streets." Introd.

Booklist 39:10 S '42

"Mr. Berger is not only a shrewd observer but he writes with warmth and discrimination. His humor is genuine and unobtrusive. It's a good job, even though it adds little that is new or important to the sum of our knowledge of freaks and picaresons." Stanley Walker

+ Books p15 Je 14 '42 750w

"It's quite a tour which Mr. Berger has arranged and it is all amiably presented in a chatty, casual manner that gives no hint of the painstaking effort and disciplined pen which have produced it. Meyer Berger is above all else an excellent reporter. His is a photographic eye, a sensitive ear and an impressionable mind, and (hallmark of the ideal reporter) he writes objectively." Lafayette Marchand

+ Boston Globe p19 Jl 8 '42 500w

Reviewed by S. E. Hymen

New Repub 107:91 Jl 20 '42 90w

"This is the work of a really first-rate reporter, one of the best New York has seen for many years." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p8 Je 14 '42 750w

"Some of his stories, like the well-remembered 'Murder, Inc.' and 'The Tombs,' are grim; some, like the one about the dawn coming to Times Square, are tender; some, which deal with waterfront characters and the like, are humorous."

+ New Yorker 18:72 Je 13 '42 90w

"In 'The Eight Million,' Meyer Berger has said much that is good, much that is entertaining, and much that makes for recommended reading." Leonard Lyons

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 Je 27 '42 700w

BERGMAN, RAY. Fresh-water bass. 436p il pl $5 Penn

799.1758 Bass fishing

42-17143

"More than sixty years ago James Henshall wrote 'The Book of the Black Bass,' and since then there has been no authoritative work on this great warrior of the fresh water. . . Now we have Ray Bergman's book, compiling all the lore of the lures which fad and fancy, experience and experiment have added to this absorbing sport. . . The colored plates of lures and plugs and the technical plates of knots and ties and the nostalgic paintings of leaping bass make this a reference work as well as a thrilling record of bass fishing successes and failures from coast to coast." Books

Booklist 39:5 S '42

Reviewed by William Haskell

+ Books p12 Ag 9 '42 250w

Wis Lib Bul 38:117 Jl '42

BERGMANN, PETER GABRIEL. Introduction to the theory of relativity; with a foreword by Albert Einstein. 287p $4.50 Prentice-Hall

530.1 Relativity (physics)

42-14846

"Primarily a textbook for students of physics and mathematics, which may be used either in the classroom or for individual study. The only prerequisites for reading the book are a familiarity with calculus and some knowledge of differential equations, classical mechanics, and electrodynamics." (Albert Einstein) Index.

Reviewed by E. Q. Adams

Am Chem Soc J 64:2517 O '42 480w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:42 Jl '42

Reviewed by H. Bateman

R of Scientific Instruments 13:447 O '42 420w

BERNARD, MRS JESSIE S. American family behavior. 564p $3.50 Harper

173 Family. U.S.—Social conditions

42-2233

"The organizational framework of this book is summed up in the quotation from Cooley which heads the first chapter of the text. 'There are two sorts of forces, one personal and one institutional, which hold people together in wedlock. . . The first part of the book deals with the institutional forces. . .

BERNARD, J. S.—Continued

The point of view then shifts to interpersonal relationships within the family as a primary group. Among the topics considered are parent-child and sib relationships, the theory of love, the marriage relationship (primarily in its authority and power aspects), the home and the family, and others." (Am Soc R) Index.

"It is not easy to analyze family relationships and yet communicate to the student the flavor of experience and preserve the continuity of family processes from courtship to marriage to parenthood. There are texts which have succeeded better in this highly important but difficult task. But with the rapid development of the field of the family no single text can, perhaps, tell the whole story. Peculiar needs of the students, predilections of the instructor for this or that emphasis will determine which book is to serve as the basic textbook and which others as supplementary reference. Bernard's book will be found useful in either capacity." Mirra Komarovsky

+ Am Soc R 7:579 Ag '42 700w

"This book is an outstanding contribution to the rapidly growing literature concerned with family life. It is not a conventional, comprehensive textbook including discussions of historical backgrounds and the various family problems. The approach is rather that of applied social psychology, with stress on recent sociometric findings, broadly viewed. Yet so rich is the content of the book and so thorough its scholarship that there is little of the more conventional material which does not find some mention in the volume. It unquestionably can and will be widely used as a text in family courses." Clifford Kirkpatrick

+ Ann Am Acad 221:231 My '42 550w

"American Family Behavior is a full book in that it is not one to be read cursorily or casually but to be studied and digested. It abounds in suggestive facts and ideas. It is hardly a textbook for a beginning course in the family, but would be excellent as a basis for discussion in a graduate seminar or for a book of reference. By no means is it a text for a class in preparation for marriage or family living." D. S. Klais

+ Social Forces 21:115 O '42 330w

"The material presented in 'American Family Behavior' should arouse genuine discussion in the classroom. It is realistic and Mrs. Bernard's own comments are often wise and helpful." Ruth Benedict

+ Survey 78:285 O '42 370w

BERNARD, LUTHER LEE. Introduction to sociology; a naturalistic account of man's adjustment to his world. 1041p il maps $3.75 Crowell

301 Sociology 42-16511

"This [textbook] is the result of a deliberate attempt to produce a treatise on sociology for college and university students which is thoroughly naturalistic in its approach to the subject. It is . . . an effort to determine and record in the simplest and most direct language possible (1) those factors—physical, biological, psychological, and cultural—which have produced our society and are still modifying and remaking it; (2) the manner in which this society has developed in the past under the impact of these factors; and (3) the manner in which it operates today." (Pref) Indexes.

"The style is clear, and the thought flows along smoothly. Moreover, this is no mere compilation of results of the latest statistical researches; it is thoughtful and question-stimulating. . . . There are, however, some faults. There are a good many loose statements. The treatment of many topics is unduly prolix. . . . The author is sometimes too thorough." F. H. Hankins

+ Ann Am Acad 223:253 S '42 800w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek

Social Educ 7:39 Ja '43 280w

"With so many omissions of important sociological ideas, this text, interesting as it is, cannot be recommended as an adequate introduction to sociology." N. S. Hayner

Social Forces 21:248 D '42 1300w

BERREY, LESTER V., and VAN DEN BARK, MELVIN. American thesaurus of slang; a complete reference book of colloquial speech [foreword by Louise Pound]. 1174p $5 Crowell

427 English language—Slang. Americanisms. English language—Synonyms

(W) 42-6987

"An exhaustive, 1,174-page reference book of colloquial speech organized on the model of Roget." (New Yorker) "The material is almost evenly divided into 'general' and 'special' categories. The first, comprising 459 headings, follows the Roget plan with such modifications as have been considered advisable. There are five groupings—general relations, space, inanimate existence, animate existence and personal characteristics and activities—and these are subdivided and divided again. Part II offers twelve classes of 'Special Slang' and these are particularly interesting. In this section 481 headings come under the divisional captions of underworld, trades and occupations, commerce and industry, art, entertainment, sports and games, transportation, electricity, eating establishments, public and social institutions, military and Western." (N Y Times)

Booklist 38:268 Ap 1 '42

"It is a book to brood over, one that tells more than at first may meet the eye, a cross-section of our language as it is spoken all over America, especially in barrooms."

+ Books p21 Ap 12 '42 400w

"This is a book for both reference and reading. I find it hard to put down." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 3 '42 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '42

"This differs from the standard treasury of real English in its value for purposes of exhibition as well as of use. It is obviously the result of vast and prolonged labor and it is a vast and imposing piece of work."

+ N Y Times p2 Mr 1 '42 460w

New Yorker 18:60 F 28 '42 20w

Reviewed by Christopher Morley

Sat R of Lit 25:17 Mr 21 '42 320w

"There are many omissions; but on the whole, for every ten words any reader will miss, he will recognize a thousand and learn at least fifty. Thanks to the form of the book, even the mildest categories read like nothing since Rabelais."

+ Time 39:79 Mr 2 '42 400w

Wis Lib Bul 38:64 Ap '42

BERRY, ERICK, pseud. See Best, A.

BERRYMAN, JOHN. Poems, 25p $1; pa 50c New directions

811

42-20524

"The poems, although an arbitrary brief selection from work done during 1939 and 1940, are printed here in the order of composition. Most of them appeared first in The Kenyon Review, New Poems 1940, and New Directions 1941. 'The Statue,' first published in Partisan Review, was reprinted in Five Young American Poets (1940)." Author's note

Reviewed by Northrop Frye

Canadian Forum 22:220 O '42 350w

"Berryman's collection is provocative, stirring up the right kind of protest and slinging a straight arrow at social and political corruption." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 O 3 '42 90w

BERTAIL, INEZ, ed. Child's book of Christmas carols; il. by Masha. 41p $1.50 Random house

783.65 Carols

(W) 42-24784

Contains words and music for: Away in a manger; Hark! the herald angels sing; O little town of Bethlehem; Good King Wenceslas; Silent night! holy night! We three kings of Orient are; It came upon the midnight clear; The holly and the ivy; Shepherds! shake off your drowsy sleep; O come, all ye faithful; O come, little children; Angels we have heard on high; The first nowell; Angels from the realm of glory; God rest you merry, gentlemen; Joy to the world! While shepherds watched their flocks; I saw three ships come sailing in.

Cath World 156:371 D '42 50w
Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 10w
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '42

"Pictures of the most lushly sentimental sort, but well done for this style of thing." H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:117 N 20 '42 20w

"Companion volume to A Child's Book of Prayers (Random, 1941). . . Illustrations, by Masha, are in same style and as thoroughly lovely as in the first book. Musical arrangements are simple and in bold face, making book doubly attractive to young musicians. Libraries with music collection will wish to add it, and others may want it for the pictures alone." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 67:954 N 1 '42 70w

"So beautifully illustrated by Masha that it will have to be sung or played to the children and kept away from small grubby hands." Marjorie Flack

+ Sat R of Lit 25:25 N 14 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:189 D '42

BEST, MRS ALLENA (CHAMPLIN) (ERICK BERRY, ANNE MAXON, pseud.). Hudson frontier; pictures by the author. 239p $2.50 Oxford

(W) 42-17834

Albany in 1684 was the subject of a treacherous plot to give over the city to the French. A young Dutch girl Lydia, and her friend Wolf, members of one of the Dutch Young Companies, were leaders in saving the city. Their story is told in this book for older girls.

Booklist 39:15 S '42

"Here is an exciting, eventful tale with interesting and varied characters in a drama set against the charming colonial life of the city. . . Many chapters of this fine tale appeared serially on the page For Young People, and girls and boys who read them will enjoy the fuller description of the characters and events in the book." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 O 7 '42 160w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 20w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin

Library J 67:912 O 15 '42 100w

"Whether they are serious or merry, Miss Berry, helped by her own lively drawings, has contrived to set all her characters in motion and to lift the curtain for a moment on a Winter, Spring and harvest time more than 200 years ago." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 O 11 '42 320w

Wis Lib Bul 38:190 D '42

BEST, HERBERT. Gunsmith's boy; il. by Erick Berry. 220p $2 Winston

(W) 42-22455

The year 1816 was known in northern New York state as a twelvemonth winter, with frost or snow in every month of the year. The story is of the boy Seth Ellis, who went to Cold Brook from Albany, became apprentice to the famous gunsmith, Gamallial Reed, and saved the village from starvation by a brave deed. For children ten to fourteen.

Booklist 39:123 D 1 '42

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 20w

"Excellent characterization and realistic background in this departure from author's usual setting. Erick Berry's pictures skilfully depict pioneer scene. Recommended." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 67:954 N 1 '42 100w

BESTON, HENRY. The St Lawrence; il. by A. Y. Jackson. (Rivers of America) 274p $2.50 Farrar

917.14 St Lawrence river (W) 42-24091

The twentieth volume in the Rivers of America series. The book is composed of history, folklore, life and customs past and present, and chapters on wild life, especially of the Canadian side of the river. Index.

Booklist 39:119 D 1 '42

"This is one of the very best books in what has long since become an outstanding series." Stewart Holbrook

+ Books 2 N 29 '42 1300w

"This is one of the best of the excellent series of the Rivers of America. . . The editors appropriately commissioned A. Y. Jackson as illustrator, and thus a most readable book has been made a beautifully designed one also, full of spirited drawings of the people and the country he knows so well." H. F.

+ Canadian Forum 22:286 D '42 240w

"The St. Lawrence is unique in that it has every sort of northern scenic beauty but the terrible. It has a unique history and its own unique quality of mystic attraction. To tell its story demanded not only the painter's eye and the poet's imagination, but the naturalist's far-ranging knowledge and the philosopher's wide comprehension. The river has been lucky in its historian. . . 'The St. Lawrence' is essentially a book to be kept and dipped into. A book for bird lovers. A bedside book. There is too much matter, too much close-packed thought, for swift savoring or rapid digestion." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p2 N 29 '42 1050w

"Very likely the best writing in the Rivers of America Series so far, and a good, full subject too."

+ New Yorker 18:83 N 7 '42 60w

BEUF, CARLO MARIA LUIGI. Cesare Borgia; the Machiavellian prince. 398p il $3.50 Oxford

B or 92 Borgia, Cesare 42-10497

"When Machiavelli looked around for a soldier-politician whose actions would illustrate his principles of statesmanship, he naturally chose Cesare Borgia. The Borgia was vigorous, ruthless, versed in cunning and strategy, possessed of a cynic's knowledge of human nature and backed by a powerful institution. He was the arch-Machiavellian in an age of glittering expediency. To Machiavelli's slight bewilderment the Borgia came to a very sudden end amid the ruin of his schemes. It is as an illustration of these principles that the non-specialist reader will find pleasure in this biography." (New Repub) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by G. C. Sellery

Am Hist R 48:87 O '42 700w

"In dealing with Cesare Borgia Count Carlo Beuf has the literary, semi-eulogistic approach that we are familiar with in English biography especially. He writes in agreeably sonorous periods with a general atmosphere of somewhat naive wonder. He is a little embarrassed, perhaps, all along by a tacit assumption that Cesare Borgia was not just an interesting animal but possibly a great man. . . Really, there is no occasion to pull one's punches in dealing with the bandits who made up the ruling classes of those days. . . [The author] has a keen sense of the contrasts that emerge as the lights of St. Peter's fall across these somber episodes. These certainly weave together into a story that stirs wide areas of emotion and can be told and read over and over again with a curiosity and an interest that never flag." Arthur Livingston

Books p4 Mr 22 '42 950w

"Count Carlo's biography opens no new vistas for scholars or scandalmongers; it is good reading with a capital preface and an unhelpful index. Few men who die at thirty-two have achieved as full a blaze of glory, as sudden a fall, as long a chronicle of crime nor as many biographies as Cesare. That he was no Galahad is admitted by the present

BEUF, C. M. L.—Continued
author, but we think Saint Thomas More would squirm to hear Cesare's fascist schemes called 'Utopian.' E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 36:40 My 1 '42 750w

"As fresh and vigorous a piece of writing about a fascinating epoch as has appeared in recent years. The author attempts to walk the narrow line between white-washing and denigration. He leans, sentimentally, to the former."

New Repub 106:406 Mr 23 '42 120w

"In a sense, everybody has written about Cesare Borgia, for he himself has been the subject of a shelf of books, and he is at least a minor character in almost every study of the Italian Renaissance. But everybody who loves that period can be exceedingly grateful that Count Beuf came to the conclusion that he had not written about Cesare. For if he can add few new facts, he looks at the old ones with a new eye, and his fresh reinterpretation makes a real contribution to our feeling for and knowledge of that era." T. C. Chubb

+ N Y Times p9 F 22 '42 900w

"There is in the professional learned journals a great deal of accurate research on Italian history of the period, but like all such work, it rarely gets out to the public. Count Carlo Beuf has done an admirable service in bringing to bear on this study of Cesare a wide and thorough knowledge of what has been accumulated about the Borgias and their times, a balanced judgment, and a gift for clear, rapid, and colorful prose. He is sensible without being dull, dispassionate without lacking feeling and imagination—a rare combination, and a most valuable one for a biographer of Cesare Borgia." Crane Brinton

+ Sat R of Lit 25:23 Ap 11 '42 400w

BEVERLEY-GIDDINGS, ARTHUR RAYMOND.
Larrish Hundred, 282p $2.50 Morrow

42-5681

Larrish Hundred was the name of a gracious Tidewater Virginia estate, which had belonged to the Larrish family for generations. It provided rich hunting and fishing lands, and a life of contentment for its owners and the Negro servants who waited on them. Ben Larrish, his younger sister Sarah, and Ben's son Benjy, with Sile, a handsome but troublesome neighbor, are the chief characters. The story is of one year in which Sarah's love for Sile brings changes for a time in the easy-going life of Larrish Hundred.

Booklist 38:251 Mr 15 '42

"There are few words Captain Beverley-Giddings uses, such as 'latterly' instead of the 'lately' common to Virginians, and 'Negress' in the place of 'colored woman' or 'Negro woman' which keep his work from seeming quite indigenous to the soil. Nevertheless, 'Larrish Hundred' is an interesting book, full of delightful humor, people who are really alive, and as right in atmosphere as most people could wish. . . . And then, for later editions, I should like to remind Captain Beverley-Giddings that in giving the judge's careful recipe for corn pones, he left out the salt. But the book as a whole has flavor." R. Y. Williams

+ — Books p4 Mr 15 '42 950w

"Judged by any critical standards, 'Larrish Hundred' is a notable first novel. It has an unusual plot, rich characterization, excellent background and polished writing. What gives it added stature as a fine creative piece of work is the fact that its author is an Englishman. . . . Especially impressive is his fine portrayal of the two 13-year-old lads, one white, one colored." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 15 '42 800w

"Only the Negroes appear truly alive. Perhaps it is their dialect which renders them more vivid than the Whites; perhaps it is that the author has a special gift for the description of simple souls. . . . But even if the rest of the book does not live up to the chapters dealing with the colored folk, 'Larrish Hundred' is a pleasant work of perfect untimeliness. No drug could be more effective to make one forget the daily headlines than these descriptions of a huntsman's paradise. What it lacks in subtlety it makes up for in earthiness, and we are happy to say earthiness of a gentleman's brand." R. R. Plant

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:14 Mr 21 '42 400w
Wis Lib Bul 38:87 My '42

BEVIN, ERNEST. The balance sheet of the future. 303p $2.75 McBride

330.942 Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain. World war, 1933—Economic aspects. Trade unions. Great Britain—Economic conditions (W) 41-52008

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"This is not a book intended for students or scholars, but it is singularly interesting, and for many Americans today may have practical value." E. P. Chase

Am Pol Sci R 36:585 Je '42 550w

Bookmark 3:10 Mr '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '42

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:571 Ap '42 70w

Pratt p21 My '42

"There is, of course, much rhetoric between the covers. But there is also crowding and concrete evidence of his belief that unemployment must be no more, that a decent standard of life must be guaranteed to every man and woman, that medical service and educational opportunity must become the equal right of all, that the chief means of production must be disciplined, that national sovereignty must be clipped, and international law, free access to the world's resources, free movement of goods and men be realized. The emphasis throughout is on socialism in economics, democracy in political arrangements, and a wider community of all men throughout the world." J. R. Walsh

+ Survey G 31:219 Ap '42 350w

BEVINGTON, MERLE MOWBRAY. Saturday review, 1855-1868; representative educated opinion in Victorian England. 415p $3.50 Columbia univ. press.

052 Saturday review of politics, literature, science and art (periodical). Public opinion—Great Britain. Great Britain—Civilization 41-25970

A study of the politics, religion, manners and customs, and particularly the literary and artistic tastes of the mid-Victorian era as they were reflected in the pages of one of the best known periodicals of the day, The Saturday Review. The time covered is chiefly the period of the editorship of John Douglas Cook, 1855 to 1863. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Bevington's scholarly study of the Review in its heyday will not interest the casual reader. The book is heavy with facts, figures and quotation, especially in the earlier pages. In the analysis, the student will find much that is of interest." M. A. C.

Canadian Forum 22:28 Ap '42 420w

"These chapters are discursive, readable, and filled with well-selected excerpts from numerous articles and reviews illustrative of the magazine's point of view and of the mannerisms, prejudices, and competence of their authors. Ascription of articles to various authors upon the authority of marked files and other evidence provides an extensive appendix which will be of peculiar service to librarians and literary historians. Altogether a readable, scholarly, and useful book." C. H. Grabo

+ Library Q 12:323 Ap '42 750w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 23:391 Je 13 '42 1050w

"Mr. Bevington's book is in every respect admirable. It is one of the Studies in English and Comparative Literature, published by the University of Columbia, and is yet another of those happy examples of American scholarship which have now become so justly celebrated. I have only a sentence left in which to commend it whole-heartedly to intelligent readers of every description." C. E. Vulliamy

+ Spec 188:512 My 29 '42 800w

BEZZERIDES, ALBERT ISAAC. There is a happy land. 279p $2.50 Holt

42-11113

Harv Cope enjoyed fishing and loafing, and he had a certain charm that, added to a fine voice and a way with a guitar, often relieved him of the responsibility of working. But he dreamed dreams, too, of what he could give his wife Bonnie—a real home instead of a tent, enough land to farm instead of food from relief agencies, silk stockings and fixings. And eventually after being ejected from the cannery lot, and sponging on friendly Ike Carter, Harv gets down to work and makes some of his dreams come true.

Booklist 38:426 J1 1 '42

"The story barely touches on the matter of 'The Grapes of Wrath,' being much more like another and earlier Steinbeck novel, 'Tortilla Flat,' full of the lazy humor, character touches and oddities of homely philosophy, along with bits of a fresh dialect, of that story of sun and wine-drenched paesanos. . . The novel is pleasant and often amusing, intelligent entertainment. And it is not all, by any means, laughing gas." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p10 My 3 '42 470w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '42

"The case of the Okies was far more 'effectively' presented by Steinbeck, and I think it unlikely that most of the people who were moved by 'The Grapes of Wrath' would care much about this novel one way or another, it is written so completely from the inside, without the dramatic anger and pity that an outsider feels. I found the Steinbeck book far more exciting. But the Copes aren't asked to prove much, they merely exist; so they are perhaps a little more rounded than the Joads. And perhaps when time has worn down the sharp point of the earlier book it will be found that this one has as lasting values." Robert Van Gelder

N Y Times p6 My 17 '42 550w

"A pleasant book, with, one suspects, a hidden moral."

New Yorker 18:70 My 2 '42 90w

"It does seem that there isn't enough there for book-length. But credit Bezzerides with a high good humor that gets over to you in every chapter, and an ear for good, folksy, profane talk that outlines character just as sharply as the psychological and sociological approaches that he doesn't use. His first book, 'The Long Haul,' was better, but this is good reading too." R. L. Nathan

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 My 9 '42 200w

Wis Lib Bul 38:97 Je '42

BIANCO, MRS MARGERY (WILLIAMS). Bright morning; drawings by Margaret Platt. 143p $1.50 Viking

(W) 42-20810

Life in London during the last years of Queen Victoria's reign is the background of this story of two small sisters and their English nannie, the organ grinder, the chimney sweep, and others. For children of eight to ten.

Booklist 39:73 N 1 '42

"It is a merry story told with the faint breath of homesickness that children will not notice but that grownups will share." M. L. Becker

+ Books p22 N 15 '42 180w

Cath World 156:378 D '42 70w

Reviewed by B. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 30 '42 270w

"A book to cherish—like photographs of 'when mother was a little girl.'"

+ Churchman 156:16 N 15 '42 10w

"Mrs. Bianco must have drawn upon her own childhood memories for such a natural understanding book of a vanished time." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:339 S '42 80w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 18:407 N '42 60w

"A charming story of remembered days in London and the English coast in the late 1800's." P. D. Edie

+ Library J 67:889 O 15 '42 30w

"We rather suspect this charming little book will be less popular with children than with their elders who knew and loved Victoria's England. . . Vivid, kindly descriptions of the houses of Victorians and their ways." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 67:910 O 15 '42 70w

"While recognizing Chris and Emmie as children like themselves, 8 to 11 year olds of today will enjoy the book's fresh unhackneyed setting and quiet humor. This little volume with its charmingly simple and appropriate format brings to children not only pleasure but a widened horizon through its effortless presentation of an earlier day." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p7 D 20 '42 360w

"It is notably well written and mothers should have a good time reading it aloud to an eight-to-eleven-year-old feminine audience." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 18:110 D 12 '42 50w

BIANCO, MRS MARGERY (WILLIAMS), and COLLISON, MARJORY. Penny and the white horse. [24p] il $2 Messner

(W) 42-23866

Penny was a little girl who loved horses. She didn't have a real horse to ride but the beautiful white horse in the park merry-go-round could make her believe he was real as she rode round and round on his back. One day a new manager got rid of all the horses and Penny was heartbroken until she discovered her beloved white horse doing duty on a small street merry-go-round.

"In these dreamy yet realistic scenes, with the merry-go-round swirling across the wide pages and the smiles of happy children shining, Penny puts a great dream upon the page. For it is the dreamlike quality of happiness in childhood that as long as it goes on it goes on for ever and ever." M. L. Becker

+ Books p30 N 15 '42 280w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:117 N 20 '42 20w

"Graceful line drawings with color accompany the slight and childlike story."

Horn Bk 19:31 Ja '43 70w

"Brief, pleasant story with universal appeal. Profusely illustrated with detailed pen-and-ink drawings airbrushed in vivid colors, suggesting glaring lights of amusement park, but confusing to a child." R. M. Davis

+ Library J 67:1068 D 1 '42 110w

"This simple little story is told with charm and understanding and the lovely drawings with their softly blended colors seem to combine the green and gold of Springtime with the lightheartedness of childhood, and the gaiety and romance which the merry-go-round has brought to many generations of children." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 31 '43 240w

New Yorker 18:105 D 12 '42 50w

BIBLE. WHOLE. Shorter Moffatt Bible. 327p $2 Harper

220.5 Bible. Whole—Selections

A selection of the most important passages from the Moffatt translation "prepared to emphasize [the Bible's] essential teaching about the working of God in human life."

Books p10 Ja 10 '43 230w

Christian Century 59:1186 S 30 '42 50w

"A unique feature is the topical arrangement of the subjects considered, covering some nine pages of introduction. This enables the reader to turn quickly to any subject in which he is especially interested. The text is of course the complete translation of the entire Bible by Dr. Moffatt, which has gained general commendation by students in recent years." A. F. G.

BIBLE. WHOLE—Continued

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 D 5 '42
270w

"This compact, inexpensive edition of selections from the best of an outstanding translation of the Bible is worthy of the space it takes in a knapsack, brief case, pocket, or beside a favorite easy chair. It is a more solid and perhaps a more helpful book than many of the more pious devotional books for sailors and soldiers now for sale either with blue or khaki cover." J. B. Pritchard

+ Crozer Q 20:84 Ja '43 300w

"A convenient and attractive book." John Knox

+ J Religion 23:76 Ja '43 30w

BIBLE. NEW TESTAMENT. GOSPELS. Jesus' story; a little New Testament; with il. by Maud and Miska Petersham. 120p $1.50 Macmillan

232.9 Jesus Christ—Juvenile literature.
Bible. New Testament—Selections
(W) 42-50180

The story of the life of Christ, in Bible text selected from the King James version, arranged in the form of a story, and illustrated in color. For readers eight to ten.

Booklist 39:187 Ja 1 '43

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 N 15 '42 150w

"The selection has been made of the simplest and most fitting telling of these stories for young readers and listeners. This lovely book, just the right size to hold, arranged in paragraphs in place of verses, printed in large type, generously filled with the Petersham's reverent and satisfying two-tone and full-color pictures, is a perfect gift for children, one to be read over and over, one worthy of a place in every home." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 D 14 '42
180w

"Little children may here find a lovely introduction to the life of Jesus, the stories that he told, the inspired lessons that he taught, the deeds of kindness that he did. The pictures in color will attract many children to read a text which is given in the words of the four Gospels."

+ Horn BK 19:31 Ja '43 70w

"Profusely and reverently illustrated in two colors and with a number of pictures in full color, it is a beautiful and satisfying New Testament for children." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 67:837 O 15 '42 100w

"Pictures in color by Maud and Miska Petersham which are far more satisfactory than most Bible illustrations." K. S. W.

New Yorker 18:116 D 12 '42 40w

BIBLE. NEW TESTAMENT. GOSPELS. Parables told to the people by Jesus of Nazareth as recorded in the Gospels; with drawings by Cyrus LeRoy Baldridge. 51p $2.50 Harper

226.8 Jesus Christ—Parables 42-25452

"This book contains the sayings of Jesus generally described as 'parables,' accompanied by eight four-color and full-page illustrations and a score of pencil drawings. The text, in the familiar King James Version, is beautifully printed, with modern paragraphing and punctuation." Books

"The pictures, which have the sweep and power of murals, help to bring to life the imperishable words of the Master. As a gift book this edition of great Bible passages has strong appeal."

+ Books p16 D 13 '42 100w

"The drawings are many and good, but 'drawings' seems inadequate to describe the eleven pages in full color. Baldridge has done a magnificent piece of work here."

+ Christian Century 59:1426 N 18 '42 70w

"It is a hopeful sign that amid a world in flames artist and publishers alike so obviously believe that there are folks who will prize the opportunity of leafing through a volume which will lead them back to the land where these words were first spoken; who will find early memories refreshed, new insights kindled as they read once more ancient words of profound understanding and of deathless beauty, as able today to challenge and to chide, to comfort and inspire, as they were when first uttered nearly two millennia ago; and who will find in the illustrations which have come from a long attachment to the land and its message a fresh aid to understanding the words of one who, like the householder he is said to have spoken of, brought forth out of his treasure things new and old." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 20:81 Ja '43 300w

BICE, CLARE. Jory's Cove [il. by the author]. 104p $2 Macmillan

41-21551

Ten-year-old Jamie lived in a small Nova Scotian fishing village, called Jory's Cove, and his greatest ambition was to own a certain blue sailboat, the Sou'wester. The story, written for boys of eight to ten, describes Jamie's achievement of his wish.

"A nice, friendly sort of book." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 26 '42 50w

"An appealing account of the unhurried, friendly, simple life of these fisherfolk. The atmosphere is enhanced by delicate wash-drawings and full-page illustrations in color by the author. Will be useful for its information as well as its story value. For boys nine to twelve." Marguerite Nahigian

+ Library J 66:1096 D 15 '41 80w

BICKEL, KARL AUGUST. Mangrove coast; the story of the west coast of Florida; phot. by Walker Evans. 312p il $3.50 Coward-McCann

975.9 Florida—History (W) 42-36184

Historical description of the west coast of Florida, from pre-Spanish days to the present. It is chiefly anecdotal and explodes some of the tales of the early explorers.

Booklist 38:327 My 1 '42

"Mr. Bickel writes with the quick, nervous style of a newspaper man. Consequently there is no waste space in his book. The words he lavishes on his favorite explorers are no more than they deserve and the whole is a well rounded, informative, entertaining book." Thomas Sugrue

+ Books p2 My 31 '42 1150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '42

"This is a book which has cried out to be written and which is to be welcomed with a warm delight. Its author has no truck with resort reporters. . . This is a grand book. It is illustrated with thirty-one diverse and enlightening photographs. It sent this reviewer (in spite of some personal knowledge) to an atlas. All it needs is a map of its own."

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 19 '42 550w

Wis Lib Bul 38:85 My '42

BIDDLE, FRANCIS BEVERLEY. Mr Justice Holmes. 214p $2.50 Scribner

B or 92 Holmes, Oliver Wendell, 1841-1935 (W) 42-25665

Character sketch and reminiscences of the late Justice Holmes, by the present Attorney General of the United States, who was for one year, 1911-1912, the justice's secretary. Index.

Booklist 39:200 Ja 15 '43

"To the general reader interested in the life, ideas, and writings of one of the greatest Americans of our time, this luminous presentation is a 'must' book; no lawyer, proud of his profession, will need urging to partake of its delights." A. G. Hays

+ Nation 155:686 D 19 '42 900w

New Repub 108:61 Ja 11 '43 110w

"Sometimes Mr. Biddle's piety gets the better of his judgment. The 'wonderful speeches' are not all wonderful. . . . When, however, it comes to Holmes's economics, Mr. Biddle does not hesitate to administer criticism." E. S. Corwin

+ N Y Times p2 D 13 '42 1350w

"This intimate account of the growth of Holmes' thought and personality is gracefully and warmly done."

+ New Yorker 18:99 N 28 '42 50w

"This sketch, in twelve chapters, of the life and work of Mr. Justice Holmes is an exceptionally delightful, balanced, and interesting book. I raced through its two hundred pages without halt when I first picked it up and have thoroughly enjoyed re-reading it in preparing this review." Bernhard Knollenberg

+ Sat R of Lit 26:15 Ja 9 '43 850w

Reviewed by Marshall Bragdon

Spring'd Republican p6 N 14 '42 900w

Time 41:88 Ja 4 '43 1000w

BIDDLE, GERTRUDE (BOSLER) ed. See Philadelphia sesquicentennial celebration. Notable women of Pennsylvania

BINCHY, DANIEL A. Church and state in fascist Italy. 774p $9 (31s 6d) Oxford

261.7 Church and state in Italy. Roman Catholic church in Italy. Concordat of 1929 42-14473

"The central theme [of this book by the] Professor of Legal History and Jurisprudence in University College, Dublin, is the Lateran treaties of 1929 between the Papacy and the Fascist Government of Italy. The first part of the book sets the background of the settlement, and includes an admirable chapter on Pius XI and another, no less admirable, on Mussolini and his brother Arnaldo. A second part deals with the political side of the settlement of 1929; a third (which is much the longest and, indeed, the core of the book) contains ten chapters on the religious side; the fourth and last part attempts a 'balance to date' (1929-39) of the results of the settlement." Manchester Guardian

Reviewed by Count Carlo Sforza

+ Commonweal 35:526 Mr 20 '42 5200w

"It is a happy combination of well documented history, frank criticism and warm loyalty to the Holy See. The volume is as readable a historical treatise as has appeared in recent months."

+ Commonweal 37:212 D 11 '42 110w

"Professor Binchy is fair to Protestants without being overfair to Catholics, and he can combine an abhorrence for Fascism with a deep love for the people of Italy—a people not only shrewd and witty but also, as he says, 'one of the most kindly and tolerant peoples on earth.'" Ernest Barker

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 21 '41 500w

"This work performs an international service. It is important to Catholics, to students of religious history, and to all exposed to the impact of Fascism; between them a considerable section of humanity. Nobody would call it light reading. Professor Binchy uses the correct and learned style proper to all legal savant writing about the Papacy, which makes one the more grateful for frequently witty and occasionally malicious asides." Freda White

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:62 Ja 24 '42 1000w

Reviewed by C. D. Burns

Spec 167:450 N 7 '41 700w

"The desert traveller, lighting upon the columns of Palmyra, cannot feel greater delight than the student of Italian affairs on approaching Professor Binchy's work. Massive in its erudition, scrupulous in its impartiality, cogent in its reasoning, sound in its judgments, it is a model of contemporary history."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p526 O 25 '41 1050w

BINGER, WALTER DAVID, and RAILEY, HILTON HOWELL. What the citizen should know about civilian defense; il. by Arthur Smith. 183p $2.50 Norton

355.23 Civilian defense (W) 42-36208

This book reviews the story of England's civilian defense, tells what bombs are and what they do, devotes a chapter to germ warfare, describes A.R.P. and the effect of bombs on civilians, and closes with a chapter on what the citizen must know and do. Walter D. Binger is an engineer, the chairman of the National technological civil protection committee; Hilton H. Railey is a special writer on matters of civilian defense for the New York Times; both men served in the army in the first World war. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:362 Je 1 '42

Bookmark 3:5 My '42

"Messrs. Binger and Railey, engineer and journalist, have contributed greatly to understanding the basic problems of civilian defense, and their book—one of a series designed by the publishers to inform United States citizens about the armed services and the war—is an excellent, thorough, workmanlike job." Emmet Crozier

+ Books p14 My 24 '42 350w

"Binger's and Railey's book . . . is packed with sanity and commonsense. . . . Especially valuable is the emphasis put on the need for an engineering approach to the problems of protecting civilians against air attack and those of minimizing the effect of bombing in structures and services. A warning is sounded against spending so much on civil protection as to interfere with the war effort."

+ Eng N 128:95 Je 4 '42 120w

N Y Times p14 My 24 '42 380w

"We've had lots of more or less authoritative civilian-defense handbooks and perhaps too few good, solid technical jobs on the subject. This book falls somewhere in between—a competent general discussion of bomb, gas, and germ warfare against civilians and the methods of protection from it."

New Yorker 18:68 My 30 '42 70w

Reviewed by J. I. Greene

Sat R of Lit 25:11 Jl 4 '42 160w

BINGHAM, ALFRED MITCHELL. Techniques of democracy. 314p $3 Duell

321.8 Democracy. Political science (W) 42-36353

"Faith in democracy is at a lower point today, says the author of this book (editor of Common Sense), than at any time during the past hundred and fifty years. Why? Because it has failed to achieve the results expected of it. And why has it failed? Largely because its traditional techniques—the ballot, the representative assembly, the party system, and the like—are not equal to the heavier burden of public business loaded onto our governmental machinery today as compared with a century ago. Only as democracy succeeds in modernizing its techniques can it hope to become more efficient and thus forestall the development here of some version of the totalitarian State. . . . It treats the problem of an ailing democracy from the standpoint of the professional manager: democracy is low in public esteem because it is inefficient and it is inefficient because its traditional ways of getting things done are not well adapted to the things it is now called upon to do." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 39:95 N 15 '42

Reviewed by L. M. Hacker

Books p14 N 29 '42 800w

Library J 67:795 S 15 '42 50w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr

Nation 155:627 D 5 '42 1000w

"Mr. Bingham approaches the problems of the new democratic order out of an exceptionally rich and varied experience. As an editor and publicist, a former state senator and the present state organization officer of the Connecticut office of the OPA, he has had firsthand contact with governmental problems from

BINGHAM, A. M.—Continued
many angles. This leads him to avoid most of the sweeping generalizations and musty clichés which encumber so much of our writing about democracy and to focus his attention upon specific problem areas and the techniques applicable to them. The result is a volume of unusual freshness and vitality." I. D. Kingsley
+ New Repub 107:720 N 30 '42 1100w

"It is a stimulating book, is written in a language that the layman can understand, and is distinctly worth reading and pondering by every one concerned with the health of our body politic. Most of all, it is a practical book—in the common sense of the word 'practical'—and should appeal strongly to the hard-headed business executive and public administrator." C. S. Joslyn
+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 N 21 '42 850w

BINGHAM, FLORENCE C., ed. Community life in a democracy. 256p $1 Nat congress of parents and teachers

323.35 Community life. Social work. U.S.—Social conditions (W) 42-23376

"A volume interpreting the American way of life and emphasizing the part to be played by the Parent-Teachers Association as 'guardian of community welfare.'" School & Society

Booklist 39:177 Ja 1 '43

School & Society 56:392 O 24 '42 30w

BINNS, ARCHIE. Roaring land. 284p il $3 McBride

979.7 Washington (state)—History. Frontier and pioneer life—Washington (state). (W) 42-36212

"A blend of reminiscence, observation, and history about Puget Sound and the Columbia River, cities, timberland, desert, orchards, and mountains." New Yorker

Booklist 38:366 Je 1 '42

"This is not a guide book. It is a charming and gracefully written essay about the things which interest the author either because of something inherent in themselves or because he thinks they should be known in order to have an understanding of the state and its people. He has selected well. The photographs are excellent except for the conventionally dull picture of logging." S. H. Holbrook
+ Books p4 My 31 '42 1050w

"Memories of the land of boyhood, if well told, are always interesting; and so much the better if interlarded with great affairs or historic events. Archie Binns' memories of the adolescent period of the Puget Sound country, and of himself, are of this variety." R. L. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 17 '42 480w

"Recommended." Catherine Van Dyne

+ Library J 67:413 My 1 '42 60w

"The 'Roaring Land' is authentic stuff. Archie Binns knows his own country and limns its outlines here with a freedom and vigor entirely fitting." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p9 My 31 '42 750w

"A good job of its kind, but neither circumstantial enough to give us any adequate detail on Grand Coulee Dam, for example, nor detached enough to make much out of the broad social movements that built up this still developing frontier."

+ New Yorker 18:68 My 30 '42 90w

Wis Lib Bul 38:118 Jl '42

BIRD, GEORGE LLOYD, and MERWIN, FRÉDERIC EATON, eds. Newspaper and society; a book of readings. 627p $5.35; text ed $4 Prentice-Hall

070.1 Press—U.S. 42-2922

"The volume is directed at showing the newspaper's function in the 'pattern of society,' stressing its part in public opinion formation and propaganda dissemination. It contains upwards of two hundred selected writings arranged topically in twenty-eight chapters, each introduced by a note by one of the editors. The range of the field is indicated by a few of the headings: 'Concepts of Public Opinion,' 'Freedom of the Press in the United States,' 'How and Why News is Suppressed,' 'The Struggle between Press and Radio,' 'The Newspaper Guild,' and 'How the Press Sees the Government.' The editors spared no pains to make the selection of authors representative of all aspects of newspaper manufacture and of its relation to the community." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

Reviewed by E. D. Johns

Am J Soc 48:274 S '42 390w

"The book presents a unity unusual in one compiled from so many sources, which is largely due to the high type of materials selected and the care with which they are fitted together. While written for college classes, with such aids as lists of questions and extensive reading references, it furnishes for the general reader an excellent presentation of the facts and views relating to the newspaper as an instrumentality of democratic society." E. L. Shoup

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:559 Je '42 450w

"A book of readings primarily designed to acquaint students of journalism with the functions of the newspaper and the influences it exerts upon other institutions and the public-opinion process. Making use of a background that embraces both teaching experience and practical newspaper work, the editors have, on the whole, selected their material sagaciously and organized it with skill. The result is a good source book, well calculated to open the eyes of pre-professional students to the broader social implications of the newspaper." C. D. Clark

+ Am Soc R 7:881 D '42 420w

"The comprehensive scope of the work makes it outstanding as an undergraduate text, and for supplementary readings and bibliography it is adaptable for graduate courses, particularly where library facilities are limited." P. G. Willis

Ann Am Acad 221:243 My '42 200w

BIRDWELL, RUSSELL. Women in battle dress. 198p il $2 Fine editions

940.5315396 World war, 1939—Women's work. Women in Great Britain 42-25456

"The actual theme is the work of British women in the various types of service which have been opened to them in the uniformed forces, but American women—and men too—will find in it a stimulus to their own desire to serve and a good deal of help toward answering the inevitable question, What can I do?" Christian Century

"The brief, stirring stories that make the book such good material for war-work speeches are from all walks of life. It is as a human document and guide to action that the report will have its usefulness." M. L. Becker

+ Books p28 D 13 '42 320w

Christian Century 59:1495 D 2 '42 60w

"In a pleasant easy style, with sentences rather than paragraphs, Mr. Birdwell gives a clear picture of English women at war. . . The reader feels that he tours the country with the author, meets soldier after soldier, hears story upon story until a great admiration rises in his mind for those who have come forward so quietly and done so well the work that their country demanded of them. . . The book gives an account of a subject which is of vital concern to every one of us. It does well what it proposed to do." Mother Mary Lawrence

+ Commonweal 37:284 Ja 1 '43 420w

BIRKELAND, JORGEN MAURICE. Microbiology and man. 478p il $4 Crofts; Wood

616.01 Infection and infectious diseases. Micro-organisms. Micro-organisms, Pathogenic 42-19972

"An account of the diverse properties and characteristics of microorganisms, a description of the various tools and techniques for their handling, and an inquiry into their subtle relationships to everyday life." (Subtitle) Glossary. Index.

"The author has a good grasp of his subject and writes interestingly and concisely, sometimes all too briefly. The book is relatively free from factual error, and is generally up-to-date. Although there are several excellent pictures and graphs, it would be much improved by more illustrations, tables, and specific instances. Laboratory methodology is almost entirely absent. The material is developed primarily for the student of medical and public health bacteriology, although the author has aimed at a general treatise." Martin Frohisher
+ Am J Pub Health 33:91 Ja '43 320w
School & Society 56:195 S 5 '42 30w

BIRNEY, HOFFMAN. Brothers of doom; the story of the Pizarros of Peru. 322p $3 Putnam 985 Peru—History. Pizarro, Francisco, marquis (W) 42-12917
This history of the conquest of Peru centers in the story of the lives and adventures of Francisco Pizarro and his three half-brothers, Hernando, Juan and Gonzalo. Index.

Booklist 38:438 Jl 15 '42

"Those who have read Prescott or Means will never forget [this story]; those who have missed the classics are referred to the present volume as a more than welcome addition to Conquistador lore, to be placed in a permanent library for more than one reading. Battles, plots, stratagems, treachery, assassination, civil war, rebellion, all form a tapestry of sordid, shameful deeds and Homeric exploits." F. J. Searies

+ Books p5 My 3 '42 1650w
"Not a scholarly piece of work, but easy reading and recommended." G. W. Hill
+ Library J 67:367 Ap 15 '42 60w

"The reader will find many lively descriptions and a number of apt characterizations, yet I feel Mr. Birney was too restrained in the use of descriptive material of the sort he accumulated on his air survey over the route of the Pizarros." Ernesto Montenegro
+ — N Y Times p17 Je 7 '42 1150w

"Only a brave man, or a foolhardy one, would risk comparison with the scholarship, literary skill, and dramatic genius of William Prescott, by retelling the conquest of Peru. Fortunately no comparison with Prescott's great classic is required in the present instance. Mr. Birney, making no claim to specialized research or originality, has sought to provide us with an accurate popularization of one of the most thrilling episodes in the long annals of imperial aggression. He has taken the full-bodied fruit of Prescott, squeezed out the narrative essence, added his own tang, and given us the cocktail juice in rapid-fire prose so we can catch the eight-fifteen interurban. . . It is too bad that a book requiring such extensive preparation and one so excellently written and organized should have glaring errors in Spanish." Carleton Beals
+ — Sat R of Lit 25:16 My 30 '42 850w

BISHOP, MRS CLAIRE (HUCHET). Man who lost his head; il. by Robert McCloskey. unp $1 Viking 42-25584

Story of a man who lost his head and tried to replace it with various substitutes—a pumpkin, a parsnip, a wood block—but none of them proved satisfactory. Finally he met a small headstrong boy who was willing to help. After the boy had got a detailed description of the original head, he was able, with a bit of magic, to restore it to its owner.

Booklist 39:143 D 15 '42

"It is, in short, a nonsense yarn like 'The Five Chinese Brothers' of this author's debut. The pictures are in Mr. McCloskey's best vein, which is mighty good; they are droll, beautifully drawn, and with a rough mockery that the tale demands." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 D 27 '42 200w

Cath World 156:372 D '42 40w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 37:120 N 20 '42 20w

"Jolly, nonsense accompanied by diverting pictures." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 18:417 N '42 10w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 67:832 O 15 '42 50w

"Recommended for the picture-book age." J. E. Wooster
+ Library J 67:1106 D 15 '42 40w

BISHOP, HERMAN, and EVANS, BERGEN. Your car is made to last. 186p $1.50 Putnam 629.28 Automobiles (W) 42-15462

Advice on the care to give in order to prolong the life of an automobile. An experienced garage man furnished the facts, and a university instructor wrote the book. "The purpose of this book is to explain the workings of an automobile and its various parts, to list the symptoms of trouble that every driver ought to know, to suggest what he can do about them, and to set down what the experience of the best drivers and mechanics has found to be the most economical manner of operating a car and of getting the most mileage from tires and gasoline." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 38:421 Jl 1 '42

Bookmark 4:6 N '42

Books p16 Je 21 '42 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '42

Pratt p10 D '42

BISHOP, MORRIS GILBERT (W. BOLING-BROKE JOHNSON, pseud). Spilt milk; drawings by Alison Mason Kingsbury and Richard Taylor. 159p $2 Putnam

817

42-13845

Collection of humorous verses and limericks, many of which have previously appeared in The Saturday Evening Post or The New Yorker.

"Mr. Bishop is a gentleman thoroughly familiar with classical poetry in all its forms. He imitates those forms expertly, and begins some of his poems with lines that are truly fine. But always he seems to be saying, 'Shucks, I can't do as well as these boys did, so I'll just clown it.'" Thomas Sugrue
+ — Books p27 N 1 '42 400w

"Here is nonsense of the first order, and the verses are skillful in construction. Even the limericks are acceptable."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 3 '42
150w

Reviewed by S. E. Hyman

— New Repub 107:92 Jl 20 '42 70w

New Yorker 18:68 My 30 '42 30w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer

Yale R n s 32:371 winter '43 280w

BISHOP, MORRIS GILBERT (W. BOLING-BROKE JOHNSON, pseud) ed. Treasury of British humor; ed, with an introduction. 320p $3 Coward-McCann
827.08 (W) 42-50236

"Contains samples of British humor from the 7th century to the present day. . . Here you will find Chaucer and Angela Thirkell, Shakespeare and A. P. Herbert, Sheridan and Leacock, Swift and Saki. There are over a hundred contributors who still have the power to make the world laugh." (Publisher's note) Index of authors and titles.

Booklist 39:180 Ja 1 '43

"In uncommon mercy, the accomplished editor of this storehouse of fun has bravely put himself and his own definitions of humor on record in an entertaining introduction to his anthology. Only pieces which have made Mr. Bishop himself laugh loudly, chuckle or smile broadly have been included. The reader can therefore pounce avidly on the pieces he provides, to discover whether they make him laugh, chuckle or smile too! Since the 'Treasury' is as full of variety as it is of first-class and often unexpected selections, the average response in hilarity should be high." Iris Barry

BISHOP, M. G.—Continued
+ Books p32 D 6 '42 1000w

Reviewed by Irwin Edman
Nation 155:719 D 26 '42 1300w

"I think Mr. Bishop might have done better by Max Beerbohm and Evelyn Waugh, and perhaps by Johnson and Burns. But his lapses are few and are anyhow matters of taste. The book may fall short of the highest requirements for a handpicked library; but I have to admit it does fine for reading in bed." Louis Kronenberger

+ — New Repub 108:153 F 1 '43 800w

"With some exceptions, Mr. Bishop's collection seems milder than the American anthology. The genteel touch is more in evidence; except for Chaucer and one or two others, there is an almost too obvious avoidance of the humor of sex. Where the English are robustious, the note is forced and literary, as in Belloc and Chesterton. On the other hand, there is practically no bad taste in any of these eight hundred and twenty pages, whereas the Americans are far more often guilty of slapstick, inept exaggeration, and even vulgarity." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:95 N 28 '42 800w

"Mr. Bishop's selection is broad, and, in length of time, comprehensive. There are two regrettable omissions, two pre-eminent humorists of the present generation, Maugham and Nicholson. . . . Our present age has seen the birth of one undoubted masterpiece of English humor, Eric Knight's 'The Flying Yorkshireman,' which should not have been abbreviated, for in the eight-hundred pages of this entertaining book there are half a dozen authors who have little right to be present. But it is part of the fun of anthology to show the compiler how much better the reader would have done the job. . . . Mr. Bishop renders a service to the cause of Anglo-American misunderstanding. We [the English] shall ever be charged with too much fog and too little humor. Let it be so. In that kindly mist of misapprehension the exploring American will enjoy ceaseless surprise. This 'Treasury of British Humor' is rich in evidence of how un-English the English really are." Cecil Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 25:30 D 5 '42 950w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 13 '42 390w

BISHOP, MORRIS GILBERT (W. BOLINGBROKE JOHNSON, pseud). Widening stain. 242p $2 Knopf

Detective story.

42-4715

Booklist 38:252 Mr 15 '42

"Here's one of the most amusing and generally worth-while bafflers in quite some time, a highly recommended item for all the better fans, especially those who have been through high school." Will Cuppy

+ Books p15 F 1 '42 400w
Reviewed by Mort. Post
New Repub 106:470 Ap 6 '42 150w

"The limericks contribute greatly to the entertainment value of the book, but there is a real mystery in it, and a baffling one at that. . . . We do not know who W. Bolingbroke Johnson is, but he writes a good story with an academic atmosphere that is not so highly rarefied as we have been led to believe it should be in university circles." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 F 8 '42 240w
"There are some ruthless characterizations of college professors, one of whom is a limerick addict, in this first mystery."
+ New Yorker 17:64 F 7 '42 40w

"Blithe, erudite, satirical, and shivery yarn of intrigues and worse in educational circles, with criminal well-hidden until hair-raising and rousing finish. Full marks."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 F 7 '42 50w
Time 39:80 Mr 2 '42 50w

BISHOP, WILLIAM SAMUEL. Christ and the Spirit; an essay in New-Testament Christology. 200p $2 Longmans

231.3 Holy Spirit. Jesus Christ—Person and offices 41-7934

"This is the completion of a trilogy upon which Dr. Bishop has been working for some years. The earlier volumes are Spirit and Personality, and The Theology of Personality. The theological point of view is much like that of the late William Porcher DuBose of Sewanee—a warm, somewhat mystical, devout interpretation of the relation between the heavenly Christ and the Spirit." Christian Century

"Most of the authorities cited are from an earlier generation and, as the result of the developments taking place in New Testament research since 1900, the problems with which the book deals are not those that arise for us today. This is a pity; for the author might have had something of importance to say on them. Most of the book might have been written sixty years ago."

Christian Century 58:832 Je 25 '41 140w

"Students who have been trained in the historical interpretation of the Bible will find great difficulty in following Dr. Bishop's arguments. But this will not prevent them paying due tribute to a rich, fertile and deeply spiritual mind." B. S. E.

Churchman 156:19 Ja 15 '42 80w

BITTINGER, DESMOND WRIGHT. Black and white in the Sudan. 343p il $1.50 Brethren pub.

916.6 Sudan

"[A] descriptive and analytical treatment of the geographic, political, and social situation in this strategic African crossroads. . . . The book is divided into three parts—the Kingdoms and Cultures of Ancient Sudan, Europe in the Sudan, and the New Education in the Old Sudan. Its purpose, the author announces, is to provide a comprehensive description of 'the cultural background of the Sudanese peoples, the recent impingement of European culture upon it and the ends sought in the present attempt, to bring about further cultural fusion.'" Ann Am Acad

"The book is well written, splendidly documented, readable, and interesting throughout." C. W. Coulter

+ Ann Am Acad 22:214 My '42 470w

"A very enlightening book."

+ Christian Century 58:1474 N 26 '41 130w

BLACK, DOROTHY (MRS MACLEISH). My love belongs to me. 296p $2 Macrae Smith co.

42-19447

Novel of the present war. It is the story of a lonely country girl working in a London shop, who marries an equally lonely soldier, and learns to her dismay that he is not a farmer's son, as she supposed.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p16 Ag 23 '42 150w

"Sentimental, but well told, will please readers of light romance."

+ Wis Lib Bul 38:162 N '42

BLACK, JOHN DONALD. Parity, parity, parity. 367p $2 Harvard com. on research in the social sciences, Littauer center, Cambridge, Mass.

338.5 Prices. Agricultural administration—U.S. Farm produce 42-17275

"The purpose of the book is to acquaint the general reader with the development of the parity concept as applied to agriculture and its effect on other groups. . . . Professor Black's theses are three: (1) that the welfare of society demands parity not only for agriculture but also for labor and capital, (2) that for their own good these three groups must begin to consider the national interest and not seek to secure special advantages each for itself,

(3) that if the parity concept is to be retained as a national policy it should be based on annual income rather than on prices and hourly wage rates." Pol Sci Q

"The book makes a substantial contribution to a clearer understanding of the relative positions which agriculture, capital, and labor have occupied, and now occupy, in the nation's economy." Asher Hobson

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:1185 D '42 300w

"The author states that he is offering a readable book of 'journalistic style'. This is true only of a few chapters. Some, such as those dealing with parity by commodities, the geography of parity and others, will be heavy going for those not versed in the vocabulary of social science, and not interested in the details of parity working for agriculture. Now and then, some curious ex cathedra statements slip into the text. . . . But these are minor faults. The study is the most comprehensive and impartial to date of parity in agriculture." E. De S. Brunner

+ — Pol Sci Q 57:617 D '42 600w

Reviewed by C. H. Hamilton
Social Forces 21:241 D '42 750w

BLACK, ROBERT. Art of Jacob Epstein. 251p il $3.50 World pub.

735 Epstein, Jacob 42-25526

"One hundred photographs of Epstein's sculpture and a series of 75 drawings. An introductory sketch traces Epstein's career as a sculptor from his early days on New York's lower East Side where he was first interested in drawing, to his studies in Paris, his residence in England, and his trips back to the United States. The sculpture illustrated is representative of all his work. The drawings are a series of torso studies made in 1928." Booklist

Booklist 39:134 D 15 '42

"The problem of Epstein's work is the problem of personality. He presents one of the best cases among modern artists for the discipline of a superabundant energy and temperament by plastic and historical principles. Only when he arrives at the true balance of these elements does he produce work that is likely to endure. Incidentally this problem was intelligently submitted and objectified by Epstein himself in his recent autobiography, 'Let There Be Sculpture.' It is not so submitted, discussed, or in any way intelligently dealt with in the present volume. The text is as inept an exposition as has appeared in any recent book of this sort, where the curator style's dulllest ceremonies are the rule. The photographs are of all kinds, mostly museum prints, showing no control or appropriateness of lighting." M. D. Zabel

— Nation 155:626 D 5 '42 1250w

BLACKMUR, RICHARD P. Second world. ltd ed 29p $2.50 Cummington press, Cummington, Mass.

811 42-17666

Poems in which the author "combines poetic insight with critical analysis to establish a new and penetrating point of view for the observing of man today." (Publisher's note)

Books p27 Q 18 '42 200w

"R. P. Blackmur belongs with those who do write poetry. This new volume, his second, is slender compared with 'From Jordan's Delight,' published in 1937, but it shows a substantial advance in technique and content if not in lyricism. Nowhere is there evidence that the poet has had to call on sleight-of-hand for insight. Nor has he fallen into the other extreme of writing in a vacuum or trying to row a paper boat on the surrealist stream of fiery muddiness. Rather the poems in this book are nakedly of and about the human spirit, seriously concerned with the state of the individual caught in the enormous trap of a universe of things and theories. . . . The fault of Blackmur is his deadly seriousness unlightened by even the grim humor of irony, a lack of playfulness, an over-earnestness." Oscar Williams

+ — Nation 155:353 O 10 '42 850w

"R. P. Blackmur is known as a critic of literature and writes verse as a minor critic of life. There is no warmth, violence, force or direction. Instead there are flat statements of negation, boredom, denial. . . . In his longest and best poem Mr. Blackmur makes an unidentified character address the court as one might indict the whole world, rather like Auden's speeches in 'The Orators,' only less diverting. But the mood and something of the manner clearly go back to the dramatic monologue that T. S. Eliot (with the help of Ezra Pound) made over from Browning." P. M. Jack

N Y Times p16 Je 14 '42 460w

Reviewed by J. F. Nims

Poetry 61:508 D '42 90w

"That the most subtle critic of contemporary poetry should produce a book of highly subtle verse—that was to be expected. It is to be hoped, however, that he has not forgotten the manner of his first book of poems, 'From Jordan's Delight,' and that he will be able in future to bring about some compromise between the lyric delight of that work and the pyrotechnics of 'The Second World'—a third world, where the Empsons cease from troubling and the Richards are at rest." Dudley Fitts

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:15 Ag 15 '42 500w

BLACKSTOCK, JOSEPHINE. Wings for Nikias; a story of the Greece of today; foreword by Cimon Diamantopoulos; drawings by Raffaello Busoni. 181p $2 Putnam

(W) 42-23977

Nikias is a modern Greek boy, whose frail body is filled with a love of his country and its age-old heritage. He is a great admirer of the modern airplane, as well. When the war strikes Greece, Nikias is able to carry a warning to Greek soldiers in the mountains, and besides saving a regiment, he has an airplane trip.

Booklist 39:143 D 15 '42

"We have had stories in which vivid ancestral customs of modern Greeks have been given our children, and this one gives them the wings of heroism today." M. L. Becker

+ Books p26 N 15 '42 400w

"Background of village life in present-day Greece and brave spirit of its people make this a timely item." M. M. Clark

+ Library J 67:1068 D 1 '42 80w

"There is much about the country, its customs and its people, that is fresh and interesting, and the author writes of the Greeks with respect and admiration and real affection. Though the characters are only lightly drawn, young Nikias has an appealing quality and there is enough action to sustain the interest. We have few books for young readers on modern Greece and this is a welcome addition to the list." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 17 '43 320w

BLAIR, EDNA. Food garden; il. by Laurence Blair. 147p $2 Macmillan

635 Vegetable gardening (W) 42-10909

Practical book for the amateur gardener, with many black and white illustrations showing the various kinds of vegetables and fruits and the pests which affect them. Index.

Booklist 38:363 Je 1 '42

"It might have been called 'Vegetable Gardening at a Glance'—which is doubtless what a lot of people want. The picturizing is well and clearly done in the vigorous technique which Mr. Blair has so fully developed over the years; it's fun for even an old hand to pore over them." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p15 Ap 19 '42 70w

"The classification is intelligent, and the section of fruits particularly helpful, extending as it does to currants, quince and the increasing family of 'berries.' A feature of the volume is its 20 double-page spreads of line drawings with accompanying captions. Intriguing to some, they will impress others as being on the fussy, ornate side."

BLAIR, EDNA—Continued

+ — Boston Globe p17 Ap 22 '42 100w
Christian Century 59:498 Ap 15 '42 40w
J Home Econ 34:553 O '42 70w
Wis Lib Bul 38:83 My '42

BLAIR, LAURENCE, il. See Blair, E. Food garden

BLAIR, WALTER. Horse sense in American humor from Benjamin Franklin to Ogden Nash. 341p il $2.75 Univ. of Chicago press 817.09 Humor 42-16205

"Professor Blair's project is to record and illustrate the annals of one aspect of American humor, namely, the use of laughter as the feather to speed the flight of the arrow, truth, Americans, as a people always on or near the frontier, are peculiarly attached to that form of popular wisdom or homespun philosophy which is called 'horse sense,' in distinction from, and often in contempt of, the subtleties of experts and the truths accessible only to scientists." (Christian Century) Examples of this particular brand of humor, from Benjamin Franklin to Ogden Nash, are included. Bibliography. Index.

"The study as a whole indicates the value of contemporary humor to the social historian and the student and writer of literary history. The chief merit of the book is in its introductory detailed data rather than in any definitive conclusion reached." F. K. Walter

+ Am Hist R 48:413 Ja '43 230w
Booklist 39:45 O 15 '42

Reviewed by Irwin Edman
Books p2 Jl 26 '42 900w

Christian Century 59:809 Je 24 '42 160w

"Older readers will enjoy refreshing their memories of Artemus Ward, Bill Nye, Samanthy Allen, and others. Limited, specialized appeal." H. R. Burdett

Library J 67:531 Je 1 '42 80w

"The book is really a short history of American humor, and an excellent one." K. B. Murdock

+ New Eng Q 15:738 D '42 400w

"Horse-Sense in American Humor" is clever and very amusing, but also something more, for it is a knowledgeable and authoritative history of American risibility-raisers, who, starting in the almanacs and graduating to book covers, seem to have followed a fairly stereotyped pattern for over a century. . . For those who wish to explore American humor of other days an excellent bibliography is appended." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 9 '42 600w

BLANCK, JACOB, comp. Harry Castlemon, boys' own author; appreciation and bibliography. ltd ed 142p il $5 Bowker

012 Castlemon, Harry, pseud (Charles Austin Fosdick)—Bibliography 42-8310

"The ever-increasing group of collectors of children's books will welcome Jacob Blanck's second contribution to juvenilia Americana. The author of 'Peter Parley to Penrod' [Book Review Digest, 1938] has compiled a fine bibliography of Harry Castlemon, the 'Boys' Own Author.' It is a detailed, accurate job and will clear up a large number of problems that have bothered the many Castlemon collectors for years. In addition to the bibliography . . . there is a delightful foreword by Franklin P. Adams. There is also a study of Castlemon written by his nephew, Raymond B. Fosdick. . . Mr. Blanck has included two short essays written by Castlemon for The Writer and directed to his young readers, which give interesting sidelights of his personality. . . The appendix consists of letters written under Harry Castlemon's real name, Fosdick, to his publishers, Porter & Coates, in 1882." Publishers' Weekly

"Mr. Blanck has given us not only an expert bibliography but a well-rounded picture of the boys' own author, his life and work. It is a competent job and proves conclusively that Mr. Blanck is tops in his field." H. L. Brewer

+ Publishers' Weekly 141:208 Ja 17 '42 600w

"Mr. Blanck has done an interesting job in his list of Castlemon's books. And he has included, along with indexes and chronologies, various contributions from those who knew Harry Castlemon or read his books, and pictures of the wretched material housings of the immortal tales. It has all the earmarks of an admirable tool for bibliographers." C. F. Rollins

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 F 14 '42 200w

BLANKENSHIP, RUSSELL. And there were men. 305p il $3 Knopf

979.5 Northwest, Pacific 42-18925

Informal history of the Pacific Northwest, largely devoted to sketches of "interesting, if not altogether virtuous, men" who flourished there during the middle years of the nineteenth century. Index.

"Among the useful books which unravel the regional strands in our national history and tradition, this volume on the Pacific Northwest will rank high. It is generally well written and always intelligent; and it concentrates quite rightly on the people—Indians, religious mystics, badmen, stock-raisers, and miners—who have given the region its distinctive flavor. That it is not a complete picture should be blamed probably on the conventional limits of published volumes. The material is rich, and one feels that there is much more where this came from." Wallace Stegner

+ — Atlantic 170:144 O '42 260w

Booklist 39:31 O 1 '42

"The author gives us the men of the title, sure enough, and they are worth hearing about; but he tosses in two remarkably fine essays that will give any one an understanding of the place and its people, both past and present, which is a feat in such small compass. Each of the several men had something that either made him a leader, or set him slightly apart from his fellows. It is a motley crew. . . Motley it is, but selected with care and balance, not to prove anything but, I suspect, to give a pretty workable idea of the different types of people who pioneered in the Pacific Northwest." Stewart Holbrook

+ Books p5 Ag 16 '42 1050w

"Good reading and recommended." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 67:679 Ag '42 80w

New Repub 107:357 S 21 '42 90w

"The book is uneven both in material and treatment. Some of its best parts are the forthright discussions of the reclamation program . . . [and] the opening section, on the geography and politics of the Northwest. . . When he gets down to individuals he makes a strange selection. . . Blankenship ends his book with a long tale of his wanderings through the old mining area around Idaho City and Silver City, Idaho. This section somehow doesn't come off particularly well, despite the author's efforts to be entertaining. His exaggeration too often misses its mark and his satire tends to miss fire." Hal Borland

+ — N Y Times p20 Ag 23 '42 650w

"In an effective and simple bit of writing Mr. Blankenship has captured the great story [of chief Joseph and his people]. The conclusion of his chapter on Joseph, with its description of the chief's grave, tells in a few words the whole story of our dealing with the Indians. It is unfortunate for his book that neither the writing nor the subject matter of the other chapters equal the high standard of that on Chief Joseph." R. L. Neuberger

Sat R of Lit 25:9 S 5 '42 600w

Wis Lib Bul 38:135 O '42

BLEDSON, WARREN. Fiddle Longspay. 327p
$2.50 Little

42-14047

A light, entertaining novel about a family of Maryland aristocrats, the Longspays of Swithingsift. The main thread of the story concerns Beauchamp (Fiddle) one of the numerous grandsons of the head of the house, and his innocent propensity for getting into scrapes.

Booklist 38:426 J1 1 '42

"It is hard to define the fantastic quality of this novel. It is set in a world which is not in the past any more than it is in the present. But it is a world which is so delightful that the reader does not give a hoot whether it is real or not." Anne Brooks

+ Books p4 Je 28 '42 700w

"A good Summer novel. . . It's gay, it's impudent, it's decent; and lately that has been an almost unheard of combination." Dorothy Hillier

+ Boston Globe p17 Je 17 '42 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '42

"Relaxing reading for warm days. Both men and women will enjoy it." E. F. Kelly

+ Library J 67:582 Je 15 '42 60w

"As is usual in the case of so gay and volatile a novel, 'Fiddle Longspay' does not readily lend itself to any kind of summary, nor is it easy to define its special charm. The best I can do is to say that it is a very amusing book, if at times a faintly silly one, and that its humor flows easily and spontaneously as humor does not always do." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p15 Je 21 '42 650w

New Yorker 18:67 Je 20 '42 60w

"This is a gay, light, entertaining novel, quite irrational in the manner of behavior of its characters but amusingly incredible, and within the bounds of its own unreality, entirely persuasive." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:12 J1 11 '42 360w

BLIVEN, BRUCE. Men who make the future. 325p $3 Duell

500 Science. Civilization (W) 42-3757

"The recent advance of science through research and experiment in many fields is summarized for the layman. Parts have appeared in Reader's Digest and New Republic. Partial contents: Genius: its cause and care; Exit, the common cold; Remaking the world of plants; In the depths of the sky; Scientists in uniform; The unsolved mysteries; Science and civilization." Booklist

Booklist 38:247 Mr 15 '42

"Mr. Bliven is far from academic in his manner of writing, though his style has the intentness and the essential dignity that come from seriousness of purpose. He is himself profoundly impressed with the discoveries he has made among the researchers, and his earnestness carries conviction. What he has found it possible to grasp, as a layman, he now communicates with fervor to other laymen, evidently hoping to make them share his excitement and his convictions. He has succeeded in writing a readable and accurate book, which will appeal to a wide public." H. M. Parshley

+ Books p17 My 3 '42 600w

"The product is essentially a layman's view of scientific progress and prospects assembled and written in a workmanlike manner. The fields of science explored are many and varied. The style is interesting. One could easily criticize the title, since the volume is in no sense biographical and direct quotations are more than usually scarce. One might find fault with the relative emphasis placed on various phases of the broad subjects treated. One might even disagree with some of the author's preachments on how scientists should behave toward world affairs and how the world should regard scientists. But those are decidedly minor considerations. It is healthful and stimulating for scientists to read books like this from time to time."

+ Chem & Eng N 20:350 Mr 10 '42 270w

"The scope of the book is tremendous. . . It is a book that should be read widely by people of all ages. Like the vitamins it extols, 'The Men Who Make the Future' offers an amazing reward for very little effort." M. H. Hamilton

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:165 Je '42 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:44 J1 '42

"An excellent popularization, mildly speculative."

+ New Yorker 18:70 F 21 '42 50w

Pratt p21 O '42

"Mr. Bliven's enthusiasm will carry over to the reader and for the most part he has attached his enthusiasm to accounts of important research. . . In general, the reader will learn much about research from the book, but very little about the relationship between science and society." J. E. Pfeiffer

+ Sat R of Lit 25:9 F 28 '42 500w

Reviewed by A. H. Compton & others

Scientific Bk Club R 13:1 Mr '42 1350w

"The book is recommended (a) to every layman, who should know something about what science is doing to transform our world; and (b) to every scientist, who should know something of what his colleagues are doing beyond his own narrow province." B. C. Gruenberg

+ Survey G 31:265 My '42 600w

BLOCH, MRS BLANCHE (BLOCH). The Bach festival murders. 289p $2 Harper

42-4711

Detective story.

Booklist 38:310 Ap 15 '42

Bookmark 4:18 N '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p18 F 22 '42 160w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hull

Boston Globe p19 Mr 11 '42 90w

"In putting her knowledge of music and musicians at the service of the whodunit fans, [the author] leaps to a high place in their intelligent regard. For there is wit, bright characterization, and a lively puzzle in this story of Crescent City's rival music organizations and patronesses. . . 'The Bach Festival Murders,' in short, is a comedy of manners as well as of mystery and gore. And being a real comedy it remains clear of farce." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 1 '42 240w

New Yorker 18:72 F 21 '42 50w

"Jealousy, thwarted ambition, and emotional tangles move to fortissimo climax in cleverly concocted and well told tale with knowledgeable musical background. Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:18 F 14 '42 60w

Wis Lib Bul 38:87 My '42

BLOOMFIELD, HOWARD. Sailing to the sun: il. from phot. taken by the author. 267p $3 Dodd

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. Yachts and yachting (W) 42-24073

Description of a six months trip by sloop along the inland waterways from the Chesapeake to the Florida Keys. The author's wife and baby accompanied him. Index.

Booklist 39:98 N 15 '42

Reviewed by William Van Til

Books p40 D 6 '42 750w

"Enthusiastic and witty tale of sails and (occasionally) motors. Will be popular with fire-side fisherman as well as with active sportsman. Recommended." E. H. Crowell

+ Library J 67:793 S 15 '42 70w

"Mr. Bloomfield writes penetratingly and even heartrendingly of that combination of seamanship, repairing of machinery, house-keeping and sightseeing which provides the joys and sorrows of yachting. He gives hints to boat owners who may follow his track and at the same time makes his tale something of a travelogue." L. B. Gnaedinger

+ N Y Times p5 O 11 '42 400w

BLUMENTHAL, GERTRUDE. Changeable Charlie; pictures by Charlotte Becker. [48p] $1 Oxford 42-19680

Picture-story book about a small boy named Charlie who couldn't make up his mind what he wanted to be when he grew up. He went thru several changes of heart from acrobat to engineer and doctor, and finally ended by being just Charlie.

Booklist 30:52 O 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p16 N 15 '42 170w

Reviewed by J. K. Dillon
Library J 67:796 S 15 '42 90w

"There are many lively pictures to illustrate each one of Charlie's possible careers, and both the drawings and the brief text have something of the quality of a child's own make-believe. There is the repetition which little children enjoy, and pictures and story hold the interest of the 4 to 6 year olds." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p9 O 11 '42 120w

BOAK, ARTHUR EDWARD ROMILLY; HYMA, ALBERT, and SLOSSON, PRESTON WILLIAM. Growth of European civilization. 2d ed 488,638p il maps $4.50 Crofts

901 Europe—Civilization. Europe—History 41-20438

Second edition of a textbook which first appeared in 1938 (Book Review Digest, 1938). A new chapter has been added to cover events since 1938. Index.

"Since the narrative covers about 6,000 years in about 1100 pages, it is of necessity concise. Nevertheless, by means of careful organization, well-informed scholarship, clear exposition, and a crisp style, the authors have given their terse presentation reality and force. A vivid phrase here and there, and an occasional touch of humor also enliven the account." H. T. Hagg
+ Social Educ 6:139 Mr '42 350w

Social Studies 32:379 D '41 10w

"It is concise, smooth and up-to-date. There are excellent bibliographies suggesting further reading, at the end of each chapter, maps from many sources and a serviceable index."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 28 '41 170w

BOAL, SAMUEL J. Gardening—without bunk. 145p $1.75 Putnam

635 Vegetable gardening 42-13138

Specific information on gardens and gardening for the amateur. The author begins by debunking garden literature and seed catalogs, pulls no punches on the subject of the fatigue of gardening, and proceeds to discuss tools, pests, seeds, soil, gardening planning, seed beds, and the culture of specific vegetables and a few flowers. Index.

Booklist 38:421 J1 1 '42

"A genuinely bunkless job of writing, not grouchy but in a spirit of forthright, lusty helpfulness and honesty. If you, too, have lost patience with the sappiness of some gardening publications, by all means turn hither and be comforted!" R. S. Lemmon
+ Books p12 J1 12 '42 100w

BOAST, WARREN BENEFIELD. Illumination engineering. 274p il $3 McGraw

621.32 Electric engineering. Lighting 42-10876

"A detailed presentation for the electrical engineering student of the fundamental concepts of illumination and its utilization. Following a discussion of electrical light sources and their operating characteristics, the author considers the design and testing of illuminating systems. Many tables and charts." Booklist

Booklist 38:380 J 15 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:40 J1 '42

BODENHEIM, MAXWELL. Lights in the valley. 58p $1.50 Harbinger 42-9511

"Mr. Bodenheim has been known as a radical and proletarian writer. . . . He has become a legendary figure of Bohemianism, a vague mixture of Greenwich Village orgies and soap-box oratory. Of course he is neither one nor the other. He is a poet entirely writing about himself, and when he seems to be writing about the injustice of the world and the wretched social system of the world he is still writing about himself." N Y Times

"Bodenheim's intentions are good enough, and he says clearly what he has to say. But his expression is bound by conventional and rhetorical poetic mannerisms; and he is bound, also, to the obvious aspect of his themes, the conventional labels, the sentimental approach. His work does not indicate a growing breadth of viewpoint, a skilled understanding of cause and effect, a detachment that enables the poet to see things whole. Possibly Bodenheim's universe, which he sees in terms of his own emotions, desires, frustrations, is smaller than it should be at a time when fairly large things are going on." Ruth Lechlitrer
+ Books p17 J1 12 '42 300w

"Mr. Bodenheim has always been an irresponsible poet, because he has so easily adjusted himself to what the critics demanded of him, but as will be seen from the lyrics in this book, he has permitted himself to be under-rated. He is in fact, a poet of sentiment and tradition. Naturally, the tradition does not exclude revolutionary ardor, and Mr. Bodenheim's ironies are sparks from an honest flame. His technique is careful, and where it does fail it fails through the limits of the convention not the license of the experimental."
+ Boston Globe p17 Ap 8 '42 150w

"Mr. Bodenheim is an egotist, self-centered in his self-inflicted world, using the outside world merely as an excuse for some kind of frustration. Yet he writes clearly and easily and remarkably about this." P. M. Jack
+ N Y Times p4 Mr 29 '42 340w

"In most technical respects—metrically, for example—[Mr. Bodenheim] is, by my reading, dull, imitative, and obvious. One infers, from the last poem in this book Advice to a Man, that there have been critics who dispose of such a poet as Mr. Bodenheim by calling him a 'talent dispersed in the lowlands.' I am not of this haughty group, as I have meant to indicate. I am prepared to admire a poetry written out of Mr. Bodenheim's stated sympathies and intellectual position, but, I see no reason why that poetry should not have, or could not have, as full a measure of technical rigor and interest as any other. I might add that if Mr. Bodenheim thinks his work already is technically rigorous and interesting, the last word is his." E. S. Forgotson + Poetry 60:219 J1 '42 1050w

"The best that I can find to say of Mr. Bodenheim's book is that its intention is good. He is honestly, if confusedly, moved by the tragedy of those who (to use his own words) 'have been used—And crippled by the sneering few,' and occasionally the intensity of his feeling informs his flat diction and limp versification with true vitality. Only occasionally, however." Dudley Fitts
+ Sat R of Lit 25:13 N 7 '42 200w

BOECOP-MALYE, MARIE THERESE COLLETTE, barones van. Roots; a novel of the Dutch East Indies. 305p $2.50 Doubleday 42-18462

Marijn van der Veen, a wealthy young Dutchman, is the central character of this novel of the Dutch East Indies. Marijn escapes from occupied Holland, crosses Russia and Siberia, and finally reaches the family estate on the Island of Senang, where he does his share to help in the struggle against the impending Japanese invasion. His interest in two women—the beautiful Rumanian Jewess, Wanda; and Marie-Celine, the girl who manages the plantation adjoining—vies for first place with the description of the life on the Dutch plantations.

"In the background of the narrative, the reader is always conscious of the color and luxuriance of the tropics. Most of the spectacular elements that have made the East such a fertile ground for travelers' accounts—headhunters, native rites, and the like—find a place in this novel, but they are always subordinate to the main dramatic lines of the story. That she is able to effect the right proportions between the familiarly human and exotic elements of her book is one of the principal tributes to the Baroness Van Boecop's skill as a novelist." Milton Hindus

+ Books p2 J1 26 '42 900w

"Interesting, timely, well-written novel of present war, by a Dutch writer little known in America. . . Recommended." S. E. Sherman

+ Library J 67:630 J1 '42 70w

"The details about climate, geography, scenery and people—the Dutch owners of big plantations, the Eurasians, natives and infiltrating Japanese—are all mightily interesting to people whose first vivid interest in the Indies was roused when the Japanese put them in the headlines. . . The love interest in the book exploits the exotic, and for that has a certain interest. The part of the novel which deals with the tide against the aggressor nations has a far deeper interest, particularly in its slant on the Netherlands East Indies." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p4 J1 19 '42 650w

"'Roots' is a readable story. It includes a variety of excitement. . . It gives us a taste of the mystery of life in the Indies, the strange stories repeated among the planters, native taboos, preparation for war et al. Occasionally there are rare shots in the dark of great truths and beauty which the Dutch Baroness (born French) probes, but it is only a glimpse." Malcolm Rosholt

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 Ag 8 '42 400w

BOEKE, JULIUS HERMAN. Structure of Netherlands Indian economy. (Institute of Pacific relations. Int. research ser) 201p $2.50
Inst. of Pacific relations

330.991 Netherlands Indies—Economic conditions 42-16856

"The heart of the problem which Professor Boeke has posed himself is to break out of the routine patterns of economic theory and to achieve an understanding of the basic differences between the patterns of economic life and motivation of the pre-capitalist society which is indigenous in the Indies and of the capitalist society which has been brought to it from outside but which by now has had far-reaching and disruptive influences upon the earlier structures. Throughout he is insistent upon the dualistic or pluralistic character of the hybrid economy which is the resultant of the impact of the dynamic Western system upon the static system of the East. A significant element in his analysis, which it is to be hoped will not be lost sight of in a future peace-time reconstruction, is his conclusion that the degree to which natives take part in Western economic life is circumscribed and one-sided and that their employment in Western processes is limited to jobs of secondary importance." Pacific Affairs

"Boeke does not deny that the two economies interact upon each other, though at times he seems to maintain that in spite of their juxtaposition the two operate in isolated spheres. The two interact upon each other, but they nevertheless remain distinct and wholly different. The thesis is pushed rather far and often in much too absolutistic a fashion. Nor is the author always consistent. There are passages which seem to contradict his main thesis. Economic life in the East Indies during the past decade and a half had become much more integrated than Boeke describes it. However that may be, Boeke's point of view enables him to make a penetrating and fruitful analysis of East Indies economy. . . The book is one of the best written on the Indies in a long time." Amry Vandenbosch

+ — Am Pol Sci R 36:977 O '42 420w

"This is a unique study. All persons interested in colonialism and Oriental society will find it very valuable." A. Vandenbosch

+ Ann Am Acad 224:210 N '42 360w

"The type of inquiry which Professor Boeke has undertaken is one which requires far more study from this time forward than it has had hitherto." Rupert Emerson

+ Pacific Affairs 15:364 S '42 250w

BOGAN, LOUISE. Poems and new poems. 116p $2.50 Scribner

811

41-21991

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"On the jacket of this omnibus volume of Louise Bogan's work, containing in all some ninety poems, Allen Tate is quoted in praise of Miss Bogan as 'the most accomplished woman poet of our time.' The praise, to my mind, is justified; but I suspect that to be perennially classified and reviewed as a 'woman poet' must prove discomfiting, at the least, to a poet of Miss Bogan's superlative gifts and power. It is true that she is a woman and a poet and that her motivations and themes, like those of her sister poets, relate essentially to her special experiences in a man-world—and why not?—but the virtue of her work is not a quality of gender." S. J. Kunitz

+ Poetry 60:40 Ap '42 900w

Pratt p20 My '42

"It is difficult to understand the Irish. Miss Bogan is Irish. She has that black tarn in her heart. Also, her poetry is, and always has been, intensely personal. She has inherited the Celtic magic of language, but has blended it somehow with the tartness of New England—the darkness of the root, the rain, the dew—her crossed apple. She is her own Cassandra." W. R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 25:22 Ap 25 '42 270w

BOGARDUS, EMORY STEPHEN. Democracy by discussion; foreword by Chester Williams. 59p pa $1 Am. council on public affairs

301.1532 Discussion. Democracy

"A sociologist's plea for more and better discussion of public affairs, not as a substitute for action but as a stimulus and guide to intelligent action with the support of a healthy public opinion." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:1625 D 30 '42 30w

School & Society 56:476 N 14 '42 20w

"This is a carefully planned book designed to help educational agencies do better their job of establishing forums and discussion groups. It contains many helpful suggestions, practical in nature."

+ Social Studies 34:48 Ja '43 30w

BOGARDUS, EMORY STEPHEN. Fundamentals of social psychology. 3d ed 538p $3.50 Appleton-Century

301.15 Social psychology 42-5248

"This second revision of Bogardus' popular book, the only American textbook in the field of social psychology to go into so many editions, involves no major changes from the previous version, published in 1931. The main parts have been given new titles, as have several of the chapters. One chapter has been given a new focus and moved from the fourth to the third part. A list of books called 'A Social Psychology Library' has been appended for the use of teachers and students. Some of the chapters have been very well brought up to date, while others have remained almost unchanged." (Am J Soc) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1924.

Reviewed by Mapheus Smith

Am J Soc 48:144 J1 '42 300w

Christian Century 59:251 F 25 '42 70w

BOGART, ERNEST LUDLOW. Economic history of Europe, 1760-1939. 734p maps $4.50 Longmans

330.94 Europe—Economic conditions (W) 42-6326

"A narrative and chronological account of the major economic activities of Britain, France, and Germany during the whole of the period covered, with a side glance at Russia and Italy for recent years." (Pref) The book is divided into three parts: Rise of the machine, 1760-1870; Economic rivalries, 1870-1914; and Economic and political revolution, 1914-1939. Bibliographical note. Indexes.

Reviewed by Clement Akerman
Am Econ R 32:861 D '42 1350w

"This treatise is the outcome of interests in European history that were intensified by studies of postwar policy in 1919-20. The inadequacies of the shorter general treatises then available induced Professor Bogart to undertake the task of producing a 'satisfactory text'. The results of this protracted effort are impressive. The book is attractively written, the judgments of events are shrewd, though cautious, and the allocation of space to the various periods and topics is well considered. Professor Bogart has achieved with distinction the task which he set himself. . . To those interested in the future of historical writing and historical study the fact that this treatise is really 'satisfactory' may be rather disquieting. The concepts underlying this volume are those of the more extreme type of the classical historians of the nineteenth century. All interest is concentrated on the record of events. There is no evidence of concern about historical process." A. P. Usher

+ — Am Hist R 48:104 O '42 700w

"Numerous simple statistical tables present in compressed and easily grasped form much valuable information not otherwise readily accessible. Good indexes to names and subjects add further to the usefulness of this excellent, solid textbook. In a new edition the spelling of a number of proper names should be corrected." S. B. Fay

+ Ann Am Acad 223:228 S '42 380w

"Told in a thoroughly scholarly manner, with every page packed with information derived from all available sources and illuminated with clarifying exposition such as we can expect only from an outstanding authority among economic historians. Intended as a text for students, the work also proves to be of great value to the general reader as well as for the specialized study of the European problem."

+ Current Hist 2:378 J1 '42 190w

BOHLMAN, HERBERT WILLIAM, and BOHLMAN, MRS MARY EDNA (MCCAULL). Our economic problems. 588p 11 maps $2 Heath

330.1 Economics. U.S.—Economic conditions 42-4643

"This volume, designed for high school use, is the result of a decade of experimentation in high school classes. It is a sincere attempt to restate the facts and implications of our economic system. The subject matter is organized on the assumption that the important problems of our economic life grow out of the purchase and sale of goods and services. Most of the units of the book, therefore, consist of a study of conditions surrounding the buying and selling of commodities, investments, credit, insurance, public utility services, and the services of labor." (Pref) Glossary. Index.

"A clearly written and well-illustrated textbook." Paul Heaton

+ School R 50:471 Je '42 750w

"The next few years will see an accentuation of our economic problems. It is doubtful whether any problem that arises will not be found somewhere, in embryo at least, in this text. It is a reliable piece of work. The entire spirit and attitude of the authors will receive acceptance as the accelerating tempo of economic developments affect us." Ray Lussenhop

+ Social Educ 6:336 N '42 700w

Reviewed by J. G. Plank, Jr.
Social Studies 33:284 O '42 420w

BOK, BART JAN, and BOK, MRS PRISCILLA (FAIRFIELD). The Milky way. (Harvard bks. on astronomy) 204p 11 $2.50 Blakiston

523.85 Milky way 41-20711

"Presents a more complete treatment of the distribution and constitution of stars within our galactic system than is usually found in books on astronomy. Explanations are furnished concerning the measurement of distances to the remoter regions by parsecs and light years and of how motions within the cosmic whirl are determined and how the stars are distributed. A summary is given of the important contributions of major workers in the field in which Dr. Bok is a specialist. Interstellar gas, for years a controversial subject, is historically explained." Scientific Bk Club R

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:4 Ja '42

Reviewed by H. M. Davis
N Y Times p9 Mr 8 '42 80w

"This book is a stimulating presentation in semi-popular form of the history and present status of our knowledge of the Milky Way Galaxy." Clyde Fisher

+ R of Scientific Instruments 13:184 Ap '42 210w

"A scholarly, collaborative offering."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 S '41 180w

BOLLES, JOSHUA K. People's business; the progress of consumer cooperatives in America. 170p 11 $2 Harper

334.5 Cooperative societies 42-36237

Study of the growth and present status of the consumer co-operative movement in the United States, with numerous specific instances, showing the diversified fields in which the co-operatives are taking shape. Some discussion of the movement in England. Index.

Booklist 38:379 Je 15 '42

"This fairly superficial volume of group success stories has a place in an anxious, doubting world and it is gratifying to be able to report that Mr. Bolles is a highly readable journalist." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ Commonweal 36:208 Je 19 '42 250w

"Recommended." E. D. Hart.

+ Library J 67:367 Ap 15 '42 80w

"It is a heartening and encouraging story and well told." B. B. Fowler

+ Survey G 31:393 S '42 200w

Wis Lib Bul 38:115 J1 '42

BOLSHAKOFF, SERGE. Christian church and the Soviet state. 75p 90c Macmillan [3s 6d S.P.C.K.]

274.7 Russia—Church history. Church and state in Russia A42-5093

"The author's theme is the relation of the church to the state. Beginning with a condensed but highly factual survey of the fortunes of the churches (Orthodox, Roman Catholic, separated bodies and evangelicals) in old Russia, he passes on to an account of religion under the revolution and the militant godless movement, and to the present status and prospects of the churches and the problems implicit in a world situation which forces an alliance between Christian nations and a government which, in spite of its liberal constitution, has a record of anti-religious persecution down almost until now." Christian Century

"Small as this book is, it is, in the judgment of this reviewer, not only the best book on the treatment of the church by the Russian government and the response of the church to that treatment but the best by a wide margin."

+ Christian Century 59:1153 S 23 '42 260w

Reviewed by J. H. Titus
Churchman 156:14 N 15 '42 150w
Manchester Guardian p3 Je 1 '42 100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p244 My 16 '42 360w

BOLSTER, EVELYN (MRS FORREST BARNES). Come gentle spring. 378p $2.50 Vanguard

(W) 42-12643

Rob Morgan, the central figure in this novel, is an Idaho farmer, not too successful, middle-aged, married to a shrewish wife and the father of a son and daughter. Rob is patient and long-suffering, but the time comes when he dreams of getting away from his humdrum existence and Edith's nagging, of finding another farm and a new life with Bessie, a neighbor woman. But in the end Rob finds he must stay on—Edith needs him more than Bessie does.

Booklist 38:368 Je 1 '42

"I can only urge that you read this wise and tender saga, but not at one vigil... For here is English at its freshest best, and concerning North America. Never a cliché, nor a clandestine agreement with the omnipotent as to what goes on. No, these folk live, eat, love and live again, seasonally. The conclusions will be your own, not the author's. For she has turned that most difficult of the various legerdains of the artist, to efface all trace of the artificer." Donald Corley

+ Books p2 My 3 '42 1000w

"Her second novel is less arresting than her first, and it errs in the direction of monotony... One feels that it is a good sound novel in a conscientious kind of way, yet it lacks the zest, the warmth and the charm of its predecessor." E. H. W.

+ — N Y Times p22 My 10 '42 600w

"Miss Bolster writes with delicacy and insight. Her shrew is perhaps too relentlessly shrewish; otherwise her characters are real and their problems seem important."

+ New Yorker 18:70 My 2 '42 70w

"This book is something really rare, a good pastoral novel, written in the spirit of those classic pastorals which celebrated land, air, beasts, and shepherds. Best of all is its careful underwriting, the way in which words and moods are toned down so that people do not loom up dramatically but seem rather to blend in protective coloration against the landscape. And yet they are more natural that way, and their emotions are truly elemental for all the quietude of their expression. The sun and the light stream through them; they seem conscious of this as they talk and move." Richard Nathan

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 My 23 '42 270w

BOLTON, FREDERICK ELMER, and CORBALLY, JOHN EDWARD. Educational sociology. 632p $3 Am. bk.

370.1 Education. Sociology. Democracy. Education and state 41-6712

"This book is intended as an introductory college textbook in the field of educational sociology. It may serve as a first book in the entire teacher-training program... This text aims to bring to the consciousness of students the vital relation between education and democracy. That objective necessitated the assemblage of facts and the consideration of a philosophy of democracy and of education." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by David Snedden

School & Society 56:47 Jl 11 '42 200w

"This college textbook, despite its faults, provides solid content for the subject and should therefore do much to make educational sociology academically respectable and hence worthy of wider inclusion in the curriculum of professional education." E. G. Olsen

+ — Social Educ 6:378 D '42 400w

"This book, we are told, is intended as a first text in educational sociology without any prerequisites. If a student had by any chance taken a course in introductory sociology first, he would be puzzled to discover any relationship between the two courses; if he had only this course in educational sociology he would have a very erroneous idea of the nature and scope of sociology." L. M. Bristol

Social Forces 20:518 My '42 600w

BOND, GUY LORAIN, and BOND, EVA. Developmental reading in the high school. 363p $2 Macmillan

372.4 Reading. Education, Secondary 42-6267

"The book is based on a study of questions asked by high-school teachers concerning the problems of teaching reading. The fourteen chapters are grouped into four sections. The first section presents the need for teaching reading in high school and discusses the theory of reading and the purposes and major tasks of a reading program. In the second section, which makes up more than half of the book, an all-school reading program is outlined and discussed in detail... The third section is concerned with the program for the retarded reader. In this section the causes and diagnosis of reading disability, the organization of the remedial program, and remedial instruction for specific difficulties are discussed. The final section, which consists of one chapter, deals with the co-ordination of a reading program." School R

School & Society 54:508 N 29 '41 60w

"While specialists will find little that is new in the book, the organization of the material and the practical, common-sense point of view should commend it to reading experts and classroom teachers alike." A. E. Traxler

+ School R 50:152 F '42 950w

BONIFACE, MARJORIE. Venom in Eden. 269p $2 Doubleday

42-19565

Detective story.

"Miss Boniface scatters motives with a lavish hand, piles up victims in the same spirit, and explains it all with a poker-faced glibness that struck us as entertaining. She conceals her fiend with considerable cleverness—which is more than one can say of the murder gadget—and generally provides acceptable fare. Multiple murder in picturesque surroundings." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Ag 30 '42 150w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 Ag 30 '42 200w

BONN, JOHN LOUIS. And down the days. 306p $2.50 Macmillan

Eckel, Mrs Elsa (St John)—Fiction 42-10296

A novel based on the life of Elsa St John Eckel, daughter of that Maria Monk who was the author of a notorious attack on the Catholic sisterhoods.

Booklist 38:441 Jl 15 '42

"If this novel by John Louis Bonn were purely imaginative writing, it might be considered a bit too improbable even for the school of escape literature. It is a Cinderella story, though not exactly in the best tradition of that genre... The story of Madame Eckel's groping attempts to arrive at a true concept of spiritual ideas is told with gentle sympathy. We see her in the closing pages of the novel grandly making to God an offering which had not been hers to give but hoping, somehow, she was doing what He would have her do. Her life blacks out tragically, but Father Bonn's story of it makes us wish that somewhere along the road Lizzie St. John had met the Prince." Clare Godfrey

Books p10 Ap 19 '42 650w

"Father Bonn displays the rare insight and discernment of scholar and priest in treating the crucial cross-currents that vexed the soul of his strange heroine, though he leaves us in ignorance as to her final perseverance." L. L. Twinem

Cath World 155:370 Je '42 700w

Christian Century 59:499 Ap 15 '42 80w

Churchman 156:31 Ag 1 '42 90w

"Although one might wish for a more sharply pointed narrative, for scenes vividly painted rather than alluded to, the atmosphere is admirably built up, and one lays the book down with the feeling of having lived through the days of Know-Nothingism in this country and the decadence that preceded the Franco-Prussian War in Paris." D. H. Moseley

BONN, J. L.—Continued

+ Commonweal 36:64 My 8 '42 330w

"With its rags to riches and back again changes, hers was a singular, often dramatic, history, which in the hands of a skilled writer might provide material for a notable book, but Mr. Bonn's dialogue is stiff, and his style lacks vividness and variety." L. M. F.
N Y Times p23 Ap 19 '42 550w

BONNER, MARY GRAHAM. Canada and her story. 187p il $2 Knopf 971 Canada—Juvenile Literature (W) 42-22759

A straightforward account of Canada's history, geography, occupations and present day life, written for young students. Attractive photographic illustrations. Chronology. Index.

Booklist 39:107 N 15 '42

"Welcome for the history of Canada it provides children of the United States to whom it will come as news, this admirable book is even more welcome for the blend of history and present-day life that it affords. To this are added photographs of extraordinary beauty, two to a page, coming at the right places in the text and chosen with an eye to the love of young folks for the picturesque." M. L. Becker
+ Books p34 N 15 '42 500w

"[An] inviting book of information which fills a need. Excellent photographs add to its value." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 18:435 N '42 30w

"Author has been fairly liberal with historical anecdotes, but only the photographs give any real conception of Canada of today. Until something better organized, more comprehensive and colorful, less sketchy and terse, is written about the Dominion for young people, this will be useful." M. B. Snow
+ Library J 67:954 N 1 '42 70w

"Many fine photographs and a map add to the intrinsic interest of this well-written, much-needed book." E. L. Buehl
+ N Y Times p8 D 27 '42 240w

BONTEMPS, ARNA WENDELL, and CONROY, JACK. Fast Sooner hound; il. by Virginia Lee Burton. 28p $1.75 Houghton (W) 42-21755

Sooner was a no-'count seeming hound dog that belonged to a Boomer railroad fireman. The Boomer wanted to take his dog into the cab with him but the Roadmaster said that was against Rule One of the railroad. So Sooner ran along beside the trains or ahead of them when he wasn't catching rabbits and that way he beat the fast freight, the local passenger, and at last the Cannon Ball express itself, to the end of the run. The Roadmaster was so chagrined that he had to let Sooner ride in the cab after all.

Booklist 39:73 N 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Ja 17 '43 370w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 37:117 N 20 '42 20w

"Gay pictures in full color add fun to this tall tale of railroad days in the far west." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 18:417 N '42 70w

"Of all the funny picture books in this year's crop, none satisfied me more than Fast Sooner Hound." R. A. Hill
+ Library J 67:882 O 15 '42 80w

"When it is read to them, little children will enjoy its absurdity as a tall tale as well as humor in the illustrations by Virginia Burton. But smallness of the print will phase many who are even ten years old." M. B. Snow
+ Library J 67:954 N 1 '42 70w

"Virginia Burton's drawings have a beautiful rhythm and a fine sense of motion. One senses the excitement of the onlookers as they gather to see the race, and fairly feels the breeze as the trains sweep by, with the imperturbable Sooner galloping alongside, taking time out to play with a rabbit on the way. The countryside is made vivid in beautiful greens and browns, and the locomotives convey the thrill and excitement which real locomotives have for children. A fresh, original picture-story book for boys and girls from 5 to 10." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 N 15 '42 260w

"The gay pictures in color are in just the right temper to illustrate this good example of native American humor." K. S. W.
+ New Yorker 18:106 D 12 '42 50w

"One of those fantastic tales cleverly designed to delight both children and parents. . . The pictures are lively, as filled with action as Sooner himself. They are simple, but filled with the detail that four-to-eight-year-olds like, and the colors are fresh and vivid." E. V. D.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 17 '43 190w
Wis Lib Bul 38:188 D '42

BOOK of Ariel; anonymous. 299p $2.50 Doubleday 42-16503

Love story of a lovely unconventional woman and the lover who remained faithful to her, even after years of marriage for both of them.

"In spite of its obvious weaknesses, 'The Book of Ariel' has an emotional sweep which gives it a certain stature. Moreover, the author is no tyro at writing; he tells the story of the hero's deep-rooted love for Ariel with lightness and with humor, no mean accomplishment, considering what he was up against. More than being the portrayal of a woman who occasionally loved wisely, 'The Book of Ariel' is also a notable characterization of an infatuated man. . . Many readers will enjoy this story with its probings into the love life of an untrammelled spirit, and to them the final pages will prove deeply moving." Rose Feld
+ Books p12 My 3 '42 500w

"The author's theme is obviously to display the fundamentally fine character and the delicious charms of Ariel. The reader is firmly convinced of the fervor and constancy of Stan's love. But the lady's charms, on paper, fall short of the ideal and irresistible. She had a darling way of emphasizing certain words or syllables. On the phone she would answer, 'Oh, hel-lo,' in a way to melt the heart. But this reader's heart remained cold. . . Not the story of a grande passion, 'The Book of Ariel' might be ranked as a modern American version of a French novel." Beatrice Sherman
— N Y Times p19 My 24 '42 650w

BOONE, GLADYS. Women's trade union leagues in Great Britain and the United States of America; foreword by Mary Anderson. 283p $3.50 Columbia univ. press 331.88 Trade unions 42-16858

"Although primarily a study of women's trade union leagues in the United States, Dr. Boone's book is broadened by the inclusion of a briefer account of similar leagues in Great Britain. Since women's trade union leagues from the time of their organization have had to face problems involved in the labor movement and, also, those related to the advancement of the economic and social status of women, many controversial issues of economic and social character receive attention in a history of the development of these leagues." (J Home Econ) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Margaret Elliott

Am Econ R 32:919 D '42 700w

"The work is carefully documented and available statistical data are included. It is fortunate that so capable, careful, and sympathetic a scholar as Dr. Boone has made this historical study available to us." Alma Herbst
+ Ann Am Acad 223:250 S '42 400w

"We may approve or disapprove of the aims of the women's trade union leagues, but whatever our point of view, it is desirable to be informed on the objectives and activities of groups as vigorous and influential as the women's trade union leagues of the United States and Great Britain, which are so well portrayed by Dr. Boone." A. L. Edwards

+ J Home Econ 36:485 S '42 280W

"This is a distinct contribution to the history of feminism and women's rights in both this country and England." J. W. Oliver
+ Social Studies 33:332 N '42 480W

BOORSTIN, DANIEL JOSEPH. Mysterious science of the law. 257p il $3 Harvard univ. press

340.1 Blackstone, Sir William. Law—Great Britain. Law—Philosophy A41-4162

"Mr. Boorstin's study of Blackstone's Commentaries is primarily a study of intellectual history, an analysis of the ways in which Blackstone's work employed the assumptions prevalent in its day about science, religion, philosophy, history, art, and reason, to give the legal system and the values embodied in it an appearance of rationality and acceptability." Harvard Law R

Reviewed by O. P. Field

Am Hist R 47:585 Ap '42 350W

"Today, Blackstone teaching the sovereignty of positive law has long outrun Blackstone glorifying natural rights. Steeped in the former doctrine rather than the latter, modern lawyers have reason to look with some amazement at the consequences for judicial ethics in totalitarian countries. Time seems ripe for Locke redivivus, or at least for a positive international due-process clause (deprived of property glorification), although the obstacles, theoretical as well as practical, are formidable. However that may be, Mr. Boorstin's book, wisely stopping short of such reflections, must be warmly recommended, especially as supplementary reading in law schools and political science departments. It is thoroughly annotated and in addition contains a glossary of legal terms for laymen." Arnold Brecht

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1180 D '41 900W

Reviewed by D. A. Lockmiller

Ann Am Acad 220:272 Mr '42 500W

"One cannot begin to summarize the rich store of general knowledge of the time from which Dr. Boorstin draws to illuminate the various corners of the Commentaries. He has made a study of a classic of English literature, no less than of our legal origins, and he has employed the Commentaries as an instance for sophisticated analysis of the currents of thought then flowing. The book promises a trifle more than it yields in this respect, and it bears the inevitable stigmata of its author's sojourn for many years in the university circles of Yale and Harvard. But the seeker after what Whitehead calls the 'adventure of ideas' is bound to find this book exciting. For the lawyer it is a great white light of illumination." B. H. Levy

+ Books p12 F 1 '42 900W

"Historical analyses depend for their merit and interest more upon the astuteness of the analyzer than upon the excellence of the subject analyzed. As an analyst, Mr. Boorstin displays unusual subtlety of discrimination. This book is intrinsically well worth reading in order to observe analysis performed with nicely balanced judgment, clear perception of basic factors and careful documentation of inferences." Glenn Negley

+ Ethics 52:382 Ap '42 800W

"After [a] long and careful analysis of Blackstone's valiant attempt to make the wilderness of the English law seem like a neat garden designed by a Creator familiar with the best rules of formal landscaping, Mr. Boorstin's brief concluding chapter comes as rather a surprise. Though it would be unfair to say that in the body of the book Mr. Boorstin's attitude towards Blackstone is patronizing, at the very least it can be said that he is constantly letting us know that he sees through the author of the Commentaries, is aware of the little tricks of reasoning Blackstone himself was apparently not aware of resorting to. We half expect a summation which will reprove Blackstone for his shocking inadequacies as a social scientist, if not for his failure as a semasiologist. Not at all, Mr. Boorstin concludes on a note of praise for Blackstone." Crane Brinton

Harvard Law R 55:703 F '42 1100W

Reviewed by Otto Kirchheimer

Pol Sci Q 57:470 S '42 390W

"There is a great temptation in reviewing Mr. Boorstin's book to go off the deep end about it in a burst of eulogy. It is subtle, ingenious, witty and learned. . . I think Mr. Boorstin is right about the character and purpose of the Commentaries, but he need not have been quite so mysterious or scientific himself. . . There is a slight air of sardonic banter—almost of derision—in Mr. Boorstin's tone, which Blackstone does not deserve. . . I find myself quite at odds with Mr. Boorstin in his last section on Blackstone's 'values'. . . [However] that the book as it stands is a notable achievement is unquestionable." Max Radin

+ Yale Law J 51:519 Ja '42 2500W

BOOTH, BRADFORD ALLEN, and JONES, CLAUDE EDWARD. A concordance of the poetical works of Edgar Allan Poe. 211p $5.50 Johns Hopkins press [25s Oxford]

811 Poe, Edgar Allan—Concordances 41-11711

"A list is given of words omitted, such as articles, prepositions, personal pronouns and the like. The text referred to is the edition of Poe's Poems edited by Killis Campbell and published by Ginn and Co. in Boston in 1917." Times [London] Lit Sup

"This exhaustive and meticulous concordance of Poe's poems will, as its compilers point out, prove indispensable to anyone seriously concerned with Poe's poetic diction. To others, it should be extremely useful as a source book for many half-remembered lines and phrases which, surprisingly, often turn out to be from Poe's pen. . . The many complexities, which an explanatory introduction briefly elucidates, are the result of the material and not of the compilers." F. B. F.

+ New Eng Q 14:778 D '41 140W

"Absolute accuracy is essential in such a work, and this book inspires complete confidence from that aspect."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p12 Ja 3 '42 80W

BOOTH, EDWIN PRINCE, ed. New Testament studies; critical essays in New Testament interpretation, with special reference to the meaning and worth of Jesus. 290p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

225 Bible. New Testament—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 42-14472

"This volume consists of eleven essays on recently debated problems concerning the life of Jesus and primitive Christology. It is dedicated to Professor emeritus W. J. Lowstuter, of Boston University, and is the work of colleagues and former students of that eminent scholar. In their ensemble the essays constitute an excellent general introduction to the modern trends and principles of investigation in the field of Leben-Jesu-Forschung. Not content with the arid detachment of purely critical study, the writers have sought also to show how the results of modern criticism of the gospels, at first sight destructive and painful, may be applied to the life of man in the contemporary world and made to serve the advance of the kingdom of God." Crozer Q

"The scholarly quality of these studies will appeal to students in this field, and the method and style adapt them also to more general reading."

+ Christian Century 59:499 Ap 15 '42 70W

"It is not possible to review the essays one by one. In general, they may be said to represent the work of well-informed modern scholarship, somewhat shy of radical criticism but not in the least tempted to defend lost positions.

BOOTH, E. P.—Continued

There is little in the book that is new, but as a collective statement of the present tendencies and tasks it will help most readers to a better orientation. It is interesting to observe that while all the writers are clearly aware of the part played by the creative powers of the Christian society in the shaping of the tradition, not one of them seriously impugns the underlying validity of the record." F. W. Beare

+ Crozer Q 19:326 O '42 600w

"This is a book for the student, designed to lure his 'thought and habit' into 'the pattern and mold of the New Testament.' It will prove valuable to all New Testament students as indicating current trends of scholarship. In particular one notes the trend toward synthesis. . . It is invidious to single out any one essay among the eleven, but Professor Craig's balanced statement of 'The Problem of the Messiahship of Jesus' happens to appeal most strongly to this reviewer." A. C. Purdy

+ J Religion 22:436 O '42 700w

BOOTH, HAROLD H. Book of modern war-planes; a collection of paintings of the world's latest fighting aircraft. 25p $1 Garden City pub. co.

629.133 Airplanes, Military 42-23485

"A squadron leader of the R. C. A. F. is the artist responsible for this collection of the newest fighting planes, both of the United Nations and of the Axis powers. With each picture is a brief but graphic description of the type. End pages show wing insignias of all the nations." Library J

Booklist 39:107 N 15 '42

"Informative and timely, this will be of interest to adults as well as to children." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 67:954 N 1 '42 60w

New Yorker 18:115 D 12 '42 20w

Wis Lib Bul 38:166 N '42

BORDEN, MRS LUCILLE (PAPIN). Shining tree; a Christmas story. 277p $2 Macmillan

(W) 42-50210

An old-fashioned story in a new-fashioned dress. A little refugee from the bombing of Luzon arrives in New York, blind, and in rags, but bearing the evidences of gentle breeding. By chance she is picked up and cared for by a kindly newsboy, and taken to live at his boarding house. The inmates kind, but poor, take the little waif to their hearts, until she is discovered by her wealthy grandfather.

Reviewed by George Conrad

Books p28 D 6 '42 250w

Cath World 156:633 F '43 180w

"Will be especially welcome Christmas reading. Recommended." S. E. Sherman

+ Library J 67:951 N 1 '42 70w

Reviewed by Margaret Wallace

N Y Times p6 D 6 '42 600w

"The 'Shining Tree' destroys its value as a soporific by the inaccurate pretentiousness of its character study. However, if the determined reader could swallow the whole thing as a comforting dream, remote from the daily tragedies now forced on our attention, perhaps the very vagueness of its language might enhance its dream-like qualities." M. G.

+ Spring'd Republican p7e D 27 '42 460w

BORDEN, NEIL HOPPER. Economic effects of advertising. 988p il $5 Irwin

659.1 Advertising 42-1977

"This study of advertising's role in the current economy is the result of four years of work directed by Mr. Borden, who is professor of advertising in Harvard University. It was financed—though not otherwise affected—by the Advertising Research Foundation, which is sponsored by two advertising associations. . . Mr. Borden considers advertising an inextric-able part of the capitalistic economy, a safeguard to investment, and a stimulus to a dynamic expanding economy." J Home Econ

"The author's conclusions are so tempered by scientific caution that they are unlikely to be entirely welcome to either the extreme proponents or the extreme opponents of advertising. . . The study is by no means the final word on the subject, but it is at least a point of departure for all future studies, and no scholar can afford to venture opinions on the incidence of advertising costs until he has familiarized himself with the material." G. B. Hotchkiss

+ Ann Am Acad 221:218 My '42 700w

Reviewed by E. H. Gardner

+ Books p20 F 1 '42 600w

J Home Econ 34:193 Mr '42 200w

Management R 31:108 Mr '42 500w

"Business executives and students of advertising and distribution will find this book interesting and convincing. They will be impressed with the painstaking effort to arrive at objective conclusions. Advertising can be satisfied to offer this reference source as an answer to many of the more vigorous criticisms of recent years." C. McD. Puckette

+ N Y Times p12 Je 28 '42 550w

BORLAND, HAROLD G. America is Americans [and other poems] with drawings by Stanley Wood. 126p $1.75 Harper

811 42-24948

"A collection of swinging patriotic chants, exhortations, and narratives, all in Whitmanesque free rhythms and all well geared to today's national mood." New Yorker

Booklist 39:221 F 1 '43

Reviewed by J. M. Jack

N Y Times p4 Ja 31 '43 800w

New Yorker 18:83 O 31 '42 20w

Reviewed by T. I. Cook

Sat R of Lit 25:16 D 12 '42 290w

BORNSTEIN, JOSEPH, and MILTON, PAUL ROBERT. Action against the enemy's mind; bk. 1, by Joseph Bornstein; bk. 2, by Paul R. Milton. 294p $2.50 Bobbs 940.5483 World war, 1939—Propaganda.

World war, 1939—U.S. Propaganda, German

(W) 42-24430

"The first part of the book is historical and, as the title indicates, its chief concern is psychological warfare. It shows how France was weakened. It lays bare the lies which paved the way for the conquest of Austria, for Munich and the Blitz on Poland—lies which always reinforced beliefs people already held and helped them believe what they wanted to believe. It implies the venality of the 'Great Powers' who were willing to sell the weak states down the river rather than antagonize the rich and powerful. It exposes the strength of anti-Semitism and the use Hitler made of the fear of communism to catapult himself into command. . . Part II deals with the divisions, the tensions, the 'weak spots' in America. 'Distorted Isolationism' is the weakest chapter in this section because, though it distinguishes between 'non-interventionism' which was killed by Pearl Harbor, and 'isolationism' which was not, and which therefore remains a danger, it fails to prove that isolationism is now impossible. Both sections contain chapters on anti-Semitism." Commonweal

"Despite omission of the Indian situation, despite failure to present a coherent picture of a program to beat Hitler at the propaganda game (perhaps because our civilian and military leaders lack such a picture), Messrs. Bornstein and Milton have written a timely, useful book in that it does show how Hitler operates." C. R. Miller

+ Books p28 N 22 '42 1450w

"Here at last, in one book, we find what many American men and women were thinking, writing, speaking and broadcasting long before America was driven to war. This is not meant as a disparagement of the authors. They do not pose as prophets. They have written contemporary history. It is too much to hope that all Americans will read it and believe it. Nevertheless much of what they have written must become a part of our thinking if we are to preserve our civilization. . . . The last two chapters explain our counter-attack. They form a good ending to a good book. Yet they leave the reader longing for something more. This country is held together only by an idea. Yet this book reflects the dual fallacies that idealism is not practical and that facts force a conclusion of the mind. Idealism is the only practical thing in the world. Our enemies know it. One wishes the authors of this book had made more use of the fact when writing on psychological war." William Agar

+ — Commonweal 37:123 N 20 '42 700w

"'Action Against the Enemy's Mind' has, unfortunately, no footnotes, no bibliography, and no index. While Farago's volume might be called a bit too scientific for the average reader, this one takes it a bit too easy here and there and does not always avoid repetition. . . . But a condensed version of the Bornstein-Milton book should be a 'must' in senior high schools. One could even imagine the OWI distributing it as a pamphlet." R. R. Plant

Sat R of Lit 25:18 D 19 '42 450w

BORST, BEATRICE. Nearer the earth. 423p $2.50 Random house

(W) 42-20995

Traces the character development of Karen Greenwald from the age of eleven in 1917, to the nineteen thirties. It is the study of a sensitive, well-bred girl, whose whole life was changed when her father died and the family fortunes vanished. Karen's growth into an individual, with a clear cut philosophy of life, is shown thru the medium of her own thoughts and reactions.

"One can commend the fresh naturalness of the scenes from Karen's childhood, and the restraint and insight of the account of her love affairs. Altogether it is a promising first novel, at times very touching to an older reader who has had much to do with young people." R. M. Gay

+ Atlantic 170:148 N '42 180w

"The revulsion of the adolescent discovering the secret of life, and the agonies of the young girl and her first love are described with distinction. The climaxes in this novel are not strongly drawn, and the author is little concerned with other characters than Karen. These are elements Miss Borst has sacrificed; the work remains a study of one young woman's life, yet the common experience of today's generation of women. A more robust tale would not have served the author's purpose as clearly." Betty De Sherbinin

+ Books p8 Ag 23 '42 750w

Boston Globe p17 S 2 '42 80w

"Miss Borst's story has many virtues. It is written with great good taste in a style that neither inflates nor whines, it is poignant without being tremulous, and for a first novel in which author and heroine are closely related, it is remarkably objective—so objective, actually, that one is never quite sure whether it is Miss Borst or Miss Greenwald who peters out in the end. What one feels most strongly is that Miss Borst needs to enlarge her range of seeing and thinking." Diana Trilling

+ — Nation 155:243 S 19 '42 280w

"The main fault here, often true of psychological novels, is that the author pays too much attention to the stages of individual development and not enough to the continuity of dramatic effect, thus sacrificing the narrative of events, the independent story, to the recording of biographical detail. The result is growth without movement, a series of narrative stills." Isaac Rosenfeld

+ — New Repub 107:519 O 19 '42 250w

"In spite of the fact that the book does not date back to time out of mind, it has a sedately old-fashioned air. Perhaps the gently dignified style, leisurely and unruffled, contributes to this effect. . . . Karen's story has the charm of a detailed, intimate study of a girl's life with abundant and careful particulars as to the places where she lived, the food she ate, the clothes she wore, the songs she sang, and also her ambitions and aspirations. So far, 'Nearer the Earth' is a workmanlike and intelligent job. But because Karen doesn't appear to be a particularly important person—as an individual or as a type—the book seems a fine opportunity to know very well somebody whom you would scarcely have sought out in a crowd." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 23 '42 650w

New Yorker 18:58 Ag 22 '42 30w

Time 40:104 S 14 '42 80w

BORTH, CHRISTY. True steel; the story of George Matthew Verity and his associates. 319p il $3 Bobbs

B or 92 Verity, George Matthew. American rolling mill company 41-15826

Biography of George M. Verity, and the story of the men who helped him in founding the American Rolling mill company at Middletown, Ohio. In his successful career the head of this great steel industry has been aided by his idea of the value of cooperation and the dignity of the individual. Index.

"Mr. Borth has produced an intensely interesting, almost dramatic history of the life of Armco's founder."

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:167 Ap '42 350w

Management R 31:440 D '42 40w

"One's sense of business values is clarified by this record of hard work, valuable achievement, sensible objectives, moderate size (amid giants), and continuing corporate identity in a world of industrial upheaval." Palmer Harman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 S 13 '41 230w

BOSANQUET, MARY. Saddlebags for suitcases; across Canada on horseback. 247p il $3 Dodd

917.1 Canada—Description and travel

42-19819

Adventures of a young English girl who rode horseback across Canada and down thru New England to New York city, beginning her trip in the spring of 1939.

Booklist 39:68 N 1 '42

Reviewed by Muriel Chatain

Books p20 O 18 '42 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

Library J 67:683 Ag '42 20w

"Her book has the charm of zestful freshness and of sensitive response."

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 23 '42 550w

BOSTON, ORLAN WILLIAM. Metal processing. 630p il $5 Wiley

621.9 Machine shop practice. Machine tools. Machinery 41-14336

"The author, who holds the unique title of Professor of Metal Processing at the University of Michigan, presents a textbook for use in colleges or short industrial courses. Based on his previous title Engineering Shop Practice, which was revised and consolidated with more recent data. Emphasis is placed on the nomenclature of tools, with extensive information on 'cutting forces, power, tool life, chip formation, and surface quality as influenced by the properties of the material being machined, the cutting fluid, and the tool shape and quality.'" (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 38:55 O 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:57 O '41

BOSWORTH, ALLAN R. Full crash dive. 271p $2 Duell

42-5131

Detective story.

Booklist 38:368 Je 1 '42

BOSWORTH, A. R.—Continued

"Don't get the idea that the author has shopped around for a dreadful war-time incident as a mere peg for grisly thrills. There are plenty of thrills in the story, but they are produced by one who knows what he is talking about and how to handle same." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 Ja 18 '42 200w

"Allan R. Bosworth can write knowingly and excitingly about the navy, and his first detective yarn is fast and tense, and as timely as today's paper. Admiral Wetherbee is more than a bit synthetic, but not the plot he unravels." Mort Post

+ New Repub 106:126 Ja 26 '42 70w

"Some of the information supplied by those who are helping the admiral is made known to us immediately, but the more important items are held back until after the identity of the saboteur and murderer has become known. Thus the armchair sleuth who likes to beat the author to the solution is left out on a limb and has to be satisfied with swift action and suspense, of which there is plenty." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 11 '42 240w

"Hair-raiser."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 Ja 24 '42 40w

BOTSFORD, HELEN VIRGINIA. Ashes of gold 272p $2.50 Dodd

42-13382

Story of a little Indian village in the mountains of Mexico. There was a gold mine near the village and the peons took what they needed but chiefly they subsisted on the produce of their fields. But the gold mine was sold to a white man who gradually enslaved the whole village by taking over all the lands as well. Things went from bad to worse until the revolution came and the land was returned to the peons—but not the mine.

"Perhaps Miss Botsford has oversimplified the Indian and made village communal life too idyllic to be entirely convincing, but she has written a sympathetic and vivid picture of remote Mexico." Margaret Evans

+ Books p23 My 10 '42 500w

Nation 154:664 Je 6 '42 120w

New Repub 107:94 Jl 20 '42 60w

"The impressions of the country, the bird and animal life, the vegetation, the weather, including a terrific cloudburst, are all vivid and attractive. Miss Botsford writes well. Her novel is one of two winners of honorable mention in the Intercollegiate Literary Fellowship competition." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p7 My 17 '42 550w

"The style is as simple as the characters. We see everything from their point of view, almost as if the author had translated their words and thoughts directly into English. The effect is both charming and convincing. The danger in this kind of writing is that it will become monotonous, but the author has avoided this danger by severe condensation." Floyd Stovell

+ Sat R of Lit 25:39 My 16 '42 450w

BOUCHER, ANTHONY, pseud. See White, W. A. P.BOUTELL, MRS ANITA. Cradled in fear. 303p $2.50 Putnam

42-24598

Psychological mystery story in which a young bride is introduced to her husband's home with its queer family and traditions, and has to fight for her place against an atmosphere of lurking suspicion and horror.

Booklist 39:139 D 15 '42

"Depend upon it, Miss Boutell explains why Molly acts slightly unhinged and why her young husband seems dopey. A romantic mystery with unusual forms of torment and bliss in the right places." Will Cuppy

Books p31 N 8 '42 180w

"The story moves rapidly to a dramatic and exciting scene for which the reader is a little better prepared than Molly. It has atmosphere, suspense, a very engaging heroine and a convincing basis in diseased, abnormal passion. While it has weaknesses evident to any one reading it with a little care, these are easily overlooked in the rapid development of the plot. An interesting and shivery tale for a stormy Winter night." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p24 N 8 '42 600w

"Too many adjectives, but romantic reading for the ladies."

New Yorker 18:83 N 7 '42 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 15 '42 220w

BOWEN, ELIZABETH (MRS ALAN CAMERON). Bowen's Court. 459p il $3.50 Knopf [16s Longmans]

929.72 Bowen family (W) 42-18166

The land around Bowen's Court in County Cork, Ireland, has been in the author's family since Cromwell's time. The house itself was finished in 1776. This detailed history of the Bowen family during its three centuries in Ireland follows the course of Irish history during that time, as well.

Booklist 39:10 S '42

"This book [is] written with affection and delicate imagination as well as a scrupulous regard for fact. The author makes it an epitome of Irish history as regards the English connection, candid yet full of subtle implications and personal charm. Dozens of characters are sketched, hidden dramas touched on, public and intimate affairs are brought into perspective, the past breathes again. But it is very queer—one still sees the house as separate, not quite inhabited; those large, light, airy rooms are exquisitely empty, as if under an enchantment conjured out of a dream of a world which never came into existence." Isabel Paterson

+ — Books p5 Ag 2 '42 1550w

"Given the paradoxes of Irish history and life, this biography of a house seems to me one of the most moving and profound volumes I have read in recent months." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 36:424 Ag 21 '42 700w

"Too detailed accounts of topography of the country and of genealogical and biographical history of family detract from interest for average reader, but charm of style and flow of narrative will reward patience of the more leisurely. Recommended for larger libraries." A. R. Eaton

+ Library J 67:581 Je 15 '42 60w

Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 22 '42 180w

"Miss Bowen's straight historical sections are rather stiff. What she has accomplished is something more subtle: a sympathetic picture of a class often denigrated beyond its entire deserts, and the results, in human character, of their really tragic isolation. She is, occasionally, slightly blind to the implications of the story. To her, as to Yeats in his old age, power is better when linked up to the idea of property. Disaster, to her mind, comes when power operates 'in a void.' This is an attitude held over from the past of which Miss Bowen so sensitively speaks. The future will know that not to love power is the essential thing." Louise Bogan

+ — Nation 155:156 Ag 22 '42 1000w

Reviewed by Kay Boyle

New Repub 107:355 S 21 '42 1250w

"This kind of book is nearly always the rambling hotch-potch of an amateur, while Bowen's Court is a real book. To criticise the author's interpretation of Anglo-Irish history is outside my competence: no doubt it is sometimes controversial, for objective truth is hard to come by in this instance; but her presentation is certainly most thorough, sane and clear. The beauty is still more obvious—in the introductory passages descriptive of the place itself, and in the long twilight at the end. Edwardian society had a brassy glitter on which the Anglo-Irish (whether in Ireland or England) turned their backs. Late Victorian manners, together with late Victorian taste in feeling and interior decoration, continued to characterise them down to the present war. So vulgarity, in whatever form, does not enter Miss Bowen's picture; more's the pity, then, that she has seen fit to lace her admirably sober prose with so much modern slang, which strikes a jarring note." E. S. West

+ New Statesman & Nation 24:62 J1 25 '42 1250w

"Elizabeth Bowen has been noted for some years as a witty and psychologically talented novelist and now, in 'Bowen's Court,' she presents herself as a biographer, a double-barrelled biographer, to be exact, of unusual stature. She is both objective and intense. She preserves a detached balance in all essentials that is admirable and yet she dives, with some imaginative license, it is to be suspected, into a task of extraordinary dangers." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 2 '42 1100w

"The sober charm of the book is in its family portraits, many of which have been worked up from scant evidence but with a warmth and insight that suggest extraordinary imaginative virtuosity. A fine piece of writing, in spite of some unevenness of texture and an occasional overdose of legal and genealogical detail."

+ New Yorker 18:55 Ag 8 '42 120w

Pratt p13 D '42

Reviewed by M. M. Colum

Sat R of Lit 25:3 S 5 '42 2700w

"Space is rationed, but I wish very much I could convey, by quotation and discourse, how delightful and engrossing I have found this curious book. It has not won me from my dislike of that shadowland where biography embraces fiction; but it was necessary in this case to make some psychological and even circumstantial guesses about the dead, and the necessity is handled with as much skill as could be hoped for." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 169:15 J1 3 '42 850w

Time 40:78 Ag 3 '42 550w

"This history of an Anglo-Irish family will be of interest mainly to Irishmen, and in particular to those who know County Cork. Yet when a distinguished novelist writes the story of her ancestors and reconstructs their characters and motives in the light of what documents have come down to us, the result must be of value to others also."

Times [London] Lit Sup p322 Je 27 '42 700w

Wis Lib Bul 38:184 D '42

BOWERS, DOROTHY. Fear and Miss Betony [Eng title: Fear for Miss Betony]. 273p $2 Doubleday [8s 3d Hodder]

(W) 42-36049

Detective story.

Booklist 38:235 Mr 1 '42

"Miss Emma Betony is decidedly a person to meet. She's a spinster sleuth, British variety, quite different from the American kind, with attractions all her own. She doesn't go in for cute remarks, but she makes a strong and continuous appeal to the reader's sympathy, rewarding him with a truly slick brand of amateur detection." Will Cuppy

+ Books p15 F 1 '42 250w

"Dorothy Bowers writes so well that you wonder why she doesn't try her hand at something better than the murder of a poor old woman with a sentimental past."

+ Boston Globe p19 Mr 11 '42 60w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 O 3 '41 30w

"The chief fault of this story is that it starts off much too slowly. Few readers are likely to have the patience to stay with it until things really begin to happen." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 F 1 '42 300w

"There is mounting suspense in this very fine tale of arsenic and education."

+ New Yorker 17:64 F 7 '42 50w

"Resolute old lady, guessing that her own number is up next, handles ticklish job calmly and thwarts cold-blooded pair. Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 F 7 '42 40w

"Mrs Bowers writes very fluently, but sometimes rather confusedly. Her style is expressed in the words of one of her characters who says, 'I am tiring you, I run on.' . . . The book is without plan, and the effort to find what came into Mrs Bowers's head is more like doing a crossword puzzle than solving a mystery." D. P. T. Edrop

—Springf'd Republican p7e F 1 '42 140w

"'Fear and Miss Betony' is the best detective story of the year so far. The crime is cleverly committed and cleverly detected but that is not all. Besides providing all that is usually asked of this kind of fiction, the author makes her characters as interesting for their own sake as novelists untrammelled by the shackles of mystery would."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p545 N 1 '41 140w

BOWLBY, JOHN. Personality and mental illness; an essay in psychiatric diagnosis. 280p $2.75 Emerson [10s 6d Routledge]

616.8 Personality, Disorders of. Psychology, Pathological A42-4661

"A distinguished psychiatrist here attempts two tasks of major importance: first, to bring some order out of the present chaos of psychiatric classification; second, to demonstrate the relationship between definite personality types and specific forms of functional mental disorder. If these ends can be attained, he contends, a long step will have been taken toward more correct diagnoses, more dependable prognoses and proper treatment. Most of the classifications to date have been based upon symptoms. . . . Our author, on the contrary, follows Bleuler and Kretschmer (he is particularly indebted to the latter) in taking the view that in all functional psychoses the total personality is involved, and that the difference between healthy personality, neuroticism and psychosis is only a difference of degree and not of kind. His theory stresses the unbroken gradation of mental states from the completely healthy to the utterly insane and recognizes no clear-cut lines of demarcation." (Christian Century) Index.

"Although many of the conclusions are tentative in character, the ideas presented and the method of study proposed make the book a valuable contribution to the literature on psychiatry, and students of this subject will find much of interest in its pages." N. D. C. Lewis

+ Am J Pub Health 32:1059 S '42 360w

"That the author's hypotheses upon so controverted a subject will receive general acceptance is not, of course, to be expected. But his modest hope that his studies will provide a starting point for further investigation ought to be realized. Certainly something needs to be done if a system is to be devised which will be useful in the diagnostic job of properly classifying victims of mental disorder, the essential preliminary to prognosis and treatment." C. T. Holman

Christian Century 59:1056 S 2 '42 950w

"Excellent reading not only for students of psychology and psychiatry but also for the many who are interested in the borderland between medicine and psychology. Dr. Bowlby earnestly hopes that it will stimulate others to undertake the research necessary to confirm or modify his conclusions."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 Ag '42 210w

BOWMAN, DEAN ORLANDO. Public control of labor relations; a study of the National labor relations board. 504p $5 Macmillan

331.154 U.S. National labor relations board. Arbitration, Industrial 42-18573

"The purpose of this study is to present at once a history of the National Labor Relations Board with something of the problems incident to its current operations, and to relate the experience of this agency to the basic problems encountered by any public administrative agency which attempts to control relationships in our economy." Ann Am Acad

BOWMAN, D. O.—Continued

"Mr. Bowman has used a voluminous quantity of primary source material, drawn principally from Senate and House Hearings and from cases arising out of Board actions. He has refrained from much reference to secondary material. The work constitutes a most valuable contribution to literature not only in the field of Public Administration but also in Labor Law." A. G. Taylor

+ Ann Am Acad 225:245 Ja '43 360w

"It is a pity that a book which is so good is not better. Mr. Bowman has shown by his citations that he appreciates the value of material to be found in legal briefs and committee hearings; yet his book ignores the wealth of material to be found in law reviews, economic journals and political science reviews. . . . Despite the ambitious title of his book, it would be unfair to treat Mr. Bowman as if he had tried to do for labor law what O. W. Holmes did in the Lowell Lectures for The Common Law, or what Chief Judge Cardozo did in the Storrs Lectures for The Nature of The Judicial Process. He did not set himself to express the philosophy of labor law but to paint its detail in one agency. The walls of administrative law libraries have room for their Vermeers as well as space for the Leonards yet to come, and Mr. Bowman has portrayed the interior of the NLRB with the chiaroscuro, the microscopic care, and the complete faithfulness of the Dutch painter." C. E. Wyzanski, Jr.

+ — Yale Law J 52:182 N '42 1600w

BOWMAN, HENRY ADELBERT. Marriage for moderns. (Whittlesey house publications) 493p $3.75; textbook ed $3 McGraw

173.1 Marriage (W) 42-3518

This study of marriage for young people or adults about to marry is based on the teaching of a marriage course at Stephens college, which the author gave for seven years. It is concerned with facts, principles, attitudes, and problems connected with marriage. Partial contents: The reasons for marriage; The permanently unmarried; Marriage versus career; Age for marriage; Choosing a mate; Wedding and honeymoon; Personality adjustment—getting along with people; Reproduction; Childlessness and family planning; Divorce. Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by Jessie Bernard
Am Soc R 7:580 Ag '42 450w
Booklist 38:267 Ap 1 '42

"In all controversial matters, such as premarital sex behavior, the author provides a quite exceptional wealth of arguments and facts on which to base individual judgment; and he usually avoids moral judgments, though there is never any question that he is on the side of the angels. He is modern in his views of careers, birth control and divorce and scientifically unexceptionable in his treatment of reproduction." H. M. Parshley

+ Books p17 F 8 '42 300w

"Although prepared for use as a college textbook, the volume should prove to be of great value in other situations, either for young people's study groups or for individual reading. It is written in a clear, interesting fashion and is based on an authority that has come out of Dr. Bowman's long experience in teaching courses on this subject to the young women of Stephens College." D. S. Klaiss

+ Christian Century 59:730 Je 3 '42 550w
J Home Econ 34:254 Ap '42 50w

"Anyone who has taught a marriage course or expects to teach one will be grateful for the simple, straightforward and comprehensive manner of treatment of such various problems as selection of a mate, personality adjustment in marriage, employment of money and leisure time. . . . This book should be in the hands of every young person contemplating marriage. It is hoped that the publishers will find a way to bring it out in a dollar edition so that it may be available to all." B. B. Berle, M.D.

+ Survey 78:223 Ag '42 330w

BOWMAN, HUMPHREY ERNEST. Middle-East window; with an introd. by Sir Ronald Storrs. 346p il $4.50 (14s) Longmans

B or 92 East (Near East). Education—East (Near East) A42-3832

Autobiography of an English educator who spent over thirty years of his life in Egypt, the Sudan, Iraq and Palestine. After a short introductory section on his early life, the author describes his years of service in the East, and his encounters with some of the famous persons he met there: Gertrude Bell, Kitchener, Slatin Pasha, and others. Index.

"At first this threatens to be one of those anodyne autobiographies written by retired public servants to be read by leisured ladies. Sir Humphrey Bowman's recollections include some chit-chat of this sort. However, he goes further than mere trivia, and within the limits of a somewhat rosy palette, he paints some lively portraits. Dr. Dunlop of Egypt, Sir James Currie of the Sudan, Sir Arnold Wilson, and Gertrude Bell, are the most interesting." Freda White

+ — New Statesman & Nation 24:28 Jl 11 '42 700w

Reviewed by T. K. Derry
Spec 169:484 N 20 '42 950w

"These reminiscences are written in an easy genial style."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p212 Ap 25 '42 950w

BOYAN, EDWIN ARTHUR. Handbook of war production; with a foreword by Erwin Haskell Schell. 368p $3 McGraw

658.5 U.S.—Industries and resources. Industrial mobilization. Industry and state—U.S. World war, 1939—Economic aspects—U.S. 42-24128

"This excellent manual tells the manufacturer in concise, readable language just what he must do to obtain government contracts and how he can operate to best advantage after he gets them. It covers practically every phase of wartime conversion and production. While directed specifically to the problems of the manufacturer, government men who are concerned with procurement and production will find the book invaluable. . . . The substance of the book has been provided by over 200 executives and government officials and their staffs." (Management R) Index.

Library J 67:952 N 1 '42 20w

Reviewed by S. E. Thompson
+ Management R 31:437 D '42 850w

BOYCE, BURKE. Perilous night. 560p $2.75 Viking

42-1761

Historical novel of New York state during the Revolution. The Hudson valley of the region across from West Point is the locale, where both patriots and Tories had their prosperous farms. Asa Howell, his two grown sons, and his lovely daughter Tempy Ann, with her attendant swains, are the central characters.

Booklist 38:275 Ap 1 '42

"'The Perilous Night' is the familiar historical tale of its excellent kind—the realistic, chronological narrative, family novel, embracing a wealth of everyday details, moving down the years of strife and violence and bitterness in the backwash of revolutionary war. It cannot be said that Mr. Boyce has contributed anything new or original to the kind, but he has decidedly added another sound one to the list. And as a picture of the way of life throughout most of the colonies during the eight years of turmoil . . . his must surely be one of the best, although less dramatic than some of its predecessors." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p4 F 8 '42 950w

"In its sometimes rather slow moving pages this book treats us to some very fine things—a really charming young girl, Tempy Ann, a dashing and perverse enough young hero of adventure to satisfy any romantic's taste, and a gallery of lesser country figures to give everyday substance to the presentation of the historic scene. One or two characters and situations do have a somewhat melodramatic flavor, but in general the presentation of everyday life is as sure and abundant as the York State landscape in which the story takes place." H. C. White

+ — Commonweal 37:260 D 25 '42 420w

"An exceedingly well written and interesting historical novel, suitable for adult and young people's collections." Lena Ruppert

+ Library J 67:131 F 1 '42 50w

"A novel stubbornly American in spirit, dignified and faintly archaic in style." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 F 8 '42 900w

"The life is described with color and sympathy, and the war seems startlingly meaningful and real."

+ New Yorker 17:70 F 14 '42 90w

"Sinclair Lewis once remarked that everyone should burn his first novel. He did, and many believe that he should have continued the practice. I am glad that Burke Boyce did no such thing. To be sure, there are blemishes in the work, as there are, plenty of them, in the work of James Fenimore Cooper, but I believe that 'The Perilous Night' is the most interesting novel of the American Revolution since the appearance of Cooper's 'Spy' in 1821." LeRoy Arnold

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 Ap 4 '42 550w

Wis Lib Bul 38:68 Ap '42

"Mr. Boyce . . . writes solidly and quietly, and is a real addition to our historical novelists." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 31:xii spring '42 50w

BOYDEN, MRS POLLY CHASE. Pink egg. 243p $2 Pamet press, Truro, Mass.

42-12604

"This is a fable about the downtrodden, underprivileged sparrows who make a revolution and throw all the robins and other handsomer, luckier, and more talented birds out of the orchard where they live, and some of the very nicest robins turn in and help them." Nation

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 9 '42 400w

"As for these birds with their unpleasantly human ways, I am reminded irresistibly of the beachcomber's fable about the man who tried to make the mice in his house wear little wool hats during the cold weather. He wasn't any more successful than [Mrs] Boyden trying to make her birds wear waistcoats, but he was a great deal funnier." K. A. Porter

Nation 154:343 Mr 21 '42 900w

"With a light touch and a lively and bubbling humor, Polly Boyden reminds the reader that she is also a poet by her awareness that the world where birds or other beings may meet injustice or disaster, be drugged with happiness or follow visions, is also a world of beauty and mystery. . . . With satiric comedy she voices her own philosophy and sense of human (if not of bird) foibles, and, as a poet, the poignancy of the allegory lying behind the fable." Anita Moffett

N Y Times p23 Ap 5 '42 600w

"Pleasant, not too deep, and now and then labored."

New Yorker 18:79 Mr 28 '42 40w

BOYKIN, EDWARD CARRINGTON, ed. Living letters from American history. (Halcyon house bk) 387p $1.98 Blue ribbon bks.

973 U.S.—History

42-10332

"Edward Boykin has brought together a remarkable collection of letters concerned with important events, from and to the persons chiefly involved. By no means all of American history is here represented. The earliest letter is from George Washington, dated June 18, 1775, informing his wife of his appointment to the command of the new Continental Army. Almost all the letters belong to the period from that date to the end of the Civil War, with only six chosen from the years 1867-1919 and none thereafter." Books

Books p18 Mr 29 '42 900w

"The value of a book like this must depend, first, upon the possession of some guiding plan or theme, and second, upon the freshness or originality of its contents. Mr. Boykin's collection deserves praise on both accounts." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 25:25 Ap 11 '42 650w

BOYLE, KAY (MRS LAURENCE VAIL). Primer for combat. 320p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

(W) 42-36354

Novel in diary form, in which an American woman living in France with her husband and their three children, describes life in a French village during the summer of 1940 when the French were beginning to feel the heavy hand of Germany. Despite her marriage Phyl was in love with a handsome Austrian, who had joined the Foreign Legion to escape internment. In her diary the course of Phyl's gradual awakening to the true nature of her Austrian is traced, and the reactions of the native French and their refugee guests are described.

"It will not satisfy those whose maudlin nostalgia for France makes them revel in a kind of falsified picturesqueness. They are in no danger of having seen that for the last time: it can always be reconstructed for them with Hollywood technique. Kay Boyle speaks only of a small corner of France, and of a few people of France, and her book is short. But nothing better has been written on France since the Germans got there." R. de R. De Sales

+ Atlantic 170:152 D '42 500w

Booklist 39:102 N 15 '42

"'A Primer for Combat' is far from being a primer. It is, on the contrary, a highly advanced study of the change the Germans brought to France. While Phyl and Wolfgang may be forgotten, the picture of the country and the time and the feelings involved will be remembered. This may be Miss Boyle's subtle point—that a personal emotional tragedy fades out and seems unimportant, before a much greater tragedy involving a whole nation." Rosemary Benét

+ Books p4 N 15 '42 1000w

"The book bristles with details of tragedy, cameo pictures of courage and defeatism, and flashes of beauty. Miss Boyle was a witness of many of the things she describes, knows whereof she speaks, and not the least part of her performance is her ability to put her own emotions aside and not allow them to hinder her expression." I. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 26 '42 360w

"Intensely interesting narrative. Recommended." S. E. Sherman

+ Library J 67:844 O 1 '42 100w

Reviewed by Jean Connolly

Nation 155:689 D 19 '42 600w

"As a comment on the French defeat, the book is accurate, honest and much better informed than most of its predecessors, although it does not greatly change the picture we have formed already. As a novel, it suffers from having a plot much more trivial than the meaning she tries to read into it." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 107:614 N 9 '42 330w

Reviewed by Marianne Hauser

N Y Times p6 N 8 '42 1000w

"Her writing has, as always, great style, and because it is less mannered than ever before, it is all the more deeply moving."

+ New Yorker 18:78 N 14 '42 90w

"The story itself moves slowly, but the piling up of little incidents, the words and faces of the people numbed by despair, but each one behaving in his own characteristic way, are skilfully and movingly done." Robert Littell

+ — Yale R n s 32:viii winter '43 160w

BOYLSTON, MRS HELEN (DORE). Carol plays summer stock; il. by Major Felten. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 220p $2.12

(W) 42-19681

Sequel to Carol Goes Backstage (Book Review Digest, 1941). Carol serves her apprenticeship at a repertory theater, and is rewarded by a place in a summer stock company in a small Maine village. For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 39:52 O 15 '42

"Carol Page, second-string heroine of the creator of 'Sue Barton,' began last year what promised from the first to be as interesting a series of adventures in learning about the stage as could be found in Mrs. Boylston's quintuplex set of novels on nursing. . . Carol has temperament; when some one complains that 'you have more agonies!' She says, 'Well, I have more fun, too.' There's fun in her trials for a girl at all stagestruck." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 O 25 '42 300w

Reviewed by E. A. Groves
Library J 67:957 N 1 '42 90w

BRADY, NELLA (MRS KEITH HENNEY). Rudyard Kipling, son of empire; il. by Eleanor O. Eadie and A. Gladys Peck. 278p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Kipling, Rudyard—Juvenile literature (W) 41-25225

Biography of Rudyard Kipling, written for readers of twelve or over. It pictures his early years in India, his unhappy experiences when he went to England to school, his years as a newspaper man, and his stay in America. The close association between Kipling's life and his writings is well brought out. Index.

"This book was somewhat of a disappointment. Kipling's life was dramatic and exciting and his story should make compelling and colorful reading. Instead, the author has given us a complete story, factually correct, capably written, but uninspired. . . Recommended for libraries which need additional books about Kipling. For ages twelve and over." J. E. Stromdahl

+ — Library J 67:183 F 15 '42 70w
Wis Lib Bul 38:38 My '42

BRADEN, CHARLES SAMUEL. Man's quest for salvation. 274p $2.50 Willett

291 Salvation 41-26723

"An historical and comparative study of the idea of salvation in the world's great living religions." (Subtitle) The religions studied are: Hinduism, Jainism, Buddhism, Sikhism, the religions of China, Shintoism, Zoroastrianism, Judaism, Christianity, Islam. Bibliography. Index.

"This study is important and timely. In an epoch when in East and West alike humanity tends to be dragged to a level far below its best aspirations, such a volume may serve to keep us reminded of the great goals, even if dark days tempt us to forget." C. H. Hamilton

+ Christian Century 59:20 Ja 7 '42 600w

"There are abundant quotations from the various scriptures, the book is readable and demands very little background, and it is reliable throughout." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 156:16 F 15 '42 220w

"The central theme of man's religious story is his quest for the values of the ideal life. If there are gods in a religion, they are servants of this quest, providing the desired values or guaranteeing the ultimate fulfillment of man's highest vision. If there are no gods, the religious world view reads the universe in terms favorable to human ideals. So also the practical and ceremonial techniques arise, change, are justified or outgrown in terms of their use in the realization of values. Through all the changing theologies and institutions runs the desire-driven search for salvation. Mr. Braden has chosen to follow the thread of this fascinating theme historically through the cultures of the world. Scholars who know the vast spread of this study in time and space and the way the path of history twists and turns and becomes cluttered with endless complexity in any culture will appreciate the admirably clear picture achieved by the author. There are no frills of style, no striving for artistic effects, only a straightforward, workmanlike presentation of materials." A. E. Haydon

+ Crozer Q 19:234 J1 '42 1000w

"The reader of Dr. Braden's previous books on religion will expect in this one learning, thought, and clear exposition. He will not be disappointed. The author deals sympathetically and broadly with his theme, giving an account of the 'types of salvation ideas' found in Hinduism, Jainism, Buddhism (both Hinayana and Mahayana), Sikhism, Zoroastrianism, Judaism, Christianity, and Islamism. Such a mere list can, of course, give but little idea of the many interesting things with which Dr. Braden fills his pages." J. B. Pratt

+ J Religion 22:316 J1 '42 550w

BRADLEY, ALICE VERONICA. Tables of food values. rev & enl ed 224p $3.50 Manual arts 641.1 Food. Nutrition 42-23139

"A reference work for dietitians, giving in tabular form the composition of average servings of food and beverages. In this new edition of a 1931 book the greatest change is in giving vitamins in units and milligrams, while mineral values are shown in shares and grams. Bibliography." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 39:105 N 15 '42

Reviewed by B. K. Watt
J Home Econ 35:48 Ja '43 180w

BRADLEY, ANITA. Trans-Pacific relations of Latin America; an introd. essay and sel. bibliography. 120p pa $1 Inst. of Pacific relations

327.8 Latin America—Foreign relations—East (Far East). Pan-Pacific relations. Pan-Pacific relations—Bibliography A42-5180

This volume is described as "an introductory essay and selected bibliography of commercial, political, and cultural contacts between Latin America and the Far East from the time of the sixteenth century Spanish galleon trade to the coolie traffic of the nineteenth and the Japanese colonization schemes of the twentieth century."

Reviewed by W. T. R. Fox
Am Pol Sci R 36:796 Ag '42 150w

"There is much valuable material in this study, but confidence in it would be greater had another month or two been spent in checking its accuracy and organization." R. H. Fitzgibbon

+ — Ann Am Acad 223:233 S '42 360w

"Miss Bradley correctly called her work an introductory survey. . . If we disregard the political philosophizing of the first three pages, the entire study is written in a businesslike way and style. . . There are few mistakes of facts in this useful study. . . The bibliographical part of the book is well done." J. F. Normano

+ — Pacific Affairs 15:240 Je '42 550w

BRADLEY, HAROLD WHITMAN. American frontier in Hawaii. 488p $4.50 Stanford univ. press

996.9 Hawaiian Islands—History 42-24431

A detailed, scholarly history of the Hawaiian Islands from 1789 to 1843, years which witnessed the advent of American traders and missionaries. The author is associate professor of history at Stanford university. Index.

"It is a pleasure to find a historian whose opinions are based on a thorough study of the sources and whose statements of fact are buttressed by meticulously careful references to chapter and verse. His every page is garnished with footnotes. This part of Hawaiian history will not have to be done over again." Hiram Bingham

+ N Y Times p32 D 13 '42 800w

"This interesting volume is the work of a gifted scholar. It is unusually well supplied with notes and references from source materials on practically every page and yet it reads like a gripping story." F. M. Mohler
+ Springfield Republican p6 Ja 7 '43 750w

BRADLEY, WALTER PARKE. They made him Christ. 384p $3.50 Christopher

226 Bible. New Testament. Gospels 42-23108

"The author's thesis is expressed in the subtitle: 'The great transformation whereby Jesus of Nazareth, successor to John the Baptist as herald of the coming Messiah, himself became recognized as the Messiah, the Christ, the Son of God.' He attempts to show, by a study of the Gospels, that the messiahship of Jesus was an afterthought of his followers, and that successive writers, from Mark to the author of the Fourth Gospel, projected it farther and farther back until they arrived at the conception of the eternal sonship, as stated in the Prologue." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:1259 O 14 '42 80w

"The book has real values. Not, I fancy, for the professional historian or critic. It was not written for them. But for the rank and file layman who is weary of the nonsense talked about the Bible, but who finds the average book by the professional—even if it was directed at him—'deep stuff,' this book may well be of value. It is very readable, racy, in fact, at times; at times it is almost overclear." M. S. Enslin

+ — Crozer Q 20:32 Ja '43 500w

BRAISTED, MRS RUTH EVELYN (WILDER).

In this generation. 205p $1.25; pa 75c Missionary educ. movement

B or 92 Wilder, Robert Parmelee 42-3055

Biography of Robert P. Wilder who was for many years a leading figure in the Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions. The author is Wilder's daughter who has also been a missionary.

"This is a fitting memorial to a great missionary leader, and an introduction to an important chapter in the history of American Christianity."

+ Christian Century 59:84 Ja 21 '42 70w

"The author is to be commended for producing a popular volume which is brief and untrammelled by the paraphernalia of research scholarship. It would have been helped by the inclusion of more photographs and a sketch map of Wilder's career. Those who are interested in the more historical aspects of the total student Christian movement would have been glad, however, to have a list of sources included. This man played such a large part in the world-wide movement that it is hoped a more comprehensive and detailed volume will yet be written." W. M. Beahm

+ — J Religion 22:449 O '42 420w

BRANCH, HOUSTON, and WATERS, FRANK. River Lady. 374p $2.50 Farrar

42-7625

The robust life of the Mississippi river towns in the days when lumber was king is the background for this story. Each spring when the lumber drive began the people of the water front towns prepared for an influx of tough raftsmen. The steamer River Lady, and her mistress Sequin, who was also a lady, even tho she provided questionable amusements for the raftsmen, play an important part in this saga of frontier life.

Booklist 38:330 My 1 '42

"The authors have made a richly crowded pageant of these days when there was 'wood to the world's end and water to float it in.' Its titans roister through the pages. Its sharply colored details sometimes choke the story, but it is all here, vivid, unshaded and extravagantly alive." Page Cooper

+ Books p10 Mr 22 '42 550w

"If 'River Lady' were no more than the story of Dan Cardan it would be worth reading—purely as a story and for the color and violence which seem to belong to it naturally. But it is more than that by a good deal, and quite as naturally. There is no feeling of effort about it, nor any air of solemnity. The authors are not oppressed by the fact that they are writing history. Out of sheer delight in the richness and variety of their material they have made 'River Lady' the story of an era. An era lusty, piratical, naive, picturesque and typically American, an era which already belongs both to history and to legend." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 22 '42 750w

"It will make another movie, of course; set down Mr Gable for the role of Dan Cardan; the other roles are open." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ap 11 '42 270w

BRAND, CHRISTIANNA, pseud. See Lewis, M. C. M.

BRAND, MAX. Dr Kildare's trial. 204p $2 Dodd

(W) 42-19430

Doctor Kildare saves a life with a brilliant emergency operation and is rewarded with a legal action charging malpractice.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p24 O 4 '42 70w

"Dr. Kildare's special fans will find plenty of dramatic interest in his latest exploit." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p25 O 11 '42 140w

BRAND, MAX. Silvertip. 226p $2 Dodd

42-1100

Western story.

Booklist 38:276 Ap 1 '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p16 Ja 25 '42 60w

"It's a tense and gripping yarn. Silvertip is as hard, brittle and artificial a figure as Max Brand has ever created, and he has made the type his specialty. His publishers announce that this is the first of an extensive series of tales of Silvertip's adventures—promise of rich entertainment for Western fans." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p25 F 15 '42 200w

BRAND, MAX. Silvertip's strike. 226p $2 Dodd

42-23434

Western story.

Booklist 39:122 D 1 '42

Reviewed by G. W. Harris

N Y Times p30 N 29 '42 220w

BRAND, NORTON F., and INGRAM, VERNER MERRITT. Pastor's legal adviser. 237p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

347 Law--U.S.

42-20754

Two experienced lawyers have written this summary of laws and legal decisions affecting the church as a corporation. It also shows the legal rights and responsibility of the minister. Glossary. List of cases cited. Index.

Christian Century 59:960 Ag 5 '42 50w

"It is really in Part Four, where the authors discuss such pastoral activities and relationships as arise out of the laws regulating marriages, copyrights, and wills, that the busy pastor will find a treatment of issues that he will most certainly have to face in any normal ministerial career. This is not to say that he will here find an answer to all his questions. For example: in any particular State the marriage between a white person and an American Indian may or may not be permitted by the law of that State. This book does not tell which States do or do not prohibit such a marriage. But it does put the clergyman on notice that such a marriage is illegal in some States and thus warn him of the necessity of seeking competent legal advice if and when such a question arises. This illustration suggests both the value and the limitations of this book." J. H. Day

BRAND, N. F.—Continued

+ — Crozer Q 19:335 O '42 400w

BRANDEIS, LOUIS DEMBITZ. On Zionism [comp. and ed. by Solomon Goldman] with a foreword by Felix Frankfurter. 156p $1.50 Zionist organization of Am, 1720 16th st, N.W., Washington, D.C.
296 Zionism

A collection of addresses and statements by Judge Brandeis, opening with his True Americanism made in Faneuil Hall in 1915, and including addresses which extend past his seventy-fifth birthday. They constitute an index to the author's fine mind, as well as a pronouncement of his stand on Zionism.

"Constituting, as they are thus brought together, a document of value in the history of Americanism, the appeal of these speeches and articles is both to the soul and to the common sense faculties statesmanship must exercise to survive. To one who knows little about Zionism it will make clear not only what it is, but how these views of nationalism and democracy, taken from its vantage point during the first world war and after, can lead toward enduring peace through the terrors of the second." M. L. Becker

+ Books p26 Ja 17 '43 230w

"Some of the quotations are so brief as to be of little interest, but the sum total of the book is as good a statement of the Zionist case as could now be addressed to Americans."

+ Christian Century 59:1496 D 2 '42 70w

BRANDON, WILFRED. See Ellis, E. We knew these men

BRANSON, HENRY C. Pricking thumb. 310p $2 Simon & Schuster

42-50423

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p24 D 13 '42 250w

"The author has left a few loose ends dangling. . . Much of what is left unsaid can be supplied by the imagination, but most readers, we believe, like to be told all the 'orrible and disgusting' details." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p4 D 20 '42 200w

"Rewarding."

+ Sat R of Lit 26:18 Ja 2 '43 40w

"The author needlessly offends some readers by the blasphemous language of many of his characters in his otherwise clever and intriguing story." H. L. B.

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e D 27 '42 120w

BRAYER, HERBERT OLIVER, ed. See Clarke, C. F. To form a more perfect union

BRAZDOVA, MME AMELIE (POSSE). In the beginning was the light; tr. from the Swedish by Grenville Grove. 410p $3.75 Dutton

B or 92

(W) 42-21502

Reminiscences of the author's childhood during the 1890s, on her father's estate in Sweden. The writer is widely known for her earlier book: Sardinian Sideshow (Book Review Digest, 1933).

Booklist 39:69 N 1 '42

"Throughout the book, one senses the germinating growth of a personality that was to become a good artist. Always there is a sharp pompous vulgarity and simple dignity, and always a breadth of intellectual and cultural view that sharpens one's realization that the entire personal history of a man lies latent in his childhood." William Soskin

+ Books p8 N 29 '42 1450w

"This charming book, by the author of 'Sardinian Sideshow', was written in a flat in Stockholm where Mme. Posse-Brazdova now lives, a refugee from her Czechoslovakian home. Her story is one of exquisite humor and sensibility. The translation of Grenville Grove is competent, if occasionally awkward."

+ Boston Globe p19 O 28 '42 180w

"Written with a charm and sensitiveness rarely found in books of this type." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 67:794 S 15 '42 70w

"This is a book of uncommon charm, in form and substance. And the title must have a heart-stirring appeal for any one who has seen the northern sunshine on Swedish beeches and white birch." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 O 13 '42 1250w

New Yorker 13:91 O 17 '42 50w

BREARLEY, HARRY. Knotted string; autobiography of a steel-maker. 198p $2.50
(10s 6d) Longmans

B or 92 Steel industry and trade

The inventor of stainless steel was born in Sheffield, England, in the latter part of Queen Victoria's reign. He began his life in poverty, was brought up in a three-room cottage in the slums, and married on two pounds per week. In his autobiography he describes his early life, his self education, and his eventual rise to fame.

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 13 '42 100w

"Benjamin Franklin must inevitably be the yardstick for autobiographies by self-made men: this book by 'the man who invented knives that won't cut' has points in common, and can hold its own, although the writer has less to be frank about in private and has no public ambitions. It is a pity that the story of stainless steel does not come earlier, as the technical chapters preceding it are rather heavy-going for the layman, and the author is too much in earnest about the discovery to make it dramatic, but Mr. Brearley has that creative spark in him which is as essential to the scientific researcher, if he is to invent or discover, as it is to the artist. When Mr. Brearley writes about the aspects of life that he knows, he is penetrating because he is unsentimental and unprejudiced."

+ Spec 168:22 Ja 2 '42 210w

"His reminiscences should be of great interest to all who are concerned with steels and their properties. The book is, moreover, written with such zest and frankness that as self-portraiture it will appeal to many readers who are indifferent to technical details."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p22 Ja 10 '42 850w

BRECKENRIDGE, ROBERT P. Modern camouflage; the new science of protective concealment; with a foreword by U. S. Grant, 3d. 280p il $3.50 Farrar

355.43 Camouflage (military science). Civilian defense (W) 42-22731

"The Major tells the various purposes of camouflage; discusses aerial bombing, target identification, the selection and development of new sites, the concealment of grounds, roads, and buildings. He describes how plant materials are used for protective concealment, and comments on special and difficult problems, such as airfields, parking areas, towers, water, bridges, industrial smoke, and steam and snow." (Scientific Bk Club R) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:63 N 1 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '42

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 10w

Library J 67:952 N 1 '42 40w

"Major Breckenridge's book should contribute to the debunking of the exaggerated claims made for the art of camouflage by a certain press. It provides a comprehensive practical manual indicating how the concealment or disguise of different objects is carried out, and in so far as it represents the attitude of the War Department and the OCD on this subject, it will be required reading for all engaged in such work." S. W. Hayter

+ N Y Times p46 N 29 '42 1500w

Pratt p6 D '42

"A most important book."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:2 O '42 390w

BRECKINRIDGE, SCOTT DUDLEY, 1882-1941, and BRECKINRIDGE, SCOTT DUDLEY, Jr. Sword play; based upon the French school of the foil. 100p il $1.75 Barnes, A.S.

796.863 Fencing 41-22410

A presentation of the basic principles of the "game" or "sport" of sword play, based on the theory and technique of the French school. The book is designed for teachers, young students, and those who wish to brush up in later years. Index.

Booklist 38:174 Ja 15 '42

"Authoritative, clearly presented handbook."

+ Springfield Republican p7e D 14 '41 120w

BREED, CHARLES BLANEY. Surveying. 495p il $3 Wiley

526.9 Surveying (W) 42-2706

Textbook on surveying, giving fundamental principles, with special emphasis on surveying instruments and their use in the field. Contains a chapter on lines and grades which will be most helpful to young engineers whose first work will be on construction operations. Index.

Booklist 38:227 Mr 1 '42

Eng N 128:79 Mr 26 '42 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:29 Ap '42

BREEN, MARY J. The children's party book; il. by Hamilton Greene. 244p $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

790 Amusements, Games (W) 41-52066

Practical advice for mothers on the planning and details of children's parties. Includes kinds of parties, games, invitations, menus, decorations. Much of the work is of such a kind that the children themselves can make the decorations, etc. The parties are for girls and boys from three to fourteen. Index.

Booklist 38:174 Ja 15 '42

Christian Century 58:1546 D 10 '41 20w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '42

"The author will make mothers and teachers happy with her new book. . . The author grew up in a large family which attracted crowds of friends to the home, so she has this actual background for her successful parties and entertainments."

+ Springfield Republican p7e D 28 '41 110w

BRENEMAN, JOHN WILLIAM. Strength of materials. (Pa. state college. Industrial ser) 145p $1.50 McGraw

620.11 Strength of materials 41-52751

"This text has been written to meet fully the needs of the field of industrial training by providing an adequately simplified discussion of the principles involved. It is also well adapted for those who desire to study at home through correspondence instruction and was given a thorough test in the fields already mentioned before being printed in book form. The illustrative numerical examples which are included have been solved without the omission of any step, which greatly adds to their value for study purposes. The problems have been taken from the many practical fields of engineering and design and incorporate the fundamental principles of both mechanics and strength of materials. Mathematics above the level of trigonometry has been entirely avoided in presenting the theory and practice involved." (Pref) Index.

Eng N 127:140 O 23 '41 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:12 Ja '42

Pratt p11 O '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:79 My '42

BRENNAN, JOSEPH GERARD. Thomas Mann's world. 206p $2.50 Columbia univ. press
833 Mann, Thomas 42-24518

A study of the works of the German novelist. The "survey is not simply a compendium of what Thomas Mann says about the artist and his relation to life: it is also an analysis of Mann's own artistic personality as it stands revealed in his work. The problem is scanned against the background of nineteenth century German culture; Goethe, Schopenhauer, Nietzsche, Wagner, and Freud stand out as dominant influences. Specifically, our investigation of Mann's work examines the problem of the artist nature in reference to certain definite factors: its social environment, its deviation from the normal in personality and health, its reaction to questions of morals and politics, its relation to the kingdoms of music and metaphysics." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

"College and large public libraries will welcome this study. No general reader will stay with the hundred and ninety-six pages long enough to get the indisputable facts. Good bibliography." K. T. Willis

Library J 67:843 O 1 '42 110w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr

Nation 155:582 N 28 '42 700w

"In the sections of his book where he covers relatively fresh ground, namely in his chapter on the influence of music on Mann's style and in his treatment of Mann's political writings, Dr. Brennan makes a fairly important contribution. But the book as a whole is a rather conventional study, repeating what has often been said before by other students, and limited by an unimaginative method that substitutes citation and cross-reference for more fruitful analysis of the dialectical structure of Mann's ideas. Of value for librarians if not for poets." + — New Repub 108:94 Ja 18 '43 140w

BRENNER, ANITA (MRS DAVID GLUSKER).

The boy who could do anything, and other Mexican folk tales; il. by Jean Charlot. 136p $2.50 Scott, W.R.

Tales, Mexican (W) 42-36108

Twenty-four Mexican folk tales retold for readers of ten to fourteen. "These stories have a double interest, for though some of them come from ancient Indian mythology before the Spanish conquest, we find in even the oldest of the tales modern touches, such as alarm clocks, automobiles and railroads, showing that Mexican folklore is still alive and growing as it is handed on from one generation to the next." (N Y Times)

Booklist 38:279 Ap 1 '42

"One of the most striking and satisfactory folk-tale collections in a long time."

+ Books p14 My 10 '42 400w

"Jean Charlot has done the line drawings for Anita Brenner's collection of Mexican folk tales which are full of the shrewd wisdom of an ancient race, but seem better suited to adult minds than to children's."

Cath World 156:373 D '42 160w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 37:119 N 20 '42 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 18:110 Mr '42 120w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk M 18:117 Mr '42 110w

"Superb matter-of-factness in the telling that will delight adults and enchant children. . . Recommended for boys and girls from ten to fourteen and for the story-teller's shelf."

Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:269 Mr 15 '42 70w

BRENNER, ANITA—Continued

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:384 O 15 '42 10w

"Jean Charlot's drawings have delightful individuality and zest; children find them amusing and interesting, they have also an adult appeal. In the midst of a flood of material for children on Latin America, much of which is superficial and hurriedly put together, it is refreshing to find a book that has grown out of knowledge and personal experience, that is unforced in plan and style and that has a genuineness and spontaneity to which children promptly respond." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 8 '42 430w

New Yorker 18:74 My 23 '42 30w

"The addition of Jean Charlot's illustrations make it an enchanting book. Certainly, to the inquiring mind, such a group of stories—pure unmitigated source material—will outweigh most of the commentaries of more or less inspired visitors to Mexico." Elizabeth Wilder

+ Social Studies 33:377 D '42 420w

BRETHERTON, VIVIEN R. Rock and the wind. 618p $2.75 Dutton

(W) 42-7626

The heroine, Trudy Tresellian, was of Cornish descent, and while she never forgot her native Cornwall, she grew to love the Kansas town where her father took his family. When she married Breck Farridon and went with him to Oregon she loved her new home at sight. The time is the 1860's and later, and Trudy's engineer husband has a vital part in the development of Oregon and its railroads. The title symbolizes the two parts of Trudy's character; the rock being the sturdy side; the wind her imaginative Cornish heritage.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (22)

Booklist 38:309 Ap 15 '42

"The Rock and the Wind" is hardly a great novel; it does not say things greatly; it does not say them with especial grace. Miss Bretherton's manner is on the obvious side—the smooth, good-grade kind of writing to which the large-circulation magazines of America have accustomed their readers. On the other side of the balance are her notable ability for telling a story and her realization of the Pacific Northwest background in the time of which she writes. Very few readers who find themselves enjoying 'The Rock and the Wind' will be troubled by its length; the story moves always." J. H. Jackson

+ — Books p10 Ap 5 '42 900w

"This story would make a good movie for those who like costume pictures, much scenery, fighting, a dash of 'history' and the constant certainty that virtue is about to be rewarded in some nice, comfortable way. As a novel, the story itself is fairly interesting, but the style is too elegant and the characters rather dull in spite of the exciting things they do. The book is very moral and from some points of view—especially for readers of no serious literary interests—it is to be preferred to many other popular books of the moment." Ruth Byrns

+ Commonweal 36:164 Je 5 '42 170w

"A well-told tale. Beauty and strength of the Northwest is heightened by the purposeful and yet reckless determination of those who peopled it. Story of beauty and understanding of human relations, of adventure and true living. Recommended." Margaret Winning

+ Library J 67:319 Ap 1 '42 100w

Reviewed by J. S. Southron

N Y Times p7 Ap 5 '42 800w

"The Rock and the Wind" is written with moving skill, but there is also considerable diffusion of style, and an ambling loquacity which threads together scenes of excellent and pointed drama. Although written on a wide canvas with bold sure words, and ably catching the luxuriant opulence of the West with its embryo cities, and the great feuds and grudges which companioned the building of the railroads, 'The Rock and the Wind' is not epic in style or purpose. It is a romance, fascinatingly readable, peopled with believable characters living adventuresome, passionate, sometimes unhappy lives. In short the kind of book that is lovingly called 'a good story.'"

L. S. Munn

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ap 19 '42 600w

Wis Lib Bul 38:97 Je '42

BREWER, JOHN MARKS, and others. History of vocational guidance; origins and early development; with a chapter on the National occupational conference, by Edwin A. Lee. 344p il $4 Harper

371.425 Vocational guidance 42-12142

"The first comprehensive account of the vocational guidance movement since its inception in this country a third of a century ago, is recorded in this interesting book. It discusses the philosophy of guidance, its scope, tools, methods, terminology, institutions, organization, and administration, and evaluates its processes." (Survey) Index.

Management R 31:184 My '42 160w

"Social workers, counselors, psychologists, and teachers will find the book instructive." E. T. Burr

+ Survey 78:318 N '42 500w

BRIDENBAUGH, CARL and BRIDENBAUGH, MRS JESSICA (HILL). Rebels and gentlemen; Philadelphia in the age of Franklin. 393p il maps $3.50 Reynal

974.811 Philadelphia—History. Philadelphia —Social life and customs 42-22812

Study of the life and culture of Philadelphia from 1740 to 1776, with some account of its inhabitants—both rebels and gentlemen. Benjamin Franklin is evident in practically all phases of city life and politics. Bibliographical note. Index.

Booklist 39:181 Ja 1 '43

"Fascinating and scholarly book." Richardson Wright

+ Books p4 O 4 '42 1500w

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 26 '42 700w

Reviewed by F. B. Tolles

New Eng Q 15:751 D '42 450w

"A vastly entertaining, charming and rather quiet book."

+ New Repub 107:553 O 26 '42 90w

"This story is at once comprehensive, scholarly and attractively written. It fails, however to present a view of the life of the men and women of the working class. Available material for this aspect of the subject is admittedly meager. A definite contribution to American social history, based on source material, this book deserves a large audience. It will appeal to all who are interested in the growth of the democratic movement and the birth of America. It is a book for all Americans, and not merely one for Philadelphians." N. G. Goodman

+ N Y Times p8 O 11 '42 1400w

"A good, fresh job, intelligently written and scholarly in detail, though the authors might have found a more attractive scheme of arrangement."

+ — New Yorker 18:75 O 10 '42 90w

"Mr. and Mrs. Bridenbaugh have accomplished a definitive piece of research and, using scholarly and accomplished assessment, have arrived at a definitive conclusion." Struthers Burt

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 N 28 '42 750w

Social Studies 33:380 D '42 10w

Wis Lib Bul 38:185 D '42

BRIDGE, ANN, pseud. See O'Malley, M. D. S.

BRIDGES, BURTIS C. Practical fingerprinting; with foreword by August Vollmer. 374p il $4 Funk

573.6 Finger prints (W) 42-36222

"Beginning with the biological significance of skin patterns and touching on pioneer investigation going far back of Galton to Dr. Nehemiah Grew in 1684 . . . [this book] explains the procedure of taking prints, with photographs, and then gives prolonged, detailed consideration to the various methods of classification. . . These details are accompanied by a great many photographic enlargements. . . Developing latent prints, fingerprinting the dead, photographing and presenting evidence in court, round out the work." (Books) Index.

Booklist 38:363 Je 1 '42

"By an internationally recognized authority on identification, this practical handbook and reference work is the most comprehensive yet given to the American student of criminology." + Books p22 My 3 '42 250w

"A notable new text on the science of fingerprinting. The author, an outstanding authority and teacher of criminology, has clearly and skillfully presented his subject." + Spring'd Republican p6 My 20 '42 250w

BRIDGMAN, LEONARD, ed. See Jane's All the world's aircraft

BRIDGMAN, PERCY WILLIAMS. Nature of thermodynamics. 229p $3.50 Harvard univ. press [15s Oxford]

536.7 Thermodynamics A 41-4663

"With an eye to the increasing interest in semantics, the Hollis Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy in Harvard University analyzes the laws of thermodynamics and related sciences. In discussing the various concepts and fundamental operations, emphasis is on the verbal factor in the hope of avoiding ambiguities." N Y New Tech Bks

"The reviewer found himself stimulated, and his understanding of thermodynamics clarified, by the reading of this book. As Professor Bridgman says, 'understanding' is an individual matter; probably every reader will find some points of disagreement. The reviewer, in particular, would disagree in his view of statistical and atomistic concepts, being far more optimistic than the author. . . The criticism of classical statistics is just, but does not appear valid against quantum statistics. To summarize, the book may be recommended to all physical chemists and physicists who would like to be sure of what they mean when they speak of energy or entropy, and what situations are covered by the laws of thermodynamics." B. L. Crawford, Jr.

+ — J Phys Chem 46:535 Ap '42 700w
N Y New Tech Bks 27:13 Ja '42

BRIER, HOWARD M. Sky freighter. 277p il $2 Random house

(W) 42-20997

Story of mystery, adventure and excitement among the bush pilots who fly the freight to the radium mines of northern Canada. The hero is Barry Martin, a junior test pilot for Starwing. Grades seven to nine.

Booklist 39:35 O 1 '42

"Flying stories are needed; this one, although not particularly well written, is authentic in detail, plausible, readable, and will serve to satisfy boys who want mystery and adventure as well as airplane stories. . . Recommended." J. E. Stromdahl

+ — Library J 67:797 S 15 '42 110w

BRIGGS, ETHEL MAY. Friendly library; pictures [by the author]. 85p $1 Snyder pub. co, 110 Crestmont st, Reading, Pa.

020 Library science—Juvenile literature (W) 42-2319

Hand lettered book telling in story form about the procedure in a modern children's library. Tommy Tinker had the worst behaved dog in town; he was so bad he had to be tied outside when Tommy went to the library. Then the friendly librarian decided to teach Tommy how to use the library, and he found a book on training dogs. The result was a relief to everybody.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 Ag 9 '42 150w

Reviewed by Florence O'Gara
— Library J 67:322 Ap 1 '42 20w

"A book that can be used extensively in any library, though there may be differences in library procedure. Gives the young reader an intelligent appreciation of his public library. The hand-lettered pages are clear, and the illustrations instructive. Recommended." Katherine Porter

+ Library J 67:322 Ap 1 '42 90w

BRIGGS, WILLIAM HARLOWE. Dakota in the morning. 277p $2.50 Farrar

42-18490

The growth of a pioneer town in the Dakotas is described as it appeared to an intelligent small boy, Bub Sibley. Bub had a penchant for making heroes of odd characters, among them Ollie, the waiter who was shot in a frontier brawl, and Frosty, the tattered old trapper who taught the boy about hunting and Indians. Outside his family and his heroes Bub's interest centered on his horses. Told in staccato prose, as the man remembers his boyhood.

Booklist 39:48 O 15 '42

"Slight but charming book." S. L. White
+ Books p6 S 27 '42 900w

Boston Globe p21 N 11 '42 90w

Reviewed by F. T. Marsh

N Y Times p30 S 27 '42 360w

"A bit of pioneer history and a moving study of a child's heart told in a style that is fresh and vigorous."

+ New Yorker 18:71 S 19 '42 50w

"Mr. Briggs's story is slight but pleasant, and it presents a fine series of pictures of a doomed enterprise." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 O 10 '42 300w
Wis Lib Bul 38:186 D '42

BRIGHTMAN, EDGAR SHEFFIELD. Spiritual life. 218p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

248 Spiritual life

42-21863

"In this, his most recent book, Edgar Sheffield Brightman, Professor of Philosophy in the Graduate School of Boston University, examines the nature, value, and presuppositions of 'spirit' in the numerous and often ill-defined senses of that vital word, thus providing a useful background for the understanding and the practice of 'the spiritual life.'" (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

"Concerned as are these Cole lectures with an abstract and intricate piece of thinking, there is no Olympic aloofness from present-day realities. Indeed, we have references as far removed as is Dorothy Dix from Simon Stylites and Niemoller from Hitler. With an excellent detachment, there may be found obiter dicta on communism and capitalism, and sympathetic mention is made of sharecroppers and of the starving peoples of Europe. There is no capitulation to war hysteria, and a reference to 'the so-called New Deal' suggests no especial deference to the powers that be. . . For all who are concerned about the spiritual life, what was written under constraint will not require compulsion to sustain interest in these thoughtful pages." W. F. Lemon

+ Christian Century 59:1216 O 7 '42 800w

"Despite limitations the book is scholarly and well written, and contains much which may well be applied in guiding the efforts of men toward the cultivation of spirituality in its depth and wholeness." T. L. L.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 2 '43 600w

"Considered as an account of 'the spiritual life,' the volume is one of the highest value for religious teachers, and not a few modern philosophers might learn something important from it." A. G. Widgery

+ Crozer Q 20:68 Ja '43 600w

BRIGHTMAN, E. S.—Continued
 Reviewed by Georgia Harkness
 J Religion 23:72 Ja '43 600w

BRINDZE, RUTH. Stretching your dollar in wartime. 197p $1.75 Vanguard 339.4 Buying. Saving and thrift (W) 42-9348
 Consumer advice on the intelligent purchasing of food, clothes, household goods, and on maintaining the home and the family automobile in wartime. No index.

Booklist 38:324 My 1 '42
 Bookmark 3:4 My '42

"Specific advice is easy to get at, from upkeep of stockings to value of vitamins. The book should be preserved as a report on the effort of a country long geared to an economy of plenty, to function cheerfully on an economy of scarcity."

+ Books p12 Ap 12 '42 250w
 Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '42

Reviewed by A. L. Edwards
 J Home Econ 36:484 S '42 250w

"Very few men of the millions who select their own shirts will want to be bothered with counting the number of stitches in a seam to test the quality. Despite a few limitations of this sort, the book is admirable and should form a part of every efficient housekeeper's equipment in these days of rationing and shortages."

+ — Nation 155:198 S 5 '42 180w
 Pratt p13 D '42

Reviewed by Mary Hitchings
 Survey 78:224 Ag '42 80w

BRINIG, MYRON. Family way. 313p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 42-9118

A lightly satirical tale of a family of New York suburbanites during the course of one twenty-four hours. The events vary from grandmother's airplane flight to Los Angeles to Morgan De Forrest's half-hearted attempt to commit adultery; from ten-year old Drury's adventures at a ball-game, to the discovery of a father for the maid, Phyllis', new born baby.

"For sheer good-tempered satirical fun, the glowing warm first-cocktail feeling that it's a jolly old world after all, Mr Brinig has here the perfect mixture." Page Cooper

+ Books p10 Ap 19 '42 700w

"Gay, up to date, extravagant, 'The Family Way' is frankly a light novel intended only to amuse and not to be judged by any other standards." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p7 Ap 19 '42 600w

BRINNIN, JOHN MALCOLM. Garden is political [poems]. 101p $1.75 Macmillan

811 42-13064

Collection of poems by a young poet of twenty-five, born in Nova Scotia. The subjects are varied, but the first section contains poems for a world at war.

Reviewed by Robert Hillier
 Boston Globe p19 My 13 '42 200w

"His thought does not lie loosely upon the surface of his verse. Some seeking is required, but the search is seldom without reward. He is averse to the obvious and, being a young and growing poet, he will be a still better one when he has learned, to avoid it with less obvious determination."

Christian Century 59:563 Ap 29 '42 80w

"In spite of a buoyancy marking certain pieces which seems somewhat unreal today, his is essentially contemporary work. This is not only because some of the finest passages deal with airports and travel by plane, but because of the nature of the garden that the poet cultivates. The contemporaneity of the book is also due in part to his gift for finding the unobtrusive half-rhyme and for introducing interesting irregularities into the meter." Babette Deutsch

+ Nation 155:97 Ag 1 '42 600w

"This is decidedly a well-written book, well tempered, in tune with itself, technically instructed, aware of everybody's poetry and making its own, but it lacks the political sense that one might expect from the title. Mr. Brinnin accepts too easily the Auden formula of the guilt of society." P. M. Jack
 N Y Times p5 My 17 '42 500w

"Mr. Brinnin's work shows some influence of T. S. Eliot and Wallace Stevens, but his own personality is clearly stamped. These poems are not for the casual reader; some of them are difficult both in image and syntax. But it is not a careless obscurity. One feels that Mr. Brinnin is both earnest and conscientious. His book is an accomplishment; better still, a promise which the reader feels will be richly fulfilled." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 25:42 O 24 '42 500w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer
 Yale R n s 32:367 winter '43 280w

BRITISH life and thought; an illustrated survey; pub. for the British council. 479p 11 maps $3.50 (8s 6d) Longmans

914.2 Great Britain—Civilization 41-25693

"This volume brings together in convenient and permanent form the eleven booklets on various aspects of British Life and Thought which the publishers are issuing separately." Contents: The British commonwealth, by A. Berriedale Keith; The British system of government, by W. A. Robson; British justice, by Sir M. S. Amos; British education, by J. E. Hales; British social services, by A. D. K. Owen; The face of Britain, by L. D. Stamp; British sport and games, by Bernard Darwin; British ships and British seamen, by Michael Lewis; British aviation, by F. A. de V. Robertson; The Englishwoman, by Cicely Hamilton; The Englishman, by Earl Baldwin. Index.

"It would be hard to find a book in which so much essential information on a vast and varied subject has been made available and interesting to the general reader."

+ Books p22 Mr 1 '42 480w

"Lord Baldwin's contribution is altogether admirable. He has stumbled on a great truth surely in singling out as one of the Englishman's peculiar virtues that of 'considerateness,' a word for which there is really no foreign equivalent: a quality to which an American Ambassador once gave the name of 'dauntless decency.' The least satisfactory section perhaps is that on British education; the idiom and essence of our 'public schools' and older universities cannot be conveyed in words." W. H. C.

Manchester Guardian p3 N 7 '41 240w

"The book will surely help keep old friends of Britain in America. To this reviewer, however, it seems unlikely that the book will make new friends for Britain in America. . . 'British Life and Thought' is so faithfully upper-class British that it is bound to warm, and keep warm, the hearts of those who love Britain today. But there ought to be some way of keeping the book out of the hands of the heathen." Crane Brinton

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:13 My 2 '42 380w

"Each essay is the work of an outstanding authority and one or two of them are brilliant epitomes of vast and intractable subjects. It would for example be difficult to recommend, either for the general reader or for use in the upper forms at schools, better summaries of the character and constitution of the British commonwealth and of the British system of government than those offered in the contributions by Professor Berriedale Keith and Dr. W. A. Robson respectively. Mr. Bernard Darwin writes with all his usual charm on sport. Miss Cicely Hamilton admirably and Lord Baldwin rather less well attempt to draw the portraits of the Englishwoman and the Englishman. The geography of Great Britain is the subject of a fascinating and instructive essay by Mr. Dudley Stamp."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p514 O 18 '41 500w

BRITT, STEUART HENDERSON. Social psychology of modern life. 562p il $3.75 Farrar
301.15 Social psychology 41-8732

"This book is divided into six parts. Part I defines the field and discusses methods. . . Part II deals with the biological and social foundations of behavior; the latter part is a summary from anthropology and introductory sociology. The human-nature potentialities in the organic heritage are not considered. Part III deals with individual factors in social adjustment. The first part, on unlearned and learned behavior, is extremely elementary and oversimplified. Part IV, behavior in the presence of others, is excellent in certain phases, notably sections of chapters 10 and 11. Parts V and VI, dealing with institutions, occupations, and social conflicts, can be found in courses in the various social sciences." Am J Soc

Reviewed by Wayne Dennis
Am J Psychol 55:465 J1 '42 360w

Reviewed by L. G. Brown
Am J Soc 48:526 Ja '43 800w

BROCH, THEODOR. The mountains wait; il by Rockwell Kent. 325p $3 Webb

940.542 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, Norwegian (W) 42-26408

"The former Mayor of Narvik, now associated with the Norwegian government in exile, tells the story of his town and his people before and after the Germans took over." Library J

Booklist 39:135 D 15 '42

"This book, with its collection of pictures at the back, is composed without flourish or fanfare, with restraint and with high purpose. Its author is speaking primarily for Norway, but his voice is re-echoed throughout the whole world of honest men." Paul Sapienza
Books p2 D 13 '42 750w

"Inevitably, one compares this book with John Steinbeck's 'The Moon is Down,' which has a similar background. Its hero is a Norwegian Mayor facing the Nazis. Let it be said briefly that Mr. Broch's is a far superior book, not merely because his is a real Norwegian Mayor and his Germans are real people, but also because 'The Mountains Wait' is a breath of real Norway, as real as Grieg's music and the Norwegians' simple greatness." Emil Lengyel

+ N Y Times p4 N 29 '42 1350w

"A moving case history in democracy told with a simple, almost poetic directness."

+ New Yorker 18:104 D 5 '42 50w

"The book is an informative description of Hitlerian methods and morality, with both of which we are by now quite familiar. It is also the finely written account of an important segment of the author's life, from his arrival in Narvik in the spring of 1930 as a lawyer of twenty-six, to his election as mayor four years later, and finally to his escape from execution by the invaders as a British spy. Broch's sobriety, typical of his countrymen and their literature, is an alleviating and moving melodic bass against the treble of treachery, destruction, and death." Charles Neider

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 D 26 '42 700w

BROCK, EMMA LILLIAN. Here comes Kristie; il. by [the author]. 81p $1.75 Knopf

(W) 42-15602

Elmer and Einer were two small boys with a large ambition: they wanted to own a horse all by themselves. All one season they saved their money and when they had fifteen dollars they went to town and bought Kristie. Good old Kristie was a horse of many ideas, she had to be treated with great respect. And eventually after many false tries Kristie had things just to her liking and she actually took her two harassed small owners to the lake. For second and third grade.

Booklist 39:15 S '42

"Grown-ups will enjoy reading this aloud and sharing the amusing pictures with the children." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:331 S '42 80w

"Book for second and third grade children, simply written, and with repetition, action, and suspense young children enjoy. . . Amusing, childlike, plausible, and will appeal to sympathies of younger readers. Good for reading aloud too. . . Recommended for all collections." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 67:740 S 1 '42 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:886 O 15 '42 20w

"In 'Here Comes Kristie' [Miss Brock] does not seem to have decided which kind of tale she wished to write. Unlike other child characters in Miss Brock's stories, Einer and Elmer are only names on the page, and the humor of both text and drawings (the latter are too grotesque to carry conviction) is somewhat forced." A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p9 S 13 '42 260w

Wis Lib Bul 35:164 N '42

BROCK, RAY. Nor any victory. 351p $3 Reynal

940.542 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939—Balkan states (W) 42-50475

Personal narrative, much of it in dialogue form, of the experiences of a New York Times correspondent in Yugoslavia and the Near East during the first two years of the war.

Booklist 39:193 Ja 15 '43

"A book which should be read by any one who wants to understand what is happening in the Balkans today, and by any one interested in the 'cracks' in Hitler's 'new order.'" Robert St. John

+ Books p4 D 6 '42 1050w

"Ray Brock is an unusually able and unusually intense but otherwise entirely typical young American newspaper man. That is to say, he is a brash young man, and since he is quite young, he is very brash indeed. Like the Sons of the Prophet in the old ballad he is hardy and bold and quite unaccustomed to fear. He fairly bursts with energy and bounce, he has a confidence in himself which must frequently stagger his elders, and he gets some of his best stories by rushing in where angels fear to tread. . . Now he has written a book about his experience as a foreign correspondent—'Nor Any Victory'—and the book is all these things that its author is." W. R. Deuel

+ N Y Times p5 D 27 '42 850w

BROCKWAY, SYLVIA, ed. See Respectfully yours, Annie

BROCKWAY, WALLACE, and WEINSTOCK, HERBERT. The opera; a history of its creation and performance: 1600-1941. 603p il $3.75 Simon & Schuster

782.09 Opera—History (W) 41-24281

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"I found the book immensely interesting. I read on with undiminished curiosity to see what the authors would say of the next opera, or the next composer. I had the feeling that if they could avoid it they would say nothing orthodox. More often than not I agreed with their bright comments, and I reflected how easy and how misleading it would be to apply their method to literary criticism." John Erskine

+ Books p18 F 1 '42 1700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '42

Pratt p19 O '42

"It is a big undertaking to make a readable and up-to-the-minute book out of a review of the opera from its infancy. . . An historical survey of this entire field, compressed into less than 500 pages and including many paragraphs devoted to recent performances, could not be expected to get much below the surface or to present any novel or original point of view. But, considering the limits of space, there are too many wholly unimportant, not to say gossip and highly irrelevant, anecdotes about artists and performances interspersed through the pages and in footnotes that could have been advantageously omitted. In addition to the index there is appended a list of recommended recordings, compiled by G. S. Leslie, occupying 75 pages which should prove particularly useful to those seeking material of this kind."

BROCKWAY, WALLACE—Continued

+ — Theatre Arts 36:348 My '42 230w

BRODIE, BERNARD. A layman's guide to naval strategy. 291p il maps $2.50 Princeton univ. press

359 Naval art and science. Sea power. Warships (W) 42-36307

"To all the embattled nations in the Second World War, nothing is quite so valuable as a ship. So concludes Mr. Brodie, as he describes the various tools of sea power and their functions—the battleships, aircraft, destroyers, submarines, certain other combat and auxiliary vessels, the torpedo and mines. He demonstrates the value of concentration of force in winning command of the sea, but also suggests certain exceptions to that classic doctrine. Defense of shipping against commerce raiding is considered, with special attention to the convoy system. The question of land-sea operations, and the two functions of bases for a fleet—supply and repair—are presented." Scientific Bk Club R

Booklist 39:27 O 1 '42

"Well planned, clearly written, by no means following the 'naval primer' style of instruction, this book is what it purports to be, a really adequate general guide to naval strategy, with a chapter on fleet tactics thrown in—Mr. Brodie being more than doubtful that ships are condemned henceforth to fight only against planes and not against other ships." R. T. Armknecht

+ Books p20 S 27 '42 600w

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 14 '42 600w

"Brodie has not failed to express his own opinions and to attack theories popular to-day. Many will take issue with his point of view; some may criticize his presentation and dispute his facts. But this lucid and logical discussion of most current problems of naval warfare, accompanied by a wealth of factual material and many maps and diagrams, makes A Layman's Guide to Naval Strategy a fascinating as well as informative study." Carol Thompson

+ Current Hist 3:163 O '42 1550w

Reviewed by H. A. von Urrf

Library J 67:737 S 1 '42 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 10w

"It is no exaggeration to say that Dr. Brodie, a professor of political science at Dartmouth, has produced here one of the very best recent books in the military field. In his 'Sea Power in the Machine Age,' published a year ago, he showed fine and careful scholarship and distinct writing ability as well as a faculty for interpreting data. His more recent volume indicates complete knowledge of his field, high scholarship, and refreshing absence of bias. Both books are well worth reading." D. W. Mitchell

+ Nation 155:455 O 31 '42 600w

"Sane and authoritative little handbook. . . In correcting popular misconceptions Mr. Brodie may somewhat overstate his case. . . But his main contention, the indispensability of the balanced fleet, is unassailable." Garrett Mattingly

+ N Y Times p9 O 4 '42 1200w

"A sound and well reasoned study of the place of sea power in the war year 1942." Paul Schubert

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 S 26 '42 700w

"Perhaps this book may be considered as an answer to Major de Seversky's 'Victory Through Air Power.' . . At any rate, we present it in order that Mr. Brodie, author of 'Sea Power in the Machine Age,' another 'first' of the Book Club, may be read for his very able defense of battleships and other marine craft. Both men, we believe, while championing a different phase of warfare, would agree that in our all-out effort to defeat the Axis both planes and ships must coordinate and cooperate."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:2 S '42 420w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 3 '43 700w

BROEK, JAN OTTO MARIUS. Economic development of the Netherlands Indies. 172p $2 Inst. of Pacific relations

330,991 Netherlands Indies—Economic conditions 42-14823

"An analysis of the situation in the Far East with a view to indicating the major issues, which must be considered in any future adjustment of international relations in that area. To this end, the analysis includes an account of the economic and political conditions which produced the situation existing in July 1937, with respect to China, to Japan and to the other foreign Powers concerned; an evaluation of developments during the war period which appear to indicate important trends in the policies and programs of all the Powers in relation to the Far Eastern situation; and finally, an estimate of the principal political, economic and social conditions which may be expected in a post-war period, the possible forms of adjustment which might be applied under these conditions, and the effects of such adjustments upon the countries concerned." (Foreword) Index.

"Within the limits which Professor Broek set for himself he has produced an excellent book. The volume is replete with useful statistical tables. In a brief concluding chapter the economic prospects of the Netherlands Indies are examined and some wise suggestions made. The Japanese occupation of the Netherlands Indies does not destroy the usefulness of this book; in some respects its usefulness becomes the greater because of it." A. Vandenbosch

+ Am Hist R 48:185 O '42 160w

"This is a worthy addition to the valuable 'Inquiry Series' of the Institute of Pacific Relations. . . Aside from the main themes, there are several highly interesting summaries of specific recent events and developments. Especially to be commended is the author's account of the trade negotiations with Japan from 1933 to their collapse in 1941. The principal criticism I have is that the author or the editors might have altered the verbal tenses in several places to catch up with the state of affairs at the time of publication. Anachronisms are unavoidable in the present rush of events, but many of the most conspicuous ones in this book could have been corrected. . . The material is sound and well presented, and the writing—in many books on economics so obscure as to repel the non-specialist—is consistently lucid." Raymond Kennedy

+ Ann Am Acad 223:216 S '42 700w

Reviewed by Rupert Emerson

Pacific Affairs 15:364 S '42 250w

BROGAN, DENIS WILLIAM (MAURICE BARRINGTON, pseud). Stop on the green light! 273p $2 Harper [7s 6d Hamilton, HI]

42-14049

A young Oxford professor in New York becomes forcibly entangled with Nazis and a deep laid plot when a slangy young American woman, a secret service agent, holds him up as he enters the wrong room in a New York hotel.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 My 24 '42 170w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 16 '42 50w

"Mr. Barrington, in his first mystery, gets away from the barrier with a rush."

+ New Yorker 18:80 My 9 '42 60w

"The story is good and fast, but the main point of the book is its adult and civilized wit." John Fairfield

+ Spec 168:88 Ja 23 '42 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p65 F 7 '42 150w

BROMFIELD, LOUIS. Until the day break. 325p $2.50 Harper

(W) 42-15035

"Paris, the city of light, under the heel of the German oppressor . . . German soldiers and officers striving in all things to be 'correct'—and everywhere the loyal and devoted people of France working secretly to rob the victors of their triumph. This is the setting for the dramatic story of Roxana Dawn, an American girl who won fame as a featured dancer in Paris; of her lover Nicky, charming, irresponsible, whose feeling for Paris was the greatest thing in his life; of the Levantine d'Abrizzi, Roxie's manager, who launched a successful underground movement to corrupt the Nazi power; of the German Major, the personification of 'correctness,' who loved Roxie with a strange, perverse passion." Publisher's note

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (17) B & T (1) N Y Times (5) PW (6) RB (3) W (1)

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 170:132 S '42 180w
Booklist 38:384 Je 15 '42

"Mr. Bromfield, who can when he likes be brittle and blasé, has in 'Until the Day Break' risen fully to the stature of the theme he has developed." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p5 My 31 '42 1050w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '42

"When he is writing, for example, of the little obscure people of Paris who have made the Germans' lives so miserable Mr. Bromfield achieves a validity and dignity which an outline of this story might not lead one to expect. 'Until the Day Break' is theatrical, yes, but it is not wholly so. Moreover, it has a core of truth and emotion which prevents it from ever seeming cheap—baroque as it very often is." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p6 My 31 '42 650w

New Yorker 18:66 My 30 '42 80w

"Mr. Steinbeck has lately been critically tarred and feathered for indulging in bad propaganda by making a victory over the Nazis seem too easy. But the deterioration of morale in Norway is a slow, excruciating process compared to the readiness with which Bromfield's Germans succumb to inner weakness and commonplace sabotage in Paris. We do not have to take this matter too seriously here, however. 'Until the Day Break' is not important as propaganda and not very important even among stories of its kind." Bess Jones

Sat R of Lit 25:9 Je 6 '42 650w

Time 40:90 J1 13 '42 210w

BRONSON, FRANCIS WOOLSEY. Uncas island murders. 305p $2 Farrar

42-14363

Detective story.

"This light, harmless and generally agreeable item comes with a blurb written in the sort of poetry we would write if we wrote poetry. It's the anybody-can-do-it kind." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 J1 5 '42 300w

"The Uncas Island Murders' is a grandly satisfying mystery novel, on two counts. For one thing, the story is well told in the first person by a young woman who is intelligent as well as attractive. . . And for another thing, the whole business of the 'essential clue' is both ingenious and unobtrusive. After this, it seems hardly necessary to point out that the denouement is grand, too." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p16 J1 5 '42 240w

"Pretty exciting reading."

New Yorker 18:56 J1 4 '42 30w

"Forthrightly told example of house-party species. Pleasant people, sprightly heroine, believable sleuth, and ample action. Grade B."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 J1 11 '42 40w

BRONSON, WILFRID SWANCOURT. Horns and antlers; il. by the author. 143p $2 Harcourt

599.73574 Deer—Juvenile literature

(W) 42-7882

A factual book about deer written for young readers. It describes the physiology, the nature and the habits of deer in general, and then devotes separate chapters to various kinds of deer—white tails, mule deer, wapiti, moose, reindeer and caribou, antelopes, and mountain goats.

Booklist 38:311 Ap 15 '42

"This text is for any child who loves animals, but the simplicity and directness of the style and the large, well-led type commend it to children around ten or so."

+ Books p21 My 10 '42 350w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 28 '42

90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 18:173 My '42 70w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Babcock

Library J 67:368 Ap 15 '42 60w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:892 O 15 '42 10w

"Habits and life histories are given and the reader learns how antlers grow, what use the deer make of them . . . and many more interesting facts which Mr. Bronson's clever and scientifically accurate drawings in black and white help to make clear. The full-page pictures in color of bucks, does and fawns against the leafy background of an Eastern forest, of the wapiti (the so-called elk) in the high Western mountain ranges, of the prongbucks on the plains, have genuine beauty. Mr. Bronson writes with enthusiasm, sharing with young people a subject in which he is interested without condescension and with a touch of humor in both text and drawings that pleases boys and girls." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 19 '42 360w

"Mr. Bronson's illustrations in color and black-and-white are accurate, his text a model of clear and readable presentation of scientific facts; children like his books."

+ New Yorker 18:78 My 23 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:141 O '42

BRONSON, WILFRID SWANCOURT. Stooping Hawk and Stranded Whale; sons of liberty; il. by the author. 225p $2 Harcourt

(W) 42-36268

Stooping Hawk and Stranded Whale were two Seri Indian boys, living on an island off the west coast of Mexico during the Spanish conquest. Sent to spy on the invading Spanish, the boys were captured and lived thru some harrowing experiences before they managed to escape. The book is written for grades six to nine; the style is part fiction, part non-fiction.

Booklist 39:15 S '42

"Capture by the Spaniards takes place so late in the action that its quickening effect is too long delayed for the average reader, and vocabulary and style are ahead of the preference of the average, but if there is already an interest in primitive life, this story of boys untamable as mountain lions will hold the attention of a boy who likes to read." M. L. Becker

Books p8 Ja 31 '43 380w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:335 S '42 70w

"Mixes historic asides and fictional anecdotes in a way that will certainly be confusing to a child. In spite of this, incidents are full of spirit of adventure; the drawings are Bronson's own; and the Seri Indians probably need 'doing.' Recommended for American Indian, Latin American, and W. S. Bronson collections." S. J. Johnson

+ — Library J 67:740 S 1 '42 70w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 30w

Wis Lib Bul 38:190 D '42

BRONTE, EMILY JANE. Complete poems; ed. from the manuscripts by C. W. Hatfield. 262p $2.80 Columbia univ. press

821

41-21750

A re-editing of the complete poems of Emily Brontë, based on all the known manuscripts. About half of the 193 poems are those belonging to the so-called Gondal cycle. Index of first lines.

Books p29 N 9 '41 180w

"This book will commend itself to the collectors of Brontëana, and more generally to searchers in the more removed reaches of English scholarship. The general reader will find it of little interest." J. J. K.

Canadian Forum 21:283 D '41 320w

"In 1923 a volume bearing the same title as the one just issued was published, edited by Clement Shorter with the assistance of Mr. Hatfield. As it proved to be neither so textually accurate nor so complete as was at the time believed, this new and thoroughly revised work has been prepared. It is possible that there are still a few incorrect attributions. . . Yet the long years of careful research that have gone to the making of this collection must have brought it reasonably near if it has not attained perfection." Theodore Maynard

+ Cath World 155:758 S '42 450w

"Mr. Hatfield is adept at sorting out which is Emily's and which is her authoritative text. He is skilful, too, in suggesting dates of undated pieces. A by-product of his work ensures a re-orientation of the interpretation of the poet and her poems." H. B. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 7 '42 300w

"Emily Brontë the poet remains at her best in anthologies: there is little—very little—new stuff here that is worth while preserving for its own sake. But her few great successes do acquire new lustre by being relieved of fictitious autobiography and placed in their true sphere of reference. In any case they remain intensely hers, and it is hard not still to see in 'Cold in the Earth' as it were a memory of what might have been." Edward Sackville West

+ New Statesman & Nation 24:278 O 24 '42 390w

"An outstanding example of painstaking research and editing." M. M. Colum

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 25 '42 1050w

"This edition is of the greatest interest and will surely be the basis for all future studies of this poet." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 17:69 F 14 '42 110w

Spec 169:296 S 25 '42 130w

BROOKES, JEAN INGRAM. International rivalry in the Pacific islands, 1800-1875. 454p map $5 Univ. of Calif. [30s Cambridge]

990 Islands of the Pacific 41-46233

History of the development of the islands of the Pacific, from Easter Island thru New Guinea, during the years 1800 to 1875, stressing the effect upon them of Western influences and national rivalries. Partial contents: An All-British Australia; Trader, whaler, and missionary, 1800-1840; Great Britain, the United States, and Free Oceania; France and the Islands through 1839; New Zealand, the Marquesas, and Tahiti; Hawaii in the 'fifties, the annexation of New Caledonia; Samoa and Fiji in the 'sixties; Hawaii, from 1870-1875; Fiji, from Kingdom to Crown Colony; Significant developments, 1870-1875. Bibliography. Index.

"It is, perhaps, not altogether warranted to criticize an author for leaving out things which he had no intention of including, but the confusion in this case is heightened by a strict conformity to chronological sequence. The account of a crisis in Hawaiian affairs is abruptly interrupted while the scene shifts to New Caledonia; as affairs in Samoa reach a point of high tension, the reader is suddenly plunged into the midst of diplomatic maneuvering at Fiji. These broken threads are later picked up; we get back in time to Hawaii or Samoa. But there is no real continuity to the unfolding story. . . The book is carefully annotated. It has a useful bibliography—although very few of the intensely interesting narratives of early American voyagers in the Pacific are included. It has a map of Oceania. Despite its limitations it remains highly useful for any student of international rivalry in the Pacific." F. R. Dulles

Am Hist R 47:869 J1 '42 650w

"The timeliness of the subject and the absence of any other comprehensive study of nineteenth-century imperialism in the Pacific make this a volume doubly welcome. The casualness of much of the research and the all too frequent intrusion of minor errors into the narrative will preclude it from becoming, in any sense, the definitive study of the topic." H. W. Bradley

+ — Am Pol Sci R 36:565 Je '42 650w

Reviewed by H. E. Fey

Christian Century 59:957 Ag 5 '42 500w

Reviewed by F. M. Keesing

Pacific Affairs 15:236 Je '42 250w

"As Oceania becomes a stage for the contemporary world conflict, knowledge of its history has increased value. Such knowledge has heretofore been scarce and often unreliable. Dr. Brookes now presents a storehouse of information concerning the nineteenth century development of these heterogeneous islands drawn from the primary sources in England, France and the United States. His research has been prodigious, his documentation is interesting, and his point of view so objective that he even denies his readers the benefit of his own conclusions. His bibliography alone makes his work a treasury for scholars. . . It is disappointing that such valuable material could not be more effectively moulded and that large scale maps were not used to make it more graphic." Grace Fox

+ — Social Studies 33:89 F '42 470w

BROOKS, ANNE. Hang my heart. 374p $2.50 Morrow

42-19136

Story of the first steps in the making of a "successful woman." Josephine Foster came to New York, young, unsophisticated, eagerly friendly, but secretly ambitious. She is employed by a high-class woman's magazine and quickly works her way up. Tho in doing so she sacrifices friends and a lover, she rejoices in the prospects before her.

"The pace of the novel is fast; as a matter of fact, that is its major weakness. Josephine's ascent is too speedy, too easy. Spread over a greater period of years, holding a few failures, it would have been more convincing. As it is, the incidents and the secondary characters seem made to order for manipulation by the girl bent on power. In spite of this, however, the book succeeds in giving a vivid portrait of a ruthless and unscrupulous small-town girl who makes good in New York." Rose Feld

+ — Books p2 Ag 23 '42 850w

"Crudely summarized. 'Hang My Heart' may sound like a rather commonplace tale, with a pattern which is fairly familiar. Actually, however, Miss Brooks dissects her heroine so shrewdly, with so much acumen and insight, that one has almost no sense of having heard all this before. Josephine is a very real person, if a somewhat unpleasant and appalling one, and the course which she follows is in all respects convincing." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 23 '42 900w

"A more than ordinarily capable novel, which proves that the author has grown a year older since her first book and possesses an insight which, if rather limited in scope, is precise and keen."

+ New Yorker 18:53 Ag 22 '42 90w

"It is a theme for E. M. Delafield at her most malicious best and although Miss Brooks is very smooth and skilful, her novel does not eat deeply enough into the tissue of behavior to be really important. The bitter irony of success at the cost of character, of success that means failure in human relationships, is the core of the story, but the author does not reach the core. Her surface explorations, however, make good reading. The story moves, the people are interesting. The picture of the inner workings of a fashion magazine, and of its extraordinary editor are its high spots." Rebecca Lowrie

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:48 D 5 '42 230w

BROOKS, HOWARD L. Prisoners of hope; report on a mission. 319p $2.75 L. B. Fischer pub. corp, 381 4th av, N.Y.

940.5344 World war, 1939—France (W) 42-36169

Account of the observations of an American Unitarian minister who was sent on a mission to France to study conditions, especially in concentration camps, in April 1941. He visited several concentration camps, but the one at Rivesaltes, where 4000 children are confined, made the deepest impression. He believes that the mood of the French people was changing, even in the few months of his mission, and that the numbness of defeat is giving place to hopefulness.

Booklist 38:327 My 1 '42

"Throughout his descriptions and interpretations Mr. Brooks writes with admirable restraint. He had plenty of cause to dip his pen in gall, but even his realization that in the presence of so much abject misery the best all the cooperating agencies of mercy could do was 'a little' here and 'a little' there wrings from him not so much denunciation as pity and resolve." K. M. Chworowsky

+ Christian Century 59:981 Ag 12 '42 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '42

"I recommend it as required reading for the State Department." Frank Kingdon
Nation 154:519 My 2 '42 130w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 106:578 Ap 27 '42 270w

"A sober, dignified and supremely human report. . . . Concerning the underground movement in France, the author gives us an extremely interesting picture, without pretending that it is complete." Milos Sefranek

+ N Y Times p24 Ap 26 '42 1300w

Reviewed by Thomas Kernan
Sat R of Lit 25:12 My 2 '42 900w
Wis Lib Bul 38:85 My '42

BROOKS, RICHARD LAKEMAN. Elmer Squee; with an introd. by William T. Tarrant [il. by author]. 92p $1 Macmillan 940.5496 World war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. 42-12937

In rhymed couplets and black and white pictures is told the story of an undersized navy recruit, who forgot his shyness in his efforts to become a "man made strong by the sea."

"Ensign Brooks' verse limps a little, but he makes up for that as an artist."

+ — Books p11 My 17 '42 70w

Christian Century 59:433 Ap 1 '42 40w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '42

BROOKS, WALTER ROLLIN. Freddy and the perilous adventure; il. by Kurt Wiese. 245p $2 Knopf

42-19356

More adventures of Freddy, the pig, Alice and Emma, the ducks, and others of the talking animals from Mr Bean's farm. This time Freddy is mixed up in a balloon ascension and a circus.

Reviewed by Dorothea Dawson
Library J 68:37 Ja 1 '43 40w

"This book, a sequel to other 'Freddy' books, is a credit to the ability of its author, Walter R. Brooks. The antics of parachute jumping mice and the all too human foibles of the duck family, combined with cows, spiders, and circus animals make a delightful story." J. F. R.

+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 8 '42 140w
Wis Lib Bul 38:164 N '42

BROOKS, WILLIAM ELIZABETH. Grant of Appomattox; a study of the man. 347p maps $3 Bobbs

B or 92 Grant, Ulysses Simpson (W) 42-23508

Except for a brief prologue and an epilogue, this character study of Grant is in two parts: The making of the man, covering the years from childhood to 1863 when Grant took command before Vicksburg; and, The man at his best, ending with Appomattox.

Reviewed by Avery Craven
Books p4 D 27 '42 1250w

"War being what it is, Grant was a great general. That is the contention of the author, and to prove it he has drawn heavily on source material of all types. His accounts of the campaigns are clear and sufficiently detailed. He does not deal with the issues of the war, nor with the nation as such. He keeps close to Grant, and reveals Grant to us by what Grant said, by what Grant did, and by the reports, favorable and unfavorable, made concerning Grant by contemporaries. Those who have read little concerning Grant can profitably read this book." Paul Kiniery

Commonweal 37:148 N 27 '42 250w

"Readers who wish a carefully balanced and incisively critical survey of Grant will turn elsewhere, as will readers who wish to penetrate some of the deeper psychological mysteries of the man; mysteries into which Horace Porter, Jacob D. Cox, Henry Adams, and others have flashed penetrating rays, but which still in part baffle us. But those who wish to study the unfolding greatness of Grant, 1861-65 will find this volume a valuable guide." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 26:21 Ja 9 '43 700w

BROOMFIELD, GERALD WEBB. Revelation and reunion; a response to Tambaram. 224p $3 Macmillan [7s 6d; pa 4s S.P.C.K.]
280 Church unity

"Tambaram is the accurate word for the Madras Conference. This book is an Anglican 'response' in the sense of declaring the utter futility of any approach to church unity which does not accept episcopacy as of the esse, not merely the bene esse, of the church." Christian Century

"One would look far to find a clearer presentation of the most uncompromising episcopal position."

Christian Century 59:1030 Ag 26 '42 70w
Times [London] Lit Sup p280 Je 6 '42 1000w

BROPHY, JOHN. Immortal sergeant. 303p $2.50 Harper [8s 6d Collins]

(W) 42-13381

* This is the story of a small British patrol lost in the Libyan desert in the spring of 1941. Twelve men under a corporal and a sergeant, while on a reconnaissance trip are attacked by Italian dive bombers. Only three of them return to their base, led by Sergeant Spence, who wakes up in the hospital in Cairo rather surprised to find himself a hero.

Booklist 38:441 Jl 15 '42

Reviewed by Milton Hindus
Books p11 Je 14 '42 650w

Christian Science Monitor p12 S 26 '42 600w

"Here is one novel, a war novel at that, in which a bathing party is not a prelude to seduction, sensationalism or sadism; in which soldiers have been made real without their invocation of all the epithets of the back-fence school of fiction. Restraint, taste, dynamic narrative prevail. This is not a great novel, but it is a dramatic story of men and the desert. The men are real and the desert is real." J. P. Walsh

+ Commonweal 36:232 Je 26 '42 600w

"Mr. Brophy has perhaps made a little too much of Spence's undecided past, including his hesitating love for Valentine, who is a pianist, but in all that concerns the activities of the patrol, particularly the attack on the German-held oasis, 'Immortal Sergeant' is a brilliant and heartening piece of work." Charles Marriott

BROPHY, JOHN—Continued

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 My 15 '42 200w
"Real war, real people, and a grand story."
J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p18 Je 14 '42 750w
"A straightforward and interesting novel. Recommended for your war reading this week."
+ New Yorker 18:71 Je 13 '42 90w

"This vividly written novel is basically the saga of a battle for survival by six diverse British soldiers. . . At times, the writing is pure prose poetry, especially when Mr. Brophy draws upon his firsthand knowledge of North Africa to pen magnificent descriptions of its wastes and the terrible ordeal endured by starving, thirsting, fighting men lost in them."
R. E. Porter

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 Jl 13 '42 400w
"It is well enough meant, and Mr. Brophy's acquaintance with conditions in the Libyan desert has evidently been of assistance. But it is a thin tale, despite the free and easy style. There is no depth or fullness in the character drawing; no imaginative flesh on the bones of the situation; the facts, heroic or near-heroic, are stated in too fluent and rather sentimental terms. And Corporal Spence, who is the central figure, is not at all convincing as a soldier."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p237 My 9 '42 420w

BROWER, CHARLES D.; FARRELLY, PHILIP J., and ANSON, LYMAN. Fifty years below zero; a lifetime of adventure in the far North. 310p il $3 Dodd

B or 92 Alaska—Description and travel. Frontier and pioneer life—Alaska. Eskimos (W) 42-22432

In 1883 Charles Brower, after several years of a sailor's life, made his first voyage to the Arctic in search of a fortune in whalebone for ladies' corsets. He has lived in northern Alaska, chiefly Port Barrow, most of the time since that first venture. His autobiography is full of stories of Eskimos and their ways, of explorers, adventurers and others from the south, and of his own family and friends.

Booklist 39:68 N 1 '42

"The charm of this story lies in its personal, human quality. Charlie Brower, known throughout the Alaska Territory as 'King of the Arctic,' is Uncle Sam's most northerly citizen. And undoubtedly one of Uncle Sam's most unpretentious citizens. . . Stuff like this makes grand reading, though it doesn't tell anything about the Aleutians." H. C. Lewis

+ Books p2 O 11 '42 800w

Reviewed by H. A. Wooster

Library J 67:793 S 15 '42 80w

"Brower's story is markedly straight-forward and modest. Being alone in the snow brought forth no philosophy, and trekking in bitter weather brought forth no lyrical prose about snow and ice, but he got where he was going. Philip J. Farrelly and Lyman Anson have collaborated in whittling to a third the enormous manuscript. . . Here is a story of such a life that it is easy to wish for more chapters."
R. E. Berry

+ N Y Times p30 O 4 '42 480w

BROWN, CECIL. Suez to Singapore. 545p $3.50 Random house

940.548 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939—East (Far East) (W) 42-36339

The adventures, set forth in diary form, of an American radio commentator during the months from April, 1940—when he was ejected from Rome—to March, 1942, when he sailed from Australia for America, after having spent many months in Singapore watching the approaching end of that fortress in the Far East. Index.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (11) B & T (1) N Y Times (11) PW (1) RB (2)

"A historian will perhaps find most interesting Mr. Brown's scathing and well-documented story of the dry rot and incompetence which prevailed in the higher circles of military and civilian officialdom at Singapore. Mr. Brown shows himself a staunch friend of England and an ardent interventionist before Pearl Harbor. His epitaph on the Singapore mentality before and during the invasion is all the more convincing." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic 170:176 D '42 200w

Booklist 39:66 N 1 '42

"I shall not attempt to praise the story of the voyage and loss of the Prince of Wales and the Renown. If there were nothing else in the book worth reading—and there is plenty—that story would justify its publication. Cecil Brown may not seem of great stature when resenting censorship but he is a big fellow indeed when it comes to appreciate human nobility under stress, and no weakling himself in a tight place." Rodney Gilbert

+ — Books p1 O 25 '42 1850w

"One part of this volume is a fascinating book, a thriller depicting some of the most dramatic scenes of this war, scenes which Mr. Brown has witnessed himself. His report on the sinking of the Prince of Wales and the Repulse, his story on the war in the jungle, of the Far East and the desert of North Africa are equally breath-taking. This part of the book will be appreciated for many years to come. The merit for the present lies in the other part of 'Suez to Singapore.' It points out the blunders and mistakes of the British censorship in Egypt and in Singapore. This part of the book is a nightmare. The amount and the extent of stupidity, narrow-mindedness and social clique rule is positively suffocating. It chokes you while you are reading it." Otto Zausmer

+ Boston Globe p19 O 28 '42 500w

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 19 '42 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '42

"Largely in diary form, book is distinguished by its vigor and the straightforward honesty of the reporting done by this CBS correspondent. Some of action described, including sinking of the 'Renown,' is as good as any account that has come out of this war. Should be an immediate favorite, everywhere." J. C. Shipman

+ Library J 67:907 O 15 '42 110w

"'Suez to Singapore' would be a better book if it were shorter. There are too many personal details, too many round-by-round accounts of flights with censors, each one depressingly similar to the last. In his broadcast talks Mr. Brown is forced to be terse; he may be allotted exactly three and a half minutes to describe a whole campaign. He can, therefore, be forgiven for seeking relaxation in a literary sprawl between covers. But his publishers would have been doing both him and his readers a service if they had cut this self-indulgence short." Keith Hutchison

Nation 155:482 N 7 '42 800w

"'Suez to Singapore' is far from being the most interesting of these post-Berlin diaries. It is too long by half, over-written, repetitious and chiefly concerned with the mishaps and opinions of Cecil Brown. . . There is, however, one feature of the book that makes it worth reading. In the intervals between personal adventures that are in no way remarkable—even if they include crashing in an airplane and sinking with a battle cruiser—it gives the fullest, the most vivid, the angriest account that anyone has written of the fall of Singapore." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 107:550 O 26 '42 1200w

"There was once a newspaper adage that a reporter's troubles in getting a story are no part of the story. To its breach we owe some of the best books of the war, but Mr. Brown might have produced a better book if he had occasionally remembered it." F. S. Adams

+ — N Y Times p3 O 25 '42 1350w

New Yorker 18:83 O 24 '42 80w

"Brown is a born reporter. He knows what constitutes news; he knows the value of 'color'; and he writes with the economy and skilled choice of words of a great reporter. There are shortcomings and some factual errors, to be sure, but they are not serious. They do not dim the luster of Brown's reporting; nor do they diminish the value of the book as an indictment. 'Suez to Singapore' is timely, important, and, above all, exciting reading." Mark Gayn

+ Sat R of Lit 25:9 N 14 '42 650w

"As a promoter of that unity which is so essential to the Allied cause, Cecil Brown ranks very low in the list among his confrères of the press and radio. We cannot but regret that he has abandoned first principles of reporting—the recordings of facts—and has taken to think-pieces. He vacillates between naive approval and captious criticism of all and sundry, but generally the latter. He is contradictory. His adverse comment is often stultified by his own admissions, and frequently in the same breath." Murray Harris

— + Sat R of Lit 25:9 N 14 '42 500w

BROWN, CLARA MAUDE. Evaluation and investigation in home economics. 461p il $3.50 Crofts

640.7 Home economics—Study and teaching 41-28365

"Planned primarily for classroom teachers—prospective teachers, teachers in service and graduate students who are temporarily out of the classroom. The section on evaluation discusses the part that measurement may play in improving instruction, in providing a basis for guidance and in helping schools and colleges to evaluate their educational efforts and to discover how their efficiency may be increased." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

J Home Econ 34:118 F '42 110w

Pratt p15 O '42

School & Society 54:535 D 6 '41 60w

"The author's style is clear and easily read. The material is well organized, ample subdivisions being used to help the reader keep the general outline in mind. Important ideas are italicized and thus are easily located. The 'Evaluation' section is especially recommended not only as a textbook useful in home-economics education but also as a reference volume for teachers in any field." Frances Swineford

+ School R 50:467 Je '42 850w

BROWN, DEE. Wave high the banner. 367p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.

Crockett, David—Fiction (W) 42-11114
A novel based on the life of Davy Crockett.

Booklist 38:368 Je 1 '42

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p16 Ap 26 '42 180w

"This intelligent and totally unpretentious novel contains, so far as the knowledge of the present reviewer runs, the first full-length portrait in fiction of Davy Crockett. 'Wave High the Banner' is a novel, in the sense that fact and invention are discreetly combined to suit the purposes of the story teller. But Dee Brown has given us what must be accounted, nevertheless, an exceptionally shrewd and just evaluation of a picturesque frontiersman who has been left until now to the writers of juvenile thrillers." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p16 My 3 '42 700w

"Nowhere in this book, full as it is of extraordinary events and characters, are there remarkable phrase or sentences. The retelling of a well-known story demands that the writer contribute some new angle of imagination. There must be not merely a reworking but a recreation. Here the written text pulls down the original legend to drabness. . . . There is little of the 'tall tale' quality, the wild humor and the exaggerated deed have been cut out. What is left is a more straightforward, cleaned-up story, lacking the zest and vigor of the original." Paul Engle

— + Sat R of Lit 25:9 My 30 '42 450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:120 Jl '42

BROWN, ELINOR. Holidays and every days; the second Little story book; pictures by Grace Norcross. 31p $1.25 Oxford

42-17631

"Simple everyday happenings, such as hunting for things or eating outdoors, are the subject material for these nursery-age stories to read or tell, as are also activities for such days as Christmas and Easter. Pre-school." Wis Lib Bul

Reviewed by E. G. Mullan

Library J 67:847 O 1 '42 60w

Wis Lib Bul 38:164 N '42

BROWN, ERNEST FRANCIS. The war in maps; an atlas of New York times maps; maps by Emil Herlin. 159p $1.50 Oxford

940.53 World war, 1939—Maps (W)

A collection of maps, many of them first published in the New York Times, illustrating both the political and military aspects of the war. The accompanying brief text explains and amplifies the meaning of the maps.

Booklist 39:181 Ja 1 '43

"Brown and Herlin have done a good job, giving us a book that will be helpful to layman and expert alike because of the wide scope and the skillful arrangement of the material. The value of the book is so great that it is not impaired by a number of minor mistakes, as for example, the fact that Frzmysl (Poland) is listed as a city of 25,000 in 1939, while the population was over 50,000 before the war. Murmansk is called an 'ice-bound' port, but it is ice free."

+ Boston Globe p15 Ja 6 '43 170w

N Y Times p8 D 13 '42 360w

"Boiled down in the pages of this volume is a great deal of essential material in readable form. . . . It is so arranged regionally and chronologically that the reader can instantly find the information he needs. Here is a volume that ought to be on every reading table. It will help everybody to read his daily newspaper and follow the radio reports with better understanding. It is by far the best job that has been done in its field." H. C. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 N 21 '42 360w

BROWN, FRANCIS. See Brown, E. F.

BROWN, GEORGE WILLIAM. The economic history of Liberia. 366p $3 Associated pubs.

330.9666 Liberia—Economic conditions

41-12981

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Reviewed by C. G. Woodson

Am Hist R 47:556 Ap '42 800w

"Over a third of the book is historical documentation, including nearly three hundred selected bibliographical references. This does much to increase the value of a useful and scholarly text." C. S. Johnson

+ Am J Soc 47:1004 My '42 260w

"The volume is well documented, use being made of histories, official documents, state papers, and journals." C. H. Wesley

+ Ann Am Acad 220:231 Mr '42 1000w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 155:761 S '42 400w

BROWN, HARRY GUNNISON. Basic principles of economics and their significance for public policy. 542p $3; questions & problems 30c Lucas bros.

42-2143

"The book is true to the statement in the Preface that it places 'chief and large emphasis on the things that have seemed . . . most fundamental theoretically and most significant for the determination of policy' (p.vi). This emphasis, followed throughout the book, includes 'a sort of philosophy or defense of the price system (capitalism)—not a defense of it as it is but an explanation and defense of it as it might be.'" Am Econ R

BROWN, H. G.—Continued

"Textbooks now more than ever must reflect the purpose for which they are to be used. May we have more books which, like Professor Brown's, courageously accept the challenge to write along these lines." A. C. Neal

+ — Am Econ R 32:853 D '42 1300w

Christian Century 59:115 Ja 28 '42 90w

BROWN, JAMES. History of public assistance in Chicago, 1833 to 1893. 183p pa $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press

360.97731 Chicago—Charities 41-25153

Account of public relief in Chicago during the years when it was financed and administered under "pauper laws." Part one covers the years 1833 to 1871, and deals with the legal basis for public relief in Cook county, the extent of poverty, the almshouse, outdoor relief, and care of the sick poor. Part two covers the years 1871 to 1893 and concerns poor relief in this section after the great fire. Index.

Reviewed by H. I. Clarke

Am Pol Sci R 36:1186 D '42 260w

"The monograph is a valuable addition to the literature of public assistance." R. M. Brown

+ Social Forces 20:414 Mr '42 210w

"An invaluable document for students and for anyone interested in the processes of social history."

+ Survey 77:344 N '41 70w

BROWN, JOHN MASON. Accustomed as I am; il. by Hirschfeld. 201p $2 Norton

817 Lectures and lecturing (W) 42-36050

Essays, most of them on the humorous side, describing the author's adventures and misadventures when he leaves New York city behind and goes to the outlying districts to climb the lecture platform.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic Mr '42 130w

Booklist 38:229 Mr 1 '42

"Mr. Brown tells here, with many a somewhat thin and forced wisecrack, of mix-ups in introductions, of the troubles with the town wit, the town savant, and so on. In straining at the leash to be amusing, Mr. Brown adopts many ancient and ineffective devices—among them the invention of fanciful names for some of the persons he has encountered. There is, for example, his 'Captain Pennypackle.' Admirers of the scholarly side of Mr. Brown may well be dismayed at such outworn dodges. And after all, Mr. Brown, is it wise to bite the hand that feeds you?" Stanley Walker

Books p17 F 1 '42 290w

"Probably the best word for Mr. Brown's book, if one had to limit one's self to a word, is beguiling. It is to be hoped that people who go seldom to the theatre will not imagine that this book is not for them merely because Mr. Brown is a dramatic critic. After all, 'I guess in this world there are all kinds of ways of making a living,' as one of the gentlemen on the mastiff side remarked kindly to him. His is an interesting way." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p30 Mr 29 '42 360w

"This is the book which every professional lecturer has longed to write, but hasn't quite dared. The effect on Mr. Brown's future audience, to say nothing of welcoming committees is still necessarily a matter of conjecture but not so the effect upon his readers. 'Accustomed As I Am' is a book for everyone. It will be a revelation to those who think that 'lecturing is easy' and a solace to those who know it is not." M. A. Peary

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 F 28 '42 550w

"Mr Brown has an observing eye, a keen sense of the ridiculous and, at times, a rare gift of mordant humor. Whether he is dealing with that ghastly silence known as 'the question period' following the lecture, or the agonies of lecturing with illustrative slides, he touches nimbly the more hysterical moments of the lecturer's career and recreates them for the reader's enjoyment. Mr Brown's titles are a joy to those low minded folk who dote on puns."

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ja 25 '42 280w

"There is no telling whether cross-country lecturers will laugh or cry at John Mason Brown's Accustomed as I am, a series of giddy, witty and delightfully written essays (what else can you call them) on the life that a lecturer leads. As to the rest of Mr. Brown's audience, there is no doubt that they will all laugh with him even when he laughs at himself." E. J. R. Isaacs

+ Theatre Arts 26:208 Mr '42 330w

BROWN, JOHN MASON. Insides out; il. by Hirschfeld. 202p $2 Dodd

817

(W) 42-25780

The dramatic critic of The New York World Telegram describes in witty detail a recent operation, which he calls attending "his own opening."

Booklist 39:132 D 15 '42

"'Insides Out' is gay without being slapstick. Its sparkle is of the intellect. It is superficially merry, but fundamentally true." Lisle Bell

+ Books p32 N 22 '42 430w

"Even better than Irvin Cobb's Speaking of Operations. Recommended for pay collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 67:949 N 1 '42 40w

"The Hirschfeld illustrations neatly catch the blithe spirit of the whole show."

+ N Y Times p20 D 6 '42 500w

"Just a shade coy, perhaps, but the author's post-operative wit and critical detachment are as sound as before."

+ — New Yorker 18:99 N 21 '42 60w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

+ Sat R of Lit 26:17 Ja 9 '43 550w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Indoor noisy book; pictures by Leonard Weisgard. [44p] $1 Scott, W.R.

42-23589

Simple little picture-story book about the dog Muffin and all the noises he heard—and some perhaps he didn't hear?—the day he had to stay in the house because he had a cold.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p10 N 8 '42 130w

Reviewed by Rosemary Dawson

Sat R of Lit 25:28 N 14 '42 50w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Night and day; pictures by Leonard Weisgard. [32p] $1.50 Harper

(W) 42-19682

Picture story book about two cats, one who loves the day, and the other who loves the night.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p30 N 15 '42 240w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:332 S '42 70w

"Full of sensory details—of which every child is aware—and the illustrations are very effective though somewhat bizarre. Should prove useful to parents who wish to cure their children of fear of the dark. Recommended." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 67:796 S 15 '42 60w

"The text is almost poetry, and though the pictures lack the soothing quality of the words, they are nevertheless interesting and effective." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 67:882 O 15 '42 40w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Runaway bunny; pictures by Clement Hurd. [40p] $1.50 Harper

42-36148

Picture-story book about a baby bunny who wanted to run away. However, whatever fantastic means of escape or disguise he could think of, mother bunny had a better way to find him and keep him with her. "I will be a fish," says Baby Bunny, "and I a fisherman," says Mother Bunny; "I will be a bird," and I will be a tree."

Booklist 38:311 Ap 15 '42

"There is a rich background to this up-to-date, affectionate picture-book. The student of folksong recognizes a baby's variant of the old chansons in which a persistent suitor follows the elusive beloved, through successive changes of form. . . Pictures and text are in complete collaboration. Brilliant in color, the large scenes show the dreams, while realistic black-and-whites show that this is really a mother-play." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Mr 15 '42 300w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 27 '42 90w

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson

Library J 67:368 Ap 15 '42 40w

BROWN, ROSE (JOHNSTON) (MRS ROBERT CARLTON BROWN), and BROWN, ROBERT CARLTON. Amazing Amazon. 371p $3 Modern age

918.1 Amazon river 42-15052

"To renew and extend acquaintance with a country and people they love, Rose and Bob (as they introduce themselves) passed five months exploring some 8,000 miles of the mightiest of all rivers as well as a score or so of tributaries. Their main interest was in human beings, what they are like inside and out, but they always had time and perception for alligators, snakes, flowers, fishes, insects, food and drink and a host of other animate or inanimate objects. One result of the journey is a thoroughly entertaining, rambling, intimate book with pages of amusing fluff alternating with substantial bits of information." Books

Books p9 J1 5 '42 480w

"Nostalgic minds that yearn for an old-fashioned travel book are directed to 'Amazing Amazon.' . . [The book] has no illustrations and no map. And this last would be an appreciable lack if the book made any claim to instructiveness or value. In spite of its gleanings of a few facts, figures and historic anecdotes, its only appeal is in the personal entertainment of an 'escape.'"

N Y Times p5 My 17 '42 440w

School & Society 56:279 S 26 '42 50w

BROWN, SLATER. Burning wheel. 306p $2.50 Bobbs

42-23590

A tragic story of conflicts between city visitors, decadent and unscrupulous, and natives, who lack the sturdy virtues of their forefathers. The scene is a valley in northern Connecticut where the poison ivy and brush covers the wornout farms, symbolic of the poison in the lives of the inhabitants.

"The novel seems too short. Conceived on such a scale and executed with such a wealth of technical devices, it might well have had more body. Lack of motivation of one of the principal characters is a serious flaw in the intricate design. We see Ewan Stanton embarking on the affair with Judith but we have no notion why he is impelled to the acts that will result in his death. The novel is powerful in spite of these defects. Events have a Hardy-esque quality. Indeed the strange and terrible scene on the frozen ice which is the climax of the book bears a superficial resemblance to the end of 'The Return of the Native.' . . It may be that the author has learned the use of poetic metaphor from Dante himself. Certainly his work exhibits an awareness of fictional and poetic resources coupled with a mature grasp of character that is rare in the contemporary novel." Caroline Gordon

+ Books p4 N 1 '42 950w

"Mr. Brown's ability to look at all his characters with equal honesty and understanding is an outstanding achievement among present-day novelists. But it was not necessary for him to put a 'curse' upon his valley: all such communities are cursed, and for the same reasons. The malignancy that Mr. Brown attributes to his particular part of the countryside, symbolized by the scrambling poison ivy, deprives his novel of its full significance and indicates an unwarranted lack of faith in his ability to tell a general truth about people."

+ Nation 155:521 N 14 '42 240w

"This is distinguished work, bound to give esthetic pleasure in its beautiful articulation of emotions and delicate play of desire on desire. There are those who find these people 'morbid' and 'disagreeable'; they are the ones who think Truth is the bonnier for a toupee and Max Factor make-up." Dawn Powell

+ New Repub 107:617 N 9 '42 1450w

"'The Burning Wheel' is best where it is most original. Mr. Brown can use the language neatly, and he writes a lot of lively dialogue—speech which really could be spoken, and not just between clenched teeth or with frequent reference to a thesaurus. Still, the special distinction of the book is not in the style but in the presentation—the device of the narrator, managed with marvelous dexterity." Nancy Flagg

+ N Y Times p14 O 18 '42 700w

"The plot is interesting, but more interesting, and rather frightening is the atmosphere of decay in the valley itself, to which the characters are inescapably bound. Some humorous dialogue keeps the book from being too stern and tense."

+ New Yorker 18:82 O 24 '42 70w

"There is much cryptic talk and constant drinking, there are Faulknerian hints of perversion and incest, and the accent is on the grotesque and brutal. . . Although a vigorous, well written novel, how old-fashioned it seems for all its modernity! With our democratic way of life, human decency, and liberty in indisputable danger, we can't generate much interest in the private woes of such shallow folk; and although the social implication is probably sound, already its thesis in tremendous days of an all-out war seems only of historical value." R. A. Cordell

Sat R of Lit 25:35 O 24 '42 400w

BROWN, STERLING ALLEN; DAVIS, ARTHUR PAUL, and LEE, ULYSSES GRANT, eds. Negro caravan; writings by American Negroes. 1082p $4.25; text ed $3.25 Dryden

810.8 Negro literature—Collections. American literature—Collections 42-7434

This anthology contains writings of American Negroes, covering the period from the 1760's to the present. It includes poetry, short stories, excerpts from novels, folk literature, drama, biography and essays.

Reviewed by David Dalches

Am J Soc 48:435 N '42 1500w

Booklist 38:305 Ap 15 '42

"One cannot read this volume at one or two or even half a dozen sittings. It is something to be dipped into on many occasions for reference and for pleasure. A valuable addition to the main sections of the book is an appendix devoted to the chronological recording of important events and people in the history and the literature of the Negro." Rose Feld

+ Books p15 Mr 29 '42 400w

Reviewed by H. P. Lazarus

Nation 154:548 My 9 '42 800w

"Some good stuff and some poor stuff, and bound to be more comprehensive than your knowledge of the subject. Both surprising and informative in range."

+ New Repub 106:277 F 23 '42 40w

"Much of the Negro's history, as well as his contribution to American literature, is in this volume. One hears Frederick Douglass declaiming against slavery, and one follows the historic debate between Dr. Du Bois and Booker T. Washington over the direction the emancipated Negro was to take in American life. The whole epic of the Negro is stirringly written down in 'The Negro Caravan,' for the general reader and for the student." W. S. Meacham

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 29 '42 900w

BROWN, S. A.—Continued

"Entertaining and impressive."

+ New Yorker 17:71 F 14 '42 30w

Reviewed by Alfred Kreymsborg,
Sat R of Lit 25:13 F 21 '42 800w

Reviewed by G. B. Johnson
Social Forces 20:511 My '42 150w

"Thorough, extensive, well-documented picture of Negro life as seen through Negro eyes and described by Negro writers." Willard Waller
+ Survey G 31:602 D '42 350w

"To make a book of a thousand pages of written matter in all of these various categories that is at the same time important as a record of character and experience and artistically valid from a literary point of view is quite another matter. Yet from the earliest poets and preachers, from the poets of the spirituals and the blues, through the great days of Frederick Douglass and Booker Washington, down to Alain Locke's The New Negro and Richard Wright's Native Son, The Negro Caravan maintains its standard. No American library can afford to do without it."

Theatre Arts 26:544 Ag '42 360w

BROWN, WILLIAM ADAMS. Creed for free men; a study of loyalties. 277p $2.50 Scribner 261 Sociology, Christian. Social problems. Democracy 41-52009

"The missing factor in contemporary democracy, says the author, is a unifying creed. By creed he doesn't mean a set of beliefs prescribed by authority, but rather 'a grouping of the convictions which give meaning to life . . . and which may serve as a guide for personal conduct and a means of understanding with one's neighbors.' In his summing up he considers what a free people can expect from its schools, what the home must supply which the school lacks, and what the church alone can supply." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 38:125 D 15 '41

Bookmark 3:3 Mr '42

Reviewed by D. E. Roberts
Books p18 Mr 22 '42 400w

"Without question Dr. Brown has done us a great service by the writing of this book. It is a mature presentation of the best type of liberalism with respect to today's most critical problem." N. F. S. Ferré

+ Christian Century 59:151 F 4 '42 1000w
Churchman 156:17 Mr 15 '42 300w

"Dr. Brown is no sensation-monger or seeker after novelty, but his message in this his latest book is a very timely one and ought to be kept in mind by us all, even though, since it was written, the nation has been catapulted into war." D. C. Macintosh

+ Crozer Q 19:150 Ap '42 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p455 S 12 '42 270w

Wis Lib Bul 38:10 Ja '42

BROWN, WILLIAM BARTHOLOMEW; STEWART, MAXWELL SLUTZ, and MYER, WALTER EVERT. America in a world at war. 328p il maps $1.80 Silver

940.5373 World war, 1939—U.S. U.S.—Defenses 42-20392

A textbook for high school students. Early chapters deal with American civilization—what it is we are fighting for—the last Great war and why the peace failed. Later chapters deal with the armed forces, our industrial resources, civilian defense, etc. Index.

"Perhaps a book on this subject for adults as concise, comprehensive and easy to comprehend as this one for the teens, and with as many good pictures, is somewhere in press today, but I have not seen it. Were anything needed to point the fact that in informative books the teens are getting the best of it over adult beginners, this guide to the present position, privileges and duties of wartime America would do it." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 S 6 '42 350w

School & Society 56:195 S 5 '42 40w

"High school students will find the answers to most of their questions about the present war in this very readable and most enlightening book. The book can be very profitably used by teachers of problems of democracy for a unit covering the war. Each chapter includes a splendid [bibliography] of contemporary materials which can be used by the teacher for a more extensive study of the war. The questions at the end of the chapters provide a basis for some very stimulating class discussions. Students will find the unusual illustrations and the striking maps effective aids in their study of America In A World At War." F. J. Carbon

+ Social Studies 33:377 D '42 400w

BROWN, MRS ZENITH (JONES) (LESLIE FORD, DAVID FROME, pseud.). Murder in the O.P.M. 235p $2 Scribner

(W) 42-18461

Detective story.

Booklist 39:12 S '42

"All's well with Leslie Ford's new offering, furnished with double death, civilized composition and plenty of talk about price control, requisitioning of supplies and the likes of that." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 Ag 16 '42 200w

Boston Globe p19 Ag 12 '42 10w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p15 Ag 9 '42 220w

New Yorker 13:60 Ag 29 '42 40w

"Good grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 Ag 22 '42 50w

BROWN, MRS ZENITH (JONES) (LESLIE FORD, DAVID FROME, pseud.). Murder with southern hospitality. 245p $2 Scribner

(W) 42-36027

Mystery story.

Booklist 38:235 Mr 1 '42

Bookmark 3:18 Mr '42

"Leslie Ford has grabbed deeply into her bag of tricks and come up with a fine assortment in the cause of sentiment and goose-flesh. At one point the narrator confesses: 'For the first time in my life I knew stark unmitigated terror,' and that was at the halfway mark, with worse and more of it to follow. This time Colonel Primrose gets a rest, while his creator devotes herself rather to the tout ensemble, as it were. Picturesque is the word." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 Ja 25 '42 190w

"The plot is not so well integrated as it might be, but Leslie Ford's lively narrative style more than makes up for what deficiencies there are." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p21 Ja 25 '42 260w

New Yorker 17:64 F 7 '42 50w

"It is an entertaining tale but far from one of Mrs Ford's best." J. H. Mitchell

+ — Spring'd Republican p7e F 1 '42 200w

Wis Lib Bul 38:31 F '42

BROWNE, CHARLES ALBERT, and ZERBAN, FREDERICK WILLIAM. Physical and chemical methods of sugar analysis. 3d ed rev 1353p il $15 Wiley

664.1 Sugar—Analysis and testing

41-24712

Third edition of a textbook first published in 1912. "The great wealth of new subject matter incorporated and the obsolete matter omitted from the third edition, compels consideration of the book as a new issue altogether. It describes all physical and chemical methods pertaining to the analysis of sugars and as the authors state also 'to the analysis of accompanying substances which, although not belonging to the sugars, have nevertheless an important bearing on the chemical behavior of sugars and their complex technological, physical and physiological relationship.' It covers a vast field of chemistry." (Chem & Met Eng) Indexes.

"The authors deserve hearty congratulations for their splendid work which, substituting in a single volume for a small library, will be welcomed by everybody having anything to do with carbohydrates." Eugene Pacsu

+ Am Chem Soc J 64:1014 Ap '42 1100w

"Those who know the authors and their broad knowledge of the sugars and related products, expected just such an up-to-date treatise. The well written clear print, 332 illustrations, diagrams and tables, subject and author indexes, enhance the value of this book. It is indispensable not only to the chemists who are engaged in the manufacture of sugars, starch or related products but should prove of great value to scientists using instruments of these industries." G. T. Reich

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:167 Ap '42 450w

BROWNE, LEWIS. Something went wrong. 360p il maps $3 Macmillan

909.8 History, Modern. Civilization—History (W) 42-3310

"A 'summation of modern history' which shows that although the coming of the machine in the eighteenth century should have brought release to mankind, something went wrong, and instead it became responsible for greater servitude, the 'black life,' poverty and slums, panics, strikes, upheavals and revolutions, the birth of socialism, fascism, communism, the rise of nationalism and the spread of imperialism, all leading up to the present world conflict." (Library J) Index.

"The book is an excellent one for the readers for whom it was written. It may not exhibit comprehensive grasp or penetrating analysis of the forces that have made the modern world what it is, but there are other books for those who want that sort of thing. . . . At all events, Mr. Browne seems to know his industrial and technological history very well and to have a very good notion of how the changes brought about by the machines got the world, in concrete instances and in a general way, into nowadays. In addition, the narrative is supported by a good many helpful maps and some simple statistical tables. And if the matter is a little oversimplified and the manner a little too snappy for my taste or needs, I am willing to concede that Mr. Browne knows better than I do how to make people take a little history and like it." Carl Becker

+ — Am Hist R 48:65 O '42 700w

"One wishes that the author had taken the trouble to check his facts with any reputable textbook. . . . The book is full of half-truths, stated without qualification. . . . The style of this book verges toward the cheap and the sensational; but despite that fact, there is much to be said for it. The savage indignation that saturates these pages more than atones, in the mind of this reviewer, for lapses of good taste. . . . Neither Stuart Chase nor Lewis Mumford can excel this writer in assailing the evils of modern industrialism. His pamphlet may have more influence than many sober and authentic histories." W. P. Hall

+ — Ann Am Acad 221:198 My '42 500w

Booklist 38:271 Ap 1 '42

"Something went wrong with Mr. Lewis Browne's summation of modern history. It is witty; it has crystalline clarity and a marvelously effective knack of combining erudition with easy informality that slips into the vernacular and out again with never a jar. The brevity of the work makes inevitable a certain distortion of economic history, but the book is free of any intentional distortion. In short, it is charming—but not convincing. It is easy for a countryman to spot the missing element. Mr. Browne has undertaken to write a history of the world, but he has left the world out entirely." G. W. Johnson

+ — Books p6 Mr 1 '42 900w

"Told in the author's characteristic crisp and rapid style, with a paucity of dates and details. Popular background reading for the present crisis. Recommended." M. J. Messler

+ Library J 67:39 Ja 1 '42 80w

"No such work of compression as Mr. Browne has undertaken could be altogether adequate or altogether free from slips. . . . The survey would have been better rounded if some attention had been paid to the thinkers and trends that undermined faith in absolute moral values. But in the main the author has succeeded in giving a picture of the crisis of our age that is at once thoughtful, vivid and convincing." W. H. Chamberlin

+ — N Y Times p14 F 15 '42 1050w

"Browne can write and has written so well, so cleverly, and so clearly that 'Something Went Wrong' is a small masterpiece. . . . Western freemen will continue to lose World War II until they learn that the war of the world revolution can be won only by those able and willing to break with the stuffy past, to forge revolutionary weapons, and to build in creatively revolutionary fashion a new society and a new international community. Browne's book will help the cause, since none can read it without seeing more clearly what is needed for victory. But it is likely—alas!—that those who read it already see and that those who don't want to see won't read it. For details of the results of this process, see the headlines in your daily paper." F. L. Schuman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 F 21 '42 850w

Wis Lib Bul 38:42 Mr '42

BROWNING, GRACE ALTA. Rural public welfare; selected records; with introductory notes and comments. 578p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

361.8 Social work

41-19977

"This volume of teaching material includes case-work and community-organization records from a variety of rural agencies in eleven states. Some of them have been used in classes at the University of Chicago, others were used for staff discussion in state departments of public welfare before publication. The editor, experienced in rural social work and in the teaching of case work and rural public welfare, has edited the records for use in schools of social work and in staff-development programs of public welfare departments. The records are accompanied by descriptions of the different agencies and communities from which they come and are clarified and supplemented by introductory material and comments by the editor." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"The main title of this book is misleading, as it is mostly unannotated case records. . . . Altogether, the cases represent as many counties in eleven states, written by the local workers and edited by the author, but without any comment. The case records furnish illustrative material designed 'to reflect differences in case situation or treatment plan growing out of the nature of the rural setting. They will prove most valuable perhaps to teachers who can relate the material to fundamental case-work principles. Their value to untrained or partially trained rural social workers is problematical. . . . What is needed in this field is a book done in collaboration by a social worker with broad rural experience and a rural sociologist." Dwight Sanderson

Am J Soc 47:781 Mr '42 500w

"The case histories given in the bulk of the book are valuable to anyone teaching or practicing social case work. There is a wealth of services depicted and the recording is interesting, clear, and adequate. The case worker seeking a good example of recording has a multitude of choices from which to select. In reading any book on social work one is prone to expect a discussion of basic concepts and skills in the light of most recent findings in the field; however Rural Social Welfare has left the reader free to evaluate the job done by the case worker." A. A. Cassatt

+ Social Forces 20:415 Mr '42 500w

Reviewed by Gertrude Vaile

Survey 78:284 O '42 1050w

BRUCE, EVA. Call her Rosie. 300p il $2.50 Washburn

42-22825

Story of a shiftless, happy-go-lucky, Canadian family. Pa had been a jockey, and was seldom sober; Ma left the circus to marry and have nine children. Most of the children took after their parents, but Rosie was different—Rosie wanted to be respectable. After Pa's death Rosie struggled even harder to make something of Ma and the family and had some measure of success.

BRUCE, EVA—Continued

"Eva Bruce tells her story with touching sympathy and a wry humor. She doesn't disguise the frowzy reality, but she makes her heroine a figure to remember." Lisle Bell

+ Books p12 S 27 '42 450w

"A funny and heart warming story."

+ Boston Globe p15 Ja 6 '43 120w

"There is many a good laugh in this heart-warming first novel, and if there are a few tears they are more likely to be tears of rage than quiet sorrow." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p14 O 4 '42 380w

BRUCE, WILLIAM FRENCH, and FREEMAN, FRANK SAMUEL. Development and learning; the psychology of childhood and youth in a democratic society. 552p il $2.75 Reynal 136.7 Child study. Educational psychology. Learning, Psychology of 42-14159

"A comprehensive survey and interpretation of recent scientific studies in human psychology from infancy through adolescence seeking to clarify the relations among biological, emotional, intellectual and social aspects of development so that students may understand the complex processes by which children and youths become individual personalities with diverse patterns of behavior." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

"The authors are particularly to be commended for their vivid, though brief, illustrative descriptions of child behavior which constantly remind one to apply these facts to real, everyday children rather than to some abstract 'ideal' child. . . . Unlike the first sections, which are a presentation of facts and their implications, much of the later sections stresses the historical development of learning theories and criticizes vigorously those which the authors dislike. This condemnation is at times merely inappropriate." L. J. Cronbach

+ — El School J 43:53 S '42 1600w

"I know of no other text which contains such comprehensive compilation of research materials." E. C. Lindeman

+ New Repub 106:835 Je 15 '42 330w

School & Society 55:540 My 9 '42 50w

BRUNNER, EDMUND DE SCHWEINITZ. Working with rural youth. 132p $1.20 Am. council on educ.

362.7 Youth. Country life 42-20181

"An experiment in rural social engineering is reported in this book, a 3-year project involving 15 counties in five states: Virginia, Georgia, Iowa, Michigan, and Ohio. The project was set up by the American Youth Commission and supervised by the AYC's rural advisory committee, of which Mr. Brunner was chairman. Aim of the project was—by working through already existing agencies such as the USDA Extension Service, the NYA, and FSA, and by democratic methods—to build a co-operating setup in the states strong enough to insure a broad and permanent program for rural youth." J Home Econ

Reviewed by R. L. Sutherland

Ann Am Acad 225:250 Ja '43 850w

J Home Econ 35:49 Ja '43 250w

Reviewed by R. A. Polson

Survey 79:30 Ja '43 800w

BRUSH, KATHARINE (INGHAM) (MRS. H. C. WINANS). Boy from Maine. 340p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 42-14626

The boy from Maine was Hobey Hadley and his story is told from his poverty-stricken childhood on a Maine island, thru his service in the navy during the first European war, his years as master of ceremonies in a New York night club, up to the beginning of his service for his country in the present. Two women, both of whom he had known in his childhood in Maine, vie for chief place in his life.

Reviewed by R. M. Gay

Atlantic 170:102 Ag '42 180w

Booklist 38:426 Jl 1 '42

"I think that Miss Brush is unfortunate in her choice of a heroine for this book. Rosalie's moral guilt in the death of her first husband makes her odious from that point on. The retribution and atonement that Miss Brush invents for her never quite succeed in wiping out that feeling. Although the author's pen is sometimes tinged with sharp sarcasm there is not as much satire in the book as its subject deserves." Milton Hindus

Books p4 Je 28 '42 650w

"A lively and entertaining book. It is longer and more pretentious than her previous novels, and perhaps a little deeper—but very much in the same vein." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 Je 21 '42 600w

"The sobering up and maturing of the war youth of 1918 in the years between then and the new war is a difficult thesis and how well Miss Brush has done it is more or less a matter of individual taste. The book might have profited by a little spread of locale, for the night world of Manhattan is fairly screwball even at the quietest times and the social evolution of the inter-war years does not show as strongly there as it might in other scenes." Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 25:12 Je 20 '42 400w

BRYAN, EDWIN HORACE. American Polynesia; coral islands of the central Pacific. 208p il pl maps $1.50 Tongg

919.6 Polynesia. Coral reefs and islands 41-13763

"A description of some forty-five of the more important islands in the Central Pacific, by a curator at the Bishop Museum in Honolulu. There is a map of each island, several illustrations, and an extensive bibliography." Foreign Affairs

Booklist 38:111 D 1 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:575 Ap '42 50w

BRYAN, GEORGE SANDS. Mystery ship; the Mary Celeste in fancy and in fact. 320p il $3 Lippincott

910.4 Mary Celeste (brig) (W) 42-10366

The true story of the mystery ship, the Mary Celeste, which in the year 1872 was found abandoned about 300 miles off the coast of Portugal. The Mary Celeste was a brigantine of American registry, and the mystery surrounding her has brought forth much speculation. The present account gives all the known facts in the case. Bibliographical note. Index.

"The case of the Mary Celeste was tried at Gibraltar, and Gibraltar, apes and all, is duly described in word pictures. In fact, one can hardly see the hull for the rigging. This is rather a pity, as this clear and interesting story does not need so much window dressing and is quite able to stand on its own merits." R. E. Danielson

+ — Atlantic Je '42 220w

Booklist 38:366 Je 1 '42

"The case is fully and faithfully presented in this volume for the first time, and students of shipping history can depend on the information it contains. For the general reader, it is to be feared that the narrative will be something of a jumble. It does not begin at the beginning and run on to the end; rather it goes off on unexpected tangents, interesting enough to those conversant with the subject, but confusing to the story as a whole. In a generous supplement many of the documents in the case are given verbatim." Lincoln Colcord

+ — Books p3 Ap 12 '42 1300w

Commonweal 36:188 Je 12 '42 70w

"George S. Bryan, a scholarly historian, biographer and encyclopedist, has written what is probably the definitive book on the Mary Celeste." S. E. Hyman

New Repub 106:740 My 25 '42 500w

"Mr. Bryan has a good time, and gives a good time to his readers, in recounting the wild tales, from semi-fiction to would-be hoax, which have gathered around the Mary Celeste."

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 26 '42 440w

BRYANT, ARTHUR. Years of endurance, 1793-1802. 375p il maps $3.50 Harper [12s 6d Collins]

942.073 Great Britain—History—1789-1820.
Europe—History. France—History—Revolution
(W) 42-25965

This first volume of a projected two-volume work covers the first decade of "the longest war in Britain's history," the war with revolutionary France which furnishes strange parallels to the present war. In these first years, the author says: "The foundations of victory had already been laid. This is the story of how they were laid. They were compounded of errors and follies, of failures and recoveries, of bitter disappointments bravely borne, of experience and dawning realisation, above all of courage, resolution and endurance." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 39:221 F 1 '43

"To state that this epic of man's endeavor is superbly recounted, that it pulsates with life, is not however to say that it is equally good as analysis of the profound institutional forces with which it was so closely intertwined. No one can arise from the reading of this moving pageant without being thrilled to the marrow. It makes one feel almost apologetic to suggest therefore that victory was won because the British had more to fortify them than 'an innate respect for moral law,' a moral law, we are reminded, which stemmed from Christian faith, making them respect freedom for its own sake." Leo Gershey

+ — Books p18 D 13 '42 900w

"Straight historical writing; the many parallels between England and France of that day and the fight against Hitler stressed only in preface and epilogue." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 67:1011 N 15 '42 110w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor

Manchester Guardian p3 N 18 '42 170w

"Mr. Bryant's book serves its immediate purpose well, for it paints a picture of Britain at war with great skill and knowledge, and its vivid touches and its lively and intimate description of the life and mind of the time make it attractive reading. Pitt's commanding qualities stand out in its stirring pages, and they are qualities that make our pulses beat faster as we fight for our life to-day. . . But though it is of course on a different plane from the rough handling of history that has produced Young Mr. Pitt, it suffers in some degree from the same defect, and it is a defect that is unfortunate at this moment." J. L. Hammond

+ — New Statesman & Nation 24:358 N 28 '42 1800w

Reviewed by Herbert Gorman

N Y Times p6 Ja 17 '43 1350w

New Yorker 18:104 D 5 '42 50w

"A short review of Mr. Bryant's book may seem to dwell overmuch on faults of execution, but excellences of the book speak for themselves, and will be obvious to many readers. Nevertheless, the cult of 'Old and True' is not without risks for a historian." E. L. Woodward

+ — Spec 169:510 N 27 '42 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p558 N 14 '42 2500w

BRYSON, JOHN GORDON. Valiant libertine. 427p $2.75 Appleton-Century

42-10684

Robust tale of Boston and Quebec during the Revolution, and of a dashing young hero who dazzles and duels his profligate way, until he marries his Lady Barbara.

"It is a lusty narrative, bright with the flash of steel and a maiden's smiles." Lisle Bell

Books p14 My 17 '42 380w

"The whole swashbuckling tale is told in the language of the time, filled with outmoded oaths and many sly references to ladies' petticoats. If the coarse style becomes monotonous at least one gets used to it so that at the end one murmurs politely, 'A damned pretty scandal.'" Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 Ap 26 '42 500w

"Mr. Bryson is disarmingly frank about his work. 'This book,' he says, 'was not written as an historical novel. . . It was written as romantic fiction.' It would, therefore, be obviously unfair to complain that the Boston of 1775, here presented, is given a multitude of glimmers that would have astonished our colonial ancestors. . . It is all very gay, very lively, remarkably unreal, and astoundingly inconsistent." C. D. Abbott

Sat R of Lit 25:12 My 9 '42 400w

BUCHAN, JOHN, 1st baron TWEEDSMUIR. Adventurers all. 3v in 1 316,298,367p $2.50 Houghton

(W)

An omnibus volume, containing Huntingtower, The Three Hostages, and John McNabb (Book Review Digest 1923-1925).

"This 'omnibus,' containing three of his most popular stories of romantic adventure, will give new readers of Buchan a chance to catch up. For readers whose literary conscience rebels against murder mysteries, these are a perfect form of 'escape' literature, and they are something more than that."

Christian Century 59:758 Je 10 '42 70w

"Like England's 'fortitude and courage' of today, the books tell of an indomitable spirit in these native sons in far lands; sometimes ridiculously stupid, sometimes thick-headedly pugnacious, but always basically true to their up-bringing and accumulated experiences. Richard Hannay is one of the most consistently thrilling fictional characters devised in an author's need." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p31 S 27 '42 440w

Wis Lib Bul 38:137 O '42

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). American unity and Asia. 140p $1.50 Day

940.53 World war, 1939—U.S. Eastern question (Far East) (W) 42-18132

"Miss Buck has collected ten of her speeches and articles, of which only one (dealing with the problem of a relatively manless postwar America) does not concern some aspect of Asia, the race question, and the relation of both to the war and the peace." New Yorker

Booklist 39:6 S '42

"Though her emotions are of the most generous, Mrs. Buck does not seem to me to have got any very firm grasp over the intricate and desperate realities with which she seeks to deal—it comes out in her final chapter, in which she makes a gallant but scarcely successful attempt to wrestle with the problem of unity in an individualist democracy—and the point is stressed because it seems to lead to three very definite dangers." Walter Mills

+ — Books p1 Jl 26 '42 1700w

Canadian Forum 22:280 D '42 600w

"This is a book of spacious thought and wide horizons. Candidly, sensitively, from a rich background of knowledge, Mrs. Buck attacks Oriental problems as they affect the Occident. She knows the scene, the mind, the heart, of both. And she makes a peculiarly eloquent pleader for a bridge of understanding between the two." Margaret Davis

+ Cath World 155:763 S '42 320w

"Miss Buck has raised a banner which must never be furled; she states her case with sincerity, ability, and courage. There is no disagreement with her general attitude, and the reviewer, for one, agrees strongly that when democracy is in danger the answer is not less, but more, democracy. But the issues are so fundamental that they will bear all the discussion of which we are capable. This book may well be the beginning of great changes in public opinion, part of which it already reflects." G. E. Taylor

BUCK, P. S.—Continued

+ Nation 155:155 Ag 22 '42 650w

Reviewed by Eleanor Roosevelt

New Repub 107:147 Ag 3 '42 1150w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 13:57 J1 18 '42 450w

Pratt p23 D '42

Time 40:84 J1 6 '42 500w

Wis Lib Bul 38:135 O '42

Reviewed by Nathaniel Peffer

Yale R n s 32:191 autumn '42 900w

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Chinese children next door; drawings by William Arthur Smith. 64p $1.50 Day (W) 42-25508

The children next door were the six little Chinese girls named Precious, More Precious, Plenty Precious, Pretty One, Pretty Two, and Pretty Three. The little American girl next door had fun playing with the three Preciouses and the three Pretties, and then with the seventh Chinese child, who, contrary to expectation, was a boy.

"The little story is a model for introducing another country's customs to children. This mother does not say how funny it is to smell a baby's cheek; she says how funny our kisses seem to the Chinese, who wonder why we bite each other like that. They find our knives and forks as strange as we do chopsticks; so on, through everything at which we might laugh, there's always something for which they'd laugh at us. This two-way understanding cannot begin too early, and I am glad it comes to children as young as five in this laughable tale of cumulative Chinese sisters." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 15 '42 320w

Horn Bk 19:34 Ja '43 80w

"Strikingly beautiful drawings in red and black, by William Arthur Smith, make this a most attractive picture-story book." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 68:37 Ja 1 '43 40w

"The story is told with a complete naturalness which is excellent writing. It will give other young Americans—say, from five to eight years old—a conviction that while the Chinese may be different, they are not too strange to understand and like." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 18:110 D 12 '42 90w

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Dragon seed. 378p $2.50 Day (W) 41-27318

Story of modern China and the effects of the Japanese war on a family of sturdy, up-right farmers, living not far from Nanking. Ling Tan, his wife, and their sons and daughters, and their families, at first cannot understand this type of war, and are unprepared to grasp its implications. But with the fall of Nanking, and the looting of the countryside, understanding and horror comes. Ling Tan's sons take to guerilla warfare, and the family makes valiant attempts to continue some kind of decent life in the midst of chaos.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (19) N Y Times (3) PW (1) W (1)

"I doubt if Pearl Buck was ever better than in her new novel, Dragon Seed." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic Mr '42 210w

Booklist 38:177 Ja 15 '42

Bookmark 3:16 Mr '42

"'Dragon Seed' is streaked with tragedy, but, as in Mrs. Buck's best work, the juice of life flows strongly through it; humor and passion are still here, appropriately muted but not dead.

These people live close to the earth and their lives partake of its vigor and fertility, its patience, its eternal self-renewal. Mrs. Buck's faith in the earth is apparently no less than theirs; it is such that she makes the clan's only traitor city-bred. As ever, Mrs. Buck's style is deceptive, for it is simple and yet equal to all the complex things required of it." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p3 Ja 25 '42 950w

"Dragon Seed is a propaganda novel, concerned with a little group of Chinese farmers who decide not to flee westward before the advancing Japanese, but to hold on to the land as long as they may. Both story and characterization sound like a literary invention. The overstrained attempt to show the bestiality of the Japanese destroys whatever slight literary value the novel might have had and even as propaganda it is at times hard going." N. E. Monroe

— Cath World 154:756 Mr '42 190w

"The author could hardly have suspected, when she was writing 'Dragon Seed,' the potency of its future appeal. The period in which the public is reading this book is precisely the right period. As war propaganda, the message which this book brings is terrific. And, to Mrs. Buck's honor, be it recorded that it is not so much anti-Japanese propaganda as a wider and deeper propaganda which becomes antibestiality and antidictatorship wherever that monster lifts its head." Margaret Williamson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 21 '42 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '42

"Some of the bestiality portrayed may come too soon upon our war with Japan not to be taken with a grain of salt. [Mrs] Buck goes all out (à la Hemingway) in her realism in this regard. In any case, it is a strongly convincingly written story. There are no heroics, really; only heroism, which serves to make it the more convincing." W. M. Callahan

+ Commonweal 35:439 F 20 '42 550w

"A vivid portrayal of family solidarity and devotion amid the horrors and terrors of modern warfare. Recommended." E. V. Baldwin

+ Library J 67:86 Ja 15 '42 80w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 24 '42 180w

Nation 154:173 F 7 '42 130w

"The book is interesting; the plot is ingenious in its coverage, though marked by a static quality and one ludicrous romance. On the whole, heavy weather."

New Repub 106:214 F 9 '42 120w

Reviewed by Freda White

New Statesman & Nation 23:394 Je 13 '42 220w

"In this as in all her best work from China Pearl Buck writes in power and illumination from her identification with her subject: so we, too, feel and share simplicity and ancient wisdom, as the human greatness of simple men and women meets each day, in occupied China, with deathless tenacity." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 25 '42 1450w

"As always, [Mrs] Buck writes with great simplicity both of style and characterization, employing a steady-going chronicle technique with few ups and downs. This at times makes for monotony and a certain unrelieved homeliness of feeling. It makes also for purity and honesty." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:64 Ja 24 '42 270w

Pratt p16 My '42

"To my way of thinking 'Dragon Seed' is likely to be a popular success and an artistic failure. It cannot be ranked as the bland dust jacket announces, 'with the author's finest work.' It is the author's finest work reduced to a formula and watered down, and despite moments of real emotion it remains an adventure story with patriotic overtones. Unfortunately for the tale, the adventures do not mount to any climax, but are simply strung along, one after the other, on the simple theme of an increase in Chinese patriotism." H. M. Jones

— + Sat R of Lit 25:5 Ja 17 '42 700w

Discussion by Nym Wales

Sat R of Lit 25:12 Ja 31 '42 1250w

"Mrs. Buck is nowhere sensational, but she is quite ruthless in showing us what the unprepared common people of China had to endure from their conquerors, and, deeply acquainted with the nation she writes of, she is able to let us share their fears and weaknesses as well as their extraordinary dignity and courage. She uses humour tactfully also, and writes with a pleasant, naturalistic tenderness of marital love and domestic life." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 168:428 My 1 '42 320w

"If, as in her previous works, Mrs Buck once more makes errors in Chinese custom which vex Chinese readers and occidentals who know their China well, she has nevertheless written another great book with the completion of 'Dragon Seed'. . . For a reader who seeks to know the fundamental philosophy of China's common folk, 'Dragon Seed' is a book to be read without break from the first to the last page. It is a book invaluable at this time, when the rank and file of America is hungry to know something of the fundamentals of that immense rank-and-file which is China's peasantry—and the motives which at last have stirred people of the dragon of heaven, T'ien-lung, into such angry opposition that, without modern armaments, or naval or aerial power comparable to that of the invader, guerillas, as well as the determined hosts of China have held off the vicious hordes for well over four terrible years."

D. L.

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 25 '42 750w

"Pearl Buck's new novel is the strongest and most instructive story yet written of China at war. As literature, it edges the first-rate. As discreet and powerful propaganda, it makes tangible the living, the suffering and the bravery of a great and obscure people under four years of hermetic tyranny, in a defeat which refused to stay put."

+ Time 39:80 Ja 26 '42 1600w

"Despite the blurring scriptural note, the picture drawn of China under Japanese occupation is grimly unsentimental. Nothing in the position of the Chinese is made rosier than it should be; the darkest feature of all, perhaps, is the systematic enslavement of masses of the common people to opium. Mrs. Buck has her feelings well under control all through the book, but it would appear that at the time of writing she had bad moments."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p197 Ap 18 '42 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 38:46 Mr '42

"Dragon Seed is surely Mrs. Buck's best book since The Good Earth. It is warm, spacious, quietly heartbreaking, and is told in that simple, slightly archaic language that gives much depth and strangeness to her people and their lives." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 31:x spring '42 40w

BUCK, PHILIP WALLENSTEIN. Politics of mercantilism. 240p $2 Holt

330.151 Mercantile system 42-5679

Presents a brief history of the economic and political ideals of the English mercantilist writers of the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries. In the introduction and a final chapter the similarities between the nationalism of the mercantilist system of society and that of the modern totalitarianism is brought out. Bibliographical notes. Indexes.

"Quarrelling with titles is a chronic vice of reviewers, but I must insist that this book should have been called The Political Theories of Some British Mercantilists. Politics implies a great deal more than political theory; it deals with the behavior of groups of people operating selfishly or altruistically through sanctioned governmental processes. This aspect of the Age of Mercantilism has long needed study, and hence I began my reading of Mr. Buck's book with great expectations. The prolegomenary chapters on the historical background and on economic doctrine are adequate."

. . . But because mercantilist writers did emphasize this absolutistic recipe for solidarity, it does not follow that the politics can be explained by citing passages from mercantilist writers. Mr. Buck should, I think, have chosen a methodology appropriate to his task. If he really meant to study the politics of mercantilism, he should have looked into the history of lobbying; but of this exciting interplay, there is no mention." E. A. J. Johnson

+ — Am Econ R 32:564 S '42 850w

Reviewed by E. L. Bogart

Am Hist R 48:177 O '42 240w

"A bright and scholarly treatment. . . The author has drawn his material from a wealth of primary sources, available in only a few libraries in this country, and has very successfully employed the device of selecting, with discrimination, quotations from the contemporary authors themselves. The text is well documented, and at the end of the book longer notes are found covering an extensive bibliography of English mercantilist writings on particular subjects. No student of political science, and no economist, should deny himself the profit and pleasure of turning to this book. It is a happy contribution coming at an appropriate time." J. W. Bell

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:575 Je '42 380w

"Buck has evidenced fine scholarship and craftsmanship. His style is polished and readable; he has achieved admirable brevity combined with adequacy of treatment; and the documentation is both varied and pertinent." J. M. Pfaffner

+ Ann Am Acad 222:236 Ji '42 450w

"This well-written small volume should be of interest to teachers and students of economics." F. H. Knight

+ J Pol Econ 50:952 D '42 600w

"An informative and stimulating book. But in all probability it would have been much more effective had it been devoted to a single purpose—had it been either a history or a political essay. . . As a fifty-page critique of totalitarianism by comparison with its early English counterpart, the book would have been extremely enlightening and entertaining. As a real history of mercantilist political concepts, it could have been a solid contribution to learning. But Mr. Buck has attempted to write a double-barrelled book. He has hit the target with both barrels; with either one alone he might have hit the bull's eye." R. S. Cline

+ — New Eng Q 15:383 Je '42 500w

BUCK, PHILO MELVIN. Directions in contemporary literature. 353p $3; college ed $2.25 Oxford

804 Literature 42-11380

"This survey of presentday ideas as expressed in the writings of thirteen prominent authors, including Hitler because of Mein Kampf, will be of service as an analysis of the intellectual and moral aspects of what we call our civilization and its problems. Though Professor Buck does not go into the personal lives of the writers he discusses, he presents a great deal of well arranged information about the content of their work and what these prophets, true or false, are driving at, and with it a tolerant and judicious appraisal of the philosophies they propound. In addition to Hitler's gospel of tribalism, the discussion ranges over the wide field covered by the ideas of Santayana, Hauptmann, Gide, Pirandello, Proust, Eugene O'Neill, Tagore, Aldous Huxley, Romaine, Sholokhov, T. S. Eliot, and Thomas Mann." Current Hist

Booklist 38:438 Jl 15 '42

"Mr. Buck is not without skill in distilling from a writer's work its residuum of philosophy or psychology or ethics. His analyses, if not subtle, are close. He succeeds in imposing a pattern on his heterogeneous material. Yet somehow one finds the results of his search singularly unimpressive. . . On the whole Mr. Buck's book has as little depth as a study of faith in our time as it has as a study of literature." H. N. Doughty, Jr.

+ — Books p20 Ap 5 '42 1400w

"We do indeed need a Montaigne today, and failing that, one can heartily recommend Professor Buck's volume for the sane and clear manner in which, in the spirit of the great Frenchman, he has sought the meaning of our present confusion." Alvin Adey

+ Current Hist 2:142 Ap '42 600w

BUCK, PHILO MELVIN—Continued

"It is an important subject; the author has read widely and intelligently and the book is well written. Curiously enough, it is not very stimulating. It is a little too leisurely and not very profound. It keeps on the safe side of its subject, so to speak. In short, it is academic."
 Nation 154:579 My 16 '42 150w
 Social Studies 33:239 My '42 20w

BUCKHAM, JOHN WRIGHT. The inner world; an introduction to the philosophy of Christianity. 292p $3.50 Harper
 201 Christianity—Philosophy 41-25067

"The title of this work would suggest that it is a book about mysticism. It is something more than that. It is a presentation of the Christian world view from the liberal perspective. Its title is justified only because Professor Buckham has always made the study of human personality the starting point of a total conception of life; and he follows this logic in this book by exploring the 'inner world' of selfhood as a basis of his whole philosophy. In this volume the author, who has recently retired from the chair of philosophy of religion in the Pacific School of Religion, garners the rich fruits of a lifetime of scholarship. Every chapter is elaborated with the greatest care. The book might well be compared with Lyman's 'Meaning and Truth of Religion.' The position of the two authors is similar." (Books) Indexes.

"[The book] is a very careful and scholarly presentation. . . If you want to express it in religious terms, Mr. Buckham's book offers as careful and comprehensive a statement of its basic tenets and of the full implications of every one of its dogmas, as it will be possible to have." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Books p17 F 1 '42 700w

"This book is rich with the lore of a providentially long lifetime of creative thought and experience. Without losing the logical rigor of his earlier books, Dr. Buckham casts his net over a wider area of human experience in this one. Excellent illustrative and quoted material is plentifully and aptly used, making the book a meeting place of great minds. Of course Dr. Buckham's own philosophical position of personalism furnishes the basic pattern of this product of his thought." Harold Bosley

+ Christian Century 55:595 My 6 '42 1150w

"This book, written by an outstanding 'older' theologian, is going to appeal to all who enjoy beautiful philosophical writing and thorough and profound thinking." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 156:16 Ja 1 '42 250w

Reviewed by M. C. Otto

Crozer Q 19:147 Ap '42 750w

Reviewed by D. E. Roberts

J Religion 22:317 Jl '42 750w

BUERGER, MARTIN JULIAN. X-ray crystallography. 531p 252il $6.50 Wiley

548.8 Crystallography. X-rays 42-18249

"An introduction to the investigation of crystals by their diffraction of monochromatic X-radiation." (Subtitle) The author is associate professor of mineralogy and crystallography at the Massachusetts institute of technology. Index.

Library J 67:1063 D 1 '42 10w

"This clear presentation of the older and newer methods of attack in crystal structure investigations, together with their theoretical foundations, performs a highly useful service for workers in all branches of the x-ray crystallographic fields." Victor Hicks

+ R of Scientific Instruments 13:456 O '42 700w

BUFF, MRS MARY (MARSH), and BUFF, CONRAD. Dash and Dart; il. by Conrad Buff. 75p $2 Viking

Deer—Legends and stories (W) 42-36377

"Two baby fawns look out from among the fern leaves in these lovely brown pictures. Short rhythmic sentences in large type tell little children how the Mother Doe teaches her fawns to know something of the world around them." Horn Bk

Booklist 39:123 D 1 '42

"A distinguished picture book." M. L. Becker
 + Books p7 N 15 '42 250w

"A picture book of great beauty and quiet charm." F. B. Sloan
 + Christian Science Monitor p10 N 30 '42 160w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
 Horn Bk 18:330 S '42 80w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
 Library J 67:882 O 15 '42 30w

"Altogether satisfying and beautiful picture book which will appeal also to older readers." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 67:1106 D 15 '42 70w

"Mary Buff has told the story of these two young creatures with beautiful simplicity in a rhythmic prose. Little children are charmed by baby animals, and they will follow the fortunes of Dash and Dart with delight and satisfaction." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 D 6 '42 280w

Wis Lib Bul 38:188 D '42

BUGBEE, EMMA. Peggy covers the clipper; a story of a young newspaper woman. 260p $2 Dodd

(W) 41-24964

"As in previous books about Peggy Foster, here is a picture of a large newspaper office, its various departments and activities. Peggy, now married to Peter McFarland, is especially interested in helping Jean, a young American returning from France to find work. Peggy's articles about prominent women who are helping to safeguard American ideals bring her into contact with passengers of the clipper leaving and arriving in New York." Wis Lib Bul

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 N 30 '41 350w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p3 Je 21 '42 60w

Wis Lib Bul 38:18 Ja '42

BULFINCH, THOMAS. Book of myths; selections from [his] Age of fable; with il. by Helen Sewell. 128p $2 Macmillan

290 Mythology 42-25450

Thirty tales from the pages of Bulfinch's Age of Fable, retelling the stories of the ancient gods and goddesses of Greece and Rome. Illustrated with line drawings by Helen Sewell.

Booklist 39:206 Ja 15 '43

"No book will quite supersede Bulfinch's 'Age of Fable'; its introduction of illustrative verse from classic English poets has had and will continue to have a large share in making such poetry part of childhood's content in consciousness. But now and again some editor, some illustrator, must rediscover Bulfinch and give this work a dress for the times. Miss Sewell has made such a dress out of the fabric of Greek decorative art, which can clothe without sense of incongruity, the life of any age of growth. Children can grow on this 'Book of Myths.'" M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 22 '42 430w

Horn Bk 19:33 Ja '43 60w

"With the illustrations, this is a truly distinguished book. Helen Sewell's clear-cut, sculptural lines achieve a modern and a classical effect at the same time, in perfect keeping with the text; they, too, are simple, restrained, and dignified." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 68:37 Ja 1 '43 70w

New Yorker 18:116 D 12 '42 10w

BULOSAN, CARLOS, ed. Chorus for America; six Philippine poets; foreword by Dion O'Donnol. 39p $1.50 Wagon & star

811.08 Philippine poetry (English) 42-22532

Contents: Poems from Dovegion, by J. G. Villa; Like the Molave, by R. Zulueta Da

Costa; Testament in mid-passage, by R. T. Feria; Memorial to America, by C. B. Rigor; The metaphysical hour, by Cecilio Baroga, pseud; Chorus for America, by Carlos Bulosan.

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitrer

Books p23 O 18 '42 500w

Reviewed by Alfred Kreymborg

Sat R of Lit 25:18 O 10 '42 120w

BULOSAN, CARLOS. Letter from America. 68p $2 Press of James A. Decker

811

42-23253

"Carlos Bulosan has just published his first book. He was apparently living in this country at the time of the Japanese attack on Manila, and his opening 'Letter in Exile' and 'Who Saw the Terror' have, in view of that scourge, a particular poignancy. Bulosan's poems, however, are largely concerned not with the attack of an enemy from without, but with the depredations of the enemy within, as he has seen it equally in his own land and in the United States. He protests the crime of poverty, the terror of oppression." Books

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitrer

Books p23 O 18 '42 180w

"His sincerity overcomes the occasional impression of the reader that the poet is enamored of words, and leaves us with the sense that something serious and important has been said, and said well." E. J. Cronin

+ Poetry 61:518 D '42 270w

Reviewed by Alfred Kreymborg

Sat R of Lit 25:19 O 10 '42 160w

BUNCE, WILLIAM HARVEY. Chula, son of the mound builders; il. by Isaac Brewster Hazelton. 215p $2 Dutton

42-14050

"Along the Tennessee River, not far from Chattanooga, is a series of mounds that has attracted the attention of government archeologists for a long time. Excavations have yielded fascinating and conclusive proof of the Indian life existing there long before the coming of the white man. It is against this impressive background of vast mounds that the author has written his story of the youth, Chula, who became Flying Eagle, the man. . . He and a Cherokee youth named Swimmer, are captured by Owl's Head. Ayunli, a captive Cherokee girl, helps them escape, and the three young people make their way safely into Cherokee country." Publisher's note

"Pre-history in America has seldom been given so good a send-off in stories for boys." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Je 21 '42 550w

"Along with much detailed information about early Indian culture runs a lively story of adventure and daring which boys will enjoy. The careful line drawings are based on the findings of archaeologists." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:335 S '42 110w

"All information on early Indian life included in story has been authenticated. (Mr. Bunce was supervising craftsman and artist on TVA-WPA archaeological survey of Chickamauga Basin.) Should appeal to boys eleven to fourteen. . . Suitable for all libraries." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 67:631 JI '42 90w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 10w

Wis Lib Bul 38:142 O '42

BUNN, MRS HARRIET F. Johann Sebastian Bach; il. by Raffaello Busoni. 56p $1 Random house

B or 92 Bach, Johann Sebastian—Juvenile literature (W) 42-21832

Short biography of Johann Sebastian Bach, which stresses his personality rather than his music. Glossary. Grades five to eight.

Booklist 39:52 O 15 '42

"The book's appearance is handsome, with pictures in color, choosing moments that appeal to young readers—the Bachs in full force at Christmas, Maria Barbara singing at the organ beside her lover, the periwigged king bowing Bach to the clavichord. J. S. Bach cannot be made a romantic figure, but he should not be thought stodgy and this shows his livelier side with sympathy." M. L. Becker

+ Books p20 N 15 '42 260w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:432 N '42 70w

"It is doubtful whether the many libraries that have the Wheeler and Goss biographies, as well as collective biographies in which Bach is included, will feel that they need this; but it is an excellent piece of work for readers just too old or too young for the others. Drawings by Raffaello Busoni in color and black and white have much charm." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 67:910 O 15 '42 80w

Wis Lib Bul 38:189 D '42

BUNTING, DAVID EDISON. Liberty and learning; the activities of the Am. civil liberties union in behalf of freedom of education; with an introd. by George S. Counts. 147p $2.50; pa $2 Am. council on public affairs

371.1 American civil liberties union. Teaching, Freedom of. Liberty of speech

42-25494

"The story shows how the Union has pioneered, along with the American Association of University Professors and the American Federation of Teachers, in defending the freedom of teachers and teaching, particularly since World War I, which brought forth new problems in the sphere of the Bill of Rights. . . The study is a sort of short handbook of information on cases, participants, issues, books, and articles in this important field." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by H. C. Nixon

Am Pol Sci R 36:1195 D '42 230w

School & Society 56:476 N 14 '42 20w

Social Studies 34:48 Ja '43 30w

BURBANK, NELSON L., comp. House construction details. 2d ed rev 313p il $3 Simmons-Boardman

692.2 Building

42-3677

New edition of a manual first published in 1939 (Book Review Digest 1939). "Publishers state that the chapters on house wiring, painting, building materials, and prefabrication are rewritten and reillustrated." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 38:237 Mr 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:5 Ja '42

Pratt p4 O '42

BURBANK, NELSON L., and MITCHELL, EDITH MARION, comps. Shopcrafter's handbook. 141p il $2 Simmons-Boardman

684 Handicraft

42-15465

One hundred and fifty popular projects suitable for students, amateur craftsmen, or even experienced shop workers. They include such things as toys, birdhouses, desks, chairs, tables, cupboards, etc. Includes working drawings, photographs, and succinct directions for procedure. Contents: Furniture for the home; Garden furniture; Children's furniture; Toys; Novelties.

Booklist 38:421 JI 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:41 JI '42

BURCH, GLADYS. Modern composers for boys and girls. 207p il $2 Barnes, A.S.

927.8 Musicians—Juvenile literature

(W) 42-841

Short biographical sketches of twenty modern composers, written for boys and girls. Those included are: Mussorgsky, Dvořák, Rimsky-Korsakov, Humperdinck, Elgar, Delius,

BURCH, GLADYS—Continued
Strauss, Sibelius, Scriabin, Schoenberg, Ravel, Carpenter, Falla, Respighi, Vaughan Williams, Bartók, Stravinsky, Griffes, Prokofiev, Gershwin. Index.

Booklist 38:194 F 1 '42
Christian Century 59:154 F 4 '42 20w

BURCH, GLADYS. Richard Wagner, who followed a star; il. by Robert Ball. 573p $2.75 Holt

B or 92 Wagner, Richard—Juvenile literature (W) 41-19297

Biography of Richard Wagner, written for readers of the teen age. The story of each of his operas is graphically told, also. A chronological chart shows historical world happenings in the years 1813 thru 1883. Bibliography. Indexes.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p20 N 2 '41 200w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p16 D 11 '41 20w

"To bring together the important facts of Wagner's crowded life, together with the detailed story of each of his great operas, is in itself a big undertaking. Gladys Burch has not only done this in a lively, vivid fashion, but she has included, too, a valuable chronology giving parallel events in the musical world and in the world at large." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:42 Ja '42 90w

"This biography of a great musician and an extraordinary man is written with sympathy and sincere admiration. It is based on a thorough study of the circumstances of Wagner's life, and it is written with careful reference to the times in which he lived."

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 25 '42 280w

BURDETTE, FRANKLIN L., ed. Education for citizen responsibilities. 126p $1.50 Princeton univ. press

323.6 Citizenship. Social sciences 42-17278

"The importance and value of the study of anthropology, economics, geography, history, philosophy, political science, psychology and sociology, in education for citizenship, set forth in chapters by leading authorities in the various fields. The essays, of timely interest to educators, are an outgrowth of a national conference on Education for Citizen Responsibilities arranged by the National Council for the Social Studies and the National Foundation for Education in American Citizenship. Index." Bookmark

"The book is recommended to all who are interested in making American citizenship more intelligent and responsible, and is especially recommended to social scientists, to school administrators, and to members of curriculum committees." B. A. Arneson

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:1193 D '42 500w

Reviewed by J. A. Kinneman
Am Soc R 7:879 D '42 320w
Bookmark 3:4 My '42

School & Society 55:651 Je 6 '42 50w

BUREAU OF NATIONAL AFFAIRS, WASHINGTON, D.C. Collective bargaining contracts; techniques of negotiation and administration with topical classification of clauses. 734p. $7.50 The bureau, 2201 M st, N.W., Washington, D.C.

331.11 Labor contract. Employees' representation in management. Labor and laboring classes—U.S. Trade unions—U.S. 42-2814

"The main purpose of this book appears in its second part, which consists of nearly two thousand clauses drawn from one hundred and thirty-eight labor contracts in force in 1941. The source is mentioned in each instance and the clauses are classified under fifty-four apt headings, varying in importance from such items as wages, hours, seniority, arbitration and closed shop to such relatively rare subjects as bonding, age limitations, government regulations and handicapped workers. . . The first part of the book, 'Techniques in Collective Bargaining,' consists of essays written by Alexander R. Heron, Solomon Barkin, Harold J. Ruttenberg, Sumner H. Slichter and John R. Steelman. . . Part three, consisting of thirteen well chosen labor contracts printed in their entirety, rounds out [the] book." Columbia Law R

Reviewed by A. S. Meyer

Columbia Law R 42:516 Mr '42 750w

"This book, in the opinion of the reviewer, is a unique and most valuable addition to the literature on labor relations and collective bargaining and can be of practical value to anyone engaged or interested in collective bargaining. It may prevent some costly mistakes, and it may help to increase the number—now very inadequate—of competent negotiators."

R. A. Lind

+ Management R 31:39 Ja '42 600w

BURGAN, JOHN. Even my own brother. 304p $2.50 Bobbs

42-21684

Portrait of a small town American fascist on the make and what happened to him.

Reviewed by R. M. Gay

Atlantic 170:152 N '42 160w

"It is a fast-paced and well written tale of its order of rapid journalistic prose. It catches the interest from the start; though, like most of its kind, it tends to lose its spring as the story unwinds." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p10 S 27 '42 750w

"A fine first novel."

+ New Repub 107:390 S 28 '42 30w

"A swiftly paced narrative, written in the rapid, unadorned prose that seems to be the hallmark of the young modern writer." Thomas Lask

N Y Times p6 S 20 '42 750w

BURGESS, ERNEST WATSON, and others. Environment and education; a symposium held in connection with the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the Univ. of Chicago. 66p pa $1 Univ. of Chicago. Dept. of educ.

370.193 Educational sociology. Man—Influence of environment 42-16434

"This collection of four papers deals with a topic broad enough for anything. Professor Burgess leads off with a discussion of the educative effects of the urban environment, maintaining that modern cities have created a new type of human being, sophisticated and precocious, and so individuated as to demand a deliberate, guided program of socialization if the society is to hang together. Such socialization will have to teach the new human being how to participate in group and community. . . Professor Warner analyzes the educative effects of class status. . . Dr. Alexander goes after the scalp of the Neo-Freudians, accusing them of 'ethnological bias.' . . Dr. Mead, whose original talk consisted mostly of movies, has altered her paper in the light of Dr. Alexander's remarks. She easily disposes of his objection to a cultural approach because people in a given society are not all similar, and shows that the specific family situations of which he speaks are not merely case histories but socio-cultural situations related to the rest of the society." Am Anthropol

Reviewed by Kingsley Davis

Am Anthropol 44:712 O '42 550w

Reviewed by R. E. L. Faris

Am J Soc 48:439 N '42 390w

Reviewed by J. E. Hulett, Jr.

Am Soc R 7:881 D '42 280w

BURGESS, GELETT. Ladies in boxes. 312p $2 Alliance bk.

42-7950

Detective story.

"The plot of 'Ladies in Boxes' will give you plenty of mental practice if a plot ever did. If you concentrate on the three ladies, instead of wondering too much about the dolls, you may get farther with the main riddle and the various minor problems appertaining thereunto. Is there only one fiend, or more? Where is the priceless Borgia ruby? And what about those marijuana butts? No, this is not a humorous mystery. It's for serious, even advanced, thinkers in the baffling art." Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 Ap 26 '42 400w

"It is quite easy to believe that all the characters in this story are imaginary. Not one of them suggests anything more lifelike than a puppet." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p17 My 3 '42 240w

BURGHARDT, HENRY D. Machine tool operation; pt. 1, The lathe; bench work and work at the forge. [3d ed] 420p il $2.25 McGraw 621.75 Machine shop practice. Lathes

(41-14263)

"The previous edition was published in 1936 and was intended for the young man hoping to become a machinist. Many pages of text and illustrations on hand-forging in the machine shop have been added in this new edition." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 38:15 S '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:56 O '41

BURKE, JAMES COBB. My father in China. 431p $3 Farrar

B or 92 Burke, William B. Missions—China (W) 42-21862

The Reverend William Burke is a Southern Methodist missionary who has served more than half a century in China. While in college he numbered among his friends a young Chinese student known as Charlie Soon and during the years since then he has continued to be an intimate friend of the now-famous Soong family, so that many pages of this book are devoted to them.

"Fiction about China and the true tales of correspondents just returned from the Orient have been familiar best-sellers in the past five years. And yet to comprehend them, and catch their full value, we American readers should perhaps add to their testimony this son's biography of Old Burke of Sung-kiang." Langdon Warner

+ Atlantic 170:144 N '42 600w

Booklist 39:69 N 1 '42

"The story is told by William Burke's youngest son, who has a profound respect for his father's deep piety and zeal in the vineyard, but is far more interested in his father as a fine stalwart fellow, who had been a very popular and trusted leader in any community and in any profession, and who seems to have seen the funny side of everything that happened to him. If all of it were as good as most of it is, it would be one of the best books that has ever been written about China." Rodney Gilbert

+ Books p5 S 27, '42 1750w

Reviewed by R. W. Gardner
Commonweal 37:76 N 6 '42 550w

"William Burke, one would say, belongs with the younger American heroes who are fighting evil in a different way. If there is a Distinguished Service Cross for missionaries he ought to get it. For those of any faith his story is inspiring. If there is a bridge between China and America such men have helped make it." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p8 O 4 '42 1250w

"A fine story, told with laconic humor and warmth, though perhaps a little idealized."

+ New Yorker 18:67 O 3 '42 50w

BURKE, NOEL, pseud. Shivering bough. 255p $2 Dutton

(W) 42-36296

Detective story.

Booklist 39:34 O 1 '42

"Wordage leaves something to be desired. Characters stare at each other or into space in the approved pulpy manner, and then again the sky will be 'luminous with the promise of dawn' and all like that. This could be a tongue-in-cheek item, even a parody on mystery and its innocent inventions. Or maybe we laughed in the wrong places. Noel Burke is 'a pseudonym for an established favorite,' in what line of work is not stated." Will Cuppy

Books p23 S 20 '42 200w

"Here is a good story, whose author is said to have written other popular stories under another name. The end is surprising without being illogical, and the style is in keeping with the plot's grim suspense." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p8 S 20 '42 240w

"Nice sleuthing by the hitchhiker, and a trick ending that is new."

+ New Yorker 18:72 S 19 '42 50w

BURKE, RICHARD. Chinese Red. 248p $2 Putnam

42-18288

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 Ag 30 '42 180w

"There is never a dull moment in a Quinny Hite story." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p8 S 6 '42 160w

"Glamorous cast of characters, including fetching Chinese girl, shrewd sleuthing and incessant action—and with flavoring of breezy humor. Fast and colorful."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 S 5 '42 40w

BURKE, RICHARD. Here lies the body. 280p $2 Putnam

41-26738

Detective story.

"Quinny Hite is the fellow who did the thinking in 'The Dead Take No Bows' a season or so ago. He bets on the horses, likes bologna and beer, uses slugs in the subway and indulges in a form of comedy that you may consider corny or screaming, according to your lights. Some readers, undoubtedly, will care for him more than others will. For instance, we found our attention straying, yet we are assured by one of our most charming and authoritative advisers that Quinny is a whacking good character, even though he is a heel of the first water, that he is really a big-hearted guy and that his adventures are highly enjoyable. It just goes to show." Will Cuppy

Books p11 Ja 4 '42 240w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 106:470 Ap 6 '42 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p12 Ja 4 '42 240w

"Quinny Hites's genuine detecting fortunately over-balances rather spurious wise-cracking in tale that has plenty of pulsating passages. Average."

Sat R of Lit 25:16 Ja 3 '42 40w

"You'll like this fast, humorous yarn, and most of all you'll like Quinny."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42 130w

BURMAN, BEN LUCIEN. Miracle on the Congo; report from the Free French front. 153p maps $1.75 Day

940.5344 France—Free France movement. World war, 1939—Africa (W) 42-17503

The author, an American novelist, went to Africa in 1941 to find out what he could about the Free French movement. His book, chiefly concerned with politics, tells also of life in Brazzaville, and of the trip across Africa to Egypt and Suez. Many pages are devoted to Britain whom the author regards as a traitor to France.

BURMAN, B. L.—Continued

Booklist 39:6 S '42

"I can recognize good war correspondence when I see it, having tried my hand at war reporting over some of the route which Mr. Burman followed on his way from the West African coast to Syria and back. My hat is off to him and I'd like some day to meet him. . . . Aside from a fascinating travelogue, Mr. Burman's book is a valuable contribution to American knowledge of the war against Hitlerism." Allan Raymond

+ Books p3 J1 26 '42 850w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 3 '42 550w

Reviewed by E. M. Olcott

Library J 67:627 J1 '42 70w

"There are some faults of style and a few dubious opinions. Too many pages, packed with toms-toms, crocodiles, and tropical mystery, read like a Grade B scenario. Trustworthy observers returning from France do not confirm the assertion, unfortunately, that De Gaulle has 80 to 95 per cent of the French people behind him. Nor is every man in the Free French movement as pure and white a knight as we are asked to believe. . . . But these are errors of enthusiasm. The book, in the main, is good and true." Hal Lehrman

+ Nation 155:37 J1 11 '42 550w

Reviewed by Varian Fry

New Repub 107:123 J1 27 '42 1150w

"This little book of Ben Lucien Burman belongs to the new sort of literature which has come out of the reporting of the war. Through the sincerity of the reporting of actual events these books become in fact political documents and give, perhaps, more cause for reflection than some more profound political studies. In any case, Mr. Burman through this book has rendered service to the cause of 'France Eternelle,' and consequently to the common cause of the United Nations." Milos Safranek

+ N Y Times p1 J1 12 '42 850w

"Despite some padding and romanticism, it is a stirring job of sympathetic reporting. The main lesson Mr. Burman drives home is that Petain was a traitor before the war began and is one now."

+ New Yorker 18:56 J1 11 '42 50w

Pratt p23 D '42

Reviewed by Linton Wells

Sat R of Lit 25:13 J1 18 '42 500w

BURNETT, EDMUND CODY. The Continental congress. 75p $6 Macmillan

973.312 U.S. Continental congress. U.S.—
Politics and government—Revolution 41-20697

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"For the elaboration of one topic or another, for some different point of view which involves the Continental Congress, the student of the American Revolution may go to special works such as those of Sanders, Knollenberg, Van Doren, Bemis, Meng, and Jensen. But as to the Congress, these and others that may be written will be held up, for many years, against Dr. Burnett's work, as against a standard weight or measure. It will be a very long time before a better history of the Continental Congress is written." S. L. Sioussat

+ Am Hist R 48:120 O '42 900w

"As the only complete story of the Congress, it is recommended reading for the inquisitive general reader as well as for the specialist in American history or government." V. M. Barnett, Jr.

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:147 F '42 750w

"The great contribution of this book is that it sets forth in accurate detail situations inadequately studied by, and even unknown to, writers on the period. Only the close student of the Journals and the Letters will realize that embedded in these hundreds of smooth-flowing pages are literally dozens of scholarly monographs here printed for the first time. While not every student of the period will agree with all of Dr. Burnett's interpretations, all of them will agree that their debt to him for this book, as for his edition of the Letters, is a very great one indeed." Merrill Jensen

+ Ann Am Acad 220:240 Mr '42 600w

Booklist 38:175 Ja 15 '42

"This is a heartening book. Here we see the founding fathers, with all their faults as well as virtues laid bare, facing and meeting every conceivable problem and, at length, emerging victorious under the Constitution. . . . Mr. Burnett has been remarkably successful in reducing a mountain of miscellaneous material to a readable whole. If a definite history of the Continental Congress is possible, he has written it. This book should lighten the burden of the Pulitzer Prize committee." N. G. Goodman

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 8 '42 1300w

Wis Lib Bul 38:13 Ja '42

BURNETT, WHIT, ed. This is my best. 1180p $3.50 Dial press

810.8 American literature—Collections (W) 42-36346

Self-selected pieces of prose and verse by American writers, with the author's own reasons for his or her selections. Index by authors and by titles.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (12)
N Y Times (5) RB (1)

Booklist 39:98 N 15 '42

"One of the diverting things about this book is rereading what you've read before, many years ago, from a new angle of vision. Sometimes it merely serves to confirm your worst suspicions. At others, as, for example, W. A. White's editorial on the death of his daughter Mary, the fragrance with which a piece is surrounded in a reader's memory still clings to the original. . . . All in all, though I should tremble for the reputation of some of our best authors if these selections were their sole passports to immortality, this book is as interesting for what it omits as for what it includes. Among anthologies, it is in a class by itself." Milton Hindus

Books p20 N 1 '42 750w

"This is a book with which it is impossible to find much fault, an astounding circumstance in the case of an anthology. In the first place these authors are the people's choice as recorded by a poll of readers; in the second place, what meets the eye is the author's favorite profile; in the third place, isn't it fun to catch your favorite stealing a look in the mirror?" D. H.

+ Boston Globe p21 O 14 '42 350w

"One will dip here and there in this vast tome and read not with an agitated soul further whipped by what one reads but solely for the pleasure of clever craftsmanship (and there is a lot of it) and a pregnant series of pictures of the American creative mind in full action. But do not believe that Mr. Whit Burnett has corralled the ninety-three greatest living authors in America and built a stockade about them. This country is bigger than that." Herbert Gorman

N Y Times p4 N 22 '42 1050w

"A catholic collection which makes variously interesting reading. . . . Some of the selections will confirm most laymen's suspicion that an author cannot be trusted to pick his best work."

New Yorker 18:83 O 31 '42 80w

"Counting noses is not necessarily a means of determining literary worth, but the method pragmatically results in one of the most representative anthologies of the season. . . . Perhaps the weakness of the book is a certain flaccidity in front of a poll of 'favorites,' but on the other hand I don't recall any other recent anthology that gives so inclusive a cross-section of the rich, varied, and contradictory writing of the last twenty or thirty years." H. M. Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 N 7 '42 430w

Spring'd Republican p7e N 15 '42 500w

BURNETT, WILLIAM RILEY. Quick brown fox. 267p il $2.50 Knopf

42-1762

Three adventurers—two Americans, and a South Sea islander—came to a small mid-western city, claiming to be heroes from Dun-kirk. The credulous inhabitants took them in and made them very welcome. By the time the leader of the gang had grabbed a good deal of power and influence, people began to realize that they were super crooks. In the end justice asserted itself.

"As a spinner of yarns, W. R. Burnett still rates double A. The mogul of gangster era fiction has turned to a new subject—politics. . . Oh, for the good old days of the beer barons! We begin to feel almost nostalgic for the ordinary, honest-to-goodness gangster. Little Caesar, we thought you were bad till we met up with your big brother." Milton Hindus

Books p5 F 1 '42 700w

"The unattractive characters are strangely real. Men would like this, if budget permits." L. M. Kinloch

Library J 67:40 Ja 1 '42 80w

"W. R. Burnett is always readable, always fast-paced and skillful. But he is more than that. He handles the language with grace and accuracy; and he has the quality of the serious novelist, both in character presentation and in theme. . . After you have finished the story, look it over for plan, balance, skill in contrivance and play of ideas. It's even better than you thought." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p6 F 8 '42 800w

"Mr Burnett has the faculty of sketching a complete character by emphasizing a single salient characteristic. His skill in this case has led him into sketchiness, and it is to be feared that his desire was rather to scale Beverly Hills than Parnassus, for his story is hardly more than a routine account of the wolf in sheep's clothing whose methods (the familiar ones of lying, unscrupulousness and sabotage) result in his downfall." Baron Ireland

— Springf'd Republican p7e F 8 '42 290w

BURNS, MRS EVELINE MABEL (RICHARDSON). British unemployment programs, 1920-1938; a report prepared for the Committee on social security. 385p $2.75 Social science research council

331.2544 Insurance, Unemployment, Unemployment—Great Britain 41-24067

"[This] is essentially an interpretation and appraisal of the various policies and programs adopted in Great Britain for coping with the vast unemployment problem of the last two decades." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by Elinor Pancoast

Am Econ R 32:193 Mr '42 750w

"The author is peculiarly well-fitted for this task. A former official of the British Ministry of Labor, Mrs. Burns has long been an outstanding authority on social security in this country. She approaches her subject with an understanding no one but a native Britisher could have, but from the perspective of an able scholar, whose chief interest, beyond discovering and telling the truth, lies in the improvement of social security in the United States. The study is of greatest value in connection with the development of governmental policies in relation to unemployment, both in Britain and in the United States." E. E. Witte

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1205 D '41 240w

"The reviewer has nothing but praise for the research effort of the work. In limiting this study to unemployment insurance, the author has been able to illuminate the basic factors of such insurance, and it should be a help in developing any security program. It is a minor objection, but it does seem too bad that the book could not have been written with greater literary care." T. R. Fisher

+ Ann Am Acad 219:195 Ja '42 600w

"This book is indispensable to the student of current social insurance problems, first, because it presents a clear account of British experience with unemployment policies during the inter-war period 1920-38; second, because developments of policy and practice are interpreted in the setting of economic exigencies and political pressures which dominated the period; and third, because of the author's insight into basic problems of unemployment insurance." H. F. Hohman

+ J Pol Econ 50:307 Ap '42 500w

New Statesman & Nation 23:114 F 14 '42 220w

BUROS, OSCAR KRISEN, ed. Second year-book of research and statistical methodology; books and reviews. 333p $5 Gryphon press, 32 Lincoln av, Highland Park, N.J.

016.3 Research—Bibliography. Statistics—Bibliography

"This book is a summary of reviews of books on scientific method. It covers the field of statistics especially thoroughly, but deals also with books on general scientific method, social relations of science, and history of science. It contains 1,652 review excerpts from 283 journals concerning 346 books. It is a sequel to Research and Statistical Methodology Books and Reviews of 1933-1938 [Book Review Digest 1939] Future editions of the Yearbook are promised at intervals of two years." Library Q

Reviewed by H. F. Gosnell

Am Pol Sci R 36:181 F '42 250w

"In spite of some shortcomings, the present volume will be of interest to all those desiring critical information about the recent developments in research and statistical methodology." Abraham Wald

+ Ann Am Acad 220:276 Mr '42 270w

"The book has one fault when considered as a source of information for people who want to decide what books to buy. Many of the reviews quoted fail to describe the contents and purposes of the books adequately. They appear to assume that the reader is already familiar with the book being reviewed or that its title is self-explanatory. Since these conditions are not usually met, it might be well in future editions of the Yearbook either to commence with a brief description of each book which is reviewed or to put first in order the review which does this work best." R. J. Havighurst

+ Library Q 12:322 Ap '42 500w

"The excerpts presented in this Yearbook are longer and more informative than those in the first volume. The material covered has been extended, especially in mathematical economics, population studies and general histories of science. The appearance of the volume has been improved in many ways. . . Within the field with which the reviewer is most familiar, the excerpts from reviews have been made judiciously, and adequately represent the point of view and critical contributions of the reviewers, in addition to giving indirectly a good idea of the works noticed. Since review notices are particularly liable to be scattered and inaccessible, it is a very great convenience to have them collected, reproduced, and well arranged." R. A. F.

+ Nature 149:9 Ja 3 '42 240w

"Technically and fundamentally the Second Yearbook is a considerable improvement over the first, and if Mr. Buros is able to follow his plans for expansion into foreign language books and noncritical or possibly original criticisms of periodical literature, those active in research, teaching, and business and industry will have available to them extensive information concerning pertinent current literature." M. S. Nagelberg

+ Pol Sci Q 57:318 Je '42 330w

"In addition to the expanded content, the format of the Yearbook has been much improved in readability and attractiveness. Valuable, too, are the numerous indexes. However, the surname of the author in parenthesis following the title of each book in the Index of Titles, and a designation or separation of authors and reviewers in the Index of Names would add to the usefulness. With its increasing value to a wider group of teachers and students, it is to be hoped that Dr. Buros will receive the financial support needed to continue and develop a service so ably begun." Katherine Jocher

BUROS, O. K.—Continued
+ Social Forces 20:519 My '42 270w

BURR, NELSON ROLLIN. Education in New Jersey, 1630-1871. (Princeton hist. of N.J.) 368p il $3.75 Princeton univ. press

370.9749 Education—New Jersey 42-19863

"What the author tells us he believes to be essential to an understanding of the introduction and development of mass-education and democracy in the United States. Especially valuable is the author's explanation of the three important factors which impeded the development of an efficient school system in the colonial period—the frontier, racial differences, and religious differences." School & Society

Christian Century 59:960 Ag 5 '42 90w

School & Society 56:87 Jl 25 '42 80w

BURROWS, RAYMOND MURDOCK, and REDMOND, MRS BESSIE CARROLL, comps. Symphony themes. 295p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

785.11 Symphony (W)

The major themes of 100 of the world's greatest symphonies, with a list of recommended recordings, a chart of length of performance, lists of instruments, bibliography, index by keys and by titles of symphonies.

Reviewed by C. W. Durgin

Boston Globe p19 My 13 '42 100w

"It would seem that in addition to the good service which the book renders, a greater, and even a more utilitarian, one might have been performed if the compilers had ventured to join the illustrious company of disagreeing analysts, had consistently selected and presented their themes in terms of the significant relations which analysis would have revealed, and had shared the result with the listener." G. S. Dickinson

+ Sat R of Lit 26:24 Ja 30 '43 850w

"An original and valuable contribution to musical literature. . . This book can be of immeasurable value to a concert-goer who wants to get the most enjoyment from what he hears." Milton Berliner

+ Springf'd Republican p6e D 13 '42 220w

BURT, ALFRED LE ROY. Short history of Canada for Americans. 279p il maps $3; text ed $2.50 Univ. of Minn.

971 Canada—History (W) 42-37015

Popularly written history of Canada designed particularly to enlighten United States citizens about their northern neighbor. The author is a Canadian who has lived and taught in the United States since 1930. Index.

Reviewed by F. R. Fussell

Am Pol Sci R 36:994 O '42 260w

"From the standpoint of what the book was intended to do, it is a real success. It is sound and thought-provoking; it gives the essentials of Canadian history in palatable doses; and it reveals a keen appreciation of the attitudes of Americans and Canadians toward each other. Many excellent illustrations, maps, and cartoons have been added as well as a short selected list of readings for those who may be stimulated to pursue the quest of knowledge of Canadian affairs somewhat farther." Carl Wittke

+ Ann Am Acad 222:217 Jl '42 380w

Booklist 38:366 Je 1 '42

"Altogether, this is as good an introduction as any general reader could desire. The expert might quarrel with Mr. Burt over some details; but the book is excellent in its perspective and its sustained interest." Allan Nevins

+ Books p40 N 15 '42 750w

"The book may well be more useful for Canadians than for Americans; it incorporates many of the results of modern scholarship and presents them in acceptable style; it is short, clear, and unpedantic; it has innumerable pictures of greater or lesser relevance, and reproduces some interesting cartoons: these are qualities that should commend it to a Canadian audience. Canadian readers with specialized knowledge may well find some of the explanations offered rather too simple to be satisfying." A. R. M. Lower

+ Canadian Hist R 23:327 S '42 950w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 11 '42 600w

Reviewed by J. S. Gurley

Current Hist 3:357 D '42 120w

"Highly recommended." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 67:367 Ap 15 '42 50w

"Why do historians write histories—to trace the causes of contemporary upheavals back to their sources in previous generations, or merely to tell the story of the past? If the first answer is correct, then Dr. A. L. Burt's latest book on Canada, 'A Short History of Canada for Americans,' is a notable failure, but if the second answer is correct it is a notable success. . . All of it will be interesting. . . Dr. Burt's [book has] rather glaring omissions. The first is the great Winnipeg general strike of 1919. This strike was broken, but during its six weeks it was one of the solidest and wildest ever staged. . . Until the strike unionism was on the march. After the strike it went into a decline from which it is only now emerging. . . There is no mention anywhere in this book of these important facts. Neither is there any mention of the American industrialization of Canada. Gustavus Myers's monumental study, 'History of Canadian Wealth,' is missing from the bibliography. We recommend it to Dr. Burt and to all other writers of books on Canada." J. H. Gray

Nation 154:688 Je 13 '42 480w

"Anyone with even moderate knowledge of the complexity of Canadian history will recognize that the book is a remarkable achievement in its close-knit, yet vivid, texture of salient circumstances, persons, incidents and developments. The narrative is nimble; the proportions are systematic (except for a slight bulge dealing with the years 1760-1820 into which the author has made most of his own researches); and the degree of sustained accuracy is very high." J. B. Brebner

+ Pol Sci Q 57:476 S '42 460w

School & Society 55:540 My 9 '42 20w

"Professor Burt's History is not only informative but downright good reading. It is written in a conversational, but none the less scholarly, style." Avaline Folsom

+ Social Educ 7:37 Ja '43 450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:160 N '42

BURT, MAXWELL STRUTHERS. Along these streets. 608p $2.75 Scribner

(W) 42-568

"A novel of Philadelphia today. The hero is a scientist, very learned about monkeys; a rich uncle leaves him a fortune on condition that he live for nine months of every year in the family mansion on Cassianut Street. He accepts the offer and finds Philadelphia a stranger place in many ways than the monkey-filled jungles he is accustomed to." New Yorker

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (9) PW (1)

Booklist 38:189 F 1 '42

"Leisured without being tedious, this fat, slow-moving novel is so amiably philosophical in its overtones, so optimistic about America and Americans in general if pessimistic about a pocketful of influential Philadelphians, that one turns from it with a renewed conviction that, in the words of Felix, we may some day be able to take an oath amongst ourselves of mutual assistance, if for no other reason than our common pity that we are all now alive and will so soon be dead." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p2 Ja 18 '42 800w

"Although the author is deeply and at times brilliantly sensitive and incisive, he frequently lapses into the banal and coarse and diffuse. The central thought, significant and universal as it is, trails off into vagueness and sentimentality. Even the writing, which is for the most part flexible and rich, is broken by barren stretches that seem sterile and out of key. But it is precisely for this admixture of success and failure that 'Along These Streets' should be read. For the author's shortcomings are the shortcomings of his characters reproduced on another level, as the work in its entirety is a revealing documentation of our times." Margaret Stern

+ Commonweal 35:440 F 20 '42 400w

"It is a long book and would have been the better for some cutting, but it makes good reading. Recommended." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 67:86 Ja 15 '42 60w

New Repub 106:278 F 23 '42 40w

"'Along These Streets' is a large novel, and a good one. It is entertaining and earnest; ironic, outspoken, and at one point magnificent; and, yes, it is an interesting story. . . Its writing is brilliantly epigrammatic, with the stimulating quality which is so acutely remembered from the second-period Wells." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 18 '42 1150w

"Pleasantly shrewd, ironic, and lively, though slightly talky."

+ New Yorker 17:66 Ja 24 '42 70w

"Mr. Burt has . . . written a slow-paced, readable, sagacious book which amidst its ups and downs (and it is an uneven performance) is filled with an honorable and passionate desire to keep the American way of life for Americans. But his incessant desire to reflect, to wisecrack, to meditate, in his own person or in the person of Felix, about sex and the family, canalizes a large part of his pages in a direction away from Philadelphia and waters down his presentation of the Philadelphian (and the American) problem." H. M. Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ja 24 '42 800w

"A signally thoughtful and provocative novel. . . Perhaps the judges thought 'Along These Streets' too localized in scene. Philadelphia is, of course, only a symbol of the entrenched and moribund American past. It is only a slightly exaggerated picture of conventional and reactionary life, if anything as static can be called life. There are 'Philadelphians' in Springfield and Boston and New York and Benton Four Corners. They won't like this book or its author. But the Felix Macalisters who, thank heaven, are more and more the active influences in American life, will be grateful for this intelligent and sympathetic study of their problems and of the dreams they hold so steadfastly for a new and better America."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 18 '42 900w

"Author Burt is an excellent reporter, and he is at his best in describing the Philadelphia phenomenon—the mingled ugliness and beauty of the city, its noble traditions and wasted opportunities and decay, its kindly and brainless aristocrats, the weird customs and stately orgies of its men's clubs, the gastronomic peaks of its cuisine."

+ Time 39:80 Ja 19 '42 290w

Wis Lib Bul 38:31 F '42

BURT, MAXWELL STRUTHERS. War songs; decorations by John C. Wonsetler. 46p $1.25 Scribner

811 World war, 1939—Poetry 42-25571

Collection of poems on a world at war, by an American of spirit.

"The best collection of war poems this reviewer has read." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 D 19 '42 240w

"This collection is physically slender, but its spirit is strong, hard-fisted and ardent."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 20 '42 390w

BURTON, ELI FRANKLIN, and KOHL, WALTER H. Electron microscope; drawings by Dorothy Stone. 233p il $3.85 Reinhold

578.1 Electron microscope (W) 42-12727

"A clear description of the basic principles, and of the fields in industry and the biological sciences which have been opened up by the use of this super-microscope." Cleveland Open Shelf

Booklist 39:4 S '42

Reviewed by James Stokley

Books p10 D 27 '42 100w

"The authors can be complimented for their book, which in simple language gives account of so intricate an instrument. Without doubt it will fill a gap in many libraries and it will encourage use and application of this brilliant new scientific tool." E. H. Nachod

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:175 Jl '42 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:41 Jl '42

BURTON, MRS KATHERINE (KURZ). In no strange land; some American Catholic converts. 254p $2.50 Longmans

922.2 Roman Catholic church—Converts. Roman Catholic church in the U.S.—Biography 42-7275

"In this book have been gathered together the brief biographies of some of the more outstanding American converts to the Catholic faith during the nineteenth century, although a few of them properly belong to our own twentieth." (Intro) Contents: Levi Silliman Ives; Sarah Worthington King Peter; Sophia Dana Ripley; Orestes A. Brownson; Cornelia Peacock Connolly; The Paulist Group; James Kent Stone; Father Fidelis of the Cross; Ira Dutton; Brother Joseph; John Bannister Tabb; Lucy Smith; Mother Catherine de Ricci; Rose Hawthorne Lathrop; Mother Alphonsa; Lewis Thomas Wattson; Father Paul James Francis; Marion Gurney; Mother Marianne of Jesus; Wilmoth Alexander Farmer; Francis X. Farmer, S.J.; Selden Peabody Delany. Bibliography.

Booklist 38:307 Ap 15 '42

"The earlier biographies in this book are not as attractively or humanly done as those, starting with the Paulist group, which form the latter half of the book. Miss Burton's difficulty probably lay in her source material, and the fact that, being removed in time, she could have no form of immediate contact with her subjects. Of the other sketches, that of Ira Dutton, who gave his life to the lepers of Molokai, and of Father Francis Farmer, still busy in his beloved China, are executed with a dramatic simplicity and an excellent gift for vivid portraiture." Clare Godfrey

+ Books p11 Jl 26 '42 450w

"The events in each life move swiftly and entertainingly. A notable feature of Mrs. Burton's style is her ability to relate with clarity and understanding the turning point in the religious career of each convert, man or woman." J. F. Thorning

+ Cath World 155:245 My '42 500w

Reviewed by Barbara Gorman

Commonweal 36:66 My 8 '42 490w

BURTON, MARY ELIZABETH. One Wordsworth. 237p $3 Univ. of N.C. press

821 Wordsworth, William 42-18828

Study of Wordsworth's autobiographical poem, The Prelude, and the revisions which he made on it from time to time. It has been said that there were two Wordsworths: the one a young radical, and a good poet; the other an older conservative, unable to write good poetry. It is this author's contention that the revisions in The Prelude were made to remedy defects, not to show the change of the poet's beliefs. The author is associate professor of English, in the University of Louisville, Louisville, Kentucky. Index.

BURTON, M. E.—Continued

"Miss Burton has applied herself to a clean-cut literary problem, and her findings, compactly and clearly presented in this model study, are of lasting importance to students of Wordsworth." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p29 O 25 '42 600w

"Though Professor Burton does not disprove that there were 'two Wordsworths,' she demonstrates that the alterations of 'The Prelude' furnish little support for that view. Her careful and minute comparison of the two texts is an admirable performance. A study of her chapters dealing with these rhetorical and metrical alterations would be profitable to students of composition." G. M. Harper

Sat R of Lit 25:6 D 12 '42 480w

BURTON, MILES. Death at Ash house [Eng title: This undesirable residence]. 280p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Collins]

42-25362

Detective story.

"Here's one of those comforting British detective tales with plenty of clues laid out before your goggling eyes and no nonsense—the rare kind in which the reader can participate, as it were, and see what it gets you. A certain trick, not brand new but successfully worked, adds a whopping surprise toward the end, adding a kick to the intensive deducing and bringing another blue ribbon to Miles Burton." Will Cuppy

+ Books p28 N 29 '42 280w

"Miles Burton has written some excellent detective tales, but this one does little to enhance his reputation." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 D 13 '42 120w

"Acceptable."

Sat R of Lit 25:20 N 28 '42 30w

"'Good letter home' describes Mr. Burton's style, but that is forgotten once his story gets started. Though all the characters, police and gypsies included, converse like a Dorcas circle, their quaintness detracts little from the interest. From the moment a corpse is found in a car outside the empty house, slowly increasing momentum grips."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p249 My 16 '42 120w

BURTON, VIRGINIA LEE (MRS GEORGE DEMETRIOS). Little house. 40p il $1.75 Houghton

(W) 42-24744

Many, many years ago the Little House was built out in the country where it could see the seasons come and go, the sun by day, the stars and moon at night. Sometimes the Little House wondered what the city was like and then, all too quickly, the city came out into the country and the Little House, surrounded by big buildings could hardly tell when it was spring, or summer, or winter, or whether the sun ever shone or the stars came out. But eventually someone came along who cared for the Little House and moved it out to the country again.

Booklist 39:123 D 1 '42

"The idea of this picture book is unusual, the method of its carrying out appropriate, and the unity of story and pictures leaves the happiest of impressions even on older eyes than those of the four-year-olds who own it." M. L. Becker

+ Books p30 N 15 '42 200w

"One of the most ingratiating books of the year. . . [It] is well worth reading because honest art always has emotional content and this is the work of an artist whose story and pictures have equal charm."

+ Cath World 156:371 D '42 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '42

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:120 N 20 '42 30w

"In the most fascinating picture book of the season, Virginia Lee Burton tells the story of a little house which wins its way into the very center of our heart. . . This is the best of Virginia Lee Burton's books, so far, and we predict for it a long and favored life." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:419 N '42 140w

"The delightful illustrations, bright and detailed, show the passing of the years and the changing seasons and give the house a lovable personality. For somewhat older children than those who loved Mike Mulligan." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 68:38 Ja 1 '43 100w

"An original and charming picture book. . . The colors are clear and beautiful and effectively suggest day and night in both country and city, and the aspects of the seasons. A picture-story book that will delight not only boys and girls from 5 to 10 but the older members of the family as well." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 D 6 '42 460w

New Yorker 18:105 D 12 '42 50w

"This book is a pleasure to look at without reading the story, always the test of a good picture book. The story of how the city grew up 'round the little house becomes amazingly dramatic, accumulating page by page until it is hard to find the little house under the elevated tracks, hemmed in between tall buildings. When at last the little house is moved back to the country one gives a sigh of pleasure and relief." Marjorie Flack

+ Sat R of Lit 25:25 N 14 '42 90w

BUSH, GEORGE F. Reading engineering drawings. 60p il spir $2 Wiley

744 Mechanical drawing 42-21263

"Basic factors of engineering drawings with airplane, machine, and structural drawing treated in detail. Useful for beginners, but mechanical binding and loose drawings in an envelope make library handling difficult." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:45 O 15 '42

"Of more value to the beginning student. Includes an excellent bibliography for readers of engineering drawings."

+ Library J 67:1063 D 1 '42 20w

BUSH, GEORGE LEONARD. Science education in consumer buying. (Science in modern living ser) 228p $2.35 Teachers college

339.4 Buying. Consumption (economics) 42-3742

A volume devoted to exposition of the need for consumer education and suggestions as to ways in which science courses in high schools and colleges can be utilized for such education. Bibliography. Index.

"There is little new or stimulating in the book. . . No mention has been made of the National Consumer-Retailer Council and its work on consumer education and informative labeling, even though this organization has been in existence for several years. Other similar omissions and some inaccuracies lead one to conclude that the author is not familiar with all phases of the consumer education program." B. V. Morrison

J Home Econ 34:552 O '42 230w

School & Society 55:371 Mr 28 '42 20w

BUSONI, RAFAELLO. Australia. 25p il $1 Holiday

919.4 Australia—Juvenile literature

(W) 42-23878

Useful information on Australia, to be used as supplementary reading with children nine to twelve.

"Mr. Busoni knows how to convey an atmosphere in his brightly colored pictures which are particularly striking."

+ Cath World 156:374 D '42 70w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:889 O 15 '42 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Wetherell

Library J 67:1014 N 15 '42 40w

BUSONI, RAFAELLO. Mexico and the Inca lands. 27p il $1 Holiday

917.2 Latin America—Juvenile literature (W) 42-23985

Brief descriptions of Mexico, Central America, and South America, to be used as supplementary reading with children nine to twelve.

Cath World 156:374 D '42 70w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 30w

"Recommended where needed." A. M. Wetherell

Library J 67:1014 N 15 '42 40w

BUTLER, HAROLD BERESFORD. Lost peace; a personal impression; with an introd. by Felix Morley. 246p $2.75 Harcourt [10s 6d Faber]

940.5 Europe—Politics. World politics. League of nations 42-12648

From 1920 to 1938 the author was first deputy director and then director of the International Labor Office at Geneva. He travelled extensively during those years—in Europe, Africa, Asia, and America, and made the observations upon which this book is founded. After chapters devoted to Geneva, France, Germany, Austria, new nations and old, in the inter-war years, the author studies the reasons for the present war, and the economic and political problems of the post-war years. Index.

"The former director of the International Labor Office at Geneva gives in this book one of the best surveys of the international situation to be found in print. He not only indicates the many and complicated reasons for the 'lost peace'; he also points out the way, long and painful as it is, toward international order." S. D. Myres, Jr.

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:970 O '42 900w

"In [the author's] scheme small nations will have little to do and less to say, and a part of their sovereignty will of necessity be taken away. A list of criticisms may be leveled against many of his suggestions, but in the main they seem to be sound and deserving of careful study by those who will be called upon to reshape and reconstruct a sickly world." A. O. Sarkissian

+ Ann Am Acad 223:205 S '42 650w

"This is one of the soundest, most clear-headed and informative of the many books published recently on the absorbing and complex subject of why peace has become a lost horizon and how it may be restored in our time on a firmer basis." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic Jc '42 320w

Bookmark 4:5 N '42

"The book pretends only to be an 'impression,' perhaps fleeting in these torrential times. But it is a sane, civilized and useful one." Walter Millis

+ Books p17 Ag 9 '42 750w

Christian Century 59:498 Ap 15 '42 160w

"Mr. Butler provides a concise, authoritative, objective, and readable background against which accumulating plans for the future can be intelligently assessed." P. L.

+ Christian Science Monitor p22 Ap 9 '42 750w

Reviewed by Mother Mary Lawrence, S.H.C.J. Commonweal 36:90 My 15 '42 500w

Reviewed by Carol Thompson

Current Hist 3:355 D 42 550w

Economist 142:2 Ja 3 '42 900w

Ethics 52:388 Ap '42 160w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:771 JI '42 70w

"Chapters on France, Germany, and Austria are excellent. Author has long been in position to know and understand international situation, and has written a thoughtful and readable book." R. S. Alvarez

+ Library J 67:317 Ap 1 '42 70w

"Mr. Butler writes admirably—his annual I. L. O. reports used to rank as international events—and in this book a pervasive irony, like a delicate sauce piquante flavours the gravity of his reflections." Freda White

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:11 Ja 3 '42 500w

"This is an urbane book. It is also a tragic one. It presents the picture of Europe's decadence as seen through the eyes of an intelligent international civil servant. . . His tendency to understatement may make his book seem at first less profound than it really is. He writes as one whose political duties forced him to confront events with a sense of responsibility, not as a journalist; and so, in a unique way, he takes us inside what was going on." Frank Kingdom

+ Sat R of Lit 25:12 Ap 18 '42 750w

"The Warden of Nuffield has written as good a book as he might have been expected to write on such a subject. That is high praise, but merited." Wilson Harris

+ Spec 167:469 N 14 '41 1000w

"Anyone who wants to know 'how we got that way,' and 'where do we go from here' will do well not to miss this volume. As an acute and intelligent analysis by a thoroughly informed international civil servant free of class and national prejudices 'The Lost Peace' offers a most statesmanlike approach to its problem." R. J. Conklin

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 19 '42 1150w

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe

Survey G 31:332 JI '42 460w

"It is essentially an Englishman's common-sense contribution to a grim and persisting debate. That it may curb and correct some of the more inflated utopianism of the time is not the least of its virtues. Mr Butler has had too long an experience of international organization not to doubt an easy transition to a federated Europe, much less a federated world. At the same time his words are a plain warning that there can be no return to the old social and economic order."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p550 N 8 '41 850w

Wis Lib Bul 38:95 Je '42

BUTLER, NICHOLAS MURRAY. Liberty—equality—fraternity; essays and addresses on the problems of today and tomorrow. 240p $2.50 Scribner

304 Social problems. International cooperation. Liberty 42-13717

"Twenty essays and addresses, the importance of which may best be gathered from such chapter titles as 'Democracy Requires Action'; 'Good Neighbors,' an address which was broadcast to Latin America; 'Religion and Faith in Education'; 'The Threat of the New Order,' and the stirring addresses delivered since the dawn of 1942—'The Duty of Free Peoples' and 'There Can Be No Isolation.'" School & Society

Christian Century 59:635 My 13 '42 40w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson

Churchman 156:17 JI 1 '42 300w

Ethics 52:512 JI '42 160w

"Many reviewers will dismiss the volume as vague and stuffy and platitudinous. Vague and stuffy it decidedly is; platitudinous it certainly is not. Dr. Butler gives expression in it to a very definite philosophy of social organization. That philosophy, it is true, may be the same that he brought to the presidency of Columbia University a few generations ago. But it is again gaining new disciples among supposedly liberal thinkers." D. W. Petegorsky

+ New Repub 106:772 Je 1 '42 850w

"To those who in any land can and do look forward with faith and courage," the twenty essays and addresses on the problems of today and tomorrow by the distinguished president of Columbia University will be of intense interest. Dr. Butler . . . in his inimitable forensic style emphasizes what many thinking inarticulates have felt for a long time—that meaningless slogans can no longer satisfy a situation grown increasingly dangerous by inefficiency and neglect. . . . He has the rare gift of making history always interesting." E. L. Tinker

BUTLER, N. M.—Continued

+ N Y Times p26 S 27 '42 800w

School & Society 55:568 My 16 '42 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p338 Jl 11 '42 550w

Wis Lib Bul 38:115 Jl '42

BUTLER, ROHAN D'OLIER. Roots of national socialism. 304p $3 Dutton [12s 6d Faber] 943 Germany—Politics and government.
Germany—Nazi movement. Philosophy, German 42-6905

Critical survey of the basis of national socialism in Germany, written by a Fellow of All Souls' college, Oxford. The author attempts to trace the national socialistic ideology to the eighteenth century; thru the period of romanticism from 1783 to 1815, and the unification, the empire and the republic.

"To prove his thesis, the author needs a considerable amount of violence in the selection and interpretation of his facts and quotations. His thesis guides selection and interpretation. Facts that do not fit into the straight line are either disregarded or are a 'deceptive interlude.' A dubious method leads to a tissue of half-truth and error, in which the best cosmopolitans, democrats, and liberals line up as fore-runners of nazism. This procedure promotes suspicion, even in instances where the author has an excellent case. If he had tried to prove less, he would have proved more. In the history of ideas this method could be applied with some success for and against any thesis." Kurt Riezler

— Am J Soc 48:147 Jl '42 350w

Reviewed by Oscar Jászi

Am Pol Sci R 36:773 Ag '42 600w

"Although the crudities of its quod erat demonstrandum deprive this book of inner balance, one must compliment Mr. Butler on several compensatory achievements. He writes with grace. He knows how to handle his materials. And there is a remarkable freshness in his treatment of an oft-treated evolution. He tells us that his book was not conceived as a piece of war literature. Perhaps he simply finished it too fast. Perhaps he borrowed too much from others. Perhaps his German or his proofreading could have been better. More puzzling is the casual fashion in which he hints at the political origin of Germany's 'unitary élan' (p. 274) or in which he pronounces the twentieth century an age of 'regimentation' (p. 283) without relieving our anxiety by so much as one further word." F. M. Marx

— + Ann Am Acad 222:196 Jl '42 600w

"A searching, penetrating commentary on certain dangerous trends in German culture, all the more impressive because the author never falls into hysteria or exaggeration." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic My '42 250w

Booklist 38:327 My 1 '42

Bookmark 3:4 My '42

"Mr. Butler provides his own brilliant and masterly summing up, but no summary—not even the author's own—can possibly do justice to this careful, considered study. 'The Roots of National Socialism' is an indispensable source for any one who wants to understand the Germans and the world we live in." Wallace Deuel

+ Books p2 Ap 12 '42 550w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:781 Jl '42 20w

"In seeking to reveal the roots of Nazi Germany, Professor Butler has done a truly important service to all who would understand the seemingly insane world in which we live today." N. J. Ware

+ J Pol Econ 50:785 O '42 850w

"Author shows more scholarship and sound judgment than is usually found in war literature; his conclusions, therefore, have greater validity than those arrived at by some hasty journalistic writers. . . . Recommended, although the author is occasionally less than just (e.g. Friedrich Naumann). Useful in college and larger libraries. Bibliographical appendix unsatisfactory." F. E. Hirsch

+ — Library J 67:267 Mr 15 '42 120w

"The most comprehensive analysis of the roots of Nazism." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Nation 154:398 Ap 4 '42 1550w

New Repub 107:30 Jl 6 '42 90w

"It cannot be said too often: we shall never understand the man with the mustache until we see that he is not an answer derived from a mistaken economic formula or a military calculation but an awful reduction unto final and destructive absurdity of men's power to entertain visions about mankind. Mr. Butler's book is valuable because its author knows that. . . . One notices a few minor errors in Mr. Butler's presentation of facts and his typography. Thus Lueger's name boasted no diphthong. Such things matter relatively little. What we may legitimately regret is that the volume as a whole does not live up to its own best moments." G. N. Shuster

+ — N Y Times p9 Ap 5 '42 1450w

"This book, seeking to uncover the hidden roots of National Socialism, comes from England, from a Fellow of All Souls College in Oxford. It is a most scholarly, often brilliantly written, history of the German mind or rather of the German 'soul,' its darkness and dynamism". H. W. Weigert

+ Survey G 31:434 O '42 330w

BUTTRICK, GEORGE ARTHUR. Prayer. 333p
$2.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury

264.1 Prayer

(W) 42-36028

Analysis of the subject of prayer in the modern world, its psychological basis, its effect on personality, and advice on the way to pray. Index.

Booklist 38:203 F 15 '42

Bookmark 3:3 Mr '42

"It is something of a real event in the religious world to have a book like this one on Prayer by Dr. Buttrick. Though he is pastor of a large church and busy with all the cares of parish administration, he has managed to write a really great book, one which is more readable than the professors can write and which is nevertheless lacking in nothing of profundity and scholarship." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Books p27 Mr 1 '42 700w

"This volume by Dr. Buttrick is certainly a good book. Indeed it is one of the best books on prayer that have appeared in many years. Its three hundred pages are not padded and they are remarkably free from repetitions, considering that three series of lectures lie behind the book. It includes in its span practically every aspect of prayer. The thought is deep-going. The organization of the material is excellent. The style is fresh and vivid. The author describes himself modestly as 'only a journeyman preacher.' Would that we had more as competent!" Angus Dun

+ Christian Century 59:354 Mr 18 '42 850w

"This is not a nice little devotional book to hand to pious old ladies for 'quiet Sunday reading.' It is a 'heavy' book in the best sense of that word, for it deals profoundly with a momentous topic. . . . The book is full of apt quotations, of rich quotable sentences, and no review could attempt to indicate the wide range of its thought. The author realizes that practically every essential element of our faith is relevant to his topic. The reviewer knows of no book on prayer which is both so loyal to the Christian faith and so modern in its presentation." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 156:16 Mr 1 '42 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '42

"It is commonplace to say that a book is timely; but this one certainly is. If any kind of book is to be published just now, it should be a book on prayer. There are today great multitudes of people everywhere who see no 'way out'—of their own and the world's desperate straits—except the way of prayer. We are all praying, even those of us who didn't before—or not much. But what do we know about prayer? Is it something real enough to have values for a realistic age? Does it stand the pragmatic test—work? Yes, there was need, tremendous need, of a good book on prayer; a treatment of it that would appeal to 1942 believers and non-believers alike. It seems to me that Dr. Buttrick here supplies us with that desideratum." Mitchell Bronk

+ Crozer Q 19:157 Ap '42 550w

"Anyone familiar with other books by Dr. Buttrick will approach this new volume with high expectations. All that the author has previously written about preaching has prepared us to welcome with particularly eager interest what he may wish to say about prayer. And no one will be disappointed; this is the very book we wanted and expected. It is no impersonal discussion, whether historical or theological. It is what any real discussion of prayer must be—a discussion from the inside, a confession of faith (and of doubt), a transcript of experience (and of struggle)—and on that account not less thoughtful and critical but rather more so." John Knox

+ J Religion 22:205 Ap '42 700w

"Those already familiar with prayer through constant use and others who make use of prayer only during crises will find this volume most helpful." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 67:85 Ja 15 '42 130w

BYAS, HUGH. Government by assassination.

377p $3 Knopf

952 Japan. World war, 1939—Japan 42-25289

The author, for many years New York Times correspondent in Tokyo, explains Japan's drift toward war in an analysis of the influence of the militarists on Japanese politics. The book is in six parts: Oriental revolution; The army; The murder-and-hokum societies; Seeking for a soul; Imperial figure-head; Post-war. Index.

Booklist 39:135 D 15 '42

"This is the most erudite book on Japan that has been produced in years, written from a fund of knowledge such as only a handful of foreigners acquired and less than a handful are in a position to share with others. For those who would seek the reasons underlying the present war in Asia, who would determine how the Japanese came to hatch their present plans of conquest, Mr. Byas provides the best answer available. . . . Here is a book that should be read by all those responsible for the conduct of our war with Japan, as well as by those who will have a hand in the peace to come." Wilfrid Fleisher

+ Books p3 D 27 '42 1450w

"The peace proposals Mr. Byas outlines should commend themselves to everyone intimately familiar with the Japanese problem, and the background he affords should cause them to make sense to others." R. G.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 D 1 '42 600w

Reviewed by Max Fischer

Commonweal 37:303 Ja 8 '43 210w

"Hugh Byas . . . has written a more informative book than most of the other correspondents." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Repub 107:685 N 23 '42 1200w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 107:830 D 21 '42 600w

Reviewed by Nathaniel Peffer

N Y Times p3 N 15 '42 1150w

"Space limitations undoubtedly circumscribed Hugh Byas's story. What he has told, he has told superbly—with an eye to color, with amazing detail, and with second thought. There has been no better book to explain Japan's jingoist mind to us, and none can afford not to read it." Mark Gayn

+ Sat R of Lit 25:21 D 5 '42 800w

Time 40:113 N 23 '42 1050w

BYAS, HUGH. The Japanese enemy, his power and his vulnerability. 107p $1.25 Knopf

940.5352 Japan. World war, 1939—Japan

(W) 42-4242

Serious study of the present war with Japan, written by a New York Times correspondent who knows Japan. He predicts a long, difficult war, with success for America only if we speed up industrial production. Mr Byas is British and went to Japan in 1914 as managing editor of The Japan Advertiser. After fifteen years with that paper he became Japanese correspondent for The London Times, and New York Times, and did not leave Japan until May, 1941.

"The most valuable single volume for clearing up misconceptions which the average American entertains about Japan and the Japanese." J. T. Watkins, IV

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:793 Ag '42 340w

Booklist 38:231 Mr 1 '42

Reviewed by Wilfrid Fleisher

Books p6 Mr 1 '42 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '42

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:785 Jl '42 50w

"[This] book is brief and presumably has been thrown together hastily. But as might be expected from an able correspondent like Mr Byas, it is as admirable a survey of present-day Japan as can be found anywhere." M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 154:374 Mr 28 '42 120w

"Mr. Byas concentrates a very considerable amount of knowledge and information into the brief compass of this book, which was written immediately after the outbreak of war in the Pacific. With his shrewd, careful appraisals he disposes of a multitude of fanciful fictions." W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p3 F 22 '42 1100w

Reviewed by W. L. Holland

Pacific Affairs 15:232 Je '42 420w

"Although Hugh Byas's 'The Japanese Enemy' obviously is a rush job, it was done thoughtfully and tersely." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 Mr 14 '42 400w

Reviewed by E. O. Hauser

Survey G 31:255 My '42 120w

Time 39:88 My 25 '42 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p255 My 23 '42 500w

BYERLY, PERRY. Seismology. 256p il $4.65; to schools $3.50 Prentice-Hall

551.22 Earthquakes 42-17818

Textbook on seismology suitable for fairly advanced students. The first seven chapters are on the subject of earthquakes; this section requires little technical knowledge. The second section of the book on seismography presupposes some knowledge of mathematics and physics. Chapter references. Index.

Reviewed by N. H. Heck

Geog R 32:690 O '42 340w

Library J 67:1063 D 1 '42 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:39 Jl '42

BYRD, SAM. Small town, South. (Life in America ser) 237p $2.75 Houghton

917.5 South—Economic conditions. South—Social conditions (W) 42-19576

After eleven hundred and fifty-one performances as Dude Lester in the play Tobacco Road, and three full seasons in other theatrical productions, the author decided to visit his Carolina homeland. His account of his relatives, friends and acquaintances, and their way of life paints a picture of the present-day South. It is a simple chronicle of a way of life in a section of the country where there is "too much talk and too little to do."

BYRD, SAM—Continued

"Never was a writer further removed from the academic than Sam Byrd, but his book is a social document, nevertheless. Here is what happens when the economic system jams. Here is the beginning of the story that Steinbeck continued in 'Grapes of Wrath.' But the picture is not one of unrelieved gloom; even in the Florida section there are high lights. . . The heart of the book, though, is the fact that for all his keen perception and his resolute determination to tell the truth as he saw it, the author is emotionally committed to these people. They are his people and he loves them." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p1 Ag 16 '42 950w

"Sam Byrd joined the Navy three weeks after he finished his book. 'I think maybe someday we'll do more than talk,' he says of the South. We believe you, but there's no reader who won't say, 'Don't stop talking, Ensign Byrd!'" Ward Moore

+ Boston Globe p19 Ag 12 '42 600w

Library J 67:683 Ag '42 40w

Reviewed by Stark Young

New Repub 107:421 O 5 '42 300w

"As a good-humored investigator, Mr. Byrd has no comment to make, excepting an off-hand conclusion that talk is comforting in a small town and 'I think maybe some day we'll do more than talk.' A good many young people in the South are already doing, as well as talking, and with a lucid understanding of their problems. Incidentally, one of the problems is why so many young people like Sam Byrd leave the South, which has reared them, and come North—although the Lord knows the Yankees are glad to have them. If they do nothing else, they write books about the South. Some of the books are shocking; some of them are rhapsodic and inviting. Mr. Byrd's is genial and human on the surface, with an undertow of uneasiness and disappointment." Brooks Atkinson

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 30 '42 950w

Reviewed by J. T. Graves

Sat R of Lit 25:21 S 19 '42 400w

Wis Lib Bul 38:160 N '42

"Farmers, petty officials, morticians, drummers, newspaper men, bankers, sharecroppers and drunkards come alive in these pages. There is vividness and color in the writing, and one puts the book down with the sensation of having visited the places described and talked with the people." Virgil Dabney

+ Yale R n s 32:404 winter '43 650w

BYWATER, HECTOR CHARLES. Great Pacific war; a historic prophecy now being fulfilled; with an introd. by Hanson W. Baldwin. 321p maps $2.50 Houghton

359 Imaginary wars and battles. U.S.—Navy. Japan—Navy 42-1558

"A reissue. Written in 1925 by a British naval commentator, this famous prophecy of our war with Japan is a realistic history of an imaginary Japanese-American war in 1931-33, plausibly documented and absorbingly handled." (New Yorker) For earlier publication see Book Review Digest, 1925.

Booklist 38:237 Mr 1 '42

"One has but to turn these pages to see how accurately navy experts years ago forecast the present situation, and how elementary was the recommendation that the United States should either abandon its policy in the Far East or else proceed to fortify its possessions heavily. . . These pages are so interesting from a practical point of view that one must regret the publisher's failure to provide either a table of contents or an index. But at least there is a map." Joseph McSorley

Cath World 154:759 Mr '42 340w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 20 '42 550w

"No other war in recent history has been as thoroughly discussed in advance as the war in the Pacific between the United States and Japan. It has been a favorite study in our Naval War College for at least thirty-five years, and has been commented on by publications ranging from the yellow journals to the New York Times and by military and naval critics as far apart in views and type as 'Big Bill' Shearer and Hanson Baldwin. The best book on the subject, however, is undoubtedly 'The Great Pacific War' and Houghton Mifflin is to be praised for reprinting it." D. W. Mitchell

+ Nation 154:262 F 28 '42 750w

Reviewed by G. E. Taylor

New Repub 106:739 My 25 '42 200w

New Yorker 17:63 F 7 '42 50w

"It is well worth while for the information it contains and the views that it presents. To the lay reader it should be a gripping piece of fiction; to military and naval readers, professional or by avocation, it should be of absorbing interest, since it has a personal application." Major T. B. Catron

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ja 31 '42 450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:96 Je '42

C

CABELL, JAMES BRANCH. First gentleman of America; a comedy of conquest [Eng title: First American gentleman]. 309p $2.50 Farrar [7s 6d Lane]

Menéndez de Avilés, Pedro—Fiction 42-3407

The "first American gentleman" is Nemattanon, a prince of Ajacan, which is now Virginia. The prince became curious about the ways of the Spaniards and accompanied them back to Florida and then to Spain, where he was made a grandee. Nemattanon was puzzled by the ways of the Spaniards, and he did not intend to stand idle while his people met death at their hands. What he did about it is an important part of the story. Bibliography.

"'The First Gentleman of America' is urbane, philosophical, worldly—and amusing. Mr. Cabell draws heavily and happily from historical sources in building up his legend. . . Personally, I should have greatly preferred that he leave out his elephantinely humorous contrasts between America then and now, complete with road advertising and slow-men-working signs, and hewed to the main line, which is a completely charming and credible legendary romance. . . Tempered and seasoned, of course, the main narrative is, with typical Cabellian amours and sexual contretemps." F. H. Bullock

+ — Books p7 Ja 25 '42 700w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 S 4 '42 100w

New Repub 106:374 Mr 16 '42 40w

"I think Mr. Cabell's new book is one of his best, if one may discriminate among the works of an author of thirty volumes, all of which are of a piece. The familiar Cabellian ironic verbal playfulness is better kept in hand, it seemed to me, than in some of his histories; and there is less fustian in the brocade than in others. In addition, because of its origin, theme and setting, it has a certain charm and pertinence independently its own." F. T. Marsh

N Y Times p6 F 1 '42 650w

"Although his story is, for a change, set in a real country and has some basis in historical fact, Mr. Cabell's style of narration has not changed."

New Yorker 17:61 F 7 '42 70w

"It is, in its widest significance, as the subtitle announces, A Comedy of Conquest; and, in passing, it directs the reader's attention to the saving virtues inherent in the national policy now known and damned as isolationism. Satire and irony have long had sport with the themes of the advanced peoples of the earth imposing civilization and religion, by means of fire and sword and torture, upon the poor benighted heathen." B. R. Kedman

Sat R of Lit 25:7 F 7 '42 700w

"One can imagine that even the most faithful and ardent of Mr. Branch Cabell's admirers will feel vaguely disappointed by his latest effort, The First American Gentleman. He will find the familiar mannerisms, the heavy ironies, the tiresome vulgarities and the affectations of learning all here once again, but time and event have faded them sadly, they have lost their glitter and become rather drab and thin in the process, so that even the author himself seems more than a little fatigued." John Hampson

— Spec 169:246 S 11 '42 260w

Time 39:91 F 16 '42 300w

"Mr. Cabell's satire is as sharp as ever, but the object of his attack seems a little unworthy of his skill."

Times [London] Lit Sup p49 S 12 '42 330w

CAILLIET, EMILE. Life of the mind. 79p $1.25 Macmillan

201 Christianity—Philosophy 42-21860

The author of this essay on Christian philosophy is professor of romance languages and literatures at the University of Pennsylvania. He is author of other works on mysticism and literary symbolism.

"Many of the author's specific views are questionable: e.g., that Thomas Aquinas offers what 'remains down to our day a model of conciliation between reason and faith'; that the Reformation principle of justification by faith commits Protestantism to the position that 'I believe so that I may understand,' whereas 'the scholastics say, I strive to understand so that I may believe'; and that 'Modernism eliminates the supernatural, that is, the divine.' His summoning of students to a life of reasonable faith is a welcome note, but the Thomist beacon that he sets up for their guidance is a false light."

+ — Christian Century 59:1154 S 23 '42 110w

"These chapters were probably lectures to college students, and they have a charming simplicity which commend them to many readers." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 156:14 N 15 '42 150w

Reviewed by G. W. Davis

Crozer Q 20:80 Ja '43 350w

CAIN, JAMES MALLAHAN. Love's lovely counterfeit. 218p $2 Knopf

42-20991

A story of political racketeering in a Midwestern city in which the local gang leader is double-crossed by the ex-college football player who drives his car. For a time the double crosser plays dirty politics, and then he, too, is double-crossed, this time by a woman, an ex-mistress.

"There's nothing that delights the heart of James M. Cain more than a good, swift, neat doublecross. He dwells on the details lovingly. It's the sheer artistry of the thing that gets him. . . I don't have to talk, do I, of the felicities of pace, characterization and dialogue to be found in this book? The name of James Cain, by itself, has become a guaranteed trademark of swift entertainment." Milton Hindus

— + Books p10 O 11 '42 650w

"The title of this book is all too descriptive. Bang it on your chair-arm when you have finished, and it will ring false as a plugged quarter. But if you can stomach the first chapter, it will hold you to the end—even if the after-effect is comparable to a morning at the reptile-house in the zoo. . . But 'Love's Lovely Counterfeit' can hardly be compared to [Cain's] earlier work. In fact, it is redeemed from sheer pulp melodrama only by his spine-tingling treatment of 'big' scenes, his wonderfully accurate ear for the rhythms of dialogue." William Du Bois

— + N Y Times p6 O 11 '42 650w

"Mr. James M. Cain, the dingdong daddy of the what-terrible-people school of novelists, appears to be moderating somewhat, if we can trust the evidence of his new book. . . There are glimmers of change. 'Love's Lovely Counterfeit' runs to only about two percent sadism, to not quite that much of talk of music, and—unless my standards are loosening—to hardly more than the conventional assay of sex. A few of the people in it have hearts, and even scruples, within reason." Vincent McHugh

New Yorker 18:72 O 10 '42 430w

"Mr. Cain has established, with a few books, a formidable reputation of furious pace, harsh and masterful realism, tough, raw speech right out of the mouths of the people. I do not think this story will add anything to that, and it may indeed raise certain questions which he will have to answer with a better book." N. L. R.

Sat R of Lit 25:34 O 24 '42 230w

"Love's Lovely Counterfeit is an expert thriller told by the most literate U.S. pulp writer. Incidentally, it reduces Author Cain's erstwhile social significance to trimmings as dutiful as the cherry in an Old-Fashioned cocktail."

Time 40:102 O 12 '42 400w

CALAS, NICHOLAS. Confound the wise. 275p il $3 Arrow editions

701 Surrealism

42-17402

"A Greek poet and pilgrim through the modern world, now based in New York, Mr. Calas began criticism some years ago in Paris with 'Foyers d'Incendie'. . . Of the present work the first section, entitled Time is . . . a discussion of poetry as prophecy, revelation, stimulus to action. . . In the remaining three sections Calas discourses on baroque art in Portugal, his own recent experience of that country, the aesthetics of portraiture, and New York as a culture symbol." Nation

"Suggestive reflections, comparisons, analogies abound. Calas's richly associative mind is in refreshing contrast with our critical Alexandrians, close interpreters of single texts. His restatement of romantic doctrine in twentieth-century terms is one of the most fruitful contributions to criticism in America since Babbitt's 'Rousseau and Romanticism,' and makes a welcome counterblast to that masterpiece of misapplied intellect. Regrettably, it lacks an index, and it sometimes reads like French homework by a sixth-grader weak in English grammar." Frank Jones

+ Nation 155:242 S 19 '42 650w

"On the whole I have had quite a lot of fun from 'Confound the Wise' and recommend it to all those who like to bless the silly." Richard Aldington

Sat R of Lit 25:14 Jl 11 '42 500w

CALDWELL, ERSKINE. All night long; a novel of guerrilla warfare in Russia. 283p $2.50 Duell

(W)

A novel of the guerrilla fighting in Russia behind the German lines. The chief characters are Sergei, a young tractor driver, his wife Natasha, and half-a-dozen other 'partisans' who follow Sergei on his raids against German radio stations, troop trains, supply depots, etc.

Booklist 39:138 D 15 '42

"If 'All Night Long' had been the work of a Russian writer, it would be easier to understand and evaluate it as a novel. Admittedly, then, it would have been a book of Russian propaganda, blessed by the Russian government, concerned with telling the story of the exploits and daring of guerrilla warfare against the Nazi armies. But 'All Night Long' is Erskine Caldwell's book and it falls, to use a trite expression, between two stools. While it has the shape of a novel, its contents are clearly made up of the stuff traditionally used to put blood and fire into the hearts of fighting men. Coming from an American novelist it seems a little naive. Such a book coming from a Russian would still not be a good novel; but it would be understandable." Rose Feld

Books p12 D 13 '42 500w

Cath World 156:634 F '43 90w

"Recommended, but not for the queasy reader." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 67:1066 D 1 '42 90w

"This is, I regret to say, one of the worst novels I have ever read." Margaret Marshall

— Nation 155:720 D 26 '42 1050w

CALDWELL, ERSKINE—Continued

"Mr. Caldwell's current tract on Europe is advertised as a novel. . . Actually, he has merely taken the material of his previous book ('All Out on the Road to Smolensk'), distilled it into fictional form and let it ride as undigested melodrama. Those readers who remember Mr. Caldwell as a superb novelist of the South will be vastly disappointed by 'All Night Long,' for it scarcely scratches the surface of the Russian earth and misses the Russian soul entirely. Those who enjoy two-fisted action for its own sake may get their money's worth." William Du Bois

— N Y Times p6 D 6 '42 800w

"I said that I didn't think 'All Night Long' any great shakes as a novel. Steinbeck's 'The Moon Is Down' is far better written, far more neatly constructed. The only advantage Mr. Caldwell has is that he is writing about real people." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 18:98 D 5 '42 450w

"For the most part the Caldwell thriller is a saga of hate. Pure adventure fans will be able to take the thrills and let the hatred go. They will have a good time, but they will miss the point of the story." A. F. Wolfe

Sat R of Lit 25:8 D 19 '42 600w

"Caldwell is skillfull enough a writer to make Sergei and his comrades warmly human and not carbon copies of superman. It is evident that he has come to know the Russian people as well as he does the Russian military strategy."

+ Springfield Republican p7e N 29 '42 390w

Time 41:96 Ja 11 '43 320w

CALDWELL, ERSKINE. All-out on the road to Smolensk [Eng title: Moscow under fire]. 230p $2.50 Duell [7s 6d Hutchinson]

940.542 World war, 1939—Russia. World war, 1939—Personal narratives. American (W) 42-36086

"Erskine Caldwell, the novelist, who spent six months in Russia last year reporting both for the radio and the newspapers, explains in part the Russian miracle in his 'All-Out on the Road to Smolensk,' the first eyewitness story of the fighting in Russia to appear in this country in book form. It is an account of his own personal experiences in the Soviet Union, where, traveling with his wife, Margaret Bourke-White, the photographer, he went through the air raids of Moscow, visited the front near Smolensk and talked with Soviet air pilots and war correspondents." Books

Booklist 38:249 Mr 15 '42

"Mr. Caldwell's style is simple and unpretentious, but his book is full of vivid pictures of life in war-time Russia, including descriptions of air raids over the Soviet capital and of his own personal adventures groping through the blacked-out streets of Moscow at night. His story also contains what is probably the most realistic account of what a modern tank battle is like that has yet been written." John Elliott

+ Books p4 Mr 1 '42 950w

"Caldwell writes entertainingly of personal adventures during blackout and bombing in Moscow, of the red tape usually encountered by foreign correspondents and radio commentators under censorship conditions. His most interesting comments are the very sensible reflections on Russia as a 'workers' country,' his description of Russian techniques with Nazi diversionists and his brief description of the warfare on the Smolensk front." J. J. Knights

+ Canadian Forum 22:93 Je '42 180w
Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '42

Reviewed by Markoosha Fischer
Nation 154:316 Mr 14 '42 900w

"The book throws no new light on Russia and is somewhat uncritically written, but it is nevertheless a convincing, and at times exciting portrait of a people resolute and undivided battling for independence behind a competent military leadership."

+ New Repub 106:406 Mr 23 '42 120w

"Occasionally some one seems to have pulled Mr. Caldwell's leg. . . But in general his book is a lively narrative of a fascinating experience." W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 1 '42 600w

Pratt p23 O '42

"Its pace is swift and its tale enthralling. But the book has also some shortcomings. It is often repetitious. It frequently conveys Soviet claims and propaganda tales—such as are disseminated in any country in wartime—as unvarnished truth. It makes no attempt to interpret; it merely reports." Mark Gayn

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 My 23 '42 90w

Spec 168:590 Je 19 '42 20w

Time 39:78 Mr 23 '42 230w

"Mr. Caldwell's detachment, no doubt an excellent thing when he is writing of the American South, seems altogether too airy and insensitive on this occasion; and it is not made more impressive in any way by his lack of knowledge of Russian conditions generally or by his somewhat naive discoveries. . . . However, the book has instructive passages."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p290 Je 13 '42 420w

CALDWELL, JANET TAYLOR (MRS MARCUS REBACK) (MAX REINER, pseud). The strong city. 580p $3 Scribner

(W) 42-10015

Story of a young German immigrant's climb to power in the steel mills of Pennsylvania during the late nineteenth century.

Booklist 38:346 My 15 '42

"'The Strong City' has substance and gusto which accord with its period and its setting. Perhaps in retrospect one may doubt a little the consistency of purpose which was Franz's or Irmgard's almost unfailing wisdom and self-control. In the sweep of the story such doubts are forgotten." Mary Ross

+ Books p5 Ap 19 '42 900w

"Taylor Caldwell has written a penetrating analysis of the German state of mind. And she has incorporated in her story a devastating picture of heavy industry, of its leadening effect upon small men. The shades of gray and the earthen colors in her descriptions of an ugly, dirty city are dramatic. But her book is overlong and unrestrained. It lacks artistic discipline, erring especially on the side of over-emphasis. For lack of contrast, the darkness of her book is often synthetic." J. W. R.

+ Boston Globe p19 My 6 '42 330w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '42

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 O 30 '42 80w

New Repub 107:94 Jl 20 '42 60w

"The novel is extremely wordy and could have been much improved by drastic cutting and editing. It is over-written, the author analyzing and reanalyzing her characters interminably, while the tacit duel between Franz and Baldur has become tedious long before it ends. Yet the book has power; the opening part is very interesting, and the picture of the steel industry as it once was is worth careful consideration, especially at the present time." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 12 '42 750w

"The author evidently intended an analysis of the German character—its lust for power, its sentimentality and ruthlessness, its love of order—but unfortunately, in spite of numerous 'strong' scenes, many extraordinary characters, and a great deal of plot, nobody in the book is real."

+ New Yorker 18:75 Ap 18 '42 90w

Pratt p12 O '42

"As in her previous novels, the author invests 'The Strong City' with such an aura of violence that it overexerts itself. Taylor Caldwell's novels will be more powerful when she forces her characters to more self-control." R. A. Cordell

Sat R of Lit 25:8 Ap 18 '42 400w

"This is an incredible and over-written novel, from which only a lamentable moral can be drawn."

—Times [London] Lit Sup p525 O 24 '42 360w

Wis Lib Bul 38:137 O '42

CALKINS, RAYMOND. How Jesus dealt with men. 214p $1.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury
232 Jesus Christ 42-11845

Taking as illustrations a number of the Gospel stories—the story of Nicodemus, of the Woman of Samaria, of the Rich Young Man, etc.—Dr Calkins shows how Jesus dealt with these men and women, and how his methods can serve modern psychologists and teachers in their attempts to help others.

Christian Century 59:219 F 18 '42 70w

"This book provides a thoughtful and thought-provoking study of an absorbing subject." T. L. L.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 21 '42 700w

"This is an excellent book. It suggests some of the older books of studies in the teaching and methods of Jesus in relation to the problems of men and women. But this is fresh and inspiring for the author gives us fresh insights into the personality and technique, so to speak, of Jesus. . . It is a study of normal but troubled people rather than of psychoneurotics, and should be of great value to students of pastoral work." H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 156:16 F 15 '42 160w

"How Jesus Dealt With Men grows out of experience and thereby is greatly enriched." W. R. McNutt

+ Crozer Q 19:166 Ap '42 200w

CALL, MRS HUGHIE (FLORENCE). Golden fleece. 250p il $2.75 Houghton

B or 92 Ranch life (W) 42-36304

Reminiscences of thirty years as a sheep rancher's wife in Montana. Mrs Call was a Texas 'tenderfoot' when she married and went to her husband's ranch, and many things were strange and hard at first. Tho in the eyes of a native she is still a tenderfoot, she has learned much of the ways of men—and sheep; knows the answers to many undreamed of questions, and the immense value, in a lonely region, of being on a "party line."

"Mrs. Call makes the details of sheep ranching almost too clear, yet manages to maintain her sense of humor. That sense of humor and her obvious love of the Madison Valley counteract a strong streak of sentiment and a certain feminine perverseness. Ranchers' wives do not, apparently, relish playing second fiddle to the sheep. To be both a sheepman and a husband must require superhuman patience." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic 170:146 O '42 230w

Booklist 39:31 O 1 '42

Bookmark 4:13 N '42

"Mrs. Call's book is the best book about the life of a sheep rancher as lived in the great sheep country of western Montana I have ever read. If you read it, you can almost start running sheep yourself tomorrow—if you want to. In that respect it is a text book, concise, well selected, informative, and easy to remember." Struthers Burt

+ Books p2 S 6 '42 1500w

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 21 '42 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

"Welcome addition to literature of the West of today." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 67:737 S 1 '42 100w

"A thoroughly readable book that is local history as well as autobiography. It makes no pretense of being literature, but it does tell of an American way of life with a gusto, a sense of humor and a richness of human understanding that entitle it to a solid place among the regional books." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p5 S 6 '42 1150w

"This is not the West of Zane Grey, the horse operas, or the dude ranches. This is the every day, twelve months out of the years West which knows the hard winters, the droughts, the bad roads, the jangling bell of the party line, the problems of stock growing, the behavior of live stock, the hard work, the catastrophes, and the struggle to make a living in a country which is still and will always be wild at heart. But if anyone feels that this life, particularly for a woman, would be unbearable, Mrs. Call's book will quietly inform them to the contrary. Her story, like her life, is welded together by her interest in and her affection for all the people who have shared her life." E. B. Cox

+ Sat R of Lit 25:12 S 12 '42 500w

Wis Lib Bul 38:159 N '42

CAMERON, MRS ELIZABETH RIPLEY (MOORE). Prologue to appeasement; a study in French foreign policy. 228p il $3.50; pa $3
Am. council on public affairs

327.44 France—Foreign relations 42-16392

"As the title indicates, the scope of the book is limited. The period covered is that of 'the critical years' between 1933 and 1936, the period which determined the shape of events to come, appeasement which failed to appease, and war which brought the collapse of 1940. The source material from official foreign office publications available for the period covered is 'limited, first, to a defense of French participation in the organized plan of four-power collaboration put forward by Germany and Italy in 1933, and secondly, to a justification of the French rupture of disarmament negotiations in 1934.'" Ann Am Acad

"Considering the scholar's handicap implied in the scarcity and the nature of source material, the book evidences a remarkable degree of historic objectivity. It is in the choice of a number of provocative caricatures of personalities and events that the author's passionate liking for pre-Vichy France asserts itself." Johannes Mattern

+ Ann Am Acad 224:203 N '42 500w

Nation 156:68 Ja 9 '43 120w

CAMPBELL, MRS ALICE (ORMOND). Ringed with fire. 312p $2 Random house

42-19429

A novel based on fifth column activities in wartime London. Involved in the web are Mark Chantrey, an official in the Ministry of domestic security, and his young secretary, Persis Grant, who are suspected of being in the plot designed to prepare the way for a Nazi invasion of Britain.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p17 Ag 23 '42 200w

"Best of the week."

+ Boston Globe p17 Ag 5 '42 20w

"In her effort to maintain the suspense as long as possible, the author sometimes withholds information which might well have been given to the reader without in the least helping him to solve the mystery. Aside from this, Miss Campbell has done an excellent job of mystification." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p14 Ag 2 '42 320w

"Recommended to mystery addicts and to readers who think they can take their mysteries or leave them."

+ New Yorker 18:56 Ag 1 '42 60w

CAMPBELL, LEON, and JACCHIA, LUIGI GIUSEPPE. Story of variable stars. (Harvard books on astronomy) 226p il $2.50
Blakiston

523.84 Stars, Variable 41-22043

"Popular discussion of the discovery of variables and the techniques for observing and recording them. The authors consider such types as: pulsating stars, red variables, explosive stars, and erratic stars. Contains an

CAMPBELL, LEON—Continued
addenda and appendix of useful astronomical information." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 27:4 Ja '42

Reviewed by H. M. Davis

N Y Times p9 Mr 8 '42 100w

"This book will be of great interest to the host of variable star observers throughout the world, for the senior author is the dean of professional observers of this class of phenomena. At the same time he has for many years been the leader in organizing, directing, and inspiring the amateurs in phases of this work in which they can contribute something of value." Clyde Fisher

+ R of Scientific Instruments 13:184 Ap '42 140w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 O '41 90w

CAMPBELL, MARIE. Cloud-walking; with a foreword by Alice V. Keliher; il. by John A. Spelman, 3d, 272p $2.50 Farrar

42-22724

"The simple and beautiful story of the heirs of Daniel Boone who venerated the old ways that they had preserved for upwards of a century, shut off in their Kentucky mountains, but were still pioneers, ready to discover what was good in the strange new ways of living that came from the 'level country.' It is fiction only in so far as the author has woven these stories into a continuity built around the life of Nelt and Sary Tolliver, the dominant family on Laurel Mountain. Miss Campbell was the 'little teacher,' one of the first two who brought learning to the mountain. . . Sary and Nelt were both cloud-walkers; their minds ran 'a far piece off from things they had words to talk about.'" Books

"With a charm unmarred by either condescension or sentimentality, Miss Campbell traces the life pattern of these mountain folk who have been shut off from the world and have lived by their old-time ways. In them she found the dignity and kindness, the strength, the poetry and capacity for cloud-walking that have made America." Page Cooper

+ Books p14 O 18 '42 850w

"Recommended for public libraries as a further contribution to sympathetic understanding of a still little-known section of our Southern mountain region." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 67:909 O 15 '42 70w

"'Cloud-Walking' is an understanding, often humorous, more often deeply poignant record of one American way of life that has held its own in spite of the dizzying speed of outside changes. Marie Campbell has conveyed 'the unhurried flow of their narrative, the natural poetry of their imagery, and the charm of the folk speech;' graphic, humorous or imaginative expressions are not dragged in artificially for the sake of quaintness, but come in naturally as part of the fabric of speech. More important is the conveyance of the people's thought." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p4 D 27 '42 650w

CAMPBELL, WALTER STANLEY (STANLEY VESTAL, pseud). Bigfoot Wallace, 299p il $3 Houghton

B or 92 Wallace, William Alexander Anderson (W) 42-18814

William Alexander Anderson Wallace, whose nickname was Bigfoot, was a native of Virginia, who was born in 1817 and died in 1899. His brother and a cousin were murdered in Texas, and Wallace, then only twenty, went West to avenge their deaths. From that time, Wallace thought of Texas as his home. He was at various times a hunter, scout, Indian fighter, a member of the ill-fated Mier expedition to Mexico, where he remained as prisoner two years, stagecoach driver, and, for a time, policeman. This biography strives to separate the legends, which have grown up about him in the Southwest, from the facts, and to present Wallace as he was—a famous Texas hero. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:32 O 1 '42

"Mr. Vestal, who is a stickler for truth, has paid virtually no attention to the high-flown legendary Paul Bunyanesque tales about Bigfoot and perhaps this is just as well. The rage for folklore, which has been sweeping the Southwest for some years, has been very good in many ways, but sometimes it grows a bit tiresome, not to say downright silly. The Vestal version of the Bigfoot saga is competent in the main, but not particularly exciting; apparently it was not easy to obtain authentic detail concerning many of the incidents of the great man's life. But there is enough here to indicate that Bigfoot was a remarkable fellow." Stanley Walker

Books p8 Ag 9 '42 1800w

"Mr. Vestal has sifted the sources, scanty as they are, made due allowances for the probabilities, and rounded out a grand yarn, true in all essentials, one of the most thrilling and entertaining of the whole frontier." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 24 '42 400w

Library J 67:683 Ag '42 30w

Reviewed by Alice Vielehr

Library J 67:742 S 1 '42 110w

"'Big Foot Wallace' is a factual volume about an excessively fictionalized person. It is not the equal of Mr. Vestal's earlier fine biographies of frontier folk, but the fault is more Big Foot's than the author's." F. F. Van de Water

N Y Times p21 Ag 23 '42 1000w

"My only quarrel with the author is over his attempt to preempt a first place for his hero in the Texas hall of fame. Otherwise, I am indebted to him for another vivid and entertaining tale of a vigorous and colorful character." E. DeGolyer

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ag 8 '42 700w

Wis Lib Bul 38:135 O '42

CANADIAN pictorial library; arranged, compiled and edited under the direction of the Iroquois press, 5v il maps $37 cash; $39.50 time payment 1935 Iroquois press, Toronto

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries. Canada

"According to the introduction these volumes contain 'just what every boy and girl in Canada should know, and grown-ups too, for that matter.' The set contains five volumes, contents of which are, roughly, as follows: v.1. Table of contents; arithmetic; banks and banking; geography. v.2. Geography (cont'd); domestic science; grammar; handwriting; history of Canada; premiers of Canada; Canadian biography. v.3. Canadian biography (cont'd); national parks of Canada; agriculture; kindergarten; storytelling; primary department. v.4. Primary department (cont'd); primary arithmetic; nature study; Canadian animals; Canadian birds; Canadian flowers; wonders of the world; story of land; story of water; story of air; stories of common things; boy scouts; girl guides. v.5. Girl guides (cont'd); Royal Canadian mounted police; Indians of Canada; leading Canadian industries; wonders of industry; special days; index." Subscription Bks Bul

"In consideration of the inadequacies noted throughout the set, the need for revision of all statistical and political information, the poor organization, the incompleteness of the index, and the price which places the set in a class where a better tool should be expected, the Canadian Pictorial Library is not recommended."

— Subscription Bks Bul 13:11 Ap '42 2050w

CANNON, LEGRAND. Look to the mountain. 565p $2.75 Holt

(W) 42-36217

Long novel about pioneering in the New Hampshire Grants from 1769 to 1777. The chief characters are a young bride and groom who left the settlements to make their home in the wilderness of the Grants.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (11)
B & T (1) N Y Times (9) RB (2)

"One of the finest historical novels that this reviewer has ever read," Bruce Lancaster
+ Atlantic 170:132 N '42 700w

Booklist 39:48 O 15 '42

Bookmark 4:16 N '42

"'Look to the Mountain' must have been written slowly. It is both solid and leisurely and has the measured flow of a stream. There is a satisfying quality about it. If you think our times are hard, look back with Mr. Cannon. Or if you want to know how pioneers lived, you can't do better than to read about Melissa and Whit Livingston and their place near Coruway Mountain," Rosemary Benet

+ Books p5 O 25 '42 1000w

"This is a novel richly flavored with the basic stuff of the American tradition," Mason Wade

+ Commonweal 37:304 Ja 8 '43 210w

"Particularly desirable at this time when Americans are delving into their past with pride and in search of fortitude. Highly recommended," M. E. Clark

+ Library J 67:476 My 15 '42 50w

"Cannon knows his history as well as his contemporary New Hampshire. Writing with tenderness and strength, he can portray his characters vividly, and reveals a quiet and sympathetic understanding. The result is a moving, unpretentious piece of contemporary 'Americana,' but something more."

+ New Repub 107:585 N 2 '42 90w

"To say that 'Look to the Mountain' is a remarkable novel is specifically true. It is not exactly news. LeGrand Cannon has written two novels before this which many readers accounted remarkable. Thus, since he has been pretty thoroughly discovered already, one cannot very well shout the discovery all over again. Although that is what any reviewer in the rare excitement of finding a novel so soundly good and so freshly individual as this one wants to do. 'Look to the Mountain' tops Mr. Cannon's earlier work head and shoulders, as it is likely to top the season's fiction list. As for that matter, it would be likely to top the list in any season when it chanced to appear. Novels of this intrinsic quality do not come along every year," Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p1 O 25 '42 850w

"In this tale of pioneering life in the shadow of Mount Chocorua we have a book that is simple, vivid, and beautiful. It is partly idyl, and as such charming; partly realistic adventure story, and as such absorbing; partly historical romance, and as such impressive. Seldom do we find a transcript from the American past executed with so much sincerity, clarity, and delicacy," Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 N 7 '42 800w

Wis Lib Bul 38:137 O '42

"There is a robust freshness of feeling, an understanding of primitive courage and simplicity, a sense of the free and lovely wilderness from which they carved a spare living with heroic fortitude of soul and muscle. There is also an intricate knowledge of the details of living in those times which shows that Mr. Cannon has read long and sympathetically of their records. It is also a novel which renews our respect for our ancestors, and makes us wonder where we shall find the forests to frame and challenge the courage of the future pioneer," Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 31:x summer '42 420w

CANT, GILBERT. War at sea; with phot. and battle diagrams. 340p maps $3 Day

940.5345 World war, 1939—Naval operations (W) 42-5102

Account of the chief naval operations of the World war, from the beginning of hostilities in 1939 to December 1941. Index.

Booklist 38:249 Mr 15 '42

Bookmark 3:10 My '42

"This excellent running chronicle of the war at sea is characterized by the author quite properly as an 'interim report.' Obviously his book is not the definitive work on the current warfare at sea; that will come later; but it is a book which will be useful to the future historian and which, for the present, is both timely and informative," R. F. Armknecht

+ Books p2 Mr 15 '42 950w

"Those who are hazy about the effects of this war to date on Navies should hasten to provide themselves with a copy of Mr. Cant's 'War at Sea,' not merely because the New York Post's supervisor of foreign news has retold here, the story of all the more spectacular sea engagements since 1939, but equally because he has managed to tie these forays and adventures into a complete fabric of strategy. 'War at Sea' is a rousing performance," J. H. Powers

+ Boston Globe p19 Mr 11 '42 120w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:778 Jl '42 10w

"In view of [the] limitations Gilbert Cant of the New York Post has done a masterly piece of work in 'The War at Sea.' The book is in the nature of an interim report, as is frankly admitted in the preface, but it is an unusually good one, the author having been aided by diplomatic and naval contacts not available to the average military expert. . . The amazing thing about the book is its completeness and remarkably sound scholarship. Though the style is popular, accuracy is nowhere sacrificed for effect, and a number of statistical tables at the back supply detailed information to those not satisfied with a running account of battles," D. W. Mitchell

+ Nation 154:372 Mr 28 '42 650w

"Competently written and probably the most complete single account of the struggle to control overseas shipping lanes that has yet been written. It is not definitive—no book written at this time can be. . . There is, however, fresh material on the courageous action of the little Dutch fleet during the invasion of the Netherlands and well-written and comprehensive accounts of most of the naval actions of this war. This is a good book," H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 26 '42 180w

"It is a better book about the war than anyone has any right to expect during a war. The author has evidently had access to records and sources denied to the newspapers at the time of the events described, and he has made the fullest use not only of these sources but also of the vivid personal narratives of action which are, journalistically, one of the best performances of the war. If it is not the complete, definitive history of the war at sea, this is only because the author has lacked access to the minds and records of the men who made the strategy on the other side of the fence," Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 25:13 F 28 '42 230w

"'The War at Sea' is without question the best survey published to date on either the Allied or the Axis side. Its author's modest description of the book as 'an interim report' discloses the limitation upon its purpose, but completely fails to do justice to the excellence of the performance," Herbert Rosinski

+ Yale R n s 31:841 summer '42 800w

CAPEK, KAREL. The cheat; tr. by M. and R. Weatherall. 172p $2.50 Norton [7s 6d Allen, G]

[41-16888]

Nine people turn their attentions to the description of a poseur, each giving his or her impression of Beda Folten. Beda claimed to be an artist, a musician working on a great opera which he called Judith. The sketches build up the picture of Beda's cheating, lying course thru life and the devastating close of it. This is the author's last work, left unfinished at his death, but a final chapter by his wife outlines the conclusion of the story.

"Those who valued Capek's work will treasure this last piece, for, although it is not among his best, it is authentically his," Milton Rugoff

Books p14 O 18 '42 440w

"Even in its unfinished state this study of a pretentious rascal is something of an achievement, and it is enriched by many profound and illuminating reflections on life and on the function of the artist." Wilfrid Gibson

CAPEK, KAREL—Continued
+ Manchester Guardian p3 J1 4 '41 150w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
New Statesman & Nation 22:141 Ag 9 '41 1100w

"A piece of work which is a rare combination of charm and strength, and which promised to be something of a tour de force. Yet even as it stands 'The Cheat' has sense and meaning. This is wholly due to the original conception of it conveyed in its structure. . . . Despite the story's incompleteness, it is well worth reading." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p5 Je 7 '42 900w

"Capek's last book, and unfinished at that, but sharp, clear, and characteristically wise."
+ New Yorker 18:79 My 9 '42 40w

"Beda Folten, being no artist at all, can hardly be called a cheat in the high sense. He is revealed as having creatively no self to assert, and nothing personal which could possibly grow large enough to pollute the stream of art. He is just a ghastly joke, who could not even truly deceive his first schoolgirl-sweetheart, and so his ultimate, unnecessary humiliation and his miserable death make us uncomfortable, but do not point a moral. However, the light, bitter story does afford passages of that humane irony and understanding that were so rich in Karel Capek, and the last pages, rising above the too small theme, form a noble credo, good, brave, disputatious words on which to conclude a life of great writing." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 166:684 Je 27 '41 420w

"This book is story-telling of the ingenious and shrewdly comic kind that moulded the satirist in [Capek], not a venture into aesthetic doctrine. Yet satire has its quarry, and here it may fairly be described as the nature of art and of the artist. . . . Neither skill nor wisdom is lacking in this subtle fable of the essential impersonality of what is called art."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p285 Je 14 '41 1050w

CAPPY DICK, pseud. See Cleveland, R.

CARBERY, MARY (TOULMIN) EVANS-FREKE, lady. Happy world; the story of a Victorian childhood. 273p il $4 (12s 6d) Longmans
B or 92 42-15115

This book, the author says was "begun many years ago, when I was twelve, and [is] now retold. It is a record of a happy childhood in Victorian days, with its actual experiences in the everyday world, and its no less real adventures in the world of fantasy. Much has been left out: incidents have been omitted, a few names changed, but the original lines have been followed, and the child's outlook on life retained." (Foreword)

Books p10 Je 7 '42 150w

"I was entranced by this lovely book from the first page to the last. It was a new experience to read descriptions of a child's life which bear no trace of retrospection, are never 'sicklied o'er with the pale cast' of adult thought. A great deal of valuable information can be picked up from them about the way of life of a well-to-do county family in the mid-Victorian age." Christopher St John

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:97 F 7 '42 550w

"Lady Carbery has written, in a style at once graceful and natural, a most delightful account of her childhood. . . . The book is spiced with plenty of humour." . . .

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p82 F 14 '42 550w

CAREER women of America. 72p $3.75 Cultural research pubs, 20 W. 45th st, N.Y.

920 Woman—Biography. U.S.—Biography

"This book of seventy-two pages gives 'Who's who' type of information about three hundred seventy-three women. Of these seventy-five are included in American Women and eighty-five in Women of Achievement published by the House of Field, inc. There is no explanation given of the basis for selection and some very outstanding names are conspicuous by their absence; e.g., Judge Florence E. Allen; Dr. Meta Glass, President of Sweetbriar college; Dr. Mildred H. McAfee, President of Wellesley; as well as the deans of several other women's colleges. Only a few librarians' names are included. Most of the persons selected seem to be lesser known writers, artists, and lecturers. Dates of birth are usually missing. This lack is offset, to a degree, by dates which are given of the person's graduation from various schools. The biographical information under several entries was checked with entries for the same persons in American Women and found to be accurate. No classified list of occupations is included." Subscription Bks Bul

"It is questionable whether this book will add much to the resources of the average public library. It would be of some value to large public libraries and to speakers' bureaus if there were at least a classified list by occupation. Career Women of America is not recommended."

— + Subscription Bks Bul 13:4 Ja '42 320w

CARFRAE, ELIZABETH. Autumn glory. 283p $2 Putnam

42-18239

On the eve of her husband's death Lady Appleby goes back over the twenty-nine years of their outwardly happy marriage. Her recollections of her husband's arrogance, unfaithfulness, and snobbery, and of her own quiet acceptance of these facts for the sake of her five children, mingle with her cherished memories of the one love of her life—the man she could not marry. At the end Sir George dies, and the way is paved for belated happiness.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p13 Ag 16 '42 280w

"It is a clever story with a lot of common sense in it." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p22 J1 26 '42 240w

CARFRAE, ELIZABETH. Lonely road. 279p $2 Putnam [8s 6d Hutchinson]

41-28073

Tale of conflicting loyalties, of a young English pacifist married to a girl from a military family, and of their difficulties when England went to war.

"A poignant and truly moving book, written without ranting or rancor." Lisle Bell

+ Books p12 F 15 '42 450w

"The arguments for and against war are not very conclusive and the introduction of supposed Catholic teaching on the point is a little misleading, but otherwise the story is briskly told and the heroine's personality is developed with insight and sympathy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p281 Je 6 '42 150w

CARGILL, OSCAR. Intellectual America; ideas on the march. 777p $5 (21s) Macmillan

810.9 American literature—History and criticism. U.S.—Intellectual life 41-21084

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"Mr. Cargill shows himself a frank and fearless critic, an iconoclast vis-à-vis a number of sacred cows. He writes as he feels; and as he is frequently impatient with solemnities, his style varies from an excellent expository prose to a sort of shorthand journalism. His very imperfections, however, are part of the life of his crowded pages." H. M. Jones

+ Am Hist R 47:897 J1 '42 750w

"This huge, critically evaluating commentary on the historic and ideological sources of our intellectual life is an immortalizing survey of the heroes who assisted in the passing of a self-satisfied, circumscribed national ideology. Being a racy critical appraisal of contemporary American culture as reflected in literary works, it admirably succeeds in making us feel the effect of our intellectual life. It is a substantial study of those living intellectuals in American culture which, for generations of men now living, forms a vibrant present." Herman Hausheer

+ Ann Am Acad 220:246 Mr '42 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:781 J1 '42 20w

"Mr. Cargill has read widely and possesses a keen critical faculty, which he exercises with refreshing independence and frankness, as when he remarks that Cabell is, beyond all shadow of a doubt, the most tedious person who has achieved high repute as a literary figure in America and that only Wells surpasses him in this respect among the English." H. W. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 27 '42 200w

"New words are often both amusing and challenging; but, after all, ideologies are as old as the hills, and the analysis of ideas and their influence has been the work of many a previous writer. So, with all due deference to Professor Cargill, we cannot feel that he has created a new science. He has, however, written an immensely interesting book." G. S. Hellman

+ N Y Times p9 F 15 '42 1200w

Reviewed by T. I. Cook

Pol Sci Q 57:297 Je '42 330w

Pratt p15 D '42

"The book is packed with interesting facts, theories, suggestions, hunches, intuitions, and everything else; it is based on wide reading and ingenious speculation; but it suffers from a lack of concentration and steady focus. I hope that Mr. Cargill's next volume will not attempt to deal with the political scene so exclusively in terms of European influences. They have been important, but not decisive, and Ideas on the March gives too often the impression that they have been decisive." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

+ Social Studies 33:87 F '42 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p104 F 28 '42 480w

CARLISLE, NORMAN V. Your career in engineering. 253p il $2.50 Dutton

620 Engineering as a profession (W) 42-17758

An introduction to engineering for high school students. "It has been the author's endeavor . . . to give the reader a swift picture of the major divisions, and certain specialties in engineering; to picture the materials with which the engineer works, the problems he faces, the trends of engineering." (Author's foreword) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 39:15 S '42

"Here is a book that should be put in the hands of every high-school student who is considering taking up engineering as a profession. It has the advantage over earlier texts, most of which were prepared by engineers, of having been written by a skilled writer of books for young people. The well-written text indicates that the author made a thorough study of his subject. . . Of special value is the author's emphasis on the fact that engineering is not a romantic profession to be entered lightly, also that its rewards are measured more in satisfaction than in dollars."

+ Eng N 129:111 Ag 13 '42 200w

"One of most popular professions, vast in scope and diversity, engineering has needed just such a book as this." M. E. Monroe

+ Library J 67:688 Ag '42 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:40 J1 '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:133 O '42

CARLSON, OLIVER. Man who made news: James Gordon Bennett. 440p $3.50 Duell

B or 92 Bennett, James Gordon (W) 42-24810

Biography of James Gordon Bennett, the Scotchman who founded the New York Herald. Bennett was the most widely hated, but the most generally read editor of his day. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:119 D 1 '42

"Although Mr. Carlson's style is hardly spirited or rich, it is concise and straightforward. All in all, he has done an admirable job. The story he has to tell is curious, deeply moving in its own right and important to the history of both America and of the business and craft of newspapering. The research that has gone into this volume is obviously enormous. The facts have been checked carefully. The author's judgments are fair and temperate. The Carlson biography of Bennett is sure to take a high and respectable place among the really indispensable biographies of the makers of newspapers. Here was a genuine titan." Stanley Walker

+ Books p8 D 13 '42 2350w

"Mr. Carlson has evidently tried to make his biography as definitive as possible. It is a tribute to his style that even the palpable research—that having to do with Bennett's obscure years, for example—is thoroughly readable." Louis Filler

+ Nation 155:657 D 12 '42 650w

"One of the best biographies of the year. . . The book is well written and lively, and scholarly enough, with copious quotes from The Herald, including a long account of the Ellen Jewett case, the first 'love-nest murder' in American journalism, which is so fabulous it must be read to be believed."

+ New Repub 107:650 N 16 '42 120w

"It remained for Mr. Carlson to present a full picture of Bennett as a man and an adequate evaluation of his activities as an editor. He also gives a good picture of the times in which Bennett worked, times that were almost as vital and as stirring as our own. Still, Mr. Carlson's book seems to fall short of what it might be. He never quite makes Bennett live; one suspects rather than feels the force of the editor's character. Except for a few chapters his book makes dull reading." Neil MacNeil

+ N Y Times p39 N 22 '42 1050w

"Oliver Carlson's biography of James Gordon Bennett, the Elder, is fascinating. Undoubtedly it provides a better picture of the man and the times in which he lived than any other book on the same subject. Aside from all that, Mr. Carlson's story demonstrates that the whole evolution of the press has been an effort by many men over a period of many years to adjust the newspaper to public tastes and wants." Oliver Gramling

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 N 21 '42 800w

CARLTON, HARRY. Frozen food industry. 187p maps $2 Univ. of Tenn. press, Knoxville, Tenn.

664.8 Food, Frozen (W) 41-53012

"The book gives a general picture of the procedures and methods employed by the frozen-fruit and -vegetable industry from the farm to the consumer, with special emphasis on markets and distribution. It is based on a 1937-38 survey made for Tennessee fruit and vegetable growers and on subsequent study of published material on the industry and on visits to eastern packing and marketing centers." J Home Econ

J Home Econ 34:120 F '42 70w

Management R 30:236 Je '41 30w

Pratt p7 O '42

CARLYLE, ALEXANDER JAMES. Political liberty; a history of the conception in the middle ages and modern times. 220p $3.25 (12s 6d) Oxford

323.44 Liberty. Political science—History [41-16208]

"The distinguished and very learned author of the history of medieval political theory reviews in this short book the development of the European tradition of liberty from the late Middle Ages to the days of Rousseau. Most of the book is concerned with writers later than the fifteenth century. But the argument rests upon the medieval conception that the law provides the limits to the power of an executive. The attempt to establish absolutism in Europe in the seventeenth century is shown to be a break with tradition." Ethics

CARLYLE, A. J.—Continued

"The author supports his main thesis with skill and much erudition. It should be noted, however, that he identifies the concept of political liberty with a rather abstract doctrine concerning the ultimate basis of authority. In consequence, the author is much more effective when he is dealing with the continuity of the concept than when he is concerned with its development." R. M. MacIver
+ — Am Pol Sci R 36:151 F '42 550w

"With all its militancy of purpose, this book is primarily scholarship. It will stand as a useful contribution after the present unhappy controversies have receded into history." R. H. Gabriel
+ Ann Am Acad 219:183 Ja '42 550w
Ethics 52:120 O '41 450w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:568 Ap '42 20w

Reviewed by F. S. Marvin
Hibbert J 40:106 O '41 1800w

"Dr. Carlyle knows more about the history of political ideas than any living Englishman, and this book has all the virtues we are entitled to expect from him. Its learning is solid, its common sense profound, and it is impossible not to admire the easy mastery with which a difficult and complicated evolution is handled with almost equal ability in every century from Cicero to the French Revolution." H. J. Laski

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 3 '41 300w
Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
New Statesman & Nation 31:536 My 24 '41 700w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan
Spec 166:612 Je 6 '41 1050w

CARMER, CARL LAMSON. America sings; stories and songs of our country's growing; coll. and told by [the author; arrangements by Edwin John Stringham; il. by Elizabeth Black Carmer]. 243p $3 Knopf 734.4 Folk songs, American. Folklore—U.S.

(W) 42-50892

Combination of tall tales of American heroes, such as Paul Bunyan, John Henry, or Johnny Appleseed, and the folk or work songs which Americans have sung and danced to for many years. There are twenty-nine of the songs, some well-known, others comparatively unknown. Includes music and colored illustrations. For grades five to seven.

"As you go through this treasure chest you don't wonder that swing took such a hold on our present, when all through our past folk singers have done their best, whenever they sang a tune, to give it an individual twist, a personal syncopation belonging to that singer alone. You can learn a good deal about national character, too, from these home-made, hand-made, heroes." M. L. Becker
+ Books p10 D 13 '42 500w

"Recommended for all libraries." J. L. Sauer
+ Library J 68:83 Ja 15 '43 100w

"Mr. Stringham's arrangements have the great merit of being easy to read and easy to sing, but they are not always so entertaining as they might have been. To mention only two instances, the vigorous spiritual, 'Where, O Where Is Old Elijah?' is offered in the guise of a reel: 'Where, O Where Is Sweet Little Betty?' and the melody for 'The Lowlands Low' fails wholly to convey the mournful charms of that haunting ballad. There is, of course, no orthodox version of either words or melody in songs of this kind, there are only good and better ones. Mr. Carmer does not often present the better. Moreover, with a wealth of material from which to choose and little space to spare, he finds room for a treacly composition called 'Maple Sweet.' The numerous and blatant illustrations occupy pages that might better have been given to good tunes and lively words. It is a pity that the excellent notion of presenting a group of native songs in conjunction with the legends which grew out of our history should have been developed in such a catch-penny fashion." Babette Deutsch

+ New Repub 107:833 D 21 '42 300w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p10 D 13 '42 460w

CARMER, CARL LAMSON. Genesee fever. 360p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 41-25661

Historical novel about the Genesee valley in the 1790's. The hero, Nathan Hart, was a young school teacher from Pennsylvania who had been caught while siding with the farmers in the Whiskey rebellion, and had escaped to the Genesee country. In the valley he met Colonel Williamson, an Englishman of aristocratic ideas, who was selling real estate to wealthy landowners with the idea of establishing in America a replica of European country landed estates. In the struggle between Williamson and the small landowners, Nathan once more sided with the farmers.

Booklist 38:189 F 1 '42

Bookmark 3:16 Mr '42

"Carl Carmer's book is written with a high ardor for a section of the country he knows lovingly and well and with a glowing respect for the men of honor and conviction who were its early settlers. . . 'Genesee Fever' is an impassioned book generous with the many gifts of its creator." Rose Feld
+ Books p3 D 28 '41 1000w

"An undistinguished performance by the distinguished author of 'Stars Fell on Alabama' and 'Listen for a Lonesome Drum'. . . The carefully realized background raises the book above the level of a Hollywood scenario." — + Commonweal 36:20 Ap 24 '42 140w

"To this first novel Mr. Carmer brings the charming style and the knowledge of history and folklore that have made his previous books so popular. . . The convincing historical background and the portrayal of the early settlers make this a vigorous novel, but the love story of Nathan Hart is a little thin in spots." R. D. Minnich
+ Library J 66:1046 D 1 '41 90w

"Mr. Carmer has real feeling for the Genesee country, and as long as he sticks to the landscape or to his historical sources he writes an interesting tale of the settlement of upstate New York in the early 1790's. But when he departs from his sources, and when the lights of the landscape are out, the characters are revealed as concoctions of arrant bookishness." — + Nation 154:73 Ja 17 '42 110w

"'Genesee Fever' is not only, and by any standard, a limping novel, even for a first one; what is really sad is that somehow in his scuffle with the fictional process Carmer lost the knack of lighting up history. Even the background is dull, and he is working here with material he really knows." Max Gissen
New Repub 106:27 Ja 5 '42 350w

"'Genesee Fever' is a story with plenty of substance and vitality. This is not quite to say that Carl Carmer has leaped at a single bound into the front rank of American historical novelists. His narrative power is not equal—not yet, at least—to his descriptive ability. What his novel gains in depth and general interest it sometimes loses in suspense. But it is to say that he has written a book of unusual quality and that—if he has more stories where this came from—some first-rate historical novelists can begin to look to their laurels." Margaret Wallace
+ — N Y Times p7 D 28 '41 900w

"Carl Carmer's 'Genesee Fever' is sufficiently removed from the standard historical-novel groove to warrant mild recommendation. . . The local color—Mr. Carmer is an old hand at the game—is patly applied." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:56 Ja 3 '42 180w

"This is a sound, interesting, and carefully wrought historical novel. At times it seems even too carefully wrought; the reader would welcome more spontaneous invention, more glow and color, than Mr. Carmer gives us. The narrative interest is never of a kind that carries us away, while at times the flow of the story is badly choked by the introduction of minor characters and episodes. But taken as a whole it is a delightful recreation of an unfamiliar segment of the American past, with more of depth and subtlety than most books of its kind afford." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 Ja 10 '42 700w

"Best thing about Genesee Fever is the wealth of Carmer's authentic, affectionately painted regional period detail. He makes such dusty props as oiled-paper windows, Conestoga wagons and Liberty Poles as fresh as a glimpse at the youth of one's great-grand-parents; makes a succulent novelty of such frontier diet as pickerel, wild turkey, the bright yellow Indian corn. As a novelist, he must be credited with one novelty: he endows his heroine with boyish rather than feminine charms."

+ Time 38:50 D 29 '41 480w

Wis Lib Bul 38:15 Ja '42

CARMER, CARL LAMSON, ed. Songs of the rivers of America; music arranged by Albert Sirmay. 196p $3.50 Farrar

784 Songs

(W)

Words and music for songs about the rivers of the East, South, and West of the United States. Includes index to titles and first lines.

"The book, for playing and singing, or just reading, is perfect. It is like most truly American song books lovingly compiled, a history of the pioneering, salty, humorous, sentimental, brave country whose songs, whether they know it or not, 'praise the power that hath made and preserved us a nation.' F. P. Adams

+ Books p4 Ja 3 '43 950w

"A collection in which every singing American can take pleasure, a collection in which most of the major rivers of the United States are represented. . . . For the most part Mr. Sirmay's piano accompaniments are appropriately simple, although occasionally he fails to resist a suspension or a sophisticated harmony the simple song would have been better without." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 17 '43 750w

"Intrinsically the collection is excellent. . . . The book is printed practically enough in piano-music size and ornamented by woodcuts and line drawings of charming quality. Unfortunately the contents have all been subjected to a process that is denominated on the title-page as 'arranging' but that reminds this reviewer of nothing so much as what a restless housewife might accomplish by having all the family pewter silver-plated." Virgil Thomson

+ Sat R of Lit 26:30 Ja 30 '43 650w

CARNAP, RUDOLF. Introduction to semantics. (Studies in semantics, v1) 263p $3.50 Harvard univ. press

164 Semantics. Logic, Symbolic and mathematical A42-2422

"This is the first in a projected series of volumes which will systematically discuss various problems of semantics; its aim is to serve as a general introduction to this branch of study, and to supply the fundamental distinctions and terminology which will be assumed in subsequent volumes of the series. Semantics, in the sense intended by the author, is the systematic analysis of the relation between expressions in a language and what they 'designate' or 'mean'." J Philos

Reviewed by Ernest Nagel

J Philos 39:468 Ag 13 '42 1950w

"Professor Carnap's semantical theory has very little immediate connection with the attempts of Korzybski, Stuart Chase, et al. to develop the hygiene of linguistic usage and communication. It is, rather, a rigorous science of the relations of signs to what they 'designate,' deriving, as the author indicates, from the pioneer discoveries of the Warsaw school of logicians, especially of Alfred Tarski, who is now in the United States. This

'Introduction,' the first of a series in preparation under the general heading 'Studies in Semantics,' is the only systematic treatment in English and will undoubtedly be a standard introduction to the subject for a long time to come." Albert Hofstadter

Nation 154:718 Je 20 '42 550w

CAROUSSO, MRS DOROTHEE. Open then the door. 313p $2.50 Morrow

42-1102

The theme of this first novel is the trouble caused by an older generation in attempting to rule their offspring. Marc and Maude Dupee had lived all their lives in Flushing, Long Island, but their backgrounds were different. Maude was of old Puritan stock; Marc of French descent and a Roman Catholic. Their families predicted failure for their marriage, but the young people went on their way smoothly until the depression hit them. Their struggle to throw off the smothering affection and interference of their two families, maintain their independence, and save their marriage, provides the action of the story.

Booklist 38:346 My 15 '42

"There is little external action or drama in this book on young marriage; the incidents which carry the story forward are made of familiar homespun; the characters, however individual, breathe a deep kinship to parents and in-laws the world over. While not an exciting novel, 'Open Then the Door' is a significant one for young people who are threatened by the interfering good will of their elders and for older people who don't know how to let go of their children." Rose Feld

+ Books p8 F 15 '42 480w

"An honest, clear-sighted book. . . . The story is readable and interesting, the characterization strong and clear, but the style and the interpretation of ideas leave much to be desired. The author is too close to her characters; their ideas seem to be hers; she knows more about what makes a workmanlike story than about the real bases of life." N. E. M.

+ Cath World 155:115 Ap '42 230w

"'Open Then the Door' may [be] a little trite. The point, however, about Dorothee Carouso is that she individualizes her characters so sharply, writes of them so sensitively, but without sentimentality, that they take on a highly personal significance. Maude and Marc are not just any young couple who suffer from the depression. They are themselves, unique and charming, and because they happen to have shared a very typical experience it does not mean that their story is banal. . . . 'Open Then the Door' is a really appealing first novel. It is light, modest in scale, not startlingly original, but it has a quality of warmth and truth and naturalness that is rather rare." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p6 F 15 '42 900w

"The structure is, of course, ridiculously simple but the book does not rest on structure or need to; it rests on two truly engaging and noble people, and a supporting cast of completely plausible relatives, many of whom badly need shooting—but they are real enough to make the reader feel this strongly. . . . The writing is not quite even; occasionally it tends to slide over toward the good old Deeping-Cronin-Douglas soap barrel, but this is infrequent and the greater part of the book is very perceptive and very moving." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 Ja 31 '42 250w

"Mrs Havens is the archetype of heartless mother. The other characters are boldly drawn, without their company manners. The problem posed gives the book modern pertinence; the author's development of the situation makes it interesting."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e F 15 '42 160w

CARR, EDWARD HALLETT. Conditions of peace. 282p $2.50 (12s 6d) Macmillan

940.531 World war, 1939—Peace. Europe—Politics. Great Britain—Foreign relations (W) 42-16553

"Place of Great Britain in the new peace is the thesis. Victors in present war must look forward and not backward in search of principles to guide the postwar settlement. It is equally important that there shall not be undue preoccupation with security. Peace, in its political, economic, and moral aspects, is given thorough and scholarly treatment." (Library J) Index.

CARR, E. H.—Continued

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek

Ann Am Acad 223:226 S '42 550w

"This is a challenging book. In depth and range of thought, in capacity for taking the long view, in attractive vigor and richness of style it suggests comparison with J. M. Keynes's 'Economic Consequences of the Peace.' But Keynes could only write a pessimistic epilogue on a peace settlement that settled nothing; his compatriot, Professor Carr, has composed a reasonably optimistic prologue to the world order that will follow the present war." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic 170:104 Ag '42 600w

Booklist 39:7 S '42

Bookmark 4:10 N '42

"Many readers will find themselves in violent disagreement with some of Mr. Carr's sweeping statements, and in equally strong agreement with others. But no one who reads this positive and unflinching work carefully will doubt that it is one of the most important publications of the year." Allan Nevins

+ Books p4 J1 12 '42 1650w

Reviewed by F. R. Scott

Canadian Forum 22:230 D '42 1150w

"Among all the books dealing with the prospect for a just and durable peace, Professor Carr's seems to me the most important so far for the consideration of churchmen because it insists—and proves—that the problem is fundamentally moral and requires a moral solution." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 59:1055 S 2 '42 100w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.

Commonweal 36:258 J1 3 '42 600w

Reviewed by Alvin Adey

Current Hist 3:67 S '42 2100w

"Deserves a place on every peace shelf."

J. B. Fogg

+ Library J 67:581 Je 15 '42 50w

"In order to clarify these conditions of peace in one book, one would have to be an expert not only on international affairs but also on the inner working of democratic communities. Professor Carr proves to be the former in the second part of his book, which is concerned with 'some outlines of policy,' but he involves himself in contradictions and finds himself on unfamiliar ground in the first part, when he deals with 'some fundamental issues.' On both counts his book is, however, a fairly sound and faithful exposition of current ideas on the subject and is therefore useful." Bjarne Braatoy

+ Nation 155:56 J1 18 '42 800w

"Mr. Carr's 'Conditions of Peace' is, I think, by far the most intelligent book that has been written about the war and post-war policies of Great Britain and the United States. No earlier book compares with it in depth or scope, and future books are certain to be based on it. One cannot say that the ideas it presents are strikingly original in themselves. . . . There are criticisms of Mr. Carr's ideas that should be made. . . . In moving from the conservative camp, he has carried some of his baggage with him." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Repub 107:353 S 21 '42 1850w

"The book is important, and must be studied by everyone who claims to think about war and peace. It is not light literature, being written (though very well written) in the rebarbative dialects of politics and economics; close-packed at that. Many who laughed over 'The Twenty Years' Crisis' will be saddened. . . . The spectacle of Mr. Carr dancing about with a cat-o'-nine-tails is replaced by that of Mr. Carr digging for victory. It is less entertaining; it is more edifying. To interpret the needs of humanity to their rulers is a task for courage, vision, and the greatness which lies in the resolution to speak truth as the seeker finds it. The breath of that greatness blows through this book; the breath; it may be, of prophecy." Freda White

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:195 Mr 21 '42 1450w

"A book of urgent and compelling importance. For the author, who is Professor of International Politics at the University College of Wales, has conjured up a vision of the future. He has written a brilliant statement of the problems which face the world at war and has formulated brilliant outlines of policies for dealing with these problems. Both in its analysis of the crisis of faith in the Western World and in its suggestions of a true new order, 'Conditions of Peace' is masterful. It should lie on every statesman's desk and every cracker barrel in the land." W. R. Deuel

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 9 '42 1050w

"The economists are having their innings with Professor Carr's latest work, and their strictures will of course be given due consideration by readers trying to judge the validity of the author's analysis of the economic crisis of the thirties and the drastic re-orientation of economic policy which he advocates. The conviction will probably remain, however, that this admirable and important book brings out with rare clarity some of the deep-lying causes of the current calamity, that the remedies it prescribes are essentially the right ones, and that the economists will do well to devote their skill to assisting in the administration of those remedies. . . . It is on the question of Britain and Europe that the author concentrates practically all of his thinking on the forms and agencies of postwar organization. . . . The failure to set this continental plan in a framework of organization which recognizes the unity of peace and prosperity in all the continents will be one of the chief faults found with the book, especially by Oriental readers." P. E. Corbett

+ Pacific Affairs 25:487 D '42 600w

"The book suffers from the insufficiency of its fundamental approach; it is written before Pearl Harbor, but even this is no excuse for the complete disregard of the global character of the war." Hans Kohn

+ Sat R of Lit 25:9 J1 4 '42 700w

"In writing this book Professor Carr has rendered a great service. . . . If Professor Carr underestimates the difficulty of the German problem that detracts little from the value of his book. It is full of an independence and breadth of vision, a loftiness of aim and a sobriety of judgement which are rare in themselves and still rarer in combination. No more penetrating study has been made of the revolutionary epoch through which we are passing or of the conditions required for the building up of a new and stable society. As such it deserves to be widely read and pondered." Harold Butler

+ Spec 168:284 Mr 20 '42 1550w

"A book of unusual quality upon the one theme that touches every citizen of our world. True, this volume is not quite accurately labeled, for it is a manual of reconstruction rather than a forecast of the conditions upon which the war might be brought to an end. The book is extremely able and provocative. We are not likely to get, while the conflict is still raging, a better basis for debate upon what should be possible when peace returns." S. K. Ratcliffe

+ Survey G 31:429 O '42 650w

Time 40:112 S 7 '42 1500w

"Many will have much to criticize in 'Conditions of Peace.' The social, political and economic implications of its thesis are plain and, more than plain, are explosive. . . . It is not too much to say that this book is itself an act of leadership, a summons to a larger outlook, a rally to a worthy way. In The Times on Friday of last week appeared a leading article entitled 'The Mood of the Nation,' which has attracted notice. Its call was to a crusade. A timely and pertinent call. On the simple necessity of defeating Hitlerism utterly we are agreed. That is the negative side of the crusade. But victory for what purpose and to what end? On that positive side there is less certainty and more dispute. It is the high service of 'Conditions of Peace' that it gives the crusade a cause and the effort an end. It is no easy path to a millennial day that is offered. At least it is a path; but we shall not tread it under what Professor Carr has called 'the leadership of veterans' or by the light of the last century."

Times [London] Lit Sup p138 Mr 21 '42 2500w

Wis Lib Bul 38:135 O '42

Reviewed by Carl Becker

Yale R n s 32:159 autumn '42 750w

CARR, EMILY. See Carr, M. E.

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). Emperor's snuff-box. 298p $2 Harper 42-24671

Detective story.

Booklist 39:139 D 15 '42

"There may or may not be a name for Mr. Carr's all-over mood in this one. Comedy comes into it, in the dizzier turns of the plotting, sometimes a bit of farce, and it's all fine entertainment." Will Cuppy

+ Books p26 N 1 '42 280w

"One of the most ingeniously constructed mystery stories that John Dickson Carr has ever told." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 N 1 '42 160w

"Superb story, written by an expert. Prewar, too, for those who want to escape."

+ New Yorker 18:84 O 31 '42 60w

"A bang-up puzzle, good writing, interesting characters, sly humor, and soupcon of 'zizi-pompon.' Maestro Carr at his very best. Required reading."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:18 N 14 '42 40w

"A brilliant exercise in detecting, a chilling adventure in careful, coldblooded villainy, a sterling bit of craftsmanship even though one important bit of evidence is held back."

+ Time 40:104 N 2 '42 50w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). Gilded man. 284p $2 Morrow (W) 42-14999

Detective story.

Bookmark 3:18 My '42

"The tale ends more satisfactorily than had seemed possible in the first few chapters." Will Cuppy

Books p18 Je 14 '42 200w

"It is quite certain that . . . the story would not have been half so amusing without the unpredictable H. M. . . It might, with some reason, be objected that this story is a bit far-fetched, but even so, who would miss the opportunity to see the prodigious H. M. as the Great Kafcozalum?" Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 Je 14 '42 200w

New Yorker 18:72 Je 13 '42 40w

"Swell."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 Je 13 '42 40w

Time 40:88 J1 6 '42 40w

"Anyone who wants murder to be tragic in a detective story had better read something else. All the same, light-heartedness is so inopportune in 'The Gilded Man' that the verisimilitude of an otherwise admirable mystery is spoilt."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p537 O 31 '42 150w

CARR, M. EMILY. Klee Wyck; il. by the author; with a foreword by Ira Dilworth. 174p 2.50 Farrar [10s 6d Oxford]

970.4 Indians of North America—British Columbia 42-13577

From the age of fifteen the author-artist has been familiar with the ways and customs of the Canadian west coast Indians. These prose sketches describe her friendships with the Indians, her respect for their customs, and something of the daily life of these people. The title, which means Laughing One, is the name the Indians gave Miss Carr.

Booklist 38:423 J1 1 '42

"'Klee Wyck' is an experience to which, luckily, one can turn again for the sheer delight of touching another dimension in living. The spirit of Emily, of her Indians, of the totem poles, is as intangible and as satisfying as the shine of a sunstruck stone under water."

M. C. Hubbard

+ Books p5 J1 12 '42 800w

"Miss Carr saw, and catches in a few words, the characteristics and atmosphere of lonely islands and wilderness settlements. And she writes with a brisk and sensitive originality, as if she were smiling, or sighing, to herself."

+ N Y Times p24 Je 7 '42 550w

New Yorker 18:79 Je 6 '42 60w

CARR, ROBERT KENNETH. Supreme court and judicial review. 304p $2; text ed $1.50 Farrar

347.99 U.S. Supreme court. U.S.—Constitutional law 42-5375

"This volume is in no sense a treatise on constitutional law or a history of judicial review. Instead, its one purpose is to view the exercise of power by the Supreme Court of the United States as a part of the American governmental process. What is the nature of this power? Why was it granted to the judiciary? In what manner has it been exercised? What influences, legal and nonlegal, have helped shape the Court's decisions? . . . My thesis is that the Supreme Court is more readily studied and understood as a political agency, sharing with the President and Congress the power to govern, than it is as a judicial body applying strictly legal rules to constitutional questions." (Pref) Selected bibliography. Index.

"Robert Carr has done well his task. His book is addressed to the college student, whom the author takes to be a novice in the subject, an intelligent human being, a person curious to know why." Walton Hamilton

+ Am Econ R 32:902 D '42 1100w

"This volume will be of great assistance to law and college students in courses in constitutional law. Laymen as well as members of the bar will also find it of much aid to a realistic understanding of the operation and significance of judicial review in the development of governmental powers and in the establishment of restrictions upon their exercise." Isidor Loeb

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:551 Je '42 450w

"The importance of Mr. Carr's book does not consist in the contribution it makes to the subject of which it treats, but in the contribution it makes to popular understanding of that subject. Mr. Carr writes most engagingly. His selection and arrangement of materials reflect a high degree of literary craftsmanship. He has a quick eye for the significant issue, and notable skill in making its significance evident to lay comprehension. The work is a model of its genus and species, and deserves wide use." E. S. Corwin

+ Ann Am Acad 223:238 S '42 450w

"Mr. Carr has intelligently traversed the canonized sources: Holmes, Cardozo, Frankfurter, Jackson, Hughes, as well as Corwin, Beard, Warren and Powell. He has written a book which is a sound distillation of available scholarship. I cannot feel that his own contribution in analysis, organization and constructive re-formulation is very considerable, however." B. H. Levy

+ Books p21 J1 12 '42 550w

"The book admittedly is not intended as a legal treatise; the cases discussed are to be found in any elementary constitutional law casebook, and the historical side is presented mainly by quotations from other writers. It is rather a work in political science, showing the Court as an integral part of our Government and subject to the same influences and pressures as the other branches. As such it has real merit."

+ Harvard Law R 56:682 Ja '43 190w

Reviewed by M. L. Ernst

Sat R of Lit 25:7 Ag 22 '42 460w

CARR, R. K.—Continued

"The Supreme Court as an organ of policy functions only negatively. It exercises an effective veto over the legislative programs of the states and the nation, but cannot itself initiate public policy. The implications of this fact are important for an adequate understanding of judicial review, yet they are nowhere discussed in the book. Otherwise, the treatment is thorough and careful, although undistinguished." J. P. Horlacher

+ — Social Studies 33:232 My '42 340w

CARROLL, MRS GLADYS (HASTY). Head of the line. 355p $2.50 Macmillan

(W) 42-6830

Fourteen short stories, most of them about Maine and the people who live there. Several of the stories are about women of the middle years, some of whom step out of their roles momentarily.

Booklist 38:309 Ap 15 '42

"This book of charmingly told stories has a nostalgic flavor. It seems to have been written in the present about persons whose individual lives or whose way of life is waning. . . I miss in this book the sturdiness and sweep of 'As the Earth Turns,' but nonetheless enjoy these glimpses of that diverse and elusive quality known as the New England character." Mary Ross

+ — Books p6 Ap 5 '42 600w

"To anyone whose heart is rooted in the country, the work of Gladys Hasty Carroll is both like a refreshing drink of cold spring water that brings delight and a prod to memory which awakens nostalgic images. . . Plot, as such, is not her métier, although several stories in this volume reach a high point of perfection; what she excels in is portrayal of country and country character and, best of all, in the portrayal of those who have reached the years of wisdom and contemplation." R. F.

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 15 '42 700w

"Mildly ironic, warmhearted, filled with homely details of landscape or domestic interior, these stories are recommended to readers who want to escape from this world without too much mental effort."

New Yorker 18:79 Mr 14 '42 40w

CARROLL, MRS MARY (TARVER). Man who dared to care. 217p $2 Longmans

B or 92 Oglethorpe, James Edward—Juvenile literature 42-23511

A biography of James Edward Oglethorpe, the founder of Georgia, written in semi-fictional form for young people.

Booklist 39:123 D 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p18 N 15 '42 450w

"A lively and somewhat idealized account of the life and work of Oglethorpe. . . It paints a picture of noble purpose and a high conception of social justice, which should be an inspiration, if not a rebuke, to the inheritors of the tradition."

+ Christian Century 59:1258 O 14 '42 70w

"This well-told biography of a man who did his utmost to help others, in any way possible, is inspiring reading for these times." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 24 '42 30w

Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 20w

Horn Bk 19:41 Ja '43 70w

"Selection of incident and sharpening of emphasis would have made a more vivid and compelling book. Probably for large collections only. Ages eleven to fourteen." Eleanor Kidder

Library J 67:1070 D 1 '42 70w

Social Studies 34:47 Ja '43 30w

"Biography is not usually attractive to youngsters but 'The Man Who Dared to Care' makes its subject so vivid and alive that he is quite as fascinating as a creation of fiction."

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ja 17 '43 100w

Wis Lib Bul 38:190 D '42

CARROLL, WALLACE. We're in this with Russia. 264p $2 Houghton

940.5347 World war, 1939—Russia. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American (W) 42-22043

In an attempt to answer the question: Can we do business with Stalin? the author lays the blame for the German-Soviet pact of August, 1939 to the account of Neville Chamberlain and other British and French statesmen. His book contains an informal resumé of pre-war diplomacy and the workings of the League of Nations, and also a record of his visit to Russia in the fall of 1941.

"Mr. Carroll is a good reporter and his picture of the courage and stoical endurance of the Russian people at war is lit up with personal close-ups and amusing anecdotes. . . There are occasional slips; Stalin's patronymic is Vissarionovitch, not Ilarionovitch; the Soviet dictator does not frequently employ Biblical language; and the statement that he had no choice except to conclude the pact with Hitler in 1939 is a sweeping exaggeration." W. H. Chamberlin

+ — Atlantic 170:152 N '42 230w

Booklist 39:66 N 1 '42

"It is a quietly eloquent book. It's a thoughtful book. And it provokes you to do some thinking. Mr. Carroll will appear to some to have passed over too easily a few of the more brutal realities in the Soviet Union such as the state of religious freedom, guaranteed by the new constitution of 1936, and indeed the effectiveness of that constitution which reads so well but which, as the author does not fail to mention, has not been very fully observed. But on the whole Mr. Carroll is extremely realistic, not only about Russia but about Britain and America." W. L. Shirer

+ Books p1 O 4 '42 1800w

"The book is excellent reading for its description of life in Russia during those tense days when the very outcome of the war seemed to hang on the ability of Russian morale to withstand that first terrible surge of German might." J. C. Harsch

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 D 16 '42 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '42

Reviewed by Max Fischer

Commonweal 37:186 D 4 '42 320w

"A book that was well worth writing and publishing because it is a rich mixture of relevant information and clear interpretation of an important subject that has long been obscured by the many-hued mists of a frightful ignorance." Kenneth Brodney

+ Current Hist 3:453 Ja '43 550w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

Nation 155:517 N 14 '42 360w

Reviewed by F. S. Adams

N Y Times p4 O 4 '42 1250w

"The personal-experience narrative is trivial, the eye-witness account of Soviet fortitude is impressive, and the pro-Russian slant seems honest enough."

New Yorker 18:79 S 26 '42 40w

Reviewed by Alzada Comstock

Springf'd Republican p7e N 1 '42 650w

Wis Lib Bul 38:160 N '42

Reviewed by Michael Karpovich

Yale R n s 32:416 winter '43 170w

CARSE, ROBERT. There go the ships; with drawings by Gordon Grant. 156p $2 Morrow

940.545 World war, 1939—Naval operations.

World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. Merchant marine—U.S. (W) 42-25457

The author, formerly a newspaper reporter, shipped aboard a merchant vessel on a trip carrying supplies to Russia from the United States. His book records the experiences of that long, dangerous voyage, across the North Atlantic, around the northern end of Norway, thru the Arctic to Murmansk, a voyage beset by fog, ice and storm, German submarines, raiders, mines, and bomb-divers.

Booklist 39:135 D 15 '42

"A fine, vivid piece of work, full of the love of the sea, the desperate call of human courage and fidelity, and the awful new danger that comes to seamen out of the air. It is a book to make the hair stand on end, to turn the blood to water and shatter the strongest nerves. . . This is another book for the American public to take to heart. It helps explain a lot of things that hitherto have been hard to understand. As usual, the drawings by Gordon Grant are deft and true to type, and add greatly to the narrative." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p5 D 6 '42 1350w

"If ever a story was free of literary pretense it is 'There Go the Ships.' Every word takes you one step deeper into the action. There is no faltering, no dawdling to make literary curlicues, only relentless movement. That's the way it happened. That's the way it's told." Meyer Berger

+ N Y Times p2 D 6 '42 1100w

"If you're searching for additional reasons for buying War Bonds, try the argument contained in Able Seaman Robert Carse's 'There Go the Ships.' . . And that's why I think it's about time that we comfortable book-reviewers, sitting pretty in our steam-heated apartments, refrained from calling books like this 'thrilling' and 'tense.' Thrilling my eye! The merchant marine is not in the business of selling thrills. I think it would prefer to sell us something else." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:98 D 5 '42 550w

CARSE, ROBERT. Unconquered; Europe fights back. 225p $2.50 McBride

(W) 42-50213

"Mr. Carse has written nine chapters, each a story of the struggle against the invaders in one of the occupied countries: Norway, Holland, Belgium, France, Greece, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Poland—and Spain, which Mr. Carse considers to be, in some respects, in much the same sort of anguished predicament as the others. Each story tells the agonies, the ingenuities, the struggles and the unconquerable will to be free of a group of characters who technically may be at least partly fictional but whom Mr. Carse makes seem altogether real." Books

"The most colorful, most dramatic and fastest-moving account of the Underground I have seen." W. R. Deuel

+ Books p10 D 20 '42 800w

"Carefully detailed and highly dramatic, for the most part, though the bastard treatment gives us neither the guarantee of fact nor the elbow-room of fiction."

New Yorker 18:99 N 28 '42 70w

CARSON, MRS JULIA MARGARET (HICKS). Shadow Catcher; decorations by Theresa Kalab. 215p $2 Longmans

(W) 42-23591

Mystery story for young readers.

"Well written, closely planned, proceeding naturally, this story is well above average in its class." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ja 31 '43 330w

"Fun enjoyed on barge and unraveling of mystery of stolen pay roll make the story. Recommended for boys and girls from eleven to fourteen." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 67:1015 N 15 '42 70w

"The action is brisk and constant. The setting is familiar and vivid. The children themselves are refreshingly normal. The whole story is credible without being dull and thrilling without being impossible, and it should delight young readers."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 17 '43 110w

CARTER, DYSON. See Carter, H. D.

CARTER, HERBERT DYSON. Night of flame. 337p $2.50 Reynal

42-13380

A huge overcrowded hospital in an industrial city is the scene. The personnel and patients with their many problems are shown, especially important being Dr Stevens, a romantically inclined resident doctor, and the three women who love him, each in her own way. The climax of the story is the night of the terrible fire which reduced the East Wing to ashes, and resolved many of the difficulties of its doctors, nurses, and patients at the same time.

"The thread of this brittle and yet tautly told tale is broken by constant shifting of attention to first one and then another of the main characters. This results in confusion and a hodge-podge of bewildered personalities. In spite of this, there is mounting suspense that leads to a well-told really dramatic climax, which is the most moving part of the book." Margaret Sutermeister

+ Books p10 Ag 9 '42 350w

"The account of [the] fire is the outstanding part of the book, admirably constructed, convincing in all its details. . . But the trouble with the book is that the author's deliberate, analytical, somewhat reiterative method is not suited to dealing with so many [characters]. . . This first novel has variety, color, a feeling for drama, and in its climax a forcefulness and clarity of description which makes the gradually rising terror hideously real." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p19 My 24 '42 700w

"No brief synopsis does justice to an author, and it is possible that in times less grim it would smack less of the pulps. After all it shows better writing than many a first novel, and the suspense atmosphere is well sustained. With a little toning down of the sex element it might make a lively movie." M. S. Ulrich

+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 Je 6 '42 400w

CARTER, HODDING. Lower Mississippi; il. by John McCrady. (Rivers of America) 467p map $2.50 Farrar

917.6 Mississippi river. Mississippi valley (W) 42-23785

This story of the Lower Mississippi, the twelve hundred miles from Cairo in Illinois to New Orleans, is, the author says, "the story of the people of this valley"—Indians, explorers, the Spaniards, French and English settlers, the modern builders and engineers—"and of the river that has nourished and tempted and troubled them." Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:118 D 1 '42

"A book worthy to be added to the fine Rivers-of-America series, of which it is the nineteenth volume. Mr. Carter, who lives in Greenville, [Mississippi] . . . writes out of the fullness of his love for the subject. In addition to his first-hand knowledge, the man-sized bibliography indicates how thoroughly he has buttressed his effort by careful research. . . Such criticism as one may offer is, therefore, not criticism of quality, but rather of kind. To this reviewer it seems that Mr. Carter has devoted rather too much effort to the land along the river and not enough to the river itself and what happened on that mysterious, gentle, unpredictable, terrifying old stream." G. L. Eskew

+ Books p2 N 15 '42 850w

Christian Science Monitor p20 N 12 '42 400w

"This addition to 'Rivers of America' upholds the usually high standard of the series. . . Style improves as the pace grows. Excellent bibliography of source materials. . . Recommended." L. M. Kinloch

+ Library J 67:907 O 15 '42 70w

"By responding to the realistic rather than the romantic aspect of his river, Mr. Carter has written one of the best books in the Rivers of America series. His astringent approach is fresh and welcome. He has dug below the surface ease and softness of the delta life to the savagery and pain which lie beneath them." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p10 D 6 '42 1000w

Reviewed by C. B. Firestone

Sat R of Lit 25:57 D 5 '42 400w

CARTER, JOHN FRANKLIN (JAY FRANKLIN, DPLMAT, pseud.). Remaking America. 287p il $2.75 Houghton

309.173 U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Social conditions, Conservation of resources (W) 41-27149

Statement of the present federal government's achievements toward conservation of natural resources, flood control, economic stability, and personal security, during the last ten years. The author believes this program has strengthened us for war, and should be beneficial in the future peace. No index.

Booklist 38:172 Ja 15 '42

"Mr. Jay Franklin's opus is a bit too starry-eyed to be entirely persuasive, even to a reader who is convinced that the Rooseveltian epas has been, on the whole, a salutary development. Furthermore, the outbreak of war between the time the book was finished and the time it appeared has made some of its arguments, especially in the final summary, somewhat tenuous. . . Nevertheless, in spite of such doubtful elements, the book contains a great deal of information that would be worth having at any time, but at this particular moment is doubly worth while." G. W. Johnson

— + Books p12 Ja 18 '42 700w

Reviewed by H. N. Wieman

Christian Century 55:597 My 6 '42 300w

"This is sound thinking. Decent incomes, abounding lives, neighborliness, mutual helpfulness, and appreciation of art and nature are certainly more vital than politics and than many wars. Something epochal has been happening in our America. The United States is a marvelously good place. It is a wonderful promise moving to fulfillment. No American can learn too much about it. Mr. Franklin in 'Remaking America' is an interesting and stimulating teacher." R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ja 19 '42 380w

Reviewed by Paul Kiniery

Commonweal 35:468 F 27 '42 330w

"A book to broaden the understanding of government policies and to increase faith in our 'brain trust' form of administration. Engagingly written and illustrated with beautiful photographs." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 67:85 Ja 15 '42 80w

"This is a compact and readable job."

+ New Repub 106:158 F 2 '42 90w

Reviewed by Francis Brown

N Y Times p8 F 1 '42 1000w

"Well-documented and fluent though rather open-mesh writing. Excellent photographs."

+ New Yorker 17:60 Ja 10 '42 80w

Reviewed by R. F. Nichols

Social Studies 33:331 N '42 330w

"To any open-minded reader the record is truly impressive, and Mr Franklin's lively prose, refreshingly free from graphs and with a minimum of statistical data, presents the story in highly readable form. . . Both supporters and opponents of the new deal will want to read 'Remaking America.' Few will finish its dramatic summary of the achievements of the leadership from Washington without a new conception of what the past decade has meant to this country." R. V. C.

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Ja 6 '42 1000w

"This book adds up to a rapid, clear, and sympathetic account of the achievements of the New Deal in terms of material and human improvements. It documents in a vivid way an eight-year period which promises to be looked back upon as one of our eras of most rapid change in the relation of government to society and of economic activity to human welfare." Ordway Tead

+ Survey 78:223 Ag '42 140w

Wis Lib Bul 38:26 F '42

CARTER, PHYLLIS ANN, pseud. See Eberle, I.

CARVER, WILLIAM OWEN. Christian missions in today's world. 148p $1.50 Broadman; Harper

266 Missions

42-11528

Discussion of the place of Christian missions in the world today and a consideration of "the universal meaning and mission of Christianity." Contents: Christianity among the forces making history; Christian missions facing today's world; Christianity redefining its function; Problems of relation; Can Christianity accept its call for today's world?

"A valuable book, which does not attempt diagrams but deals with principles." J. H. Franklin

+ Crozer Q 19:255 J1 '42 250w

"A tolerant spirit and appreciation of the views of others pervades the whole volume." A. G. Baker

+ J Religion 22:450 O '42 140w

Wis Lib Bul 38:82 My '42

CARY, MAX, and HAARHOFF, THEODORE JOHANNES. Life and thought in the Greek and Roman world. 348p il maps $4; text ed $3 Crowell [8s 6d Methuen]

913.38 Civilization, Greco-Roman A 41-3107

"A comparative rather than a contrasting study of the Greek and Roman world. Including 'The Geographical Background,' 'The Political Background,' 'The Material Background,' 'Social Life,' 'The Written and the Spoken Word,' 'Philosophy and Science,' 'Greek and Roman Art,' 'Greek and Roman Literature,' 'Education and Scholarship,' 'Greek and Roman Religion.' Twelve illustrative plates are included at the end of the book." School & Society

Am Soc R 7:461 Je '42 10w

School & Society 55:56 Ja 10 '42 60w

CASE, FRANK. Feeding the lions; an Algonquin cookbook [il. by O. Soglow]. 255p $3 Greystone

641.5 Cookery

42-36149

Recipes for some of the foods served at the Hotel Algonquin, liberally sprinkled with comments by celebrities who have eaten at the hotel. Index.

Booklist 38:303 Ap 15 '42

"One of those cook books that are entertaining to read as well as tempting to the appetite."

+ Wis Lib Bul 38:83 My '42

CASEY, ROBERT JOSEPH. Torpedo junction; with the Pacific fleet from Pearl harbor to Midway. 423p il $3.50 Bobbs

940.545 World war, 1939—Naval operations. U.S.—Navy (W) 42-50141

Eyewitness report of an experienced journalist who went to Pearl Harbor shortly after the disaster and wrote this account of events in the Pacific thru the attacks on Marcus and the Marshall islands, to the battles of the Coral Sea and Midway.

Booklist 39:181 Ja 1 '43

"The most engaging qualities in Bob Casey's writings are simplicity, gusto and humor. This is not to say that he cannot be penetrating or analytical, but these qualities are usually put aside for the sake of a lively, vivid narrative. . . Boiled down all this means that Bob Casey is a first rate newspaper man of which statement his new book provides additional proof." P. J. Searles

+ Books p14 D 13 '42 950w

Reviewed by Gilbert Cant

Nation 155:724 D 26 '42 450w

"There have been other stirring tales of the fighting in the Pacific. W. L. White, Stanley Johnston and Clarence E. Dickinson have provided pulse-quickening accounts of our men in action. But nowhere else has the transformation of our Navy into a veteran fighting outfit, attacking with cold, ruthless fury, been so well brought out. Mr. Casey, writing with humor as well as insight, has given us one of the best of the war books." F. S. Adams

+ N Y Times p3 D 6 '42 1050w

"Good, sharp, eyewitness reporting, most of it in diary form. . . The author writes a pithy prose abounding in grim humor and horse sense."

+ New Yorker 18:102 D 5 '42 60w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 10 '43 800w

CAVE, HUGH B. Fishermen four; an outdoor adventure story. 242p $2 Dodd

42-21237

Kim and Hawk Kendall were sons of a guide in the Minnesota lake country. When their father was believed lost in a plane crash, the boys took over their father's business. A chance to guide two city boys thru the wilderness gave the Kendalls the opportunity to prove their ability to be licensed guides, and during the trip they solved a mystery. For older boys.

"This story of four boys on a canoe trip through northern Minnesota wilderness keeps one reading with the breathless absorption fishing itself rouses even in a beginner." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 10 '43 300w

"Story is made mediocre toward the end by introduction of highly improbable incidents, concluding with finding of boys' father. Recommend only as introductory reading to other outdoor books." Dorothy Lawson

+ — Library J 67:910 O 15 '42 70w

"Well-written, with a fine sense of boys' laughter, this is a yarn spun first of all for anglers, but any boy with a yearning for adventure, whether he has ever cast a fly or not, should like it for its easy movement and its fine flavor of the wilderness."

+ N Y Times p9 S 20 '42 260w

Wis Lib Bul 38:190 D '42

CERF, BENNETT ALFRED, ed. See Three famous spy novels

CERF, BENNETT ALFRED, and CARTMELL, VAN H., comps. Sixteen famous British plays; with an introd. by John Mason Brown. de luxe ed 1000p $1.98 Garden City pub. co.

822.08 English drama—Collections (W) 42-36051

Contents: The Second Mrs Tanqueray, by A. W. Pinero; The Importance of Being Earnest, by Oscar Wilde; What Every Woman Knows, by J. M. Barrie; Milestones, by Arnold Bennett and Edward Knoblock; The Green Goddess, by William Archer; Mr Pim Passes By, by A. A. Milne; The Circle, by W. S. Maugham; Loyalties, by John Galsworthy; Outward Bound, by Sutton Vane; Cavalcade, by Noel Coward; Journey's End, by R. C. Sherriff; The Barretts of Wimpole Street, by Rudolph Besier; Dangerous Corner, by J. B. Priestley; The Green Bay Tree, by Mordaunt Shairp; Victoria Regina, by Laurence Housman; The Corn is Green, by Emyln Williams.

Booklist 38:230 Mr 1 '42

Library J 67:320 Ap 1 '42 40w

CHADWICK, HENRY DEXTER, and POPE, ALTON S. Modern attack on tuberculosis. 95p $1 Commonwealth fund

614.542 Tuberculosis

Discussion of the current problems in tuberculosis control, and the methods to be employed in a regional control program. Stresses modern procedures in regard to the discovery and control of the disease. Bibliography. Index.

"The simple practical manner in which the authors present the epidemiological aspect is of particular interest to all public health workers. Too frequently control programs exclude practical application of all the information available from the epidemiological viewpoint. . . This book should be in the library of every health department and used as a handbook by health officers, public health nurses, and all others interested in tuberculosis control." R. S. Gass

+ Am J Pub Health 33:88 Ja '43 270w

"It is safe to say that if tuberculosis workers generally would apply the major principles reviewed in this book, they would be able to streamline their services to the end that the greatest yield will be obtained for the dollar spent." H. R. Edwards, M.D.

+ Survey 78:318 N '42 450w

CHAFEE, ZECHARIAH. Free speech in the United States. 634p $4 Harvard univ. press [22s 6d Oxford]

323.443 Liberty of speech. Sedition A 41-4297 For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"This is an exceedingly important and timely book. . . From the point of view of craftsmanship, this book commands admiration. Professor Chafee writes with a simplicity and clarity of style, and with a gift for pungent and epigrammatic statement, which makes extraordinarily good reading. The book should be read by every thoughtful follower of public affairs. It ought particularly to be read by every one charged with any measure of official responsibility in the matters with which it deals." R. E. Cushman

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:136 F '42 1000w

"Generally Professor Chafee's always generous intention is well balanced by sober good sense. . . Of course, a work of this sort has to stop somewhere. Nevertheless, I regret Professor Chafee's failure to comment on the recent remarkable extension by the Court of freedom of speech to include the right to picket. . . Another omission of the work is the logical result of its legalistic character, for this aspect is necessarily negative." E. S. Corwin

+ — Ann Am Acad 221:192 My '42 850w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:779 Jl '42 10w

"It is a pity we have no book on free speech in Britain anything like so comprehensive or so wise."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 1 '42 80w Pratt p22 My '42

"It is unfortunate that preoccupation with some of the immediate free speech problems raised by the war has precluded discussion of other equally interesting aspects of Free Speech in the United States. . . Many of them are associated primarily with times of crisis and will be particularly useful in the coming postwar period. . . Other subjects are of continuing general interest, e.g., exclusion of communists from the ballot, freedom of assembly, and censorship of various media of expression. A few of Chafee's comments (particularly on the Herndon case) are open to question, and there is cause for disappointment in his omission of certain subjects. The chronological arrangement of the book is often disconcerting, and the absence of transitions between disconnected subjects often results in a noticeable jerkiness. Nevertheless, these minor disadvantages cannot detract from the fact that, for lawyer and layman alike, Chafee's book is the best available storehouse of sound and competent information on freedom of speech in the United States." H. A. Fierst

+ — Yale Law J 51:708 F '42 2300w

CHAFFEE, LETITIA. Baxter Beaver; pictures by Roberta Pafin. [40p] $1 McKay

42-11050

Picture-story book about a small beaver, the only lazy member of a busy family. One day his grandfather played seesaw with him for a whole day, and little Baxter decided anything becomes work when you keep it up. The next day he went off to build a dam.

CHAFFEE, LETITIA—Continued

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p6 J1 19 '42 300w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 37:117 N 20 '42 30w

"Friendly little story." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 67:476 My 15 '42 60w

CHAFFIN, MRS LORAH B. Sons of the West; biographical account of early-day Wyoming. 284p il $3 Caxton printers

978.7 Wyoming 42-457

Anecdotal history of Wyoming from the days of Indian wars and the coming of the railroads down to the present. The materials have been gathered from newspaper files, historical records, and personal interviews with surviving early settlers. Bibliography.

"Lorah B. Chaffin, who moved to Wyoming from Illinois when she was seventeen, has written a compact and in many respects excellent history of Wyoming. It is a sound addition to the recent regional literature of the Northwest."

+ Books p8 Ja 11 '42 100w

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 29 '42 550w

CHALMERS, AUDREY. Hundreds and hundreds of pancakes; pictures by [the author]. 39p $1 Viking

(W) 42-18438

Adventures of the delightful Frizzlewit family on the Sunday of the hurricane when they had to bake and serve pancakes to the animals escaped from the zoo. Ages five to eight.

Booklist 39:73 N 1 '42

"The many drawings satisfy a little child's demand for violent physical action in jokes; the story is just crazy enough to beat the funnies at their own game and not so crazy it cannot easily be believed by a little person who loves either pancakes or giraffes." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 O 18 '42 230w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:382 O 15 '42 50w

"Sheer nonsense, but such nonsense! . . . It doesn't make sense, wasn't meant to. But children, from picture book age up, will adore it." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 67:955 N 1 '42 70w

"Drawings and story have an engaging, unforced humor and the logic of true nonsense. Children chuckle with delight over the determined energy of Mrs. Frizzlewit, the nimbleness of Mr. Frizzlewit, the helpfulness of the six children. It is all a joyful and convincing game of make-believe which child and adult can enjoy together." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p7 N 15 '42 400w

CHALMERS, BRUCE, and QUARRELL, A. G. Physical examination of metals; v2, Electrical methods. 280p il $6 Longmans [20s Arnold, E. & co]

669 Metallography. Electricity (40-9944)

The second volume of a work dealing with the physical examination of metals by an English authority. Volume I, dealing with optical methods was published in 1940 (Book Review Digest, 1940). "In the present volume, Dr. Chalmers unites with Dr. Quarrell, a pioneer in the development of electron diffraction research in metallography, to deal with electrical methods, thus completing a work which will be a boon to the research worker and an indispensable part of students' reading." (Nature) Index.

Reviewed by J. N. Hobstetter

Am Chem Soc J 64:2519 O '42 700w

"The book is recommended for those who desire to have a well rounded knowledge of the many different methods used in testing metals." C. B. F. Young

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:168 Je '42 200w

+ Nature 148:711 D 13 '41 240w

"The book is of value to two types of readers, those who are continually in search of new methods for application to a specific problem and those who must interpret and appraise the value of the results obtained by one of the methods described. . . As a whole the book covers an exceptionally large number of topics and discussions of applications. There are some omissions." P. H. Miller, Jr.

+ R of Scientific Instruments 13:454 O '42 900w

CHAMBERLAIN, GEORGE AGNEW. Bride of Bridal Hill. 229p $2 Bobbs

42-25237

"Dogs are to the Yard brothers what horses are to the Bolts down at Roundhouse Farm. This is the story of Bride of Bridal Hill, their prized and pedigreed setter, and of the all-important question of her mating, which Bridie decides for herself with surprising results." Publishers' Weekly

"It always has been a good stencil and Mr. Chamberlain has used it this time with more than average deftness. 'Bride of Bridal Hill' is light, easy reading. It will appeal to folk who don't want their fiction to surprise them unduly, for all the reliable ingredients are present. . . Most of the human characters in Mr. Chamberlain's tale teeter on the brink of caricature. His dogs and horses are more reverently drawn. It would have been pleasant to spend more time with him and them in kennel and stable." F. F. Van de Water

Books p18 N 22 '42 430w

"You don't have to know a thing about the breeding of dogs to enjoy the story, which carries its own enthusiasm for fine blood lines and for fine, simple, direct country people. The title, by the way, is the name of a dog." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p41 N 22 '42 300w

CHAMBERLAIN, GEORGE AGNEW. Phantom filly. 241p $2 Bobbs

(W) 42-25663

This is a story of harness racing and of a boy who knew and loved horses and possessed the "hands" needed for training racers.

Booklist 38:275 Ap 1 '42

"The Phantom Filly' is a story with a sure-fire theme—a boy with a born knack for gentling horses and how that talent molded his character. . . Maudeen Four is a heroine to turn any horseman's head—beautifully built, glossy, high spirited and with the clean smell of the inside of a red cedar chest. Of how many heroines in fiction can you say as much?" Lisle Bell

+ Books p14 F 1 '42 260w

"The story will delight the lover of trotting horses and will be an exciting revelation to the newcomer in that world." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p21 F 8 '42 180w

CHAMBERLAIN, JOSEPH PERKINS; DOW-LING, NOEL THOMAS, and HAYS, PAUL RAYMOND. Judicial function in federal administrative agencies. 253p $3 Commonwealth fund

353 Administrative law. U.S.—Executive departments. Courts—U.S. 42-17739

"This study deals with the judicial function of federal administrative agencies, which consists of finding the facts upon which action shall be based, determining the law which shall govern the action, and deciding the case, according to the facts as found and the interpretation of the law. It analyzes the manner in which the agencies deal with the rights and duties of private persons, the methods by which access to the courts may be had, and what happens to these decisions when they are contested in the courts. The investigation includes the commencement of proceedings, the settlement of cases by informal methods before the use of the judicial process, and the methods and sanctions by which the agencies enforce their policies and orders without reference to the courts and even without formal proceedings in the agencies themselves." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Table of cases. Index.

"From the reading of these pages one would gather the impression that all is serene and peaceful on the administrative law front and that the important issues arising from the review of administrative agencies have been reasonably and adequately settled. Nowhere does one get more than a glimpse at the sharp, and sometimes acrimonious, division of opinion among the Supreme Court Justices on the review of the decisions of administrative tribunals. . . In the opinion of the reviewer, an opportunity was missed to give light and guidance, not only to lawyers, but also to the public, whose rights and interests are vitally affected by the work of administrative tribunals on some of the extensively discussed and the strongly contested issues which have recently been agitated in the press, on the public forum, and in legislative halls." C. G. Haines

Am Pol Sci R 36:1161 D '42 1050w

"No student of governmental processes can afford to ignore this painstaking analysis of one of the most challenging aspects of our growing system of government through administrative agencies. . . The book suffers somewhat from its rather condensed nature. Clarity and instruction both would have profited by a greater use of illustrative detail that the authors no doubt could easily have supplied." W. R. West

+ — Ann Am Acad 224:215 N '42 360w

"The tone of the book throughout is conservative. There is no inclination to play down the faults of the existing set-up, nor is there any advocacy of indiscriminate wholesale reorganization. . . Much of the material here can be found elsewhere, notably in the Report of the Attorney General's Committee. However, this is not true, as the authors point out, of the chapter on sanctions, the material in which has for the first time been collated. The increasingly large proportion of the legal profession which finds that a major part of its practice is no longer in the courts but before administrative agencies, will find the book valuable. Laymen who are seriously interested in what is probably the most important development in American government in the last generation will find it equally so." W. F. Kennedy

+ Commonwealth 36:499 S 11 '42 550w

Reviewed by J. P. C. Carey
Survey G 32:27 Ja '43 230w

"The book is a significant addition to the literature of administrative law, even though the small volumes by Landis and Gellhorn surpass it in originality and in stimulating qualities, and even though in some respects some of its predecessors in the Commonwealth Fund series—Freund, Henderson, Van Vleck, Sharfman, and Dodd—may have delved more deeply." K. C. Davis

+ — Yale Law J 52:191 N '42 2200w

CHAMBERLAIN, PAUL MELLEN. It's about time [ed. by Margaret Graham Chamberlain]. 490p il $7.50 Smith, Richard R.

681.11 Clocks and watches 41-22246

"Popular treatise on the history and technique of watch-and clock-making, based on articles appearing in the magazine Horology over a period of years. The book, finished posthumously by the author's wife, is divided as follows: Part I, Escapements; Part II, Experiments and unusual timepieces; and Part III, Famous watchmakers. Bibliographies of source material and a large number of portraits and illustrations feature the work." N Y New Tech Bks

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 4 '42 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:53 O '41

Spring'd Republican p6 O 13 '41 220w

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL, ed. Fair is our land [the portrait of America] introd. by Donald Moffat. 252p $5 Hastings house

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel (W) 42-17327

Photographs and etchings featuring the American countryside, villages, towns, cities, seashore, mountains, and typical architecture of different sections. Some of the 68 etchings, lithographs, and woodcuts, are by Kerr Eby, Pennell, Nason, and Anderson. List of illustrations.

Bookmark 4:13 N '42

"Here is a photomontage of what God is generally reputed to have given us. By steering fairly clear of what man has reared in heavily populated centers, ugly and beautiful alike, the assembled effect shows our land as very fair indeed. This may be due to Mr. Chamberlain's selection of subjects or to the skill of the eighty-odd etchers and photographers whose work he presents." Richardson Wright

Books p1 J1 12 '42 1000w

Reviewed by Eleanor Daniels
Boston Globe p17 J1 15 '42 280w

Reviewed by Lionel Bridge
Cath World 156:249 N '42 550w

"A fine collection of strong, clean, and unpretentious photographs, weakened by the inclusion of a few insipid etchings. There are no contributions from the 'Tobacco Road' school of photography, but an abundance of technically superb images of often fabulously beautiful landscapes."

+ — Nation 155:489 N 7 '42 120w

"All of it is impressive. Most of it is stirringly beautiful. Yet some of the most poignant pictures are of simple, sturdy, homely things: that lighted porch on a plain little frame house in South Dakota, the swimming hole at Pine Grove Mills in Pennsylvania, the Colorado town that stands beneath the rugged hills. This is beauty—and more. It is something deep-rooted and strong and proud and free. . . It is America."

+ N Y Times p5 J1 5 '42 200w

"Just about the handsomest and most moving picture book you are likely to find this year."

+ New Yorker 18:56 J1 4 '42 140w

Pratt p21 D '42

"Aside from the criticism that certain regions receive more attention than others, and that the seamy side of life is carefully excluded, there can be only commendation for Mr. Chamberlain's splendid selection of more than three hundred and seventy-five magnificent photographs and etchings, characteristic of peaceful America. Here is drama and beauty, the serene countryside and the bustling city, glistening mountain peak and sombre plain—the homes of a free people."

+ Scientific BK Club R 13:3 S '42 140w

CHAMBERLIN, CHARLES DEAN, and others. Did they succeed in college? the follow-up study of the graduates of the thirty schools; pref. by Max McConn. (Progressive educ. assn. Comm. on the relation of school and college. Adventure in Am. educ) 291p $2.50 Harper

371.214 Colleges and universities—Entrance requirements. Education, Higher. Education, Secondary 42-21266

Report on the work done in college by a selected group of "progressive school" graduates in comparison with a control group of students conventionally prepared for college.

"Much of the book is devoted to technical matters, but it is unexpectedly readable, the writing being generally agreeable and even witty on occasion." H. M. Parshley

+ Books p23 O 18 '42 550w

School & Society 56:135 Ag 15 '42 50w

CHAMBERLIN, WILLIAM HENRY. Canada today and tomorrow. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 335p $3 Little 917.1 Canada (W) 42-23505

"A picture of modern Canada, its war effort, its personalities, politics, and economics, along with some tentative suggestions as to the probable Canadian future." (Foreword) Index.

Am Hist R 48:403 Ja '43 30w

Booklist 39:68 N 1 '42

"Mr. Chamberlin's contribution is packed with intelligence and goodwill and should help to bring the North American allies even closer together." Joseph Driscoll

+ Books p5 O 11 '42 1000w

"One of the best reporters in the world tells citizens of the U.S.A. what they need to know about their northern neighbors. And he really tells. Some of the reviews have complained that Mr. Chamberlin has not written a sufficiently profound book. He never tried to write such a book. Instead, he tried to do a first-class job of journalism, and he has succeeded magnificently."

+ Christian Century 59:1495 D 2 '42 230w

Reviewed by J. S. Gurley

Current Hist 3:356 D '42 280w

Reviewed by J. H. Gray

Nation 155:551 N 21 '42 750w

Reviewed by P. J. Philip

N Y Times p4 D 13 '42 1050w

"One of our ablest reporters gives us an equable, understanding, up-to-the-minute survey of Canada at war."

+ New Yorker 18:91 O 17 '42 60w

"The prospective reader of this timely book should not be misled by its title. There is something in it of Canada's past, much of the present, but almost nothing of the future. This is, perhaps, as it should be, since Mr. Chamberlin gains a sure touch only when he ceases to be historian and becomes observer, and loses it when he turns prophet. His first chapter on Canadian history and his last on what is to come are uninspired. But in the main body of the book he has given, on the whole, an excellent account of present-day Canada." H. P. Whidden, Jr.

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:3 O 31 '42 600w

Wis Lib Bul 38:185 D '42

"Mr. Chamberlin's study is based, it appears, on only a few months' stay in Canada. Parts of it read a little too much like compilations from books of reference. But his judgments are always shrewd and well-balanced; and what he has to say on sectionalism, on the deep cleavage between French and English Canadians, on the Canadian war effort, on agrarian and labor discontent, on the triangular relationship of Canada, Great Britain, and the United States, and on the nature of Canadian politics and parties, seems to this reviewer to be generally sound. Some of his facts are already out of date. The paragraph about Canada following the same road as the United States in income taxes will seem peculiarly inappropriate to any Canadian who has lately been adjusting his whole way of life to meet the new taxes imposed by the Canadian government this year." F. H. Underhill

+ — Yale R n s 32:402 winter '43 900w

CHAMBERLIN, WILLIAM HENRY. World's iron age. reissue 402p $3.50 Macmillan

909.82 World politics, Civilization, World war, 1939- (W) 41-52067

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Reviewed by Reinhard Bendix

Am J Soc 48:290 S '42 300w

"The chief value of this book rests in the fact that it is a carefully thought-out minority report on the last twenty-five years of world history. It is also the gloomiest interpretation that this reviewer has read. . . Mr. Chamberlin has written a courageous if gloomy analysis of our present social convulsion." W. H. Heicher

Ann Am Acad 220:210 Mr '42 700w

"A masterpiece of pessimism over the fate of our liberal, civilized world. Perhaps Mr. Chamberlin's dark outlook is in part due to his long residence in countries where liberty is dead. In any case his own people have now, by the irresistible impact of events, been compelled to abandon the policy of neutrality and appeasement which he advocated in these pages." R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:568 Ap '42 130w

"Much of the writing is confused, digressive; some of it downright naïve. Yet a clear pattern of thought and emotion emerges, and an analysis of that intellectual structure is essential for an understanding of the honest isolationist viewpoint." Paul Birdsall

+ — Pol Sci Q 57:130 Mr '42 1000w

CHAMBERS, BERNICE GERTRUDE. Color and design in apparel. 627p il pl $4.75 Prentice-Hall

646 Clothing and dress. Color 42-12490

"This book is an interesting approach to clothing from the retailing angle. It covers consumer standards, color and design principles, design periods, modern designers, modern fabrics, selection of apparel, grooming, millinery, accessories, and men's clothing. It is profusely illustrated. There is a chapter on how to make a notebook. The bibliography has 1942 listings. A good glossary of terms used in the retail field is included in many of the chapters." (J Home Econ) Index.

Booklist 38:380 Je 15 '42

"The book is based more on current fashion notes than on scientific data and would be more helpful to those interested in the commercial field than to those concerned with clothing in home economics." D. W. Erway

J Home Econ 34:682 N '42 120w

Pratt p14 D '42

CHAMBERS, DANA, pseud. See Leffingwell, A.

CHAMBERS, ELWYN WHITMAN. See Chambers, W.

CHAMBERS, MRS MARIA CRISTINA (MENA). Water-carrier's secrets; pictures by Leonard Weisgard. 157p $2 Oxford 42-19649

Story of Juan de Dios, of how he elected to carry on his father's trade, of his love for the orphan girl, Dolores, and how he gave her up when he found she loved his brother. For young readers of twelve and over.

"The spiritual atmosphere of village Mexico pervades this story for children over twelve; it takes the place of plot and is carried out in the production of this handsome volume, whose many full-page pictures, in cream on a warm background of the color we call Mexican brown, are decorations holding the scheme together rather than what children consider illustrations. . . The story ties in more information about the inner life of the Mexican Indian than is found in other books about his country." M. L. Becker

+ Books p32 N 15 '42 300w

"The Water Carrier's Secret is for all lovers of Mexico of almost any age. . . Mr. Weisgard has caught the proper mood in his striking orange and black lithographs."

+ Cath World 156:379 D '42 90w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:119 N 20 '42 10w

"Book has a curious charm despite its attenuated plot and somewhat labored use of Mexican words. . . Will not be read by many, but those who find it will be rewarded by a real and enduring feeling for Mexico. Ages twelve to sixteen." Gertrude Andrus

+ — Library J 67:797 S 15 '42 110w

CHAMBERS, WHITMAN. Amigo. 256p $2.50
Howell, Soskin

42-3945

A short novel, told in the terse Hemingway manner, describing life among the lower classes along the Key West waterfront.

"Whitman Chambers belongs to the tough school of fiction. That is to say, he's good at moving along the action of his story on rails of monosyllabic dialogue. Like the other members of his school, he's disillusioned on the surface but incurably sentimental at the core. . . . The author of 'Amigo' knows how to handle the dialogue, which is his chief instrument in telling a story, making it at once the vehicle of action, character and atmosphere; and he observes the convention of the first person as narrator. . . . If Chambers can get astride a more contemporary and exciting theme, we may yet see him ride." Milton Hindus

Books p10 F 8 '42 460w

Reviewed by F. T. Marsh
N Y Times p24 Mr 8 '42 500w

"Told à la Hemingway, but with some new tricks."

New Yorker 17:70 F 14 '42 70w

CHAMBERS, WHITMAN. Bring me another murder. 249p $2 Dutton
(W) 42-25514

Detective story.

"A fair-to-middling crime puzzle." Will Cuppy

Books p10 D 20 '42 170w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p22 D 6 '42 180w

"Rough-and-tumble."

Sat R of Lit 25:58 D 5 '42 40w

Spring'd Republican p7e D 27 '42 130w

CHAMPION, PAUL V. Creative crate craft. 110p il $1.50 Bruce pub.

684 Furniture 42-18251

"Taking into account the fact that the cost of materials is an important factor to most home craftsmen, and in many schools, the author has worked out a series of projects which call only for discarded shipping containers. New material may be used if desired, but is not necessary." Wis Lib Bul

"Recommended." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:687 Ag '42 80w

Wis Lib Bul 38:133 O '42

CHANDLER, RAYMOND. High window. 240p $2 Knopf

42-17988

Detective story.

"Right now we regard Raymond Chandler as the pick of the hard-boiled mystery scribes. He strikes a reasonable and highly entertaining balance between the way most people talk and the kind of hardness that just makes you tired." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 Ag 23 '42 200w

New Repub 107:294 S 7 '42 40w

"Raymond Chandler has given us a detective who is hard-boiled enough to be convincing without being disgustingly tough, and that is no mean achievement." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 Ag 16 '42 240w

New Yorker 18:60 Ag 22 '42 80w

Time 40:116 S 7 '42 40w

CHAPELLE, MRS GEORGETTE LOUISE (MEYER) (DICKEY MEYER, pseud). Needed —women in aviation. 219p il $2 McBride

629.13 Women in aeronautics (W) 42-36191

A young journalist-photographer who is also an aviator considers the different kinds of jobs in civil air patrol, aircraft manufacturing, and commercial aviation, which are open to women. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 38:325 My 1 '42

"Librarians and school officials may make this book available to girls with full assurance that it talks good realistic sense." Wolfgang Langewiesch

+ Books p18 Je 7 '42 180w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 24 '42 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:22 Ap '42

CHAPELLE, MRS GEORGETTE LOUISE (MEYER) (DICKEY MEYER, pseud). Needed —women in government service. 220p il $2 McBride

351.1 Woman—Occupations. Civil service—U.S. (W) 42-36315

"Practical, up-to-date information and guidance in discovering one's aptitudes and opportunities in new fields and old. Brisk, inspiring style, with such chapter headings as: Girl with a Needle, Girl on a Roof Top, Girl with a Dictionary, Girl with a T-square. Illustrated with excellent photographs, many by author. Sample tests for telephone operator, assistant messenger, and junior stenographer." Library J

Booklist 39:43 O 15 '42

"Recommended for all libraries, young people and adult." Maude Adams

+ Library J 67:958 N 1 '42 70w

"This book is a must on the shelves of guidance and placement officers."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e 110w

CHAPELLE, HOWARD IRVING. Boatbuilding; a complete handbook of wooden boat construction. 624p il $5 Norton

623.8 Boat building (W) 41-28030

"This authoritative work gives detailed instruction on how to go about each job; also the advantages and disadvantages of each type of construction suitable for amateurs is described. The sketches have been made from actual construction details. Costs, tools and time factors are taken into consideration." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 38:173 Ja 15 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:12 Ja '42

CHAPIN, KATHERINE GARRISON (MRS FRANCIS BEVERLEY BIDDLE). Plainchant for America; poems and ballads; with an essay The quality of poetry. 141p $2 Harper

811 (W) 42-1329

Collection of poems on American national traits in history, epochal incidents in our national life, and descriptions of landscapes in America and abroad. Includes an essay containing the author's theory of poetry—that it is not an escape from life, but an expression of it.

Booklist 38:230 Mr 1 '42

"The most interesting sections in Miss Chapin's book are her 'Essay on the quality of Poetry' and her two ballad poems—the essay because it is an admirable statement of credo, the ballad poems because they are remarkably successful illustration and substantiation of that credo." Ruth Lechlitter

+ Books p8 F 1 '42 550w

"The third volume of Katherine Chapin's poetry reveals an extensive range in theme and technique which the two earlier works had only indicated. . . . She has an ideology (which is the structure of poetry, the prose content) but lacks a sufficient volume of texture in her technique to give her work the dualism of images and logical substance which makes for major poetry. . . . Katherine Chapin compensates with a wealth of varied external techniques for what she lacks in internal planes that are inherent in a private sensibility. Her words are linear in the act of continuing scenes; close to the classic equivalent. Her best things are the ballad poems to be sung by choruses, which is a new direction of her talents." Maurice Swan

CHAPIN, K. G.—Continued

+ — N Y Times p5 Ja 18 '42 500w

"The poems of Katherine Garrison Chapin tell us things that we know. There is no straining for originality in thought or form. Her book is distinguished by many of the qualities of good workmanship, and by genuine—if not always very searching—feeling. I like best certain of her short, unassuming poems, such as Trees Under Snow." Lloyd Frankenberg

+ — Poetry 60:105 My '42 700w

"Miss Chapin is a fine and sincere poet, with the emotional capacity and the technical equipment to carry her far along her chosen path." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 Ag 15 '42 450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:28 F '42

CHAPMAN, D. H. Seasons and the woodman; a book for children; with drawings by C. F. Tunncliffe; and an introd. by F. Fraser Darling. 79p $1.75 Macmillan [6s Cambridge] 634.9 Forests and forestry—Juvenile literature

A book on forests and forestry in Great Britain intended for young readers. It opens with chapters on the nature and kinds of trees, on forests in general and on the woodman and his works. Part two follows the work of the forester thruout the four seasons of year.

"The appeal has two deep springs: [the book is] full of the beauty and wonder of the forest and of understanding sympathy with the obscure, often heroic men who work in the woods." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ap 12 '42 90w

"One of series of four social studies of Great Britain. . . Notwithstanding use of many British words unfamiliar to American children, teachers of elementary social studies will welcome these because they offer a specific atmosphere." A. E. Brown

+ Library J 67:415 My 1 '42 80w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p8 Ji 19 '42 120w

New Yorker 18:78 My 23 '42 70w

CHAPMAN, MARISTAN, pseud. of MARY and STANTON CHAPMAN. Mystery on the Mississippi; il. by James McKell. 270p $2 Appleton-Century

42-24490

Mystery story for young readers.

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p10 D 13 '42 120w

"Authors who write for adults are seldom successful when they attempt to reach younger readers. Maristan Chapman is an outstanding exception. . . Boys in the early teens will find plenty here to hold their interest and satisfy their craving for action through print."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e D 27 '42 140w

CHAPPELL, CLOVIS GILLHAM. Feminine faces. 219p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

220.92 Women in the Bible 42-5030

Character sketches of sixteen women found in the Bible: Lot's wife, Hagar, Rebekah, Miriam, Deborah, Delilah, the maidservant of Naaman's wife, Job's wife, the widow of Zeraheth, Esther, Salome, the poor widow, Martha, Mary, Anna, the woman of Sychar.

"Their stories are told in that terse and crisp style that is one factor in Dr. Chappell's great popularity as a preacher."

+ Christian Century 59:154 F 4 '42 30w

"A series of carefully and thoughtfully worked out vignettes of representative women of Bible times. . . This is a stimulating book which may well be recommended to readers of any or no denomination." T. L. L.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 7 '42 600w

CHAPPLE, ELIOT DISMORE, and COON, CARLETON STEVENS. Principles of anthropology. 718p il maps $3.75 Holt

572 Anthropology

42-6145

"In recent years sociologists, and to a lesser extent, political scientists and economists, have felt the need for anthropological methods and data in pursuing their own particular interests, while those anthropologists who concern themselves with the manner in which societies function, an important branch of anthropology, have reached the view that if the principles which seem to operate in other human societies are valid, they will apply to our own social system as well. Dr. Chapple and Dr. Coon have presented the first comprehensive application of this point of view." Social Studies

"In spite of an unhappy choice of title and of a tendency to use long-established technical terms with new and unfamiliar meanings, the book possesses much value for the advanced student because of its unique approach. . . To the reviewer, the most serious weakness of the approach used in this book appears to be the almost complete lack of differentiation between those interactions which take place in genuinely interpersonal terms and represent a result of individual adjustment, and those interactions which are based on the relative positions of individuals in an established social structure. . . In spite of these strictures, the present book constitutes a valuable addition to the literature on social theory, and its basic postulates deserve further testing." Ralph Lin-ton

+ — Ann Am Acad 221:229 My '42 600w

"It should be mentioned that much of the analysis of cultural data appears, to this reviewer at least, somewhat oversimplified. . . On the positive side, however, it may be said that the authors have taken great pains to make their theoretical bias clear and to make a sharp distinction between the actual facts and their interpretations of the facts. This quality, rare enough in elementary texts, makes the book useful even to those who do not accept the authors' theoretical position in its entirety." Harry Hoijer

+ — Social Forces 21:247 D '42 550w

"Will be welcomed by all social scientists and should be appreciated particularly by those teachers who have slight direct acquaintance with anthropological data. The factual evidence for the discussion is abundant and well chosen but never burdensome, a feature too seldom found in textbooks of importance." D. S. Davidson

+ Social Studies 33:234 My '42 340w

CHARLES, PIERRE. Prayer for all men; tr. by F. J. Sumner. 143p $1.75 Kenedy [5s Sands]

264.1 Prayer

42-25607

"As members of the Mystical Body, all Christians should learn to focus their prayer beyond their own individual needs, and these meditations are intended to help the Christian to a fuller realization of the missionary part he has to play in what the author terms 'the whole work of God.' The book is divided into thirty-three short chapters, each providing a fruitful subject for meditation." Times [London] Lit Sup

Cath World 155:633 Ag '42 110w

Times [London] Lit Sup p119 Mr 7 '42 60w

CHARTERIS, LESLIE. Saint goes West; some further exploits of Simon Templar. 276p $2 Doubleday

42-18494

Three stories about the adventures of The Saint in Arizona, in Palm Springs, and Hollywood. In the first he rounds up a group of Nazis in Arizona; in the second he becomes a bodyguard, and prevents a serious crime. In Hollywood he takes an assignment to play himself in a movie and the producer is murdered.

"The twenty-third Saint volume [is] elegant entertainment." Will Cuppy
+ Books p12 Je 21 '42 300w

"Naturally, the Saint has an exciting time of it; he always does, and so do the people who read the stories about him." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p19 Je 21 '42 220w
Sat R of Lit 25:16 Je 27 '42 40w

CHASE, FRANCIS SEABURY. Sound and fury; an informal history of broadcasting. 303p $3 Harper

621.384 Radio broadcasting (W) 42-8996

Informal history of radio broadcasting, which goes back to pre-commercial broadcasting days and brings it up to the present.

Booklist 38:436 Jl 15 '42

"Better books of the same sort surely will be written. In the meantime, this is a vivid and essentially sound one, to be read with pleasure even while one is filing exceptions to some of its opinions and regretting its small errors of fact. For instance, if Mr. Chase really believes that frequency modulation broadcasting 'will bring about no startling revolution in radio,' he is a great deal easier in his mind about it than a number of radio executives are. More irritating are the errors which probably are no more than carelessness but are likely to lessen a reader's confidence in the body of the book." J. K. Hutchens
+ N Y Times p21 Je 7 '42 850w

"Not very systematically arranged and far from complete, but informative and often diverting."

+ New Yorker 18:68. Ap 4 '42 20w

"It is entertaining from the first page to the last and as full of memories as the family album." G. F. P.

+ Springf'd Republican p8 My 21 '42 700w

CHASE, GILBERT. Music of Spain. 375p il $4 Norton

780.946 Music—Spain 41-23158

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"The book has an excellent bibliography and a complete list of phonograph recordings relevant to the subject. It is well written and should prove to be welcome reading to student and intelligent amateur alike." P. H. Long
+ Books p10 F 1 '42 750w

"Particularly worthy of note are the 'Bibliography' (thirty pages) and the 'Record list' (eighteen pages) at the end of the book. Each has been divided into chapters corresponding to the chapter divisions which makes the material on individual subjects more readily available. Surely if one has interest in the music of Spain here is a wealth of information for both the scholar and the layman." H. E. Bush
+ Library Q 12:328 Ap '42 700w

Nation 154:637 My 30 '42 120w

"Supplanting all other writings, whether popular, such as Van Vechten's out-of-print book, or the scholarly monographs of Trend, Mr. Chase has produced a sound, properly proportioned history, written with knowledge and devotion, good alike in its treatment of the magnificent polyphonic music of the Spanish Church and in its handling of the popular and 'symphonic' usages of later modes." Ralph Bates

+ New Repub 106:246 F 16 '42 300w

CHASE, ILKA. Past imperfect. 278p $2 Doubleday

B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 42-7554

Spritely memoirs of this American actress and radio program leader. She describes her education, which was interesting but sketchy; her formal introduction to New York society which "didn't take," and her theatrical, moving picture, and radio career, which have brought her more success. Prominent men and women are glimpsed in passing in this far from hackneyed autobiography.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (36) B & T (1) N Y Times (15) PW (12) RB (5) W (1)

Booklist 38:308 Ap 15 '42

"There is not one event in Miss Chase's enviably soft-cushioned career that could possibly be considered of any importance whatever to history, but Miss Chase's unhesitant acceptance of this fact gives the book much of its charm—that, and an insistent honesty that is particularly rare in an autobiography by a woman. 'Past Imperfect' is a female counterpart of Oscar Levant's 'A Smattering of Ignorance.'" B. A. Cerf

+ Books p13 Mr 22 '42 800w

"This is a true story of that peculiarly American phenomenon, the successful career woman. Ilka Chase knows what she wants, but she is interesting because she knows how to get it and why she wants it. Her observations on life and people—and life for her has been populous—are shrewd and not too malicious. There are lots of funny stories on headline names, but her wit is more than anecdotal. She has a soundly humorous point of view that makes her Hollywood chapter, for example, a fine piece of social commentary. And she writes surprisingly well. Anyone interested in life and love—and who isn't—will find the maturing of this American urban a successful fermentation, dry, light and effervescent." Dorothy Hillier

+ Boston Globe p17 Mr 25 '42 430w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '42

"Sophisticated light reading for adults." Emily Garnett

Library J 67:267 Mr 15 '42 60w

"The book is very good. Lest the intelligent reader be put off by the common jacket decoration and the silly promise of 'indiscretions,' this assurance is offered with force. Once inside the covers, you are off to wit and mordancy, some subtlety of sophisticated wisdom and a lot of fun." K. W.

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 22 '42 700w

"Cheerful, witty, and intelligent."

+ New Yorker 18:71 Mr 21 '42 30w

Time 39:88 My 18 '42 1050w

CHASE, STUART. Goals for America; a budget of our needs and resources; guide lines to America's future as reported to the Twentieth century fund. (When the war ends) 134p $1 Twentieth century fund

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions, Reconstruction (1939-). U.S.—Economic policy (W) 42-36383

"In this book, Mr. Chase summarizes our available resources in food, shelter, medical care, industrial plant, and so on, and stacks them up against his estimate of what we will need to provide decent minimum living standards for all our people after the war. We can do the job, he says, if we add a little will, some good will, and a lot of elbow grease." New Yorker

Booklist 39:115 D 1 '42

"Mr. Chase writes very persuasively here, as he always has done. . . He synthesizes with great skill and, also, every page pays eloquent testimony to his moral courage." L. M. Hacker

+ Books p36 N 15 '42 1050w

Reviewed by H. E. Fey

Christian Century 60:136 F 3 '43 700w

"Clearly and persuasively written."

+ New Yorker 18:78 N 14 '42 90w

"Mr. Chase has here set himself a high standard to equal in his subsequent studies. He has contributed importantly to that unofficial discussion of war aims which must surely lead on to greater definiteness in official pronouncements once the public mind is fertilized by such excellent studies as this." Orway Tead

+ Survey G 31:600 D '42 290w

CHASE, STUART. The road we are travelling, 1914-1942; guide lines to America's future as reported to the Twentieth century fund. (When the war ends) 106p $1 Twentieth century fund

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Reconstruction (1939-). World war, 1939—Economic aspects (W) 42-36150

"Stuart Chase with the assistance of the Twentieth Century Fund . . . is preparing a series of outlines for the guidance of America in the post-war days to come. The present volume is the first in six and acts not only as an introduction to the whole group but presents as well the author's frame of reference." Books

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (14) N Y Times (1) RB (2)

Reviewed by Victor Abramson
Am Econ R 32:621 S '42 850w

Reviewed by C. A. M. Ewing
Am Pol Sci R 36:599 Je '42 260w
Booklist 38:301 Ap 15 '42

"Necessarily, what we have here in the current volume is of a highly summary character, and the judgments, in almost all cases, are dogmatically put. One must follow Mr. Chase's deductive processes to the very end (with only minor qualifications) or abandon his lead early. But because Mr. Chase is more frequently right than wrong, even if sometimes for incorrect reasons, his argument is worthy of serious consideration." L. M. Hacker

+ — Books p14 Ap 19 '42 1650w

Reviewed by H. E. Fey
Christian Century 59:594 My 6 '42 700w

Reviewed by C. L. Willard, Jr.
Churchman 156:17 Je 1 '42 390w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '42

Reviewed by Alvin Adey
Current Hist 2:220 My '42 700w

"Economic research can make dull reading but not when Stuart Chase wields the pen—controversial, perhaps, but never dull."

+ Eng N 128:95 Je 4 '42 200w

Management R 31:184 My '42 240w

"Mr. Chase's great gifts as a phrase-maker and publicist are abundantly in evidence, but not, as yet, the part played by the Fund's excellent research facilities. Even if we give future volumes the benefit of doubt, it is clear that a publication plan requiring this volume to stand by itself was badly devised." Harold Strauss

Nation 154:492 Ap 25 '42 850w

Reviewed by George Soule
New Repub 106:576 Ap 27 '42 360w

Reviewed by J. E. Goodbar
N Y Times p4 Je 7 '42 1700w

"The Twentieth Century Fund, which in its short career has reached a high-water mark among foundations and has published invaluable studies based on careful research, now has entered the more precarious field of prophecy with the publication of 'The Road We Are Traveling 1914-42,' the first of six volumes by Stuart Chase on 'When the War Ends.' Stuart Chase's talent for writing, gives assurance that the remaining five will be as stimulating as is the first." Charlton Ogburn

Sat R of Lit 25:17 My 9 '42 700w

Reviewed by Ordway Tead
Survey G 31:600 D '42 50w
Wis Lib Bul 38:115 Ji '42

CHENEY, BRAINARD. River rogue. 443p $2.50 Houghton

42-19135

Story of raftsmen along the Oconee and Altamaha rivers in Georgia, during the 1880's. The hero is Ratliff Sutton, the illegitimate son of a poor white woman, who spent the early years of his life running away from his heritage, and his adult years trying to compensate for the bitterness of his youth. Years after he had risen from raftsmen to being a respected business man, and was married to an aristocratic wife, his early life caught up with him again. His wife was murdered by a drunken raftsmen.

"'River Rogue' is packed with detail, some of it incomprehensible to the layman, and the story frequently labors and strains. Ratliff Sutton never quite comes alive and the other characters, save for China Swann, are fuzzed and without substance for all their deeds of violence." Robert Wilder

Books p4 Ag 16 '42 600w

"'River Rogue' isn't a book to give your maiden aunt for Christmas, but it's a tale to be savored and enjoyed, not so much for its story as for the way it is told."

+ Boston Globe p19 Ag 12 '42 180w

Nation 155:246 S. 19 '42 120w

"By far the best of this novel is its study of the river and the social character of the raftsmen, a folk character vibrant today, as in the days when the West was being settled, with the energy of our early national life. . . This is a vigorous tale of rough river life. It admirably fulfills that function of the novel which is to reveal to readers little known sections of the country." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 9 '42 650w

"First-class background, a fine, romantic, hard-bitten plot, and a sound moral at the end. A distinguished book."

+ New Yorker 18:58 Ag 22 '42 70w

"This second novel by Brainard Cheney is a solid, interesting, and at times exciting book and marks a decided advance over his 'Lightwood.'" R. P. Warren

+ Sat R of Lit 25:25 S 19 '42 650w

"A book which puts Brainard Cheney high among the strictly regional novelists—a book so good (when it is) that its weaknesses are doubly deplorable. . . Brainard Cheney writes with the homely hardness of a grindstone. At his best he is a master at making detail, action and physical sensation palpable, and almost Homerically fresh. At his worst he is a pedestrian writer, capable of serious lapses of literary judgment, but enormously sensitive to a certain landscape and a certain people. If he ever wrestles a subject his size with grace as well as grit, he may make literary history."

+ — Time 40:94 Ag 10 '42 250w

CHENEY, SHELDON WARREN. Story of modern art. 643p il $5 Viking

759.91 Art—History. Painting. Painters (W) 41-26516

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Bookmark 3:8 Mr '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '42

"One may say of Mr. Cheney's book that at best it satisfies its purpose by being attractively readable, historically colorful, lively in arrangement and dramatic contrasts, never blatantly vulgarizing in the manner of Burton Rascoe, prejudiced like Meier-Graefe, or slipshodly combative like C. J. Bulliet; but that conversely it shows how the synthesis, digesting, and persistence necessary to so vast a project are bound to lead to an overworking of epithets, a flagging of discriminations, a continuous wavering of the line that separates specific analysis and critical tact from propagandist enthusiasm, a straining of pedagogical zeal, and a scattering of critical force and taste through an eagerness to do justice to the claims of almost every type and school of painting that has appeared in the last 150 years. And one must add that Mr. Cheney's survey, however serviceable in a worthy cause, is hardly the best job of its kind." M. D. Zabel

+ — Nation 154:259 F 28 '42 700w

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist
New Repub 106:866 Je 22 '42 600w
Pratt p11 My '42

"If The Story of Modern Art is not the very best book that Sheldon Cheney has ever written, at least it seems so at this moment." Frederick Morton

+ Theatre Arts 26:346 My '42 700w

"Mr. Cheney accepts the accomplishments of our modern artists for what they are—the honest efforts of honest men and women to give substance to their visions—and then proceeds to explain the work as he understands it. That his comprehension is clear as well as informed has been richly proved by the popular success of his earlier 'A Primer of Modern Art' and 'Expressionism in Art.'"
G. H. Hamilton

+ Yale R n s 31:632 spring '42 1200w

CHERNE, LEO M. Your business goes to war. 496p $3.50 Houghton

355.26 U.S.—Industries and resources. World war, 1939—Economic aspects. World war, 1939—U.S. (W) 42-8125

Explanation of the conversion of plants, contracts, property, financing, labor regulation, prices, etc., into war production units. The book was completed since the appointment of Donald Nelson, and facts and figures are brought down to February, 1942. Index.

Booklist 38:362 Je 1 '42

Bookmark 4:5 N '42

"Here is a useful and understandable book that may save many a business man trips to Washington. Mr. Cherne must have dug hard and long and had good help to organize so well and to present so practically the immensely complicated problem of conversion of industry from civilian to war production. This is both a handbook for business men and a ready primer for the non-business reader who would appreciate the task of beating out plowshares into planes and ships and the gadgets essential to their operation. The book is done with an admirable nonpartisanship."

+ Boston Globe p17 Mr 25 '42 250w

New Repub 106:838 Je 15 '42 90w

"Thorough and up to date, but occasionally too technical for easy reading."

+ New Yorker 18:67 Ap 4 '42 50w

CHERRINGTON, HOMER VIRGIL. The investor and the Securities act. 255p $3; pa $2.50 Am. council on public affairs

332.63 Securities. Corporation law. U.S. Securities and exchange commission 42-9887

"Dr. Cherrington, professor of commerce at the University of Iowa, has limited his examination to the Securities act of 1933, the so-called 'Truth in Securities Law.' The book opens with a discussion of the evils which were responsible for the legislation. The closing chapter reviews the results of the legislation in relation to each of these practices. Other chapters deal with the proposals for reform prior to 1933, and an outline of the provisions of the law and the work of the Commission. A brief examination of the British experience is sandwiched in between these chapters." Am Econ R

"This study will serve those who wish to consult a brief, general survey." R. L. Weissman

Am Econ R 32:386 Je '42 700w

"Professor Cherrington has provided 'an examination of the law and its administration' that is competent, readable, and consistently objective in its treatment. That it is largely descriptive, with limited emphasis upon interpretation and evaluation of trends, appears to be the result of conscious restraint." D. R. Fuller

Ann Am Acad 221:228 My '42 550w

Reviewed by L. G. Forer

Harvard Law R 56:327 O '42 850w

CHEVALIER, ELIZABETH (PICKETT). Drivin' woman. 652p $2.75 Macmillan

(W) 42-16185

Long romantic novel, covering the fifty years following the Civil war. The central character is America Collier Moncure who was eighteen at the close of the war. Her father was dead, her brother was a fugitive, the family mansion had been looted and then burned, but America succeeded in making tobacco crops and teaching school to help out her family. Then she married her rascal cousin, a professional gambler, and thru thirty years of hardship and disgrace was loyal to him. The part played by America in the great tobacco war between Kentucky planters and New York financiers fills the last part of the story.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (27) B & T (1) LG (1) N Y Times (24) PW (10) RB (3)

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson
Atlantic 170:144 S '42 130w
Booklist 38:426 Jl 1 '42

"Mrs. Chevalier's canvas is an enormous one, crowded with people and action. Some of it is good and some of it is not good at all. America's love for the scoundrel, Fant, who mostly seems a lay figure stuffed with the romantic wickedness of charming Southerners, is difficult to take. . . The best part of the book deals with tobacco scenes on the land, in the auction rooms, in the building and the breaking of the monopoly. There is more excitement in Mrs. Chevalier's description of America's storming the auction rooms closed by custom to women than in her romantic interludes with Fant, with Tugger, who tardily discovers her charms, or with Stone Moncure, the old reliable who had always loved her." Rose Feld

+ — Books p4 Jl 5 '42 950w

"It is unquestionably big time fiction with everything that is needed to make it a popular success both in the rental libraries and on the screen. Apparently it was written with one eye, if not both, on Hollywood, with the demands of which the author's previous experience makes her thoroughly conversant. . . The story gets really good when it shifts to Kentucky, and all points south and east. There is a wealth of colorful incident. The real center of interest is the 'tobacco war' in Mason county, Kentucky. There is a dramatic tale that has never before been put into fiction, and well deserved to be. The author knows the terrain and the traditions of that era, where her people have lived for more than a century, and she handles this material with real mastery."

+ — Christian Century 59:982 Ag 12 '42 390w

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 36:330 Jl 24 '42 500w

"Length, incident, and types of characters indicate desire to appeal to readers of Gone with the Wind, to which publishers compare it." R. T. Manlove

Library J 67:533 Je 1 '42 100w

"Mrs. Chevalier's long, detailed novel is competent though rather pedestrian, and it has an interesting account of the rise of the tobacco trust."

Nation 155:57 Jl 18 '42 150w

Reviewed by Grace Adams
New Repub 107:149 Ag 3 '42 600w

"The Kentucky background of post-war years is richly pictured and peopled; and in one brief antebellum memory of the slave and his wife who were 'braced foah pa'hin', there is more of genuine feeling than all America Moncure's love story can show. Yet in one particular Merry's emotion is strong and true and this is the most important particular in the novel: kinship to the farm and appreciation of the rights of free farm workers, here expressed in terms of the tobacco war." Katherine Woods

+ — N Y Times p6 Jl 5 '42 1150w

"A long, super-romantic and stylistically atrocious novel."

+ — New Yorker 18:56 Jl 4 '42 90w

"As a story, Drivin' Woman could scarcely be termed convincing. As a romance, it is fascinating reading. Characterization and portraiture are well done. And it is unfortunate that the reader almost inevitably, albeit sometimes unconsciously, compares later books, such as Drivin' Woman, and Show Me a Land with the earlier Gone with the Wind." Katharine Jocher

+ — Social Forces 21:261 D '42 200w

CHEVALIER, E. P.—Continued

"Drivin' Woman reads like an inspired high-school prize composition packed with cinematic moments. It revolves about a character who may turn out to be the most satisfying heroine since Scarlett O'Hara."

— + Time 40:76 Ag 3 '42 550w
Wis Lib Bul 38:137 O '42

CHEVIGNY, HECTOR. Lord of Alaska; Baranov and the Russian adventure. 320p $3 Viking

B or 92 Baranov, Aleksandr Andreovich. Alaska—History (W) 42-22361

Account of the life and deeds of Aleksandr Baranov, son of a Russian storekeeper living on the Finnish border in the eighteenth century. From very humble beginnings Baranov became virtual ruler of the Russian settlements in the Aleutians, Alaska and British Columbia. Here he was trader, warrior, governor, ship builder, and son-in-law of an Indian chieftain, and from these lands he sent fortunes in furs back to Russia. Baranov was relieved of his command in 1817 and two years later he died in Java. Index.

Booklist 39:66 N 1 '42

"This story could not be told more strikingly than in 'Lord of Alaska'; if any one thinks of the book as a dry-as-dust historical treatise he will quickly change his mind. It is a brilliant piece of historical biography, full of rugged human nature and replete with dramatic incidents. Mr. Chevigny knows Alaska and loves it; his descriptions of scenes have all the power and color of Parkman." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p1 O 11 '42 1950w

"Baranov's story has been told by a man who wrote well because of a fine enthusiasm for his subject. While Mr. Chevigny's interpretations of character are not particularly illuminating, the whole of the Russian adventure is illuminated because the author has piled detail on sharp detail. There is no portrait of Baranov, presumably because there is none in existence." R. E. Berry

+ N Y Times p7 O 4 '42 1100w

"Well written and amply detailed."

+ New Yorker 18:67 O 3 '42 40w

Time 40:100 O 12 '42 850w

Wis Lib Bul 38:184 D '42

CHICAGO. UNIVERSITY. Committee on human development. Environment and education. See Burgess, E. W., and othersCHIDESTER, ANN. Young Pandora. 399p $2.50 Scribner

42-19442

Story of a young girl's life in a mid-western town during the late twenties and the thirties. Jody's nature is influenced first by her intense love for her father; then, in later years, by her ambition to become a writer.

"The story of Jody Barker is glowing, vital and rings true. Miss Chidester's style has a kind of forceful urgency, which captures the reader's imagination and holds it. . . 'Young Pandora' is much more than just a chronicle of small-town life. The story of this vehement, seeking young woman carries the book past the limits of Hamilton and gives it a kind of universality." Barbara Woodcott

+ Books p2 Ag 23 '42 900w

Library J 67:683 Ag '42 20w

"Miss Chidester is young; her talent is precocious rather than distinguished. Most importantly, she needs, like many older writers, to learn that words are not designed chiefly to glorify their author."

Nation 155:178 Ag 29 '42 90w

"Perhaps many readers will be so interested in what happens to Jody that they will find Miss Chidester's lush style something they can take in their stride. The talk is real and brisk, but the narrative falls into high-flown metaphors and resounding verbiage. . . At bottom a sound and interesting story, 'Young Pandora' suffers from an overabundance of these florid passages lunging toward the grand and cosmic." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 9 '42 800w

"Here is a book with a certain rare unmis-takable vein of youth, vigor, and genius, of a sort we have seen once before, and your elation or indifference will be in this first novel determined by whether or not you loved the work of Thomas Wolfe. But this much is certain, that here, in the same accents, spouting the same wild, rich, torrential words, out of the same bardic, passionate heart, is the voice we had not hoped to hear again so soon, an angel looking homeward. . . Miss Chidester's book is not perfect, but she will find no suggestions here. She is a writer who is fiercely bent upon perfection and growth; you will find that implicit and explicit throughout the book." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 Ag 29 '42 400w

CHIDSEY, DONALD BARR. John the Great. 337p il $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Sullivan, John Lawrence

(W) 42-22764

"Subtitle: The Times and Life of a Remarkable American, John L. Sullivan. A man who fought brutally, drank heavily, yet had the world at his feet; who emerged from the seventies (Flash Age), passed through the eighties (Gaslight Era) and the nineties (Gay Nineties), to fade into oblivion in early twentieth century. Amazing episodes are recounted with gusto." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by John Cournos

Atlantic 170:154 N '42 230w

Booklist 39:69 N 1 '42

"Most of the pertinent facts concerning Sullivan are in this volume, although there is no new material. Some of it makes awkward reading because of the constant quotations; the reader is forced to turn to the back of the book to find out who or what is being quoted. Also, Mr. Chidsey once refers to Bob Davis as 'Robert W. Davis,' when that distinguished gentleman's name is really 'Robert Hobart Davis.' He gives the wrong initials for William O. Inglis, the old fight historian, and he refers to Parson Davies, the old gambler, as 'Parson Davis.' But for all its imperfections, this book on the great Sullivan is full of chuckles, information and a good deal of shrewd observation." Stanley Walker

+ — Books p3 Ag 30 '42 1450w

"In 'John the Great' Donald Barr Chidsey recreates a lush and fabulous period with exciting verity. This is the story of 'The Times and Life of a Remarkable American, John L. Sullivan,' a rich, human and entertaining book. Sullivan's life, as here recounted, is perhaps a key to the times in which he lived. But the story of his life and his era makes bully good reading." J. W. Riley

+ Boston Globe p17 S 2 '42 500w

"One may not enjoy the flippant, sensational and often profane style of writing, but reader is left with compelling picture of man himself and early years of prize fighting." G. O. Kelley

Library J 67:679 Ag '42 90w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p4 Ag 23 '42 1150w

"There are unforgettable incidents in Mr. Chidsey's book. He has done a masterful job of characterization. Such men as Bill Muldoon, Theodore Roosevelt, and Cardinal Gibbons stand out. Nowhere, not even in Ed. Van Every's book, have I seen Muldoon sketched with such fidelity. Here, the humorless Irishman is exactly himself." Jim Tully

+ Sat R of Lit 25:18 O 10 '42 360w

Wis Lib Bul 38:160 N '42

CHILDERS, JAMES SAXON. Enemy outpost. 274p $2 Appleton-Century

42-19138

Spy story of the present war. The scene is a private hunting and fishing lodge in the Canadian wilderness. Mike Kilpatrick, a New York newspaper man arrives at the camp, posing as a geologist. Almost at once things begin to happen—a guide is murdered, Mike has an accident, and the Nazi spy ring closes in day by day. Mike and an American girl, Sally, fight side by side in the wilderness until a faithful guide manages to bring the Mounted police.

"It's exciting stuff, with Indian guides mysteriously disappearing, a beautiful girl sharing Mike's secret and the Nazis foiled in the nick of time." Lisle Bell

+ Books p18 S 13 '42 150w

"The story is told with an expert touch in building up suspense. It also has the advantage of projecting the bush and lake country with charm and conviction, and minor characters, like the Indian guides and some of the less important Nazi spies, are sketched in effectively. Altogether it is a good story." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 30 '42 260w

CHILDS, HARWOOD LAWRENCE, and WHITTON, JOHN BOARDMAN, eds. Propaganda by short wave. 355p $3.75 Princeton univ. press

940.5488 World war, 1939—Propaganda, Radio broadcasting, Princeton university. Listening center 42-15111

Analyses of the radio propaganda techniques of German, French, Italian and British governments. The essays are based on the findings of the Princeton university listening center. Contents: Radio in international politics, by J. B. Whitton and J. H. Herz; The theory and strategy of Nazi short-wave propaganda, by P. E. Jacob; Britain speaks, by Daniel Katz; The structure of Rome short-wave broadcasts to North America, by Bruno Foa; Paris-Mondial, by Arturo Mathieu; Atrocities propaganda, by P. E. Jacob; Techniques of persuasion, by Edrita Fried; America's short-wave audience, by H. L. Childs. Index.

"Boiled down to specific conclusions, the essays give one the impression of a potent and fearful force let loose in the world. But the reader is also impressed with the thought that the last word has not yet been spoken about the ultimate effectiveness of propaganda by air waves. . . . Later chapters, added to this volume, will furnish the answers. Nevertheless, this book, along with other contemporary volumes, initiates a running story which in this day of rapid and pervasive communications systems must be studied closely by nations determined to survive and to assume leadership in the world." R. O. Nafziger

+ Am Hist R 48:302 Ja '43 600w

Reviewed by Louise Overacker

Am Pol Sci R 36:996 O '42 330w

"The eight contributors to this volume are to be congratulated for the speed with which they prepared for publication the results of this important experiment. Many lessons can be learned from the pages of Propaganda by Short Wave. Although the studies cover a relatively short period of time and the contributions are not of equal importance, nevertheless this is a 'must' book for government officials charged with conducting the war on the propaganda front and for students of the 'fine art of propaganda.'" Belle Zeller

+ Ann Am Acad 224:211 N '42 1050w

Reviewed by G. E. Brown

Library J 67:224 Mr 1 '42 100w

"This book should be compulsory reading for all those currently responsible for U.S. propaganda to enemy and neutral countries. For it demonstrates with a wealth of scientifically marshalled data that any resemblance between the arts of peace-time news reporting and war-time propaganda is purely coincidental—a fact not always sufficiently appreciated by some of our newspapermen turned propagandist for the duration. It is also a timely reminder of the power of the radio weapon and to some degree a handbook on the strategy and tactics of radio warfare." C. J. Rolo

+ Sat R of Lit 25:22 Jl 4 '42 700w

Social Studies 33:288 O '42 30w

CHILDS, MARQUIS WILLIAM. I write from Washington. 331p $3 Harper

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. World war, 1939—U.S.

(W) 42-23506

Marquis Childs, author of Sweden, The Middle Way, has been in Washington since 1932, as correspondent for the St Louis Post-Dispatch. His book is an informal history of Washington political circles during this decade with many sketches of personalities in the news. The book is divided into three parts: The New Deal, Transition, and The War. Index.

"The book has life, personality, and the warm prejudices of an able reporter. If it is not so deep as a well, it is not heavy either. It is best in its character sketches of people the author enjoys or detests." L. M. Lyons

+ Atlantic 170:174 D '42 240w

Booklist 39:67 N 1 '42

"It all makes for good reading; it makes, in fact, for as thoughtful and as entertaining a book as has yet been turned out by any of the Washington correspondents." Bert Andrews

+ Books p6 O 18 '42 950w

"I Write From Washington" is not a very flattering portrait of government. But its value is all the more notable because of its author's willingness to subject the weaknesses of our political and social system to the microscope, nor is it jaundiced by a lack of willingness to give constructive effort and idealism their due. The regionalism which, he feels, must displace tendencies to over-emphasize centralization of controls at the capital, is a regionalism possible of successful operation—as witness the great Tennessee Valley Authority to which he devotes careful attention." J. H. Powers

+ Boston Globe p21 O 14 '42 650w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith

Harvard Law R 56:677 Ja '43 1600w

Reviewed by E. P. Potter

Library J 67:843 O 1 '42 40w

"About two-thirds of the way through his book it would seem that Mr. Childs suddenly bethought himself of his title and began really to write from Washington. It is regrettable, for at that point the book slumps, and from being a vivid and sparkling commentary on all sorts of men and things, becomes a pedestrian account of the doings of the last year in the capital. There are twenty Washington correspondents who might have written that part of the book; the individual stamp of Marquis Childs is on the first part only." G. W. Johnson

+ New Repub 107:721 N 30 '42 650w

"Mr. Childs writes neither from the keyhole nor from the dogma house. He neither instructs nor explains in detail; but he gives his honest opinion and obviously knows considerable about what's going on. Part panorama and part mosaic, part impressions and part reminiscence, Mr. Childs's book defies ready definition. It is a sort of 'I write as I please out of Washington'; and its interest—and its stimulation—is that it is the impact of eight years of Washington upon an inquiring, reasonable and coherent mind." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p35 O 25 '42 1100w

"An excellent job on the whole, though the first part of the book, perhaps naturally, is a good deal stronger and better balanced than the later sections."

+ New Yorker 18:78 N 14 '42 90w

"One of the sanest judgments of the hurly-burly that is Washington, that mad center of democracy fighting for its life, is in this book of Marquis Childs. He is one of those rare and detached observers who can see the good and ill, can sense the dangers of purblind and well-meaning radicalism and yet realize the underlying currents that drive a society regardless of its momentary whims." Russell Owen

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 O 17 '42 950w

"Mr. Childs, while serious in his purpose, is not blind to the human comedy that develops behind the scenes when ambitious men on both sides of the political fence struggle for power."

CHILDS, M. W.—Continued

There is enough dry humor in the book to make it highly entertaining as well as instructive."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 N 2 '42 550w
Wis Lib Bul 38:160 N '42

CHILDS, MARQUIS WILLIAM. This is your war. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 200p $1.50 Little 940.5373 World war, 1939—U.S.

(W) 42-36106

Information for Americans on what each one must do in order to win the war. It discusses the probable effects upon the family, the income, and the way of life, and tells what we will have to give up, what volunteer groups can do, how youth can help, methods of preventing waste, and how to maintain morale.

Booklist 38:249 Mr 15 '42

Reviewed by Joseph Driscoll
Books p6 Mr 22 '42 1250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '42
J Home Econ 34:553 O '42 30w

"Mr. Childs is succinct and stimulating. For the customary 'Be calm' he suggests the more vigorous challenge 'Be resolute.' He reminds us that we are not likely to suffer such mass bombings as the British but that our endurance will be tested in less obvious ways. 'This calls for a kind of discipline which is more difficult to come by than the discipline summoned out of danger.'"

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 22 '42 440w

"Some of the material is rather out of date, but much of it is still useful."

New Yorker 18:79 Mr 14 '42 50w

"Marquis Childs is a nimble writer with a determination not to see the trees for the woods. In two hundred large-print pages, he discusses our raw materials, our war production program with its consequent civilian curtailments, our households, our transportation, food, clothing, national health, money, even our children in time of war. There is no pretension to thoroughness. His frank admission of the limitations of his undertaking disarms our criticism, for such a book is hard to write and too easily read. Perhaps it should be prescribed reading for those of us bogged down in detail, since Marquis Childs writes with a white-hot urgency." Elizabeth Renard

Survey G 31:267 My '42 260w

Wis Lib Bul 38:85 My '42

CHINESE NEWS SERVICE, incorporated. China after five years of war. 233p pa $1 The service, 1250 6th av, N.Y.
951 China

"This is the third volume in a series of annual symposiums prepared by the Chinese Ministry of Information. Its chapters were written in Chungking, transmitted by radio station XGOY to Ventura, California, finally to be assembled and published by the Chinese News Service in New York. . . It contains chapters dealing with the organization of the Chinese Government, tendencies within the Kuomintang, the organization, training, and operations of China's military establishment, China's economic resources, and aspects of government control over economic activity, China's expanding system of communications, Chinese education, youth movements, overseas interests, and wartime social changes." Pacific Affairs

Booklist 39:67 N 1 '42

"The book reads as if it had been prepared by an exceptionally able journalist in the most favorable conditions. It is extremely informative and, for a government publication, remarkably candid. And, what is perhaps even more remarkable for a government publication, it conveys something of the spirit behind China's indomitable resistance." M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 155:305 O 3 '42 600w

Reviewed by R. W. Barnett
Pacific Affairs 25:499 D '42 700w

CHODOROV, JEROME, and FIELDS, JOSEPH. Junior miss [play] based on the book by Sally Benson. 209p $2 il Random house

812 (W) 42-10863

Dramatization of Sally Benson's New Yorker stories about Judy Graves and her sister Lois. Judy's lively imagination precipitates a family crisis, but sheer luck, plus Judy, get them on their feet again.

Booklist 38:327 My 1 '42

"Messrs. Chodorov and Fields have done a good job." W. P. Eaton

+ Books p15 Je 21 '42 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '42

Reviewed by John Gassner

Current Hist 1:472 Ja '42 200w

"Recommended."

+ Library J 67:320 Ap 1 '42 20w

CHRISTIAN, JOHN LEROY. Modern Burma; a survey of political and economic development. (Institute of Pacific relations. Int. research ser) 381p $3 Univ. of Calif.

959.2 Burma (W) 42-15573

"This book, written for the International Research Series of the Institute of Pacific Relations, had just been printed in Shanghai when Japan went to war with the United States and the British and Dutch Empires. It has therefore been necessary to reprint the book in the United States and the author has thus had the opportunity to add an epilogue on recent events in Burma up to the end of January, 1942." (Pref) It is a survey of the people, history, politics and government, foreign relations, and social organizations of Burma. Bibliography. Index.

"Professor Christian has treated a very complex situation with great clarity and thoroughness, and he displays a power of shrewd and penetrating insight. Whatever changes the war introduces, it cannot alter the fundamental facts of the situation as he has described them. His book will be indispensable when the time comes for reconstruction." L. A. Mills

+ Am Hist R 48:343 Ja '43 550w

"Seldom has a book been more timely than Modern Burma. . . A great deal of work has gone into the preparation of the volume, as the documentation in the footnotes and the annotated bibliography testify. If there is any criticism at all, it is that the presentation of such a wealth of material in the relatively limited compass of some 300 pages of text makes the fruit of all this labor a sort of handbook. Professor Christian answers questions only to raise others which time alone can answer. The whole volume is a warning to those who would rush into any facile settlement for Southern Asia after the war." J. T. Watkins, IV

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:792 Ag '42 450w

Booklist 38:439 Jl 15 '42

"This book is one of a valuable series on the countries of southeast Asia sponsored by the Institute of Pacific Relations. Written from the point of view of a friendly and discriminating scholar who lived in the country many years, it is a comprehensive survey of political and economic development." H. E. Fey

+ Christian Century 59:1457 N 25 '42 550w

"The paucity of recent authoritative studies on Burma lends added value to this scholarly work; and although the approach is through the technique of the political scientist, there is a wealth of information for the political geographer. The book is admirably documented and contains an exhaustive bibliography as well as useful appendices." L. W. Trueblood

+ Geog R 32:524 Jl '42 290w

Manchester Guardian p3 O 28 '42 150w

"In this book Mr. Christian achieves a concise but comprehensive survey of modern Burma. With a background of eight years' residence as principal of a technical college in a rural area, he has supplemented his personal knowledge with wide study, covering many sources not easily accessible. . . . No one could expect a book so full of detail to be quite free from trivial mistakes, but it is necessary to comment on a few matters which detract from the authority that one would like a work of this distinction to possess. . . . In view of the importance of rice cultivation, it is unfortunate that Mr. Christian had little personal knowledge of Lower Burma. . . . At the present juncture, when the future of Burma is in the melting pot, the book comes opportunely as an attempt at an objective and impartial survey by an independent observer, looking at the country from a Western standpoint but sympathizing with nationalist aspirations. It should be most helpful to all concerned in guiding the affairs of Burma to a favorable issue, but it is therefore all the more important to recognize its limitations." J. S. Furnivall

+ Pacific Affairs 25:503 D '42 750w

"Although Mr. Christian pointed out a number of unsatisfactory elements in the contemporary development of Burma his general tone—no doubt to his present pain—continued cheery and optimistic. In general it was the tendency of Mr. Christian, as it has been of most writers on colonial questions including the present reviewer, to underestimate the hostility, or at best the indifference, of colonial peoples to their imperial overlords. But Mr. Christian's share in this almost universal failing should not be taken to mean that this book is without value. On the contrary, it is filled with a large amount of highly useful material normally available only to a limited group of experts. Sketching in the past history of Burma, the author, in scholarly and somewhat pedestrian style, concentrates on the last few years and ranges from government and economics to art and religion, not to mention a considerable examination of the background and significance of the late-lamented Burma Road." Rupert Emerson

+ Survey G 31:432 O '42 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p554 N 14 '42 1000w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). The body in the library. 245p $2 Dodd

(W) 42-36085

Detective story.

Booklist 38:252 Mr 15 '42

"When the time comes to release a sensational twist near the end, as she is expected to do in every major story, Mrs. Christie delivers with a pronounced impact, thus adding one more to her list of undoubted successes. How is it done? Mostly, we'd say, by guarding a special kind of secret better than any one else in the business. We didn't believe a word of it, of course, yet we were fascinated by the whole thing in no uncertain manner. Take it by and large, this is the easiest to read among the current grist and the slickest puzzler you could want." Will Cuppy

+ Books p25 Mr 1 '42 300w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 23:393 Je 13 '42 140w

"Although this is not the best of Agatha Christie's plots, the story is still in the upper brackets of excellence. And the character work, with Miss Marple and the Bantrys, is particularly fetching." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 1 '42 260w

"Miss Marple is the amateur sleuth in this story by a prolific author who never misses."

+ New Yorker 18:60 F 23 '42 50w

"Quiet little spinster who knows great deal about human nature uses feminine intuition and common sense to solve double slaying. Standard brand."

Sat R of Lit 25:22 Mr 7 '42 40w

"The solution seems so highly improbable that the reader is left with a very strong feeling that Miss Marple has succeeded in pinning the killings on the wrong people and that the dear old owner of the library ought to swing." John Fairfield

— Spec 169:134 Ag 7 '42 170w

"Genuine old-crusted Christie."

Time 39:80 Mr 2 '42 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p249 My 16 '42 130w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). Moving finger. 229p $2 Dodd

(W) 42-23228

Detective story.

Booklist 39:122 D 1 '42

"Little Miss Marple who officiated in 'The Body in the Library' and 'Murder at the Vicarage,' repeats her lovable act with success, saving an innocent person from punishment and nabbing the fiend after a couple of serious casualties. . . . No major Christie opus, but it's suitable light reading for all this author's doting admirers, of which this department is one." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 O 11 '42 140w

"This superlative writer of mystery stories rings the bell once more."

+ Boston Globe p19 O 28 '42 60w

"The story is swift-moving and highly original: one of the better productions by a writer whose work is always good."

+ N Y Times p10 O 18 '42 120w

"Gay, witty mystery. Mrs. Christie proves once more that she knows all the answers."

+ New Yorker 18:92 O 17 '42 70w

"Satisfactory."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 O 31 '42 40w

"A smoothly flowing and flawlessly constructed story."

+ Time 40:104 N 2 '42 50w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). Murder in retrospect. 234p $2 Dodd

(W) 42-16139

Detective story.

Booklist 38:427 J1 1 '42

"The sleuth has dropped a few of his continental trimmings, but he's himself for all that in this recommended Christie." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 Je 21 '42 300w

"Another triumph for Agatha Christie, perhaps the greatest in her career." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p24 Je 28 '42 220w

"Beautiful deducting and better writing than you'll find in the average mystery."

+ New Yorker 18:64 Je 27 '42 70w

"Grade-B Poirot."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 Je 20 '42 40w

Time 40:88 J1 6 '42 50w

CHURCH, WILLIAM FARR. Constitutional thought in sixteenth-century France; a study in the evolution of ideas. 360p $3.75 Harvard univ. press [16s Oxford]

342.44 France—Constitutional history

A 41-3912

"Mr. Church traces the progress of French constitutional ideas through the sixteenth century to their evolution in the principles of absolutism. He divides the treatment into six chapters: Claude de Seyssel and the Corporate State; the Apologies for Absolutism; the Theory of the French Constitution; the King and the Subjects; the Political Theory of Guy Coquille; and the Theory of Absolutism." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by Beatrice Reynolds

Am Hist R 47:582 Ap '42 550w

"It is a book not only of great promise but of considerable achievement, and Professor McIlwain need not be ashamed of his encouragement and help." W. P. M. Kennedy

+ Ann Am Acad 219:187 Ja '42 230w

"In this volume of the Harvard Historical Studies, Mr. Church has provided us with a more complete and more detailed study of certain aspects of French political thought than has hitherto been available in the English language. He offers a scholarly account of the leading writers on the authority and prerogatives of the monarch in the sixteenth century, tracing with careful documentation the changes and the variant expressions of doctrine. His book should therefore be of genuine service to all students of the history of political thought." R. M. MacIver

CHURCH, W. F.—Continued

+ Poi Sci Q 57:626 D '42 490w

CHURCH OF ENGLAND. Archbishop of York's conference, Malvern, 1941. Malvern, 1941; the life of the church and the order of society; being the proceedings of the Conference. 235p $3.50 (10s 6d) Longmans

261 Sociology, Christian

This volume contains the addresses delivered at the Archbishop of York's conference at Malvern in 1941. The general topic was the relation of the church to war and post-war conditions. The speakers were the Archbishop of York, Rev. W. G. Peck, Mr. M. B. Reckitt, Miss D. L. Sayers, Mr. D. M. Mackinnon, Rev. V. A. Demant, Sir Richard Acland, M.P., Mr. Kenneth Ingram, Mr. J. Middleton Murry, Mr. T. S. Eliot.

Reviewed by Sidney Dark
New Statesman & Nation 23:128 F 21 '42 390w

"As a Conference, Malvern may or may not have achieved all that was hoped of it. In providing this volume of essays it has rendered a very real service to the cause of Christian social thought and action." F. A. Cockin
+ Spec 168:236 Mr 6 '42 750w

CHURCHILL, WINSTON LEONARD SPENCER. Unrelenting struggle; war speeches; comp. by Charles Eade. 371p $3.50 Little [12s 6d Cassell]

940.5342 World war, 1939—Great Britain (W) 42-23182

"This book, compiled and with an introduction by Charles Eade, contains sixty-eight of Winston Churchill's war speeches, delivered between November 12, 1940, and December 30, 1941. It includes such famous examples as 'The White House Christmas Tree' and 'Westward, Look, the Land is Bright,' but also many speeches on British domestic problems, which are unfamiliar to Americans." New Yorker

Booklist 39:99 N 15 '42

Reviewed by Walter Millis
Books p3 N 1 '42 950w

"The 'Unrelenting Struggle' is invaluable as history, and this aspect is rendered even more useful and interesting by Mr. Charles Eade's able editing and by his running chronology of war events which prefaces each of the orations included." J. H. Powers
+ Boston Globe p19 O 28 '42 450w

Manchester Guardian p3 S 30 '42 80w

"Here is a further record of Mr. Churchill's dynamic utterances during the war. Some run to many pages, others are brief announcements or messages of greeting, but, taken as a whole and with an italicized diary of events to help the sequence, they are easy reading and reveal, not merely the emergency but the man of many gifts on whom the emergency thrust ultimate obligations of greatness." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p14 O 25 '42 1100w

New Yorker 18:84 O 24 '42 90w

"Reading the book, we can see why multitudes who regard Churchill as an incomparable war leader are not at all sure that he will be a fit peace leader. But we need not yet think of that. We can meanwhile take this volume for what it is, as perhaps the most arresting and memorable book of war speeches yet produced by any man in any language. Few speeches endure a second reading; some of Churchill's (not all) will endure many. His frequent irony is an almost unique quality. His denunciation can be superb. . . Words commonly look small beside deeds; but here are certain accents that will ring down the generations." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 O 24 '42 900w
Times [London] Lit Sup p482 O 3 '42 900w

Reviewed by C. H. Driver
Yale R n s 32:388 winter '43 700w

CHUTE, MARY GRACE. Sheriff Olson. 242p $2 Appleton-Century

42-2415

Nine short stories about a sincere, kindly but unintellectual sheriff in a small Minnesota town, describing his efforts to mete out justice and cope with offenders.

Booklist 38:234 Mr 1 '42

"Miss Chute has put forward one of those home-grown heroes designed to circulate in successive stories as long as the demand continues, like Mr. Tutt or Scattergood Baines. . . The author's style is keyed to the sheriff's unpolished speech, premeditatedly ungrammatical for folksy flavor." Lisle Bell
+ Books p14 F 1 '42 200w

Wis Lib Bul 38:46 Mr '42

CLAPESATTLE, HELEN. The Doctors Mayo. 822p il maps $3.75 Univ. of Minn.

926.1 Mayo, Charles Horace. Mayo, William James. Mayo, William Worrall (W) 41-52031

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"A book that reads like a novel and yet is based on sound historical scholarship. The eighty-two pages of bibliographical notes at the end not only indicate the sources used but are a mine of information that will be very useful to historians working in similar fields. The very carefully prepared index makes it easy to consult the book. With this biography of the Doctors Mayo the author and the University of Minnesota have made a great and lasting contribution, not only to the history of medicine but to the history of America at large." H. E. Sigerist
+ Am Hist R 47:901 Jl '42 1000w

"The present work, in so far as it represents biography, is curiously mixed. . . The first portion dealing largely with the older Dr. Mayo, is extraordinarily successful. . . In the second portion, however, dealing with the sons, the authoress has allowed great accomplishments to mechanize the portrait. . . One regrets a little the third portion of this volume, which consists of a too detailed description of the Mayo Clinic and Foundation. . . All told in a tone of somewhat fulsome praise." E. P. Lehman
+ Am J Pub Health 32:879 Ag '42 320w

Bookmark 3:15 Mr '42

"A very human, interesting and relatively unbiased account of the lives of the three Mayos." T. F. Nicholson

+ Canadian Forum 21:378 Mr '42 550w
Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '42

Reviewed by Alvin Adey
Current Hist 2:300 Je '42 470w

"Popular in style, yet rigorous in its documentation, this impressive and handsomely illustrated volume will take rank among the really significant biographies of our time, deserving a place on the shelves next to Harvey Cushing's Life of Osler and the Flexners' recent tribute to William Henry Welch."

+ New Repub 106:277 F 23 '42 120w
Pratt p5 O '42

"Five years of painstaking labor by the author, who incidentally is the historian and editor of the University of Minnesota Press, went into the research and writing of this book, the only authorized biography of the Mayos and their internationally-famous institution. . . She has written a thoughtful and critical review of their lives and work. It is a love's labor in the sense that at times it seems too painstakingly prepared and too well-documented. It would move along more swiftly if sections here and there were left out." Joseph Hirsh

+ Social Forces 20:527 My '42 210w
Wis Lib Bul 38:14 Ja '42

"A long story well told in detail by Miss Clapesattle and worth the reading by those interested in intriguing and stimulating personalities and in the growth of an institution. In fact, if one must be critical, one can say that there is too much detail so that the anatomy of the story is somewhat obscured by an overlying corpulency. It also is perhaps not meticulous to criticize the use of the word 'meticulous' in the sense of 'very careful' and of the noun 'hemorrhage' as a verb. Likewise the all too common error occurs of employing 'tubercular' when 'tuberculous' is intended. But these are trivial errors and fully compensated for by the authenticity of the data and the scholarly presentation." S. C. Harvey

+ Yale R n s 31:822 summer '42 1350w

CLAPP, CHARLES. Drunks are square pegs. 118p $1.50 Island workshop

616.861 Alcoholism 42-3861

"The author of 'The Big Bender,' (Book Review Digest, 1938) has now written this second volume on the subject of alcoholism. With a background of personal experience, he writes in language the alcoholic can understand and makes shrewd observations and practical suggestions of definite value to the physician attempting to treat an alcoholic." Survey

"The author has been over the road he maps. His psychology is non-technical but sound, and his sense is sounder still."

+ Christian Century 59:187 F 11 '42 70w

"While the book is neither pretentious nor technical, Mr. Clapp approaches the problem from the viewpoint that alcoholics are essentially maladjusted individuals. He gives a good deal of common sense advice." Merrill Moore, M.D.

+ Survey 78:224 Ag '42 200w

CLARK, BLANCHE HENRY. Tennessee yeomen, 1840-1860. 200p maps $2 Vanderbilt univ. press, Kirkland hall, Nashville, Tenn.

630.9768 Agriculture-Tennessee. Land tenure-Tennessee 42-13418

"For some years now, historians and sociologists of the South have been attacking the distortion, fathered by the northern abolitionists and fostered by southern romanticists, that the people of the Old South were composed essentially of wealthy planters, poor whites, and Negro slaves. Among those who have done much to rediscover the millions of middle class yeomen of the Old South is Professor Frank L. Owsley of Vanderbilt University. He and his students have been exploring the unpublished schedules of the Census which give a detailed and fairly accurate picture of this class. Miss Clark, working with Owsley, has relied largely upon these schedules together with state and county records, newspapers, and agricultural magazines for her study of the Tennessee yeomen." Social Forces

Reviewed by W. W. Jennings

Am Econ R 32:578 S '42 1600w

"It is too bad that such a worthwhile book is marred by a dull, tedious style. The repetitions and great mass of details tend to obscure the significant findings and conclusions. The book's usefulness would have been greatly increased by more generalization and interpretations." F. M. Green

+ Social Forces 21:259 D '42 360w

CLARK, DOROTHY. Peter on the Min; II. by Weda Yap. 171p $2 Lothrop

42-13306

"A gentle story of two boys, sons of an American missionary in prewar China, whose calm adventures are at the same time exotic and homely." New Yorker

Booklist 38:430 J1 1 '42

"The adventures of ten-year-old Peter and his little brother Sammy bring China nearer than most stories for little children about this country, because it comes to them through the eyes of an American child."

+ Books p18 My 10 '42 250w

"Understanding, sympathetic parents and family solidarity give a fine tone to book. Excellent make-up, with very good illustrations in color by Weda Yap." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 67:582 Je 15 '42 50w

"The author writes that she hoped to 'portray the Chinese as these children knew them,' and the result is a warmhearted appreciation of a kindly and humorous people."

+ New Yorker 18:74 My 23 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:140 O '42

CLARK, EDGAR HARRISON. Swedish unemployment policy—1914 to 1940; introd. by Sumner H. Slichter. 179p $3.25 Am. council on public affairs

331.137 Unemployment—Sweden. Charities—Sweden. Sweden—Public works 42-2239

"This book contains a very good summary of Swedish policies for relieving and reducing unemployment during World War I, during the post-war depression following 1920, and during the period of moderate depression and remarkable recovery from 1930 through 1940. The unemployment programs of both the Conservative and Social Democratic governments in the 1920's and 1930's are explained with abundant statistical material and references. The disadvantages of work relief, the advantages of an expansionist program to combat depressions, and Sweden's wartime labor policy are well explained." Am Econ R

Reviewed by R. A. Lester

+ Am Econ R 32:411 Je '42 450w

"This book should be read by all those interested in preparing their minds for the next economic depression." E. T. H. Kjellstrom

Ann Am Acad 220:266 Mr '42 550w

CLARK, ELEANOR GRACE. Raleigh and Marlowe; a study in Elizabethan fustian. 488p il $4 Fordham univ. press

822.09 English drama. Marlowe, Christopher. Raleigh, Sir Walter 41-14498

The two parts of the book are called Elizabethan fustian, and Raleigh and Marlowe. Part one, which was published separately earlier, is a study of the way in which the poets and dramatists of the Elizabethan age managed to camouflage their works, so that their modern meanings would masquerade as old fables. Part two seeks to prove that Marlowe belonged to Raleigh's school, or 'academy', and that in writing Tamerlane Marlowe had Raleigh in mind. Index.

"The argument presented depends upon so vast a number of details that justice could be done to it only in a very long review. All that can here be said is that the book is a notable contribution to Elizabethan scholarship, interesting even at those points where it does not carry conviction and assembling an amount of evidence with which those scholars who deny the presence of 'fustian' in the old drama, or at any rate, belittle its amount and its significance, must not ignore."

+ Books p16 Ap 5 '42 300w

"A stimulating book even if one does not find all its suggestions entirely convincing." H. C. White

+ Cath World 156:117 O '42 800w

"One of the soberest, most carefully documented, and most ingenious essays in literary investigation to appear in a long time." E. A. Sille

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 D 27 '41 400w

CLARK, HARRISON. See Clark, E. H.

CLARK, MRS LESLIE SAVAGE. Star for beacon [poems]. 77p $1.50 Kaleidograph 811 42-692
Collection of brief lyrics, many of them terse as epigrams, by an American poet.

"These poems are stripped of superfluous words and a clear thought shines through each."

+ Christian Century 59:187 F 11 '42 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jakeman

Springf'd Republican p6 F 16 '42 190w

CLARK, MRS MARIAN BUXTON. Model corpse. 404p $2 Hale 42-10297
Detective story.

"This is a soft-boiled item, somewhat excessive in spots, but a natural for had-I-but-known fans with time on their hands. It runs to an awful lot of wordage, but reads easily and the interest keeps up, too." Will Cuppy Books p12 Mr 29 '42 130w

"A fair to middling story." Isaac Anderson N Y Times p14 Ap 12 '42 180w

"Run-of-mill."

Sat R of Lit 25:20 Ap 4 '42 40w

CLARK, THOMAS BLAKE. Remember Pearl harbor! [Eng title: Pearl harbour]. 127p $1.25 Modern age [3s 6d Lane]

940.542 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American, Pearl harbor, Battle of, 1941 (W) 42-7268

"Mr. Clark's slender but informative volume tells his own experiences on the day of the raid, of the initial incredulity of people that the bombs falling on Pearl Harbor could be real, of the completeness of the Japanese surprise in all parts of the island. He tells of the bravery under fire of every one, service men and civilians alike, of the fortitude of the wounded, of the blood donors lining up at the hospitals, eager to do what they could. He indicates the reactions of the Japanese population, during and after the raid, and the effective help which the loyal Japanese are giving in ferreting out traitors." Books

Booklist 38:272 Ap 1 '42

"This is all timely and exciting stuff, and it is a pity the story does not hold up in the final chapters. One of these deals with island life 'two months after' in a style suddenly gone flat. The other was evidently intended to round out the volume with a sort of 'Defend Democracy' flourish, but which remains a puerile and carelessly reasoned hodgepodge. This is a book which would have been distinctly better if it had known where to quit." R. F. Armknecht

+ — Books p13 Mr 22 '42 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '42

"The book's catchword title is not wholly fortunate. But there is nothing glib or facile or grandiloquent in its content. In all soberness this book should be read by every American as we must look from Pearl Harbor ahead."

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 15 '42 480w

"Mr. Clark's little book is of high interest to any student of warlike affairs. In some ways, of course, it is tantalizingly inadequate; it completely ignores, for instance, the mystery of the American failure to guard against surprise—a negligence which in the light of Japan's previous record and of the fruitless negotiations at Washington, would seem to border upon the criminal. But it does present in concise form a clear impression of the chaos, the terror and the courage which suddenly distinguished that calm, sunny morning. It is interesting, too, from another aspect. It has brought home to me, more perhaps than any other book I have read, the width of the psychological gap which still divides the sheltered American from us storm-tossed Europeans." Simon Harcourt-Smith

+ — Spec 169:156 Ag 14 '42 430w

Times [London] Lit Sup p290 Je 13 '42 500w

CLARK, THOMAS CURTIS, comp. Poems for life; quotable verse from the seers and singers of yesterday and today. 370p $2.50 Willett 821.08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections 42-687

A companion volume to the compiler's Quotable Poems (Book Review Digest, 1928, 1931). The poems are arranged under a variety of headings such as: Lovely is thy universe; Good in everything; Look inward, and begin to live; Wise man's pattern; Thou crystal Christ! That land thy country; Poems for the great days. Index of authors. Index of titles.

Booklist 38:186 F 1 '42

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 58:1640 D 31 '41 500w

Churchman 156:31 Mr 15 '42 50w

"The selected verses are alive and will find themselves quoted time upon time from many pulpits. For this purpose the book is of worth; but if one wishes to read poetry for the enjoyment and excellence of the poems themselves, there are many finer anthologies. An index of first lines would make the book more serviceable." C. E. Batten

+ — Crozer Q 19:171 Ap '42 110w

CLARK, THOMAS DIONYSIUS. The Kentucky; II. by John A. Spelman, 3d. (Rivers of America) 431p $2.50 Farrar

917.69 Kentucky river. Kentucky—History (W) 42-36052

This history of the Kentucky river is one of the Rivers of America series. Kentucky mountaineers, flatboat men, Shakers, blue grass aristocrats, horse races, moonshine makers, politics, and ballads, all receive their share of attention. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:231 Mr 1 '42

"It seems ungrateful to ask more of this generous volume, but there are sure to be readers who will wish there could have been room for some of the bridges, particularly the old covered ones. Others will look for the name of Paul Sawyer, who lived on the river for years and left scores of etchings and paintings of the section between Frankfort and High Bridge. There will also be a few cantankerous readers who will think it a sin to have compared the river to 'a frolicsome mountain lassie' and who will regret that, while Mr. Clark was outlawing so many of the clichés that have tagged Kentucky talk, he did not ban the word 'rugged.' But these are small details in a work of lasting value. The illustrations by John A. Spelman 3d are in the mood of the book. The bibliography and index are satisfactory." B. T. Anderson

+ — Books p4 F 15 '42 750w

Christian Science Monitor p20 Mr 11 '42 650w

Commonweal 36:332 Jl 24 '42 40w

"One of the best in the 'Rivers of America' series. Mr. Clark's research is evident, but it has not made his prose pedantic. . . Recommended for purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 67:129 F 1 '42 50w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p5 F 15 '42 1150w

"A lively compilation."

+ New Yorker 17:71 F 14 '42 40w

Wis Lib Bul 38:45 Mr '42

CLARKE, CHARLES FRANCIS. To form a more perfect union; the lives of Charles Francis and Mary Clarke from their letters, 1847-1871, by Herbert Oliver Brayer. 233p il $3.50 Univ. of N.Mex. press

978.1 Frontier and pioneer life—Kansas 41-21200

"This slim volume containing 112 letters could be called a collection of pictures of the seamy side of life on the trans-Mississippi frontier, covering a twenty-five-year period from 1847 to 1872." (Am Hist R) "Charles Francis Clarke was the son of an English village parson. . . After flirting with the law in Milwaukee and finding it not overly productive of cash or opportunities, he joined the Army and became major to the First Dragoons. . . These chronicles of one family against the opening of the West are told in letters written by Charles Clarke for the most part to his mother and father. On his death and the death of the father, Mary [his wife] continues the correspondence." (Books)

"The volume has real interest and value for its comments, from the viewpoint of poor folk, on the social life of the frontier, the Mexican and Civil Wars, and the days of settlement and railroad building in Kansas." R. K. Wyllys
Am Hist R 47:953 J1 '42 210w

Reviewed by Richardson Wright
Books p15 Mr 22 '42 800w

CLARKE, ERIC KENT. Mental hygiene for community nursing. 262p $3.50 Univ. of Minn.

131.3 Mental hygiene. Nurses and nursing
42-36732

Guide for public health, school, and industrial nurses. In twelve chapters the author discusses reactions to illness, the recognition of mental maladjustments, and treatments, and cites typical cases. Annotated bibliographies. Index.

"The reviewer cannot remember another psychiatric product that is so nicely tuned to the group for whom it is written. Some of the terms are pretty complicated for the amateur—but could not have been more adequately described without unjust lengthening of the text. Everyone who reads the book must develop an interest in the why of the crankiness, the unreasonableness, the faith or hope of her patients. And that is at least half of the trick. . . All in all, an excellent tilling of a new field by a man who knows his business." J. S. Plant

+ Am J Pub Health 32:662 Je '42 270w
Booklist 38:323 My 1 '42

Reviewed by Annette Overby
Survey 78:349 D '42 420w

CLARKSON, JESSE DUNSMORE, and COCHRAN, THOMAS CHILDS, eds. War as a social institution; the historian's perspective; ed. for the Am. hist. association. 333p $3.50 Columbia univ. press

355 War. Military art and science. Neutrality. World war, 1939—U.S. 41-28026

"Most of the papers on war read at the 1940 meeting of the American Historical Association. The five principal topics are: the causes and strategy of war, the effect of war on neutrality and the United States, and on social institutions." Social Studies

Reviewed by P. A. Sorokin
Am Hist R 47:919 J1 '42 170w

"The greatest merit of this work is that the editors have consciously sought to correlate the approach of the traditional historian with that of the social and political scientist. In this endeavor they have come very close to success. The result deserves careful attention by all who are seeking light on the causes, techniques, and consequences of armed violence as an instrument of national policy." F. L. Schuman

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:593 Je '42 340w

"War as a Social Institution is on the must list for all social scientists." Willard Waller
+ Ann Am Acad 222:194 J1 '42 680w

Canadian Forum 22:59 My '42 430w

Reviewed by S. D. Clark
Canadian Hist R 23:213 Je '42 450w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 59:807 Je 24 '42 850w

"The book is a symposium consisting of the papers read at the annual meeting of the American Historical Society. These are in no sense merely academic dissertations. They are studies of great contemporaneous importance. Some of them might well be published in pamphlet form and broadcast over the nation." Gordon Poteat

+ Crozer Q 19:254 J1 '42 200w

"Though the papers by twenty-six scholars of which this excellently edited volume is made up were read at a meeting of the American Historical Association nearly a year before our entry into the war, they contain a large and varied amount of information and ideas that remains highly relevant to the study of current events, and full of suggestion for those who are thinking about the peace to come." Alvin Adey

+ Current Hist 2:62 Mr '42 230w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:775 J1 '42 10w

"Unquestionably the single contributions are of great value and high interest. . . The reviewer, however, feels obliged to state that in his opinion the book takes too limited a view. . . The most serious consequence of the emphasis on the modern scene is that the main thesis of the volume is not clearly proved. . . We do not know whether these aspects were neglected because of the editors' desire for timelessness or because of the lack of material on these questions. It must be said, however, that, as the volume stands, a less pretentious title might have been more appropriate for this collection of interesting essays commenting on selected problems of the twentieth century." Felix Gilbert

+ Pol Sci Q 57:435 S '42 1050w

Social Studies 33:144 Mr '42 40w

"The reader will find valuable and interesting two sets of papers in particular. One group is devoted to the compilation of significant information about individual nations—Japan, the Scandinavian countries, and our Latin-American neighbors. The other group includes a study of the role of railway transport in modern war, a history of conscription, and a history of the relations between civil and military authorities in the period, roughly, from 1860 to 1920. In all cases there is some interpretation and prophecy, but the emphasis is on the facts of the past—and very enlightening they are." S. L. Jackson

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 25 '42
800w

CLARKSON, MRS ROSETTA E. Herbs, their culture and uses; il. by Tabea Hofmann. 226p $2.75 Macmillan

635.7 Herbs 42-10910

"The propagation of useful herbs, indoors and out, with directions for harvesting, packaging, and marketing, and for use in dyes, pot pourri, vinegars, beverages, and cookery. Informative paragraphs on 100 herbs and maximum value, alphabetically arranged, and tables for quick reference." Booklist

Booklist 38:363 Je 1 '42

Bookmark 3:6 My '42

"An herb book to end all herb books—that's what Rosetta E. Clarkson has accomplished in 'Herbs, Their Culture and Uses.' Flippancy aside, it's a grand book, and Mrs. Clarkson is the best person to have done it. Get a copy even if you already have a shelf and a half filled with other titles in this perpetually popular field!" R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p15 Ap 19 '42 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '42

"A comprehensive book on herbs is this—and one written in interesting style by one who loves her subject." H. P. H.
+ J Home Econ 34:553 O '42 150w

CLAUSEWITZ, KARL VON. Principles of war; tr. and ed. with an introd. by Hans W. Gatzke. 82p $1 Military service

355.4 Military art and science. Tactics
42-22494

This small volume contains a translation of the 1936 German edition of a memorandum written by Clausewitz for the instruction of his pupil, (later Frederick William IV of Prussia), entitled The Most Important Principles for the

CLAUSEWITZ, KARL VON—Continued
Conduct of War [etc]. The memorandum, completed in 1812, later formed the basis of the author's classic work, On War.

Booklist 39:178 Ja 1 '43

"The translation and editing of this minor opus by Clausewitz are on the whole sound. It might have contributed to the psychological portrait of this general of the romantic age had facts like the dubious character of his nobility, recently discovered, been dwelt on. Only a Prussian officer who was not fully a Prussian could have been as great a thinker as Clausewitz." Alfred Vagts

+ New Repub 107:616 N 9 '42 800w

Reviewed by Vincent McHugh
New Yorker 18:70 O 10 '42 650w

"The chances are good that whatever any wise soldier may have put down as the common sense of war at any given time in history will be generally applicable now. And when a soldier has done this whose ability to observe, digest, reflect, and record was as high as that of Clausewitz, every new soldier who reads what he wrote is likely to find his own reflections on warfare substantially excited. This seems to me as true of 'Principles of War' as of Clausewitz's later and major work, 'On War.'" J. I. Greene

+ Sat R of Lit 25:3 N 7 '42 1400w

CLAYMORE, TOD, pseud. Flare path [Eng title: Ships with wings]. 279p $2.50 Morrow [7s 6d Cassell]

42-21693

A novel of the North Atlantic bomber patrol during the crucial period of the battle of the Atlantic in the spring of 1941.

Booklist 39:71 N 1 '42

"In the guise of a novel, this is a more or less technical description of the operations of the North Atlantic Bomber Patrol. Tod Claymore, who is a member of the British Coastal Patrol and uses this pseudonym in accordance with British military regulations, turns the usual formula upside down. Instead of using the war background to spice a conventional love story, he uses the love story as surface camouflage for an unconventional and very accurate rendition of fighting conditions in the air." David Tilden

+ Books p12 O 11 '42 600w

"'Flare Path' easily takes rank among the best of the current output of war fiction written by participants." Drake De Kay

+ N Y Times p48 N 29 '42 500w

"Tod Claymore does not set out to be any Saint-Exupéry. When he is in the air he thinks about his bomber; when he is on land he thinks about his next date with his girl, Sarah. Wherever he is, he feels simply fine. He makes the reader feel simply fine, too."

+ New Yorker 18:66 O 3 '42 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p429 Ag 29 '42 250w

CLELAND, ROBERT GLASS. Cattle on a thousand hills; southern California, 1850-1870. 327p il $3.50 Huntington lib.

979.49 California, Southern 41-8118

"The hills of Dr. Cleland's title are the rolling, low ones of Southern California, and his book concerns the colorful and dramatic period when that region was being transformed from an isolated cattle frontier to the beginnings of an urban community. Dr. Cleland has gone to the old records themselves for his detail, and by careful scholarly research has here painted a first-rate portrait of the pastoral life of Spanish California undergoing sharp changes under the impact of the new Anglo-Saxon civilization." Books

"The narrative is set forth in a style distinguished for clarity and occasional eloquence, and the book is extraordinarily rich in suggestions of topics for further investigation." J. W. Caughey

+ Am Hist R 47:635 Ap '42 350w

"The student of California's history during these years and in this southern region will owe Dr. Cleland a considerable debt."

+ Books p21 Ja 25 '42 270w

Reviewed by C. M. Zierer
Geog R 32:697 O '42 350w

CLEMENS, CYRIL. Lytton Strachey; foreword by André Maurois; with a brief pedigree by Sir Charles Strachey. 19p $1.25 Int. Mark Twain soc.

B or 92 Strachey, Giles Lytton 42-22867

"A [short] essay and compilation of data about the famous biographer." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:960 Ag 5 '42 10w

Reviewed by Philips Brooks
N Y Times p12 N 15 '42 260w

"Despite his good intentions, industry and enthusiasm, the biographer's biographer has done a very disappointing job. Strachey as a person emerges but fragmentarily; the flavor, scope and significance of his work are just as inadequately traced."

— + Springf'd Republican S 16 '42 100w

CLEMENT, JOHN ADDISON. Manual for analyzing and selecting textbooks. 119p $2; score sheet 25c Garrard

371.32 Textbooks 42-12923

"A professor of education at the University of Illinois has prepared this guide for supervisors and others. Contains items and criteria which are considered consequential. Companion to a larger, forthcoming volume on the use of textbooks." Social Studies

School & Society 55:456 Ap 18 '42 40w

Social Studies 33:286 O '42 40w

CLEMENTS, EILEEN HELEN. Perhaps a little danger. 279p $2.50 Dutton [8s 6d Hodder]

(W) 42-17220

Mystery story.

Booklist 39:11 S '42

Reviewed by Page Cooper
Books p8 Ag 16 '42 600w

"An excellent blending of gaiety and suspense. Its author prefers satire to solemnity and has a light touch with a tense situation. This is a good example of the intelligent and well-written 'shocker'."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 5 '42 60w

"Miss Clements has a graceful, allusive style, well suited to her rather bookish people. At the same time she keeps her mystery going at a great rate and her descriptions of the islands and the coast line and all the physical details are absorbing. One hardly needs a map yet one keeps wishing for a chart of some kind. The Peregrine party, appropriately enough in wartime, never does find out precisely what the fire and the shooting were all about, but the contented reader is left well satisfied on every count." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 2 '42 460w

New Yorker 18:56 Ag 8 '42 50w

"An amusing adventure tale. It remains amusing, despite the genuine menace of invasion as we understand it, because of Miss Clements's own bright spirits and easy British understatement, as well as because of the irrepressible cheerfulness and confidence of her characters. . . It is true that sometimes the effervescent chatter these Peregrines, father and mother and sons, toss back and forth is a little difficult to bear—they never quite quote 'Alice in Wonderland' but you feel it coming. On the other hand, Miss Clements has written a beautifully knitted, tight little tale." N. L. R.

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:7 S 5 '42 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p389 Ag 8 '42 180w

Wis Lib Bul 38:137 O '42

CLENDENING, LOGAN, ed. Source book of medical history. (Paul B. Hoeber bk) 685p $10 Harper

610.9 Medicine—History 42-5478

"Out of a harvest of medical literature produced during four millennia Dr. Clendening has sifted 139 extracts from the writings of 120 authors. He begins with the ancient Egyptian papyri, and concludes with Wilhelm Conrad Roentgen's classic announcement of the discovery of X-rays. Each section is prefaced by a brief account of the author and a statement of the significance of the passage selected. Bibliographical notes are added as a guide to further reading." Am Hist R

"The compiler has here performed a notable service in directing attention once again to the fact that the sources of history do not exist exclusively in political and military archives. Dr. Clendening has produced a book useful to teacher and student alike. It deserves a place on every historian's reference shelf." M. C. Leikind

+ Am Hist R 48:61 O '42 490w

"This much can be said for Dr. Clendening's compilation—that whatever may be its sins of omission—it is without those of commission. Every item given is worthy of inclusion." Iago Galdston

+ Am J Pub Health 32:1054 S '42 400w

CLEVELAND, ROBERT (CAPPY DICK, pseud). Fun for boys and girls. 182p il $2 Greenberg

680 Amusements. Handicraft (W) 42-36398

Directions for making games, tricks, puzzles, stunts, and useful articles all of which will appeal to children from six to fourteen. All the materials and tools necessary are easy to get and step-by-step procedure is given.

Booklist 39:186 Ja 1 '43

Christian Century 59:1562 D 16 '42 50w

"Style and format cheap, but contents will have great popular appeal." Alice Monroe

+ Library J 67:1068 D 1 '42 50w

"The book is packed with fun of just the sort youngsters really enjoy."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 20 '42 110w

CLINCHY, EVERETT ROSS, ed. World we want to live in. 98p $1 Doubleday

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. Reconstruction (1939-) 42-6867

Presents in book form the discussions of the Williamstown Institute of human relations, held in the summer of 1941. Contents: Social change; Economics; Politics; Education; Religion.

Booklist 38:328 My 1 '42

Cath World 156:253 N '42 320w

Christian Century 59:288 Mr 4 '42 80w

Churchman 156:31 Ap 1 '42 250w

CLOSE, PAUL DUNHAM. Building insulation. 328p il $3 Am. tech. soc.

691.9 Insulation (heat). Soundproofing 41-22895

"A treatise on the principles and application of heat and sound insulation for buildings." (Subtitle) Many diagrams, drawings, and charts, and a table of commercial insulating materials.

Booklist 38:152 Ja 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:5 Ja '42

Pratt p15 My '42

CLOSE, UPTON, pseud. See Hall, J. W.

CLUNE, FRANK. Isles of Spice; an extensive journey through the Dutch East Indies, Indo-China and North Australia [Eng title: To the Isles of Spice]. 329p il $3.50 Dutton [12s 6d Angus]

919.1 East Indies—Description and travel (W) 42-3480

An Australian writer describes a journey he made by air thru the Dutch East Indies, Indo China and North Australia. The time was 1939 and there has been no attempt to bring the material up to date. "As a traveler in the interests of the present as well as the events of the past, Mr. Clune goes in search of head-hunters in Borneo, visits the native principalities of Java, inspects a tea plantation and a volcano on that island (also an opium 'den' in Batavia), and is present at a strange, wild native funeral on Celebes. He writes about Angkor Wat, too, and the Cambodian dancers." (N Y Times) Bibliography.

Booklist 38:272 Ap 1 '42

"His style of writing is generally colloquial. And, in sum, you may get some information and a good deal of enjoyment out of this travel book if you don't expect it to be something that it cannot be. But in the midst of Mr. Clune's respectful and credulous discussion of Japan's peaceful spirit in world affairs he repeats a strangely pertinent remark he heard in Malaya. 'The wisecracks declare that Singapore could be captured by a strong land attack delivered from the Malay Peninsula, similar to the Japanese attack on Port Arthur in 1904.'"

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 29 '42 480w

"A readable book in spite of some annoying affectations of style."

Wis Lib Bul 38:45 Mr '42

COALE, GRIFFITH BAILY. North Atlantic patrol; the log of a seagoing artist. 48p il $2 Farrar

940.545 World war, 1939—Naval operations.

World war, 1939—Pictorial works

(W) 42-18167

The author, a painter of murals, but also a lover of the sea and a small-boat sailor, enlisted in the navy in September, 1941. He was assigned to duty—as official painter for the Navy—with the North Atlantic patrol. His book combines reproductions of sketches and completed paintings and a day-by-day account of his adventures during the next two months.

Booklist 39:7 S '42

"'North Atlantic Patrol' is a slim volume compressing action, excitement, danger and drudgery into a few pages. Of the technical qualities of the seventeen illustrations this reviewer is not competent to judge, but, whether depicting the mud of Newfoundland, craggy cliffs of Iceland, mountainous seas or perilous rescues, they are vivid and arresting." P. J. Searles

+ Books p4 Jl 19 '42 800w

Boston Globe p19 Jl 22 '42 250w

New Repub 107:126 Jl 27 '42 60w

"Physically this is a thin book, good for an hour or less if you read rapidly and give a museum-trotter's glance at each picture. But if you take what is in it you will know you have been somewhere." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p1 Jl 19 '42 900w

New Yorker 18:59 Jl 18 '42 90w

COAN, OTIS W. and LILLARD, RICHARD G. America in fiction. 180p pa $1.50 Stanford univ. press

016.813 American fiction—Bibliography. U.S.—History—Fiction—Bibliography 41-22753

An annotated list of some 1200 novels that interpret aspects of life in the United States. The bibliography "is designed to aid students of American civilization—adults using the facilities of public libraries, college undergraduates, and young people in the eleventh and twelfth grades." (Pref.) The arrangement is under seven main headings: Pioneering; Farm and village life; Industrial America; Politics;

COAN, O. W.—Continued

Religion; The Southern tradition; and Minority ethnic groups. Suggestions for general background reading. Author index only.

"Useful material; no warning is given, however, of books which may offend conservative readers."

Booklist 38:107 D 1 '41

"To find out about New England or New England writers one must dig frantically through 'Farm and Village Life (The North East),' 'Industrial America,' 'Politics,' and 'Religion (Puritans and Puritanism),' and finally through the index. . . In such a job, one can always find objections to the classifications or to the selections. Where is Elizabeth Stuart Phelps's Gates Ajar? Why is Winston Churchill so scattered that the index lists ten different pages for his books? And so on. But almost everything one would want is here and as handily arranged as we can expect." J. L.

New Eng Q 14:778 D '41 180w

Pratt p7 O '42

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). Country poems. 103p $2 Macmillan

811 Nature in poetry (W) 42-19845

Collection of poems about simple everyday living in the country, indoors and out. Contains twelve Christmas poems. For young readers.

Booklist 39:6 S '42

"Miss Coatsworth sings of many things, but the essentials of her poetry are that it does sing, and that it manages to sustain throughout its song, without monotony, this note of wonder and delight in the common things of earth and the common experience of human kind." Elizabeth Drew

+ Books p33 N 8 '42 430w

"The often made comparison between poets and Emily Dickinson is really effective in the case of Elizabeth Coatsworth. There is the same direct emotion expressed without fear or affectation and with a complete absence of the eccentric and the neurotic. Each poem is clear and deep like a well. Poets such as Robert Frost and Tristram Coffin have written about the same locale and the same scenes, but Elizabeth Coatsworth has brought to them the brooding, fulfilled, half-startled feelings of motherhood." M. M. Culum

+ N Y Times p8 N 1 '42 320w

"Elizabeth Coatsworth's 'Country Poems' have the directness and simplicity of personal observation. They are sensitive, unpretentious, colored with nice imagery and careful accuracy. . . A section of religious lyrics at the end of the book is the least interesting in the collection, and some of the poems to her daughters are a bit on the preachy side. But poems like 'The Blessing of the Bed,' 'Journey,' and 'Cygnus' have about them the magic of true poetry." S. H. Hay

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:42 O 24 '42 320w

Wis Lib Bul 38:159 N '42

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). Houseboat summer; il. by Marguerite Davis. 192p $1.75 Macmillan 42-36173

Two children, a brother and sister, spend a long summer with an uncle and aunt on a houseboat in the Damariscotta region of Maine. Whether on the compact little boat, swimming in the lake or paddling their canoe on it, or joining in the farm activities on shore, the children have a happy, contented time. For grades four to six.

Booklist 38:334 My 1 '42

"It may be that the bits of verse between the chapters set up vibrations that last through the story: it may be that without them a poet's love of Damariscotta, Maine, and all it stands for, would have given beauty to these simple adventures. Whatever does it, the beauty is there, in the way the story is told and in undertones and overtones it sets up. . . Distinction of style will not take the place of a story in writing for children. But when a good story, even one quiet as this, has distinction of style, it puts the book into a class on which wise parents draw."

+ Books p21 My 10 '42 350w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 29 '42 180w

"To most children the idea of living on a houseboat gives a sense of special charm. Perhaps an unusual type of dwelling does this. Elizabeth Coatsworth must feel it, too, because she has told us about Sally's house on its runners and the endearing little house at Hingham, and now here is the most delightful of summer homes, by the lovely Damariscotta shore. This is made as real through Marguerite Davis's sincere drawings as it was to the brother and sister who loved it at first sight. . . Full of love of animals and the Maine coast, the story makes happy reading." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:172 My '42 150w

"Nice little book that will be liked by children from ten to twelve, although it lacks some of the author's usual charm and finished style. Good type and illustrations. Recommended." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:534 Je 1 '42 60w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:886 O 15 '42 20w

"Only an artist in words like Elizabeth Coatsworth could make in effortless fashion a group of characters, young and old (including a pair of delightful kittens), so real and individual. Here, too, are the sights, scents and sounds of Maine country, vivid and poignant. . . Marguerite Davis's many drawings in their sincerity and beautiful simplicity are a perfect accompaniment to the text and deepen the reader's feeling that he is actually seeing the woods and coves and stony pastures of Maine. A fine book for Summer reading and one that 8 to 11 year-olds should not miss." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 My 31 '42 500w

"A new canoe, explorations and picnics, the danger in a bad thunderstorm are the elements to which the children react, and their reactions are observed with Miss Coatsworth's usual sensitivity to childish mood and character."

+ New Yorker 18:74 My 23 '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 38:140 O '42

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). White horse; pictures by Helen Sewell. 164p $2 Macmillan

(W) 42-21438

Sequel to The Fair American (Book Review Digest, 1940). Sally, Andrew, and Uncle Patterson, sailing on the Fair American for Genoa, are captured by pirates and sold as slaves to the sultan of Morocco. It is Sally who wins favor and finally effects their escape. For girls ten to fourteen.

"Good writing, fascinating background, and grand adventure—though unconvincing." + — Booklist 39:35 O 1 '42

"A melodramatic foreign setting is just what the Sally stories need: the little girl and her gifted author had scarcely room enough in Maine. Now that realism can also be romantic, Miss Coatsworth's lyric prose and Miss Sewell's drawings make a handsome, absorbing volume." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 15 '42 320w

Cath World 156:377 D '42 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:430 N '42 100w

"Little boys who like pirate stories may not find enough action in this, while the little girls, who have always liked the doings of 'Away-goes-Sally,' may find it a bit too grim." P. D. Edie

Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 60w

"By far the most exciting plot of the Sally books but quite different from, and less appealing than, Away Goes Sally, Five Bushel Farm, or The Fair American." M. N. Miller

Library J 67:910 O 15 '42 90w

"Miss Coatsworth has based her picture of the Sultan's court on historical accounts, with a slight alteration of dates. . . Her descriptions of the Sultan's city, with its palaces and gardens, and of Sally and the beautiful White Lalla in these surroundings, are vivid and charming. . . There are delightful poems by the author between the chapters, and Helen Sewell's fine drawings, heighten the atmosphere of the story." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 17 '43 550w

"Most of the story is about Sally's life as a captive slave in the Sultan's court—a not too unpleasant experience—and Miss Coatsworth does full justice to the exotic, romantic background and to the intrigues leading up to Sally's escape." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 18:108 D 12 '42 60w

COBB, HENRY VAN ZANDT. Man's way; a first book in philosophy. 395p $3 Longmans

100 Philosophy 42-14671

"In his examination of modern philosophical and social problems, the writer seeks to show 'how thought must emerge in necessity and, through the role played by intelligence in civilization, how the social mind continues to develop.' He considers in turn our present position, the nature of philosophy, the structure of life, the adjustments indicated by dynamic thought, the human mind at work, language and logic as tools of thought, the lessons derived from history and the problems of the future." (School & Society) Index.

"Professor Cobb's introduction is to methods of contemporary problem-solving, to which he shows himself to be an able guide, rather than to the great names or great issues of philosophy. It is a question whether college freshmen have sufficient intellectual maturity and command of relevant experience to profit by condensed talk about methods of thinking that is not closely related to subject-matter with which they are dealing. At the same time the urgency of present issues calls for a good deal of forced-draft thinking, and any book which will help such thought to be broad-gauge as well is to be welcomed. One wonders whether the author has not opened so many methodological doors that a freshman would have difficulty in deciding which deserved further exploration?" H. A. L.

J Philos 39:558 S 24 '42 450w

School & Society 55:568 My 16 '42 80w

Social Studies 33:288 O '42 30w

COBINE, JAMES DILLON. Gaseous conductors; theory and engineering applications. 606p il $5.50 McGraw

537.53 Electric discharges through gases. Ionization of gases. Electric current rectifiers 41-24046

"This text is the result of an experience of seven years in teaching the engineering applications of electrical discharges in gases to classes in the Graduate School of Engineering at Harvard University. . . The subject matter presented may be divided into three parts. The first part discusses the physical concepts of the kinetic theory of gases, atomic structure, ionization, and emission phenomena, which are fundamental to an understanding of gaseous conduction. . . The second part includes a study of space charge, breakdown of gases, and the characteristics of the spark, glow, and arc discharges. The third part presents the engineering applications of discharge phenomena in circuit interrupters, rectifiers, light sources, oscillographs, etc." Prei.

N Y New Tech Bks 27:6 Ja '42

"All in all, this book fills an important gap in English language engineering literature. It has the advantage of being more up-to-date than von Engel and Steenbeck's Elektrische Gasentladungen and while it should be serviceable as a text, it will be very useful for reference purposes as well." Lewi Tonks

+ R of Scientific Instruments 13:163 Ap '42 850w

COBLENTZ, CATHERINE (CATE) (MRS W. W. COBLENTZ). Falcon of Eric the Red; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 211p $2.25 Longmans

(W) 42-36271

The story of a small band of Vikings who went from Greenland to settle in Vineland. With them went the boy Jon and his beautiful white falcon, a gift from Eric the Red. There are several episodes with the native Indians, Skraelings as the Norsemen called them, before the white settlers took ship again for their homeland. Grades six to nine.

Booklist 39:15 S '42

"This is more than a good guess at what happened in those mysterious months at Vineland. It is an idyl of what well might have happened there." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 1 '42 380w

Cath World 156:379 D '42 110w

Christian Century 59:1223 O 7 '42 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:428 N '42 90w

"Much information about falconry but no glossary of its unfamiliar terms. For readers too old for Everson's Coming of the Viking Ships and not yet ready for Hansen's Eric the Red." J. L. Sauer

Library J 67:796 S 15 '42 100w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 60w

COCHRAN, HAMILTON. Windward passage. 313p $2.50 Bobbs

Morgan, Sir Henry—Fiction (W) 42-14355

Historical novel relating the story of the raid on Panama in 1671 by the pirate, Henry Morgan.

Booklist 38:441 Jl 15 '42

"In this lusty study of the scourge of the Spanish Main, Mr. Cochran chalks up Morgan's merits as well as his black marks." George Conrad

Books p8 My 17 '42 500w

"Mr. Cochran has splashed a bold story on a broad and brilliant canvas. It is skillfully told with plenty of detail and imagination. Essentially, the writing is plain, but it is by no means bare. It just lacks the unnecessary frills which embroider so many historical novels." J. W. Riley

+ Boston Globe p19 Je 3 '42 280w

"Whether as dramatic fiction or as re-creation of history the book is a grand piece of work." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p20 My 24 '42 600w

COCHRAN, THOMAS CHILDS, and MILLER, WILLIAM. Age of enterprise; a social history of industrial America. 394p $3.50 Macmillan

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Social conditions (W) 42-22792

Industrial history of the United States, written by two members of the history department of New York university. They follow the development of commerce, industry, labor and agriculture between the years 1800 and 1930. Bibliography. Index.

"Readers who are curious to learn what are the latest materials compiled by scholars in the history of American business will find 'The Age of Enterprise' worth their attention. Its language is lively, if sometimes given to hyperbole; its judgments are interesting even if, at times, the supporting evidences are not always convincing. The book has a fresh viewpoint and its thesis is challenging." L. M. Hacker

+ Books p22 O 25 '42 1450w

Reviewed by Paul Kiniry

Commonweal 37:233 Ja 1 '43 350w

"The Age of Enterprise is a brilliant exposition . . . and it makes an important contribution to the better understanding of American history." H. U. Faulkner

+ Current Hist 3:353 D '42 850w

COCHRAN, T. C.—Continued

"Fascinating social history. . . Helpful background book, with just enough human interest material to give it life. Has advantage of large type, bibliography, and index. Recommended." R. S. Alvarez

+ Library J 67:679 Ag '42 90w

Reviewed by Louis Filler
Nation 155:518 N 14 '42 800w

Reviewed by George Soule
New Repub 107:515 O 19 '42 1300w

Reviewed by Joseph Hergesheimer
Sat R of Lit 25:5 N 7 '42 2500w

"The claim of uniqueness seems a little overdone, since Louis Hacker in his 'Triumph of American Capitalism' two years ago took a somewhat similar approach to the same general materials, 'the existing monographic material in American history, economics and related social subjects.' Be that as it may, 'The Age of Enterprise' is a valuable addition to the intelligent layman's library. Here he will find a readable dissection and teeming chronicle of the anatomy and development of American industry and business." Marshall Bragdon

+ — Spring'd Republican p6 O 31 '42 850w

COFFIN, ROBERT. Last of the Logan; ed. with an introd. by Harold W. Thompson. 214p $2 Cornell univ. press

910.4 Seafaring life 41-26140

"The true adventures of Robert Coffin mariner in the years 1854 to 1859 wherein are set forth his pursuit of the whale, his shipwreck on Rapid Reef, his life among the cannibals of Fiji, and his search for gold in Australia, as told by himself and now first published." (Subtitle) The author began life on a Dutchess county farm, and after his adventurous voyage came back to America, took his college degree at the age of fifty-three, and died in 1914, aged eighty. Index.

Booklist 38:250 Mr 15 '42

"A most interesting narrative. . . There are a good introduction and liberal annotations by the editor." S. E. M.

+ New Eng Q 15:196 Mr '42 60w

Spring'd Republican p10 D 3 '41 220w

COFFIN, ROBERT PETER TRISTRAM. Book of uncles. 151p $2 Macmillan

818 Maine—Social life and customs (W) 42-22252

In which the Maine poet turns to prose and in fifteen lively sketches describes as many uncles. They were all robust, hearty men, and all different, ranging from the famous uncle: he missed the boat and so his life was saved, to Uncle Andy: he fished all year round, and ate his weight in fish about once every month.

Booklist 39:98 N 15 '42

"This lively, exuberant book provides new and fresh faith in the American way of life. These Maine coast and island men are worth preserving for this very reason. And the good-natured gusto by which they are preserved in these pages is something which no one, interested in human personality and still confident of human integrity, should miss." M. E. Chase

+ Books p7 N 8 '42 1000w

Reviewed by E. L. Keyes
Commonweal 37:210 D 11 '42 450w

"In the matter of uncles, Mr. Coffin is at his best when he has a story to tell. Many of these sketches are merely long lists of features, traits, and habits, which, though entertaining enough in themselves, seem blurred, boring, lacking in immediacy when presented in casual and unselective abundance. But 'My Only Famous Uncle,' who became notable as the man who missed the boat (the steamer Portland), and 'My Atheist Uncle,' who sat up every night for a week after his wife's death, with the family Bible on his knees, hoping to hear from her—such tales as these, once well started, never let the reader go." K. P. Kempton

+ — New Eng Q 15:737 D '42 420w

"Every one of the sketches is earthy and salty, rich with lusty laughter and touched with beauty, firmly based on wisdom and dancing with wit and whim. This is a book for almost every one of native gusto to delight in, as a poet's rare individual humor gushes sparkling from the fertile soil of life." K. W.

+ N Y Times p2 O 25 '42 600w

"Leave it to Coffin to be different, and sparkling as the Maine coast which he so lustily represents. This may be marked as one of the better books from his prolific pen." A. M. Jakeman

+ Spring'd Republican p10 O 2 '42 470w

COFFIN, ROBERT PETER TRISTRAM. Sub-stance that is poetry. 167p $2 Macmillan 808.1 Poetry (W) 42-22107

"Essays on the content and meaning of poetry, by a hearty New England poet. Mr. Coffin interprets poetry as the very essence of life, as a language of definite and tangible things. His own poetry and the traditional poetry of the people, expressed in ballads, are the bases for this interpretation. The book is based on lectures and has the informal directness of the spoken word." Booklist

Booklist 39:65 N 1 '42

"The preoccupation with his personal achievement inevitably somewhat narrows Mr. Coffin's critical sense. He thinks the poet-critic should be 'the only kind of critic that ought to be licensed to practice'—thus cheerfully heaving Aristotle overboard, just as he drops Dante, Shakespeare, Donne and Blake when he says that the good poet is never obscure. And he has little sympathy with any one who does not share his own forthright, energetic, exuberant self-confidence and simplicity of outlook. It is good to be reminded of the eternal rhythms of simple things and people, of the eternal vitality of nature, and of the positive faiths we may hold in traditional and unchanging values. Yet one cannot but know that the problem of the poet in the modern world is a more complex one than appears in this book, and that the world itself has at all times appeared more complex to the great poets than it does to Mr. Coffin." Elizabeth Drew

+ — Books p22 O 4 '42 900w

"The text of this volume served originally as a series of lectures given at Indiana University. It has all the qualities of the lecture hall. It is informal, chatty, discursive and exceedingly prolix. Many of his arguments are weakened by unnecessary repetition. Mr. Coffin's uncles, cousins and his mother's preserves are included with equal ease and with more frequency than Homer, Beowulf or John Milton. This domestic fidelity undoubtedly has its charm, but it is only irritating to the reader who wishes to get to the matter at hand." Thomas Lask

+ — N Y Times p22 D 13 '43 700w

Wis Lib Bul 38:159 N '42

COFFIN, ROBERT PETER TRISTRAM. There will be bread and love. 109p $2 Macmillan 811 (W) 42-36151

Poems of people and animals and the out-of-doors, written by the well-known Maine poet.

Booklist 38:305 Ap 15 '42

"Mr. Coffin has a tendency to overload his lyrics, to overstress his point, to stand a bit self-consciously before his own vision, as one viewing a hand-created apocalypse. But he does come pretty near to the folk element at its best, not only in his ballads, but in some of the character sketches and in the delineation of individual, unpretentious experience. As a poet, he has no interest in world events, in political or economic changes." Ruth Lechlitter

+ — Books p2 Je 7 '42 700w

"The name may not be Pegasus, our steed may steal an apple from Mr. Frost's orchard or munch a primrose from Miss Dickinson's garden, but the pace is pleasant, the countryside is familiar, we know where we're going, and we want to go there."

+ — Boston Globe p17 Ap 8 '42 180w

"If anything, Mr. Coffin overdoes the simplicity. One misses the subtlety by which some of his earlier poems were enriched. Some of the 60-odd pieces in the new book are commonplace; yet they possess a sincerity which will probably make them acceptable to many readers." Pearl Strachan

+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 18 '42 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '42

Reviewed by Kenneth Porter

New Eng Q 15:547 S '42 420w

"Robert Tristram Coffin's forms, meters, patterns, rhythms are always the often-used forms, meters, patterns, rhythms. They are always used with appropriateness and distinction, but one wants a poet as good as this to come out with something new. . . . Still, one finds delight in his volumes, and his main theme, that of men and women working alongside nature to create something and acquiring a sort of wizardry from their connection with nature, has excitement and attraction." M. M. Colum

+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 12 '42 800w

"For the critic interested in a work of art as a thing well made, this is facile and shallow poetry; for the critic interested in art in relation to society, this is an enervating and brain-softening book." J. F. Nims

— Poetry 60:158 Je '42 300w

Reviewed by S. H. Hay

Sat R of Lit 25:14 Ag 15 '42 430w

Wis Lib Bul 38:84 My '42

COHEN, JACOB XENAB. Jewish life in South America; a survey study for the American Jewish congress; with a foreword by Stephen S. Wise. 195p il $1.50 Bloch

296.098 Jews in South America 41-12506

"This is an easily read, rambling, travelogue of the principal areas of Jewish occupancy in South America. The author discusses the size and distribution of the Jewish population, its geographical and political environs, and the official and unofficial attitudes and actions of non-Jews as they affect this population. These discussions are perhaps of greater interest to the average reader than the information which resulted from one of the apparently specific missions of the South American trek; namely, the attempt to determine from government immigration and colonization officials the prospects of large-scale Jewish immigration at the close of the present war." Am Soc R

Am Soc R 7:156 F '42 140w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:387 Ja '42 10w

COHN, DAVID LEWIS. New Orleans and its living past; phot. by Clarence John Laughlin. 1td autog ed 32p il $10 Houghton

917.63 New Orleans—Description. New Orleans—Historic houses, etc. 42-4204

"[This book contains] sixty-two photographs and thirty pages of text. It is a romantic enterprise, as if two men, friendly toward each other, were infatuated with the same woman without jealousy, and had collaborated in making the most flattering portrait possible of her. Mr. Cohn admits the truth cheerfully: Mr. Laughlin's camera 'has succeeded where words fail.' Mr. Cohn's rapid sketch of the early history of New Orleans is very lively and hits all the familiar high spots, well chosen to show the gay colors and the individual features of the city." Books

"This is a very evocative book. It reminds one who loved New Orleans of all that was worth keeping there, and how little of it has been kept. But New Orleans, even now, just the place itself—the colors and sounds, the heavy air, the heat, the rain, the smells, the shapes of some things—is lovely, and Mr.

Laughlin has seen this particular reality in its true light and without once cocking a superior snoot at any one." K. A. Porter

+ Books p4 Mr 8 '42 1450w

Sat R of Lit 25:21 F 7 '42 100w

COKER, FRANCIS WILLIAM, ed. Democracy, liberty, and property; readings in the American political tradition. 881p $4.25 Macmillan 342.73 Democracy, Liberty, Property, U.S.—Politics and government 42-14710

"This collection of writings representative of American political thought differs from previous ones not so much in the materials reprinted, although there are some important additions, as in the scheme of organization. It is divided into four sections, dealing with (1) the problem of locating political control, (2) the lines to be drawn between governmental authority and individual liberty, (3) the nature and limits of property rights, and (4) the problem of political change. Within each section the arrangement is chronological." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

Am Hist R 48:189 O '42 70w

"As a result of the method of arrangement, there is a definiteness of focus upon the essential aspects of American thought [here included] not elsewhere to be found. If certain traditional and not unimportant parts of the story, such as federalism and the separation of powers, are only incidentally touched upon, it may be answered that the substantial issues which usually conditioned discussions of those problems are presented in generous proportions. Almost all of the principal theorists, from the time of Winthrop, Cotton, and Williams, through the classical era of Jefferson, Madison, the Adamses, and Paine, the period of the establishment of the new government, and that of the controversies over slavery and the broadening of democracy, are adequately represented." B. F. Wright

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:955 O '42 550w

"While the chief use of the volume will probably be in the classroom, the general reader can here refresh himself as to the variety and the profundity of the intellectual effort that has gone into the making of the traditions of Americanism." T. V. S.

+ Ethics 53:154 Ja '43 140w

"Professor Coker explains that he has attempted to represent typical attitudes on both sides of the fundamental questions at issue. It is perhaps more exact to say that the selections reflect many shades and degrees of opinion in the debates which have swirled about these basic political problems even though the varied views reveal a bi-modal tendency. The selections are admirably chosen, and the book offers any who care to traverse its nearly nine hundred pages a rich insight into the well springs of American political thought." J. P. Horlacher

+ Social Studies 33:278 O '42 480w

COLBY, ELBRIDGE. Army talk. 232p il $2 Princeton univ. press

427 English language—Slang. Military art and science—Dictionaries (W) 42-36029

This "familiar dictionary of soldier speech" includes slang terms of both recent and ancient origin, official and technical terms that have passed into general army speech and improvisations that have sprung from the daily life of the American soldier.

Booklist 38:226 Mr 1 '42

"As the war goes on, no doubt, new and important terms will come into use, and this volume may need revision, but at the moment it stands as a scholarly, conscientious summary of Army talk. Much of it is, by its very nature, amusing, but Colonel Colby did not set out to write just another funny book for the titillation of the folks back home. This is sound stuff." Stanley Walker

+ Books p4 F 22 '42 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '42

COLBY, ELBRIDGE—Continued

"The book is a most up-to-date encyclopedic dictionary in compact form and has the great virtue of being readable as well as useful to consult." Alvin Adey

+ Current Hist 2:65 Mr '42 110w

COLE, CHARLES BRADFORD. Tool design; fundamental principles of design as applied to tooling for production. 498p il $4.50 Am. tech. soc

621.9 Tools. Machine tools 41-19998

Companion volume to the author's Tool Making (Book Review Digest, 1939). The present volume covers the same general field, but stresses designs, rather than the making of tools. Index.

Booklist 38:91 N 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 27:13 Ja '42

Pratt p15 My '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:79 My '42

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD. Europe, Russia, and the future. 233p $2 Macmillan [4s 6d Gollancz]

335 Socialism. World war, 1939- 42-22980

"The real thesis of the book does not lie in any specific or concrete proposals, though Mr. Cole would not be himself if he did not throw out in passing a score of ideas which would suffice many of his academic confrères for a massive tome. Its real value is its perception that the partnership between Great Britain and the Soviet Union could, if we have the courage to be wise, mark a great turning-point in history and in its vivid and arresting reaffirmation that the partnership of Socialism and democracy is essential to bring out the best in both. Of particular importance is the illuminating discussion of the nature of social morality, which deserves to be discussed by every class in adult education in Great Britain." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

"As a guidebook to what is being thought on the Left in England, this forecast of the contours of Europe's future by a leading Labor Party publicist is illuminating and valuable. The Labor Party parliamentarians are sometimes accused of being stodgy and unimaginative; no such accusation, could reasonably be lodged against Mr. Cole." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic 170:152 N '42 200w

"The book is essentially an appeal to Socialists throughout Europe, and especially the British Labor party, to begin planning now, in closest co-operation with the Russians, for post-war Socialism in Europe. But it can be recommended to those of the capitalist persuasion who want to know what their buddies of the Left are up to. For Mr. Cole is one of the clearest and most honest Left Wing theorists writing today." Hiram Motherwell

+ Books p24 N 8 '42 600w

Reviewed by J. F. Thorning

Cath World 156:503 Ja '43 190w

"Even those who criticize the whole conception of the book will have to acknowledge the honesty and the clear-sighted realism on which it rests."

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 9 '42 320w

Reviewed by Leo Gershoy

Current Hist 3:354 D '42 410w

"Mr. Cole himself warns us that this is a provisional book, in which he is doing no more than think aloud. But because Mr. Cole has an exceptionally clear and distinguished mind his first thoughts are of exceptional interest... Mr. Cole's book belongs to a tradition the value of which is not diminished by its specially English character. It has none of the tidiness of French social thought; it does not yearn after vast systems like the German. Shaped by men like Locke and Mill in an earlier period, by T. H. Green, Graham Wallas, and L. T. Hobhouse in more recent days, it is less a rigorous metaphysics of politics than an empirical recipe for wise living. It cares for tolerance, it values individual personality, it sees liberty as frustrated in the absence of equality. It breeds the experimental temper, and it is radical in the best sense of that term. I do not know how suited are the times to an outlook such as this. Certainly it possesses that quality of magnanimity the world must recover if it is to be saved."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 11 '41 330w

"This book so much surpasses in realism any other Socialist discussion of the post-war world that, with all its weaknesses, it cannot be ignored. Nor should plain liberals fail to read it. For the lesson of last time is surely that the immediate problems raised by the collapse of the Axis will be those Mr. Cole discusses." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 155:386 O 17 '42 1550w

Reviewed by A. R. Sweezy

New Repub 107:647 N 16 '42 1050w

"This book is not a serious treatise on political science nor an informed essay on history. It is simply a piece of wishful writing by a very nice man, who would like to see this war end in the triumph of the Soviet Union, but not of the United States." J. D. Clarkson

Pol Sci Q 57:608 D '42 800w

Reviewed by R. A. Scott-James

Spec 167:492 N 21 '41 700w

Reviewed by W. J. Dunn

Springf'd Republican p6 N 9 '42 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p550 N 8 '41 800w

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD, and COLE, MRS MARGARET ISABEL (POST-GATE). Knife in the dark. 256p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Collins]

42-7953

Detective story.

Booklist 38:369 Je 1 '42

Bookmark 3:18 My '42

"If the murderer's confessed motive strikes you as a falsehood, why worry? They got him, didn't they? A superior Coles warranted to please fanciers of timely entertainment." Will Cuppy

+ Books p21 Mr 8 '42 300w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 27 '42 70w

"I enjoyed Knife in the Dark more than any book the Coles have yet written." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:148 F 28 '42 220w

"'Knife in the Dark' begins in a vein of urbane satire, and then is swept by the undercurrents of actual social problems—swept, that is, out of the mystery story's depth. As 'literature' it teeters dizzily between 'pursuit' and 'escape,' and the reader may well feel a sense of mental indigestion. But even at that, it is an interesting story and, of course, a very well-written one." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 8 '42 260w

"Detecting lethargic and bit too intuitive."

Sat R of Lit 25:15 Mr 21 '42 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 3 '42 100w

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD, and COLE, MRS MARGARET ISABEL (POST-GATE). Toper's end. 340p $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Collins]

42-22293

Detective story.

Booklist 39:122 D 1 '42

"Minor faults could be found in this new Cole opus, but why worry when the general effect is satisfying? If the red herrings in the puzzle are really whales and the story runs to greater length than the traffic will bear, you get all the more bafflement and an amount of intensive sleuthing that you wouldn't expect, considering." Will Cuppy

+ Books p25 O 4 '42 250w

"Very good."

+ Boston Globe p19 O 28 '42 40w

"The caricatures of refugee mentality are amusing, but the plot is hackneyed and the detection, in spite of a great ox of a clue staring everyone in the face on an early page, is so feeble that Superintendent Wilson actually has to use third degree methods to extort a confession." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 24:376 D 5 '42 220w

"In the beginning this story starts out to be something of a farce-comedy, but the authors have difficulties with the dialects of the various refugees and are forced to return to straight mystery, at which they are more successful." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p10 O 4 '42 320w

New Yorker 18:76 O 10 '42 70w

"A reviewer can but express a personal opinion that for him a crime that might have been of enthralling interest—both plot and characters are excellent—becomes as maddening as an express journey halted by sudden jolts."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p393 Ag 8 '42 300w

COLE, LUELLA WINIFRED. Psychology of adolescence. rev ed 660p il $3.25 Farrar 136.7 Adolescence 42-14431

"The revision of this edition differs from the original text (1936) [Book Review Digest, 1936] in four respects: (1) it includes new subject matter either replacing or supplementing that of the earlier edition; (2) the emphases and interpretations are more nearly consonant with modern points of view; (3) the less effective case studies have been deleted and new histories and pictorial material have been added; (4) some of the sections retained have been rewritten." (School & Society) Index.

Booklist 38:428 J1 1 '42

School & Society 55:540 My 9 '42 80w

COLEMAN, MICHAEL EDWARD. Faith under fire. 160p $1.50 Scribner

230 Church of England—Doctrinal and controversial works (W) 42-12941

The acting vicar of All Hallows Church, London, during the worst of the bombardments of London's East End, made the rounds of the air raid shelters, working with the firemen and rescue squads, and answering questions about religion during the periods of quiet. This is his account of his religious talks during those months when his church was blown to bits, along with a large part of his parish.

"The little talks are marvels of clarity, simplicity and spiritual insight." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p10 Je 21 '42 130w

"That these brief and direct talks about religion were practically punctuated by bomb explosions would not help them if they had not the substance to support such punctuation. In the main, they have. There are points at which the argument in defense of some of the established procedures of the church seems to this reviewer a bit thin, but none at which it is not obviously sincere and completely intelligible."

+ Christian Century 59:634 My 13 '42 100w

Reviewed by A. L. Murray
Churchman 158:18 J1 1 '42 200w

Reviewed by R. E. E. Harkness
Crozer Q 19:245 J1 '42 700w

COLEMAN, MRS SATIS NARRONA (BARTON), and BREGMAN, ADOLPH. Songs of American folks; il. by Alanson Hewes. 128p $2.25; textbook ed $1.80 Day

784.4 Folk songs, American (W) 42-36425
Forty-seven American folk songs, with music. Index of first lines and titles.

Booklist 39:196 Ja 15 '43

"With all the collections of American folk songs, it would be hard to find one more likely than this to be put to immediate and lasting use. It will be used at once, because all the songs are true folk music; these tunes were danced to as well as sung, or actually used in every sort of gathering from play parties to camp meetings. The book will last, because need for such tunes will continue and—an important feature—because it is stoutly bound yet not too heavy to carry about."

+ Books p47 N 15 '42 280w

"If 'Songs of American Folks' is not so thick a book as Mr. Loesser's collection, it offers a far richer variety of content and proportionately much more fresh material—indeed, nearly half of the inclusions, complete with text and tune, are nowhere else to be found in print. If the book lacks the yarns with which Mr. Carmer has amplified his volume, it has nearly twice as many songs, and these tell enough of what Americans laugh and grieve over to give the quality of our living, on the prairie, up in the hills, down on the plantation, in the big city on the waterfront." Babette Deutsch

+ New Repub 107:833 D 21 '42 360w

COLER, MYRON ABRAHAM. Aircraft engine and metal finishes. 128p il $1.50 Pitman

629.1342 Airplanes—Materials. Metal finishing 42-16850

Simple explanation of American principles of finishing work of exterior surfaces of aircraft engines and similar practices. Index.

Booklist 39:44 O 15 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:36 J1 '42

COLERIDGE, HARTLEY. New poems; including a selection from his published poetry; ed. by Earl Leslie Griggs. 156p il $3 (10s 6d) Oxford

821 42-17621

"Mr. Griggs, of the University of Pennsylvania... has collected in this slender volume about as much of Hartley Coleridge's poetry as any one is ever again likely to read. Besides sixty-one pieces selected from a mass of some three hundred unpublished or uncollected poems which he has turned up, he has included a short selection from the volume prepared by Hartley himself in 1833 and a considerably larger share of the posthumous poems issued by Derwent Coleridge in 1851. This material has not been overhauled for nearly forty years." Books

"Mr. Griggs has taken great pains to present a scholarly text of the poems he has chosen, and he has made a number of noteworthy corrections in the readings given by Derwent Coleridge. A well-edited and well-selected book of Hartley Coleridge's poems can hardly be a major contribution to English letters, but Mr. Griggs has devoted to the task as much tact and skill as though it were." G. F. Whicher

Books p16 N 1 '42 600w

"This edition, the first for thirty-five years, is a valuable piece of editing."

Manchester Guardian p3 My 13 '42 180w

"Any relic of this fascinating 'eternal child' is welcome; and these verses, whatever their technical merits, are all characteristic and therefore, in their special fashion, charming." E. E. Kellett

+ New Statesman & Nation 24:261 O 17 '42 650w

COLES, MANNING, pseud. of ADELAIDE FRANCES OKE MANNING and CYRIL HENRY COLES. They tell no tales. 296p $2 Doubleday [8s 3d Hodder]

(W) 42-7337

Detective story.

Booklist 38:235 Mr 1 '42

Bookmark 3:18 My '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p13 F 8 '42 160w

COLES, MANNING—Continued

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hull
Boston Globe p19 Mr 11 '42 180w

Reviewed by Mort. Post
New Repub 106:470 Ap 6 '42 20w

"This story lacks some of the tense excitement of the earlier Hambledon tales, chiefly because Hambledon is at no time in such immediate peril as when he was in Germany masquerading as a German and enjoying at one time the confidence of Hitler himself. Now he is combating persons who are doing in England the same sort of job that he did in Germany, and his experience there enables him to conduct a highly successful counter-espionage campaign. Here are mystery, adventure and romance as Manning Coles knows so well how to present them." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 F 8 '42 220w

"Another superb spy story by the author of 'A Toast to Tomorrow.' Written with Mr. Coles' usual brilliance."

+ New Yorker 17:64 F 7 '42 50w

"First class."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 F 7 '42 40w

"The mysterious blowing up of battleships leaving Portsmouth dockyards summons Thomas Hambledon, of the British Intelligence Service, to the town, where his adventures in circumventing the German plots are retailed with a refreshingly light touch by the author."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p529 O 25 '41 70w

COLES, MANNING, pseud. of ADELAIDE FRANCES OKE MANNING and CYRIL HENRY COLES. This fortress. 275p $2 Doubleday

42-22269

In 1918 Tom Langrish, a captain at nineteen, was leader of a small troop of occupation forces which were billeted in an old German castle. Tom and the beautiful young baroness fell in love, but later when the baron died, circumstances kept them apart. The main thread of story deals with happenings in a small English seaport during the second World war—the actions of a German spy, and what the villagers thought about it—and finally the end of the story of Tom and Hildegard.

Booklist 39:122 D 1 '42

"Mr. Coles is an adroit story-teller, and 'This Fortress' doesn't hammer a thesis at the expense of drama. It is a novel of insight and expertly drawn characters, with a thunder-clap climax." Lisle Bell

+ Books p24 S 27 '42 380w

"It is a story whose war action has to do with the setting up and eventual discovery of a secret aerial used to direct the ferocious bombing of a fine old seaport. Brilliantly compounded with this and the broad humanity and humor of its personal side is a philosophy that probes the senseless cruelty of war and mirrors the irony of life with neither bitterness nor pessimism." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p30 S 27 '42 750w

New Yorker 18:80 S 26 '42 50w

COLLINS, CLELLA REEVES (MRS CARTER COLLINS). Army woman's handbook. (Whitely house publication) 203p $1.25 McGraw 355.12 Pensions, Military. Woman—Law. Finance, Personal. Etiquet (W) 42-18063

"The author is the wife of Colonel Carter Collins, and a leader in the organization called the Association of Army Wives. Aside from social problems and army post decorum, [the book] fully explains rights and obligations of more vital import—insurance, legal aid, tax returns and pensions. It describes the machinery by which the government gives financial and legal protection to the wives of soldiers, and what they should do to avail themselves of it." Books

Booklist 39:2 S '42

"Covering everything from etiquette to legal procedure, this book is a mine of information and especially valuable to those who are called upon to make the sudden adjustment to a war-time role of army wife."

+ Books p8 J1 19 '42 110w

J Home Econ 34:685 N '42 130w

COLLINS, HENRY HILL. America's own refugees. 323p $3 Princeton univ. press

331.796 Migration of workers. Migration, Internal. U.S.—Social conditions 41-26994

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"Collins, who served for a time on the staff of the Tolan Committee, has taken these materials as they fill the government record, made his selections, and woven them into a single volume. He is a journalist, with a feeling for language and with his heart in his subject. It will make good reading for his fellow-alumni of Princeton and of other colleges—gripping our interest even when it is the kind of thing we instinctively turn our backs upon. We cannot turn our backs, for the problems he presents will confront us when peace comes." P. S. Taylor

+ Am J Soc 48:150 J1 '42 320w

Reviewed by Mona Fletcher

Am Pol Sci R 36:170 F '42 190w

Reviewed by Malcolm Brown

Am Soc R 7:284 Ap '42 550w

"This book deserves a wide circulation for the interesting and trenchant manner in which it sets forth a grave national problem, one which the end of the present war will see sharply accentuated unless steps are taken beforehand to meet it. From the point of view of scholarship, some parts of the book seem careless, and footnotes which would not have been too disturbing to the general readers might have given other students in the field a happier feeling about the validity of the volume as a whole." Harry Schwartz

+ Ann Am Acad 220:263 Mr '42 700w

Reviewed by Russell Lord

Nation 154:440 Ap 11 '42 550w

"Mr. Collins' story is best told when the witnesses are permitted to speak for themselves—a procedure which he has wisely adopted wherever possible. His telling of the story is, in fact, only marred by a regrettable tendency to indulge in fancy rhetoric." Carey McWilliams

+ New Repub 106:338 Mr 9 '42 1100w

"Mr. Collins has written an admirable book." H. J. Laski

+ New Statesman & Nation 24:162 S 5 '42 700w

Reviewed by Arthur Raper

Social Forces 20:522 My '42 390w

"A background of journalism and soil conservation work enables the author to write a moving story with the skill of a trained observer. His lively style and colorful language makes this a living, human document." C. L. Hoag

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 8 '42 650w

COLLINS, MRS MARY (GARDEN). Dead center. 240p $2 Scribner

42-4712

Detective story.

"If we were one to carp, we might say that Miss Collins's screams are a trifle too loud and some of her horrors a trifle too horrid for her own civilized point of view. But why worry? 'Dead Center' should go on your list of literate whodunits." Will Cuppy

Books p18 F 22 '42 260w

"Janet's pseudo-Bohemianism and her self-conscious frankness about the facts of life make amusing interludes in a murder mystery of real quality." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 F 22 '42 260w

"Light and amusing."

+ New Yorker 18:72 F 21 '42 60w

"Interest-holding, amusing, and very well written. Satisfying."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:21 F 21 '42 40w

"An unusually entertaining story, with clever slap-dash conversation, constant conviviality, characters from varying social strata, a Maxie Rosenbloomish bodyguard who is a prize all by himself, and Hamish, who really is the one to catch the murderer, although Casey does the brain work. Miss Collins's mystery has proper suspense, but never gets particularly serious." L. S. M.

+ Springfield Republican p7e F 15 '42 340w

COLLINS, MRS MARY (GARDEN). Only the good. 250p $2 Scribner

42-20092

Detective story.

"Courageous Susan displays fair to middling skill as a narrator. She's inclined to become too wrought up too often." Will Cuppy
Books p10 Ag 30 '42 130w

"O.K."

+ Boston Globe p19 S 9 '42 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 Ag 30 '42 220w

"Good, tight-knit, complicated plot, well told by number-one suspect. Suspense and excitement expertly handled, solution plausible enough. Satisfying."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:15 Ag 29 '42 40w

Springfield Republican p7e D 13 '42 120w

Wis Lib Bul 38:162 N '42

COLLINS, NORMAN. Quiet lady [Eng title: Anna]. 432p $2.50 Harper [10s 6d Collins]

(W) 42-51126

Long historical novel which follows the adventures of Anna Karlin thru the Siege of Paris and the Commune, thru several love affairs and two marriages, in and out of prison, until she finally dies in Cheltenham, England, a respectable widow, known as "the quiet lady."

Booklist 39:224 F 1 '43

"When danger and adventure make the war headlines every day, there comes a point when readers need to look through the wrong end of a spyglass—to look back at some past generation which has lived through the kinds of events that are bursting about their own ears. Mr. Collins's romantic novel, which already has been enthusiastically received in England, is a story which may well have had its analogue in the life of some girl in the Rhineland in 1939. Because it has its beginning in the 1870's and moves through turmoil to a tranquil end, it will be more heartening to war-weary readers than a contemporary tale, ending necessarily in tragedy or mid-air." Mary Ross

+ Books p28 D 6 '42 550w

Canadian Forum 22:335 F '43 280w

+ Library J 67:1013 N 15 '42 40w

"A good, solid novel, a bit long-winded but earning its length by liveliness of texture." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 4 '42 200w

"Perhaps the novel should have been concluded with the surrender of Paris. The last third of the book is far less entertaining and moving than the capably written narrative of the Franco-Prussian War. . . . Mr. Collins draws too many startling parallels between the France of 1870 and of 1940 for us not to feel that he could not decide whether to make 'The Quiet Lady' a moving story of a romantic girl or, more important, the tragic history of nineteenth-century France seen through the eyes of a representative European. His talent is fully equal to his larger intention." W. A. S. Dollard

+ N Y Times p6 D 6 '42 1000w

"Even with all its ingredients, the novel never succeeds in generating any emotional force, nor do the goings on of the paper-thin characters seem very important."

New Yorker 18:102 D 5 '42 100w

Reviewed by Garrett Mattingly

Sat R of Lit 25:8 D 19 '42 450w

"Mr. Collins has assembled his detail well; he gives the reader a very good, concise account of the Siege of Paris and some exciting and moving battlepieces; later in the book he writes effectively of life in a convent in the South of France; and he is very good indeed, and quite funny, with English country-house life in the 1880's, as seen through the surprised and rather stupid eyes of his heroine, now a governess. But a major defect runs all through the work, in that one can find no vestige whatever of life or character or meaning in the inept, slow heroine, even whose much-stressed physical beauty seems throughout as sleepy and unilluminated as the rest of her. It is an unhappy failure in a careful, ambitious piece of work." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 169:272 S 18 '42 170w

Springfield Republican p7e D 20 '42 400w

"The concluding part of the tale is rather mechanical in content and style. Until then, however, although Mr. Collins resolutely chooses the easiest course and seldom does more than scratch the surface of character, he maintains a bright and even flow of accomplishment that is not without its rewards for the reader who knows what she likes and is determined to get it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p437 S 5 '42 480w

COLTON, NEA. Rivers are frozen. 296p $2.50 Coward-McCann

42-3377

This is the story of Leonora Martin, a New England girl now in New York, and her friendship with a family of Basques who run a grocery store in Greenwich village. Leonora has denied her own background and is living an insecure, unrooted life when a meeting with one of the Arteaga sons opens the door into a new way of life founded on family solidarity.

"A first novel of surprising strength and assurance. . . . We have grown used to novels with ready-made characters shunted about from incident to incident, put through the paces required by the plot, and left fundamentally unchanged in each other's arms at the end. Nea Colton has set herself to discover what happens to personality under certain pressures and circumstance and her novel not only justifies her position but gives us hope that we are to have a novelist interested in people reacting to life rather than to fictional shambles." Graham Bates

+ Books p8 F 22 '42 550w

"Miss Colton shows us why life cannot be wrong and why it must go on. Her plot might be a bit disorganized at times, and some of her psychological observations might be too simplified. But more important than these small faults seems the fact that she has something to say, and that she says it well." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 1 '42 500w

"It is only with Leo herself that the author seems to have had difficulties. I am sure it was not intended to make her unattractive, unsympathetic person, yet that is what has happened. . . . Miss Colton, first having attempted to gain sympathy for her heroine by showing her as pursued by Mikel, suddenly does an about-face and makes Leo the pursuer, which is puzzling to the reader. On the whole, however, the book evinces a commendable talent." R. R. Plant

+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 My 23 '42 450w

COLVER, MRS ALICE MARY (ROSS). Forever is so long. 253p $2 Macrae Smith co.

42-7954

Gae Marshall had three choices of a man to live with "forever," but she wavered and indeed married the not-quite-right man first, it was the man who was always the only one, who was her final choice.

Booklist 38:347 My 15 '42

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p21 Ap 5 '42 100w

COLVIN, FRED HERBERT. Aircraft handbook
5th ed 784p il $5 McGraw

629.134 Airplanes

42-5525

Rewritten technical handbook, first entered in Book Review Digest in 1918. "The many changes in engines, propellers, landing gear, and all other details of the modern airplane have made it seem advisable to confine the contents of this volume largely to the maintenance of the power plant and such other details as come within this range. Other books treat of the theory of flight and of the design and construction of planes, but this volume has been prepared to assist the ground mechanic in keeping in the best condition the parts that come under his care." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 38:278 Ap 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:36 Jl '42

Pratt p3 D '42

COLVIN, FRED HERBERT. Gages and their use in inspection. 157p il $1.50 McGraw

621.75 Gages

(W) 42-6845

"This little book is not a treatise on gage making. It simply points out why gages are made and how they are constructed and used, and makes clear many of the terms and questions that cause confusion and misunderstanding in many shops." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 38:303 Ap 15 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:24 Ap '42

COLVIN, FRED HERBERT. Running a milling machine. 167p il $1.50 McGraw

621.91 Milling machinery

(W) 42-504

Manual describing the construction, care, and operating of various kinds of milling machines. Partial contents: Milling machines and their parts; Milling cutters; Setting cutters for different kinds of work; Milling vises and fixtures; The dividing head; A wide-range dividing head; Cutting helices, sometimes called spirals. Index.

Booklist 38:184 F 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:25 Ap '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:78 My '42

COMFORT, WILLIAM WISTAR. Stephen Grellet, 1773-1855. 202p $2 Macmillan

B or 92 Grellet, Stephen

42-10797

"This is a biography of a Quaker saint, who, more than a hundred years ago, traveled throughout Europe and America to save souls for his Lord." Churchman

"Dr. Comfort, president emeritus of Haverford College, here produces a small volume, simply and carefully written, about a most appealing character, one who had 'no will other than that of his Lord' and one humbly sought to follow in his Master's way." E. C. Thompson

+ Churchman 156:18 Jl 1 '42 120w

"Here is a revelation of the influence of a selfless and good life. If you are looking for a book to renew your faith in the validity and effectiveness of righteousness, read this volume." G. W. Davis

+ Crozer Q 19:250 Jl '42 600w

COMMERCIAL and library atlas of the world. 256p il maps heavy fabrikoid $20; schools and libraries $15 c1941 Geographical pub. co. 912 Atlases

"A pictorial compendium of world maps and facts containing a comprehensive selection of new maps of all the states of the United States of America and the foreign countries with indexes, census figures and pictorial explanatory descriptive and statistical data. Complete 1940 census, alphabetical general index to foreign places including explanatory and descriptive articles by Frederick K. Branom." Subscription Bks Bul

"Owing to all the irregularities in organization and in information, the book falls below the standards of atlases advisable for purchase. The Commercial and Library Atlas of the World is not recommended."

— Subscription Bks Bul 12:49 O '41 1100w

COMPLETE Roman drama . . . ed, and with an introd, by George E. Duckworth. 2v 905; 971p $6 Random house

872 Latin drama—Translations into English 42-36335

Companion volume to Oates' Complete Greek Drama (Book Review Digest, 1938). The book contains English translations of the comedies of Plautus and Terence, and the tragedies of Seneca, covering all the extant plays of ancient Rome. New translations were made for thirteen of the plays. Glossary at end of volume two.

Booklist 39:65 N 1 '42

Nation 156:103 Ja 16 '43 150w

"Many of the translations were made expressly for this edition, and while accurate and scholarly, edited with an intelligent regard for theatre values. The Latin plays had a profound influence on the creation of English drama; they also deserve fresh reading for themselves today. Some of them have been inaccessible and many of the available translations were antiquated. Here is a trustworthy modern edition, and an excellent single source for all interested in the theatre, in classical literature, and in the development of the European drama. Attractively printed and particularly valuable for the long general introduction by the editor."

+ New Repub 107:293 S 7 '42 120w

"Dr. Duckworth and Random House have rendered a very useful service to the theatre-minded in gathering these plays under one roof. Agreeably printed, soundly edited and with introductions, notes and glossary, the collection is a real contribution to the theatre's ever-fascinating record." Rosamond Gilder

+ Theatre Arts 26:795 D '42 1050w

COMSTOCK, MRS HARRIET THERESA (SMITH). Windy Corners. 274p $2 Doubleday

42-16019

Story of complicated human relationships, and of two men who tried to make their own terms with life, without considering others. It took ten years to straighten out the tangle. The scene is variously a mining village in Arizona, New York city, and California.

"From [a] highly improbable beginning, 'Windy Corners' wavers unconvincingly onward. The characters go through a lot of agony, if that appeals to you." Lisle Bell

— Books p14 My 17 '42 100w

"In spite of its complex plot it is essentially a simple story." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p23 My 10 '42 200w

COMSTOCK, JOHN PAUL. Introduction to naval architecture. 209p $4 Simmons-Boardman

623.81 Naval architecture

42-24602

"This book is substantially the course in theoretical naval architecture given to the hull drawing apprentices at the shipyard of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company. Its purpose is to acquaint the student with the fundamentals of theoretical naval architecture, and to explain how they are interrelated and how they are progressively applied in the design of a ship." (Pref) Knowledge of elementary trigonometry is needed in using this textbook. Index.

Booklist 39:178 Ja 1 '43

Library J 67:952 N 1 '42 40w

CONANT, JAMES BRYANT. Our fighting faith; five addresses to college students. 105p $1.25 Harvard univ. press

940.5373 World war, 1939—U.S. Democracy A 42-4773

"Five addresses to college students by the president of Harvard, on the ideals, the duties and the reasonable hopes of youth in the present time of crisis." (Christian Century) Contents: What are we fighting to defend? Our unique heritage; In this country there are no classes; Think on these things; To the class of 1942; The use of our colleges in time of war

Books p24 D 6 '42 150w

Christian Century 59:1322 O 28 '42 30w

"The essence Conant distills from our history is a noble one. As an educator, Conant, while urging aristocracy in terms of character and culture, is concerned to destroy stratification based on professional competences, years of education, or the possession of diplomas. . . This general philosophy is not new. But the espousal of such a position by a Harvard president is a persuasive antidote to cynicism and encourages hope for the future of human freedom." T. I. Cook

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 D 12 '42 310w

Social Studies 34:48 Ja '43 20w

"No reader will fail to find these brief essays inspiring and encouraging, a guide for the time and a signpost for the future. They will be especially indispensable to educators and young people. They offer a living faith rooted in the best of the past." Hans Kohn

+ Survey G 32:58 F '43 160w

CONANT, W. H. Outworn business idols, 125p $1.50 Barron's

650 Business 41-18382

"Informal criticisms of some of the 'sacred cows' of business organization, with suggestions for doing something about them. Stilted letters, useless conferences, too much high-pressure salesmanship, and red tape are among Mr. Conant's active dislikes. Originally published serially in Barron's, the financial weekly." Management R

Booklist 38:126 D 15 '41

Management R 31:40 Ja '42 50w

CONDENSED chemical dictionary; a reference volume for all requiring quick access to a large amount of essential data regarding chemicals, and other substances used in mfg. and laboratory work; comp. and ed. by the editorial staff of the Chemical engineering catalog, Francis M. Turner, editorial director; 3d ed, completely rev. and enl. under supervision of Thomas C. Gregory, editor. 756p $12 Reinhold

540.3 Chemistry—Dictionaries (W) 42-5803

In the third edition of this chemical dictionary "arrangement remains the same; 6000 new items are added, including many proprietary products, with trade or brand names. A new feature is the inclusion of typical specifications secured from manufacturers." (Booklist)

Booklist 38:370 Je 1 '42

"Of all the many chemical dictionaries available, the 'Condensed Chemical Dictionary' is probably the best known and most frequently consulted. In the new revised edition its usefulness is increased by the addition of several thousand new entries. Most of the newcomers are trade or brand names and their inclusion is commendable."

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:166 Je '42 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:23 Ap '42

CONDLIFFE, JOHN BELL. Agenda for a postwar world. 232p maps $2.50 Norton

940.53144 Reconstruction (1939—). Economic policy. World war, 1939—Peace (W) 42-19556

"Professor Condliffe, who worked for many years with Institute of Pacific Relations and League of Nations, and in Australian, American, and English universities, combines sound scholarship with unusually wide practical experience. He points out how closely economic problems of transition period are tied up with social and political questions." Library J

"Anyone interested in the shaping of the post-war economic settlement will wish to consult this stimulating and realistic Agenda." Arnold Wolfers

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:1175 D '42 750w

"The author of The Reconstruction of World Trade discusses here the problem of postwar reconstruction with a remarkably detached approach. This thoughtful and highly intelligent book is an example of both sober realism and stern faith in an organized world society." Nicholas Doman

+ Ann Am Acad 225:235 Ja '43 500w

Booklist 39:67 N 1 '42

Bookmark 4:5 N '42

Reviewed by Hiram Motherwell

Books p25 S 27 '42 750w

Christian Century 60:19 Ja 6 '43 270w

"This volume . . . is hardly lively reading. It is brief and packed with solid ideas on what is involved if we are to win the peace. Its suggestions are anything but vindictive. Readers who push ahead despite the author's ponderous style will find much worth thinking about, especially on immediate post-war problems."

+ Commonweal 36:476 S 4 '42 70w

"No 'blueprints, structurally vague in detail, but grandiose in conception' are offered, but hard facts and practical solutions that will set thinking every intelligent reader. Highly recommended." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 67:627 Jl '42 90w

Reviewed by Harold Strauss

Nation 155:355 O 10 '42 950w

Reviewed by Irwin Edman

New Repub 107:504 O 19 '42 600w

"'Agenda for a Postwar World' is an 'Economic Consequence of the Peace' written in the future tense, and with the emphasis on the opportunities for a sound reconstruction, instead of in the past tense when it is too late." W. R. Deuel

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 30 '42 1350w

Reviewed by P. E. Corbett

Pacific Affairs 25:489 D '42 430w

Pratt p23 D '42

Reviewed by P. F. Drucker

Sat R of Lit 25:15 S 12 '42 700w

Reviewed by J. G. McDonald

Survey G 32:56 F '43 130w

"Professor Condliffe's book is a very sober and able presentation of the problems with which the United Nations will be faced after the war is over, and of the need of international cooperative planning if anything resembling 'peace and prosperity' is to be achieved." Carl Becker

+ Yale R n s 32:372 winter '43 1200w

CONFERENCE ON JEWISH RELATIONS. Essays on antisemitism; ed. by Koppel S. Pinson; foreword by Salo W. Baron. 202p $2; to members $1.50 Jewish social studies, 1841 Broadway, N.Y.

296 Jews—Political and social conditions 42-7543

"The present volume of essays on antisemitism is an outgrowth of a symposium on antisemitism arranged by the Conference on Jewish relations in 1935. . . The first part of the volume deals with historical studies of antisemitism in particular epochs or geographical regions; the second part brings together several essays which aim at a more general and universal analysis of this momentous problem." (Editor's pref) Contents: Antisemitism in the Hellenistic-Roman world, by Ralph Marcus; Christian-Jewish relations in the first millennium, by Solomon Grayzel; Jews in medieval law, by Joseph Reider; The Jews in medieval law, by Guido Kisch; The Jews and Islam, by Samuel Rosenblatt; Antisemitism in

CONFERENCE ON JEWISH RELATIONS—

Continued

Tsarist Russia, by Mark Vishniak; Antisemitism in Poland, by Raphael Mahler; The economic and social background of modern antisemitism, by B. Weinryb; Some remarks on the psychology of antisemitism, by I. S. Wechsler; Defenses against antisemitism, by J. R. Marcus; Antisemitism and ourselves, by Z. Diesendruck.

Am Hist R 47:922 J1 '42 140w

Reviewed by M. Q. Sibley

Am Pol Sci R 36:576 Je '42 230w

Reviewed by W. E. B. Du Bois

Ann Am Acad 223:199 S '42 360w

"Dr. Pinson has prepared and presented the most important discussion of anti-Semitism that has been published in many years. The essays are written with care and ample documentation by unchallenged experts in their respective fields. The treatment of the problems is unflinchingly calm, rational, factual, without prejudice or passion. No attempt has been made to reconcile divergent theories regarding the causes and cures of anti-Semitism, which, by their very variety, add to the richness of the book's content. Yet is there a consensus of judgment which is all the more impressive in that it was not prepared or in any way foreseen." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p15 Mr 29 '42 1150w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 154:753 Mr '42 950w

"The book should be widely read by both Christian and Jewish leaders." J. M. Yard

+ Christian Century 59:430 Ap 1 '42 320w

"The essay on the early Christian centuries seems overdrawn to this reviewer, while that on 'The Jews in Medieval Law' is particularly well done. All of them are tinged with a spirit of defeatism, which is readily understandable, but is hardly conducive to mobilizing the resources of the Gentile world for a crusade against this moral evil. The volume is recommended as an introduction to one of our most pressing problems." J. N. Moody

+ — Commonweal 35:594 Ap 3 '42 160w

CONFERENCE ON SCIENCE, PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION in their relation to the democratic way of life. 2d, New York, 1941. Science, philosophy and religion; second symposium [ed. by Lyman Bryson and Louis Finkelstein]. 559p $3 The conference, 3080 Broadway, N.Y.

321.4 Democracy

"This book reports the papers and discussions at the second conference held at Columbia University Sept. 8-11, 1941. There were about eighty participants, representing all fields of science and learning as well as noted writers, public men and civil servants." Churchman

Canadian Forum 22:158 Ag '42 500w

"He who inspects this miscellany closely detects certain fundamental concords pervading it. . . . This concord should provide a substantial basis for the third symposium planned for this fall (1942). . . . Unless National Transportation Director Eastman's request that all such annual meetings be voluntarily discontinued for the duration is granted, would-be participants in the conference may anticipate a stimulating (if not conclusive) intellectual mêlée. And for those who could not attend the last meeting, this volume is a treat. Reading it is a fair substitute for attendance." V. C. Aldrich

+ Christian Century 59:1058 S 2 '42 750w

Reviewed by J. A. Leighton

Churchman 156:17 Ag 1 '42 800w

"The editors have done a fine piece of work. The conference seems to have made marked progress, and surely ought to be continued through coming years." I. G. Matthews

+ Crozer Q 19:325 O '42 800w

New Repub 107:150 Ag 3 '42 30w

"This is a book of faith. Men of several religions, of no professed religion, men of law, of science, of literature, of art, were alike, in this symposium, conscious of the profound background of aspiration, of hope, of struggle, of pure human goodness by which alone Western civilization can be justified. Their message in this form will not reach many people. This is the pity of subtle thought and deep scholarship. With neither can we dispense. But where are the translators who will turn them into language understood of the people? If this were done our victorious banners would burn bright across the world." R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p15 My 17 '42 1100w

CONN, STETSON. Gibraltar in British diplomacy in the eighteenth century. 317p maps $3 Yale univ. press [14s Oxford]

946.8 Gibraltar. Great Britain—Foreign relations. Europe—Politics A42-2148

History of the British occupancy of Gibraltar from its seizure in 1704 to the end of the eighteenth century. For many years it was not considered of any great value, and at one time was very nearly exchanged for Minorca, but in time it became a symbol of staunchness and invincibility. Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by A. M. Wilson

Am Hist R 48:328 Ja '43 550w

Christian Century 59:562 Ap 29 '42 130w

"Mr. Conn is to be congratulated on a work which will be of great service to students of the period. It is based largely on independent study of the archives in various countries, and a 'Bibliographical Note' covering sixteen closely printed pages gives a useful critical survey of the published and unpublished authorities consulted."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p548 N 7 '42 800w

CONNELL, VIVIAN. The Chinese room. 344p $2.50 Dial press

42-25185

"A curious novel about the private life of a British banker that functions on three levels: as a mystery, as a clinical study of the disintegration and reintegration of a marriage, and as a what-not shelf for the sexy and exotic." New Repub

"'The Chinese Room' has a lot of sex in it, and Mr. Connell writes about sex with the same lack of restraint, if not the same warmth and perception, that characterized the writing of D. H. Lawrence. Any writer who draws a blueprint of sex leaves himself wide open to the ridicule of his contemporaries, as the late Mr. Lawrence discovered. I fear that Mr. Connell will come in for his share of scorn from readers who take some of his purple passages too literally. Yet there are many passages in 'The Chinese Room' that have true literary merit." H. C. Lewis

+ — Books p10 N 1 '42 600w

"The novel Mr. Connell has written is inept and absurd, and even his main thesis . . . is irretrievably lost in the welter of his combined mystery story and amateur psychiatry. If only because of the prurience of its sexual detail, a novel that might have been in the line of, say, D. H. Lawrence's 'Lady Chatterley's Lover' turns out to be in the line of adolescent reverie."

+ Nation 156:67 Ja 9 '43 300w

"As a mystery it is only fair, with real mental suspense built up, but an unfair solution based on unrevealed clues. As a clinical study of marriage it is honest, earthy and sometimes moving. As a what-not shelf it is overloaded with bric-a-brac: a slinky mistress with a heart of stone and black-silk pajamas, an elderly bank employee who goes home evenings and becomes a Chinese mandarin, a man with hands that have independent personalities, opium smoking, much lechery and tag-ends of philosophy and psychiatry."

New Repub 107:618 N 9 '42 120w

CONNINGTON, J. J., pseud. See Stewart, A. W.

CONNOLLY, JAMES BRENDAN. Canton captain. 342p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Forbes, Robert Bennet (W) 42-1209
Biography of Robert Bennet Forbes, member of a wealthy, respected Boston shipowning family. In 1817, at the age of thirteen, he went to China where he worked for a time in the family factory. At twenty he became master of a ship, and by the time he was twenty-three he was well-known along the Boston waterfront. Among his many activities, he took an important part in the opium war in China. During the Civil War days he embarked on the building of a new type of ship for the government. When he died at the age of eighty-five, his lifetime had spanned almost the whole period of the American age of sail. Index.

Booklist 38:208 F 15 '42

"James B. Connolly has told [this] story with his customary narrative power; this past master in the art of writing sea tales may be trusted not to let the reader down for a moment, as incident follows incident in breath-taking succession. A great deal of research has gone into the making of this book; the China scene of the early factory days, the details of Oriental navigation, all the background of the relation, are done with fine knowledge and careful workmanship. One might complain of the lack of dates throughout the work, which fails to place it properly in historical perspective. But it is a grand story of movement and color, a proud story of the old seafaring days, and a genuine contribution to our nautical literature." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p4 Ja 18 '42 1000w

"The narrative is vivid and forthright and gives a good picture of American life from 1811 until after the Civil War."

+ Cath World 155:254 My '42 180w

"Mr. Connolly does not document his book; he merely tells you what happened and leaves it at that, sprinkling in a few quotations from diaries, letters and newspapers where they can help as seasoning for the yarn. The result is not altogether happy. He never seems to get under his hero's skin, and he loses the great advantage of adventure fiction, the well-constructed plot which can do so much to compensate for lack of insight into character. When you are all through, you really don't know much more about Ben Forbes than when you began. Yet you have had some exciting times with him, and that, after all, is a great deal."

+ — Commonweal 35:442 F 20 '42 280w

"The account of the opium war is especially vivid. There is an excellent index. Recommended for adults and adolescents." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 67:39 Ja 1 '42 70w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 106:123 Ja 26 '42 550w

"Told as only James B. Connolly can tell a tale of the sea, this life-story of Robert Bennet Forbes, 'Canton Captain,' is transmuted into the raciest of salt yarns." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p4 F 8 '42 850w

"A driving yarn, done in pithy, shipshape fashion by a man who knows the sea."

+ New Yorker 17:68 Ja 24 '42 40w

"A capable epic of the sea which is certain to interest all older boys and adults who care for action stories which really happened." G. W. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 18 '42 650w

CONRAD, BRENDA. Caribbean conspiracy. 250p $2 Scribner

42-21688

A tale of present-day Puerto Rico, in which love and espionage play large roles. The chief characters are Anne Heywood, a New York newspaper woman; Miguel Valera, a Puerto Rican aristocrat; Captain Wilcox of G 2, Military intelligence, U.S.A.; and Mr Taussig, an engineer up to no good.

"The complications are intricate but not far-fetched, and Miss Conrad displays a lively knowledge of the social life of the island and its mixed racial heritage." Lisle Bell

+ Books p24 S 27 '42 350w

"The outcome is . . . a highly satisfactory one, except, of course to those of the cast who are up to no good." I. A.

N Y Times p30 S 27 '42 320w

New Yorker 18:68 O 3 '42 70w

CONRAD, JOSEPH. Conrad argosy; introd. by William McFee; with wood cuts by Hans Alexander Mueller. 713p $5 Doubleday

42-20149

Contents: Youth; Heart of Darkness; The Nigger of the Narcissus; Il Conde; Gaspar Ruiz; The brute; Typhoon; The Secret Sharer; Freya of the Seven Isles; The Secret Agent; The Duel; The End of the Tether; The Shadow-Line; A Personal Record. Bibliography.

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel

New Repub 107:644 N 16 '42 1500w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker

N Y Times p10 D 27 '42 240w

"It is gratifying to note that Doubleday, Doran have seen fit to 'bring out' Conrad in a new and not inexpensive form. 'A Conrad Argosy' offers old partisans and prospective new admirers the bulk of Conrad's novels, short stories and memoirs in one large and handsome volume with wood cuts by Hans Alexander Mueller and a grateful and graceful introduction by William McFee. Readers who dislike big books are hereby warned off, but many others will appreciate a handsome bargain."

Marshall Bragdon

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 3 '42 1000w

CONSIDINE, JOHN JOSEPH. March into tomorrow. 87p il $2 Field afar press, 121 E. 39th st, N.Y.

266.2 Catholic foreign mission society of America, incorporated, Maryknoll, New York. Missions—East (Far East) 42-13587

Account of the work of the Maryknoll missionaries among the Chinese, Japanese, and Koreans. Illustrated with photographs.

Cath World 155:507 Jl '42 230w

Commonweal 36:212 Je 19 '42 150w

Wis Lib Bul 38:132 O '42

CONSIDINE, JOHN JOSEPH, and KERNAN, THOMAS DICKENSON. Across a world. 400p pl maps $2.50 Longmans

266.2 Roman Catholic church—Missions. Voyages and travels 42-23494

A survey of the missionary works of the Roman Catholic church embodied in a travelogue of a Catholic priest who visited mission fields in Asia, Africa and the islands of Oceania. Index.

Booklist 39:177 Ja 1 '43

"A man of broad sympathies, interested in art, education and the swiftly changing pattern of Far East politics, Father Considine has composed a travel record of exceptional interest. As a contemporary picture of the world mission effort of the Catholic Church, it is inspiring as well as informed."

+ Books p22 Ja 31 '43 150w

"We know of no book in English which gives so complete a picture of the Church's missionary activities. The many maps, photos and statistics add greatly to the value of this mission manual." B. L. Conway

+ Cath World 156:242 N '42 250w

"Frequent insertions of statistics and charts throughout the volume enhance its value for students of missionary history, though I dare-say people will be recounting the writer's fascinating experiences and observations long after forgetting his figures. For it is these delightful little vignettes of travel and residence among so many types of life and culture which make this the best popular study of missions this reviewer has ever seen." T. T. Brumbaugh

+ Christian Century 59:1219 O 7 '42 750w

CONSIDINE, J. J.—Continued

"The book is full of excellent photographs and maps, and should interest everyone who has a concern for the Christianization of the world." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 156:17 N 1 '42 300w

"Perhaps we shall get one of the most valuable Catholic books of our times if Father Considine will one day write a special book on Propaganda Fidei which would introduce the layman to all the problems of missionary work and acquire sparkling color by his rich personal experience. In his present book, however, he prefers to mix his visit to the Catholic missions with short descriptions of the foreign countries and their general problems. There are some interesting details, like his stay among the Moy in the Indo-Chinese mountains or his stop in the Seychelles. But in general these are transitory impressions of a hasty traveler mixed with second-hand information." Max Fischer

+ — Commonweal 36:595 O 9 '42 550w

CONSOLIDATED encyclopaedia, 10v ii maps $69.50 (Canadian price for set) Consolidated world research society, ltd.

032 Encyclopedias and dictionaries

"The copyright to this set is held by the Standard education society, 130 N. Wells St., Chicago, who in 1932 made an arrangement with a distributing company for marketing the New Standard Encyclopedia in the British empire. The publishers in a letter to the Subscription Books Committee state: 'In preparation of an edition for them, the set was considerably extended, a great deal of new matter of particular interest to the British was added and some matter of exclusively American interest was deleted. The greater part of the material in the now called Consolidated Encyclopaedia is the same as that in the New Standard Encyclopedia. . . The main office of the distributing company operates under the name Consolidated world research society and they have offices in London, Canada, Union of South Africa, Australia and New Zealand.' The New Standard Encyclopedia was reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, January 1931, April 1934, and April 1940. In the Foreword of the Consolidated Encyclopaedia its scope is described as 'something new in the field of general reference material . . . a modern presentation of the information and facts so necessary for access in every home, school, library and office.'" Subscription Bks Bul

"Biographies were checked. Names of minor celebrities such as John Farmer, Margaret Gatty and Emily E. C. Jones were included as well as historic figures and some Biblical names and characters from literature. Of the contemporaries the information on Adolf Hitler was revised to 1934; Cordell Hull to 1933; Alfred Landon to 1936; Lord Halifax, listed as Baron Irwin, to 1931; Newton Wesley Rowell to 1935; and Carolyn Wells to 1930. There are no entries for Edvard Beneš, Anthony Eden, Archibald MacLeish, Sir Frederick Banting. There is a more generous inclusion of names from the British Dominions than is usually found in a general encyclopedia. . . In view of the generalized treatment of much of the subject matter, the uneven revision, lack of an index to both text and illustrations, and a price which places the set in the field of standard works which give adequate information, Consolidated Encyclopaedia is not recommended."

— Subscription Bks Bul 12:51 O '41 1200w

CONTEMPORARY Europe; a study of national, international, economic, and cultural trends; a symposium by René Albrecht-Carrié [and others; ed. by Joseph S. Rouček]. 670p maps $5 Van Nostrand [25s Chapman]

940.51 Europe—History. Europe—Politics. Europe—Civilization 41-16471

"A symposium to which thirty authors have contributed. . . Of the numerous contributors, at least half are historians, while the others are, in the main, sociologists, economists, and political scientists. For a project of such proportions, the exposition proceeds logically, and the book is reasonably well integrated. The period covered is that between the two world wars, and the attempt is made, in the words of the editor, 'to synthesize the genetic development of Europe in its political, economic, and cultural aspects from 1918 to the present time.' Of the thirty-three chapters, each written by a person of specialized interest, nineteen concern individual European states or groups of states, including the U.S.S.R. and the Near East." Am Pol Sci R

Am Hist R 48:167 O '42 70w

"Helpful bibliographies are included, not only at the end of chapters, but occasionally at the end of sections as well. Occasional minor errors have been noted. There is some repetition, probably quite unavoidable in an undertaking of this nature. And some question may be raised concerning the weight and space given to various countries, as, for example, slightly more than one page devoted to Portugal proper, as compared to nearly fourteen pages for Hungary. The references and notes are collected at the end of the chapters—always a bothersome feature. The cartography by R. E. Falconer, although somewhat unconventional, is characterized by relative simplicity and is designed to emphasize such economic and population factors as density, raw materials, explosive minorities, etc. . . On the whole, the volume is well done. No attempt has been made, probably wisely, to present maps relating to the present war. The book should be of service particularly to students and teachers of international relations and of modern European history." I. M. Stone

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:1200 D '41 450w

Reviewed by V. J. Puryear

Ann Am Acad 222:200 J1 '42 600w

"The style, on the whole, is very readable, and many of the maps are excellent. Despite the rapid sequence of events, most of the material presented remains valid and useful, and the book will be of lasting value, especially if a new edition should offer the opportunity to eliminate initial defects which are perhaps inevitably connected with such an undertaking." A. T. Lauterbach

+ Pol Sci Q 57:634 D '42 390w

"The references and selected bibliography at the close of each chapter give evidence of the scholarly nature of the work. Although minor inconsistencies are mute evidence of the multiple authorship of the volume, one cannot help but be impressed by the measure of continuity and consistency which has been maintained. No doubt the minor inconsistencies can be regarded as a small price to pay for the tremendous quantity of information enclosed between the two covers. . . Because Contemporary Europe was written at a time when the Second World War was still in its indecisive stages, a significant portion of its content may need revising when the war is over. Meanwhile one more voice is added to the evergrowing chorus which has been emphasizing that the fortunes of the United States are inescapably tied up with the fortunes of Europe." J. W. Pajari

+ — Social Educ 6:140 Mr '42 650w

"As a handbook 'Contemporary Europe' should prove of value to students and general readers anxious to possess a reliable reference book on pre-war Europe. The maps and detailed bibliographies, to each chapter deserve particular praise."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p359 J1 18 '42 140w

COOK, HARTLEY KEMBALL, ed. Birth of flight; an anthology. 204p il $2.50 Norton [7s 6d Allen, G]

629.13 Aeronautics—History [A42-1792]

"This little book does not pretend to be a history—far less a scientific history—of its subject. Rather it is an anthology, an anecdote, a miscellany of things quaint, interesting, amusing, sometimes tragic, in the history of Flight, told, wherever the material was accessible, in the words of the actors in the play or of their contemporaries." Introd.

Manchester Guardian p3 D 9 '41 50w

"A scrap-book can be anything the collector likes to make it; the scrappier the better, perhaps, if life, colour and wit conceal the lack of pattern. Mr. Cook turns the flank of criticism by renouncing any serious scientific intent."

Times [London] Lit Sup p3 Ja 3 '42
500w

COOK, JAMES HENRY, and DRIGGS, HOWARD ROSCOE. Longhorn cowboy; with drawings by Herbert M. Stoops. 241p $2 Putnam; (Pioneer life ser) 246p $1.12 World bk.

917.64 Cowboys, Cattle trade — 42-10800

"In this sober, but compelling, autobiography of a lifetime spent at sea, on the plains and in the Rocky Mountain country, an old-time cowboy tells his story of rugged experience. The sea did not hold him for long, and it is the years of gathering longhorns in the brush country of Texas that he seems to look back upon with particular warmth. . . Besides acting as guide for many big game hunters in the Rocky Mountains, James Cook saw service as an Indian fighter in the Apache outbreak when Geronimo was hunted, in 1885." Horn Bk M

Booklist 38:430 Jl 1 '42

"The value of this book is such that it will be put into historical collections as well as upon bookshelves frequented by boys." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 24 '42 430w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:175 My '42 100w

Reviewed by A. M. Wetherell

Library J 67:416 My 1 '42 90w

COOKE, CHARLES. Playing the piano for pleasure. 247p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

786.2 Pianoforte—Instruction and study (W) 41-25373

"Mr Stanley" of the New Yorker, leaves off for a time his pursuit of the city's curiosities and describes his hobby—playing the piano. He gives practical hints on learning a repertoire, general technique, the necessity of practising, memorizing, sight reading, etc. Short bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:174 Ja 15 '42

"With all the books about the piano, this makes for itself a place all its own. . . [It] is not a book for one who does not play the piano at all. The more one knows about doing so, the more keenly its humor and seriousness will be enjoyed, the more helpful and stimulating its advice will be. Its most grateful readers will be those who now say, 'I used to play.'"

+ Books p22 N 30 '41 230w

COOKE, DAVID COXE. War planes of the Axis; with a foreword by Al Williams. 256p il $2.75 McBride

623.746 Airplanes, Military (W) 42-15952

Descriptions and history of practically every type and model of German, Italian, and Japanese aircraft. Design, measurements, construction, purpose and fitness are discussed. Includes photographs. No index.

Reviewed by Wolfgang Langewiesche

Books p14 S 20 '42 450w

"Despite lack of full information on each type, book has sufficient data to make it useful reference tool for layman who wishes to follow air combat intelligently." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 67:475 My 15 '42 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 10w

"An authoritative, thoroughly objective summary of Axis airpower."

+ New Repub 106:838 Je 15 '42 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:36 Jl '42

COOLE, W. W., pseud., and POTTER, M. F., pseud., eds. Thus speaks Germany; foreword by Hamilton Fish Armstrong [Eng title: Thus spake Germany; foreword by Lord Vansittart]. 412p $3.50 Harper [10s 6d Routledge]

914.3 National characteristics, German. Pangermanism 42-1309

An anthology of German political thought during the one hundred and fifty years from the time of Frederick the Great to the present, classified under seven headings: The German Weltanschauung; "A chosen race"; The Germans a people of rulers; The German view of other races and nations; German aims in international politics and in war; How Germany makes war; Germany in defeat; Vae victis! The fate reserved for the vanquished. The object is to show that there is a persistent strain of "most unlovely thought" in the German nation, and to show her aim in international politics, her methods of waging war, her behavior in defeat, and treatment of conquered peoples. Bibliography. Index.

"The problem of fitting Germany into the pattern of a future Europe is hard enough; still it is not as hopeless as this competent but one-sided compilation would indicate." W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic Ap '42 200w

Booklist 38:232 Mr 1 '42

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 1 '41
330w

"I do not think that even a minor witness for the editors' thesis has been neglected. Sometimes the will to achieve completeness has induced the editors to bring a less cogent witness in, in some cases there appears an unimportant crackpot, like the magazine Heimdall. Yet, on the whole the book is enlightening for a trend of thought which now bears its formidable fruit as the ideology which inspires young fanatics to battle and die for Hitler and which contributes greatly to making victim nations miserable." H. A. Reinhold

+ Commonweal 35:594 Ap 3 '42 750w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:781 Jl '42 20w

"The quotations are well selected and combine to paint a picture that is both impressive and convincing. A tremendous job, and one that is important, though limited, in its appeal." R. S. Alvarez

Library J 67:129 F 1 '42 90w

"This anthology of Nazi and pre-Nazi moral and political theory, culled from the speeches and writings of Hitler, his forerunners, and his disciples, is a valuable compendium despite certain uncritical assumptions which determine the choice of material."

+ Nation 154:173 F 7 '42 270w

Reviewed by Nigel Dennis

New Repub 106:241 F 16 '42 1400w

"Nobody will deny the accuracy of the chosen quotations, but I do not think it would be difficult to select pages from Wilhelm von Humboldt, Goethe, Georg Buechner, Hoelderlin, Jacob Grimm, Dahlmann, Windthorst, Max Weber, Hugo Preuss, Buening, Otto Braun, Hermann Mueller (to refer only to a few names whom our diligent compilers have not even mentioned), which would prove just the opposite of what this book is out to prove. It is not proper historic research to pick out two or three lines from Freiherr vom Stein, Ebert or Rathenau, leaving aside everything else these men have done or lived for. This haphazard method will never help us to understand the complexity of the German national character." Georg Troeltsch

New Statesman & Nation 22:166 Ag
16 '41 950w

"No one, whether author or reviewer, has the right to be dogmatic about the issues of this war. We all need humility, and we who stay at home and face few or no risks need it above all. But all of us owe it to the American dead of this war and to those who must fall before the end comes to do and say nothing which will render the coming peace precarious, and to do and say everything we can which will help to render it permanent and secure. If such Americans believe that a peace of revenge, of hate, of the lasting subjugation of conquered nations is only a prelude to new wars, they must boldly say so. It is toward such a peace that books like this point, and this reviewer feels obliged to express the opinion that they are misguided, misleading and dangerous." R. L. Duffus

COOLE, W. W.—Continued

N Y Times p27 F 15 '42 1300w

New Yorker 17:62 F 7 '42 80w

Reviewed by O. G. Villard

Sat R of Lit 25:14 Mr 14 '42 800w

"Now and then the editors are open to criticism; they appear to assume that the longing for German unity was in itself evil; also their citations of Thomas Mann, for example, seem to imply that they rule out a change of heart. But these are minor objections, on the whole the book is fair and representative, and it should not merely stir up controversy, but stimulate constructive thought." John Stapleton

+ — Spec 167:210 Ag 29 '41 500w

"On the assumption that the highest British war aim is precisely to make a better world with, ultimately, a better Germany as part of it, much may be gained by a thoughtful reading of this indispensable text-book. For if it does not show how that aim may best be fulfilled, it does show what must be avoided in the attempt to fulfil it. And in showing this the editors of 'Thus Spake Germany' have rendered a service of no mean order."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p370 Ag 2 '41 1700w

COOLIDGE, JOHN PHILLIPS. Mill and mansion. 261p il $3.75 Columbia univ. press

720.9744 Architecture—Massachusetts. Lowell, Massachusetts. City planning 42-22222

"A study of architecture and society in Lowell, Massachusetts, 1820-1865." (Subtitle) Index.

"This book has importance both as a social study and as a document of archaeological interest. For the 1820's, in Lowell, particularly, brought perhaps the first formal city planning of a manufacturing city in America; the first unhaphazard dwelling for the workers." Donald Corley

+ Books p14 S 27 '42 200w

Christian Century 59:1222 O 7 '42 290w

"With a skillful blending of the entire social and architectural problems involved, John Coolidge offers us a valuable and delightful contribution to the ever-mounting pile of evidence, proving that 'the American way of life' is and must remain one of private enterprise, steadfastly harnessed to unlimited vision, courage, and the freedom of individual initiative. As it was in early nineteenth-century Lowell, so must it ever be in the United States of the present and the future." R. H. Newton

+ New Eng Q 15:747 D '42 750w

COONEY, BARBARA. Kellyhorns; il. by [the author]. 259p $2 Farrar

42-16138

The adventures of Pam and Penny, identical twins, who were separated in babyhood, and did not meet again until they were twelve. It took a bit of planning to bring two households together, because Penny had lived with her father, and Pam with an aunt, after the death of their mother. But kindly neighbors, the determined twins, a circus and a fire finally united four happy people. For ages ten to fourteen.

"It is a bustling story with more sensations than it needs—it could do without a trial for arson, comic as it is—but Miss Cooney shows vigor and humor worth watching." M. L. Becker

+ — Books p7 Ag 16 '42 330w

"Grown characters are better realized than are the children, but writing is skilful enough to make whole plausible and to give tang of the Maine woods." E. W. Turpin

+ — Library J 67:685 Ag '42 80w

"It is all as merry as the wedding bell for which the twins wished so ardently and, if to adult eyes it seems a little incredible, it comes as close as one could wish to a little girl's dream of adventure." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 23 '42 320w

COONEY, CARROLL TROWBRIDGE. Green field for courage; il. by Eugenie Carhartt. 205p $2 Howell, Soskin

42-21067

The story of a valiant small boy whose greatest love, outside that for his father and mother, was for toy soldiers and the war maneuvers which he put them thru. When the family moved to the country, and the three young grandsons of a real general demolished Robin's small army, he fought a brave battle practically alone. Then came the day of the battle when Robin's new army conquered more than a toy army; he won the respect of the general himself.

"There may be objections to this story by those who won't have toy soldiers at any price. I am for it, though I never played with tin soldiers." M. L. Becker

Books p9 S 13 '42 350w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 20w

"There is a curious dreamlike quality to this story largely because the author has caught so completely the reality which his soldiers and their maneuvers held for Robin. It is drama on a small scale, but none the less intense and moving, to adults as well as to the young, because of its characterization of a wistful small boy trying to defend all that is precious in life. And except for the last incident which is happy but not inevitable, one may trace clearly a parable for our times, of a war fought gallantly against brute oppression." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 S 6 '42 400w

COOPER, COURTNEY RYLEY. Action in diamonds. 286p $2 Penn

42-23592

"Down in Miami a very ingenious plot involved an innocent girl as an accessory in a $50,000 diamond robbery, and provided a seemingly fireproof alibi for a gang of eminently respectable citizens. The late Courtney Ryley Cooper told the story in [this] posthumous volume." Springf'd Republican

"The suspense is well maintained and the action is lively." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p28 N 1 '42 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 3 '43 190w

COOPER, KENT. Barriers down. 324p $3 Farrar

070.4312 Associated press. News agencies 42-25760

"Author has been with Associated Press since 1910. At first, the Associated Press was restricted to the United States, and all news to and from the rest of the world was controlled by privately owned, foreign press firms. This is story of author's efforts to break this monopoly on world-wide news, to make all press associations co-operative rather than privately owned organizations, and to prevent coloring of news by governments or individual and private interests." (Library J) Index.

"The story is told in the lucid, objective style that has made the Associated Press famous. Perhaps Mr. Cooper spins out the tale unduly, and perhaps there is a surfeit of documentation. But as a casebook for the files of the Associated Press and students of the detailed organization of world news agencies, it is undoubtedly valuable." F. W. Neal

+ — Atlantic 171:140 Ja '43 200w

Booklist 39:177 Ja 1 '43

"A valuable chapter to the history of journalism." Mark Duffield

+ Books p5 D 20 '42 750w

"Of special interest to journalists. Recommended." J. A. Schon

Library J 67:1065 D 1 '42 80w

New Repub 108:158 F 1 '43 360w

"This is a newspaper man's plain tale told objectively, and in detail. To any one with a taste for the subtleties of negotiation and intrigue it is fascinating, aside from its importance. . . . No student of contemporary history can afford to miss the book; it is fundamental. And none of our peace planners should ignore Mr. Cooper's suggestion that guarantees of a free press and the unhampered circulation of news should be clauses in the peace terms after the Second World War." Will Irwin

+ N Y Times p1 D 20 '42 950w

"The whole story is here set forth in great detail and, though it may seem a somewhat egotistical narrative to some, it was well worth recording at length, for there is no more important chapter in the history of news-gathering in America, if not the world. . . . Mr. Cooper's book could have been improved by editing. But if anybody doubts the truth of this story, or the magnitude of the achievements set forth therein, please refer him to this reviewer, who, as a director of the Associated Press, saw the beginning of Mr. Cooper's crusade and gladly testifies to its selflessness, its worth, its necessity, and its world-wide importance." O. G. Villard

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 D 19 '42 1000w

COOPER, MRS LOUISE FIELD. Lighted box. 269p $2.50 Duell

(W) 42-5121

A triangle story in which the charming wife of a Connecticut banker, the banker himself, and the other Woman are concerned. Amanda does her best to hold her husband's wandering attentions, but the weather was more efficient than she. When all concerned were marooned for some time in a country house with no heat, light and little food, due to a blizzard, the other woman came off second best.

Booklist 38:251 Mr 15 '42

"The charm of the book is its picture of everyday home life, the little errands, the little pleasures, the little contentments, Amanda's relationship with the children. This atmosphere the writer creates with love and a fine sensitive skill." Page Cooper

+ Books p10 F 22 '42 500w

"Here is a new light novel which makes the old familiar triangle take on fresh charm. It is Louise Field Cooper's first novel, smoothly written as if by an old hand and yet fresh as a new laid egg. It is brightly humorous and gayly biting about a very ordinary group of Connecticut people. . . . It is an inconsequential and lightweight little story which most readers will find delightfully gay and witty." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 1 '42 600w

New Yorker 18:69 F 21 '42 60w

COPE, HARLEY FRANCIS. Serpent of the seas, the submarine; foreword by Leland P. Lovette. 252p il $2.50 Funk

359.32 Submarine warfare. Submarine boats 42-50668

A popularly written volume on the submarine, covering its history—from the days of Alexander the Great to the present—its use in World war I and in the present war, its methods and weapons of attack, the training and care of personnel, etc. The author has served as commander of American submarines.

"Less technical than recent books by Woodbury and Zim, less historical than Professor Low's treatise of last year, the present volume, based upon personal knowledge, experience and up-to-date information on current achievements, introduces a personal touch which makes an intimate appeal." P. J. Searles

+ Books p25 Ja 17 '43 650

Spring'd Republican p7e D 20 '42 220w

CORBETT, ELIZABETH FRANCES. Early summer. 321p $2.50 Appleton-Century

(W) 42-21238

Sheba Faye, when she married Jim Warner, took over the care and mothering of his five children, the children of his first wife who had left him for another man. This novel covers about one year in Sheba's life, seven years after she was married, a year marked by several minor crises in her own life and in those of the children.

Booklist 39:71 N 1 '42

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p24 O 4 '42 80w

"In giving the story of a year of Sheba's life Miss Corbett has captured with beautiful authority a section of past life in America. The story itself has no particular beginning or end; it is just a slice of Sheba's life, offered as casually as if it were discovered in old letters." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p25 S 20 '42 600w

Wis Lib Bul 38:162 N '42

CORBETT, ELIZABETH FRANCES. The Kimball collection. 306p $2.50 Appleton-Century

(W) 42-3378

Mr Kimball, a widower approaching sixty, head of a declining business, his home filled to overflowing with his son's young family, is beginning to feel that life is over for him, when, thru his collection of ancient Greek art, he meets the charming, intelligent, middle-aged Elsie Gates. Several annoying problems have to be solved but with the help of an understanding daughter-in-law life becomes new and fresh for Mr Kimball.

Booklist 38:234 Mr 1 '42

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p16 Mr 22 '42 200w

"Rarely does one find so many agreeable characters in a single book—not a villain in the whole collection, not even the derelict houseman whom Flora picked up for a quarter. Miss Corbett's readers are familiar with her swift, adequate, though casual way of dealing with her characters. She is always amusing and in this instance has added a graceful air of erudition to her story by her Greek lore." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 5 '42 550w

"The story is much in the Mrs. Meigs vein, simply told and brightened with wholesome humor and minor domestic disruptions. Not the least of its entertainment lies in the sympathetic treatment of the Kimball youngsters and the bizarre Kimball servants—an ex-Bowery panhandler as houseman and a mountainously fat woman as cook." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p24 F 22 '42 470w

Wis Lib Bul 38:120 J1 '42

CORBETT, PERCY ELLWOOD. Post-war worlds. (Institute of Pacific relations. Int. research ser) 208p $2 Farrar; Inst. of Pacific relations. Am. council

341 International cooperation. International law and relations. Reconstruction (1939-) 42-1482

"The author (professor of international law, McGill University) analyzes the strengths and weaknesses of the League of Nations, critically examines some of the more important proposals that have been made relative to international organization after the present war, and indicates what he considers the essential features of a world order that will give promise of stability. As the plural in the title suggests, he is not a propagandist for any specific program." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

"This is a timely and useful book. The world is filled with the hope for an utterly new order which will come after this war, but public opinion faces very inadequately the problems and issues which should be solved by the new and more just world society. . . In this situation of vague thinking and sentimental generalization the author has undertaken the important task of analyzing the more significant plans offered since the First World War concerning a more stable world order. . . In doing this he shows acumen and a praiseworthy effort to emancipate himself from the usual unwarranted assumptions of the sentimental peacemakers. His leading ideas and criticisms are mostly clear and pertinent. There are only two points in which this reviewer does not share the fundamental anticipation of the book. One is the exaggerated confidence of the author in so-called experts. . . The other point is that Mr. Corbett is too much inclined to regard the establishment of new institutions as the essence of our problem, whereas, this reviewer believes, we must first envisage the problem of how to generate the moral will which alone can give real life to those institutions." Oscar Jászi

CORBETT, P. E.—Continued

+ — Am Econ R 32:593 S '42 850w

"This may not be a blueprint, but it should be an indispensable addition to the library of everyone who is concerned about world peace." R. V. Peel

+ Ann Am Acad 221:208 My '42 800w

Booklist 38:207 F 15 '42

Bookmark 3:4 Mr '42

"The application of Prof. Corbett's fine intelligence and wide experience to these vast problems is fortunately available at a modest price, and is imperative reading for all those who believe in the future of the democratic world to come." W. C. E. W.

+ Canadian Forum 22:60 My '42 650w

"The book is one of the more substantial and scholarly contributions in this field. It is a good book to read now and to lay aside for further study when the problem of making a durable peace is taken up in earnest."

+ Christian Century 59:251 F 25 '42 100w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:771 Jl '42 40w

Reviewed by J. D. Kingsley

New Repub 107:204 Ag 17 '42 300w

"An excellent analysis."

+ New Yorker 17:63 F 7 '42 50w

Pratt p10 O '42

"It is one of the interesting differences between this war and the last one that so many more people now seem to be devoting time and thought to the problem of post-war international organization. This is certainly true of the United States and the nations in the British Commonwealth—whatever may be the situation in the areas under Axis control. Some of the resultant output has been little short of silly; much has been characterized by wishful thinking based on a lack of historical background; some is worth further serious consideration. The volume under review is among the best in this last category." W. C. Langsam

+ Social Educ 6:240 My '42 500w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 31:214 Ap '42 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p170 Ap 4 '42

1100w

CORCORAN, GEORGE FRANCIS, and KURTZ, EDWIN BERNARD. Electrical engineering fundamentals. 450p $4 Wiley

537 Electricity. Electromagnetism (W) 41-17805

"The subject matter presented in this textbook is intended as first-course material and is thought to be suitable for use in any introductory course which is designed to prepare electrical engineering students for specialized courses. . . Both the fundamental concepts and the abstract principles are discussed in terms of elementary notions. Except for the chapters on physical quantities, electrical structure of matter, electrochemistry, and curvilinear-square field mapping, the subject matter contained in this text does not differ especially from that found in other beginning texts. Special emphasis has been given to the arrangement and explanation of basic principles and concepts." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 38:75 N 1 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:54 O '41

COREY, HERBERT. Army means business. 298p il $2.75 Bobbs

355 U.S.—Army. World war, 1939—U.S. Industrial mobilization (W) 42-22117

A correspondent from the first World war describes the building up of the new American army and its equipment, stressing the converting of peace time organizations and machinery into wartime expediency. Partial contents: The size of the job; They're working for the army; They call it conversion; Businessmen at war; FBI and the saboteurs; The WPB goes to work; The 'New Army' of the United States; When the time is right.

Booklist 39:63 N 1 '42

"'The Army Means Business' is largely anecdotal in style with a multitude of incidents covering what Army officers, W.P.B. administrators and business men are doing. The fault of the book lies not in what it tells but in the manner of telling. Every one is interested in conversion of peace-time plants to war production. . . But when the author repeats with gusto (and this is typical of the boastfulness pervading the book) the saying of Charlie Sorensen, vice-president of the Ford industry 'Bring the Germans and Japs to see Willow Run. Hell—they'd blow their brains out,' the reader suffers from a slight nausea."

+ — Books p33 O 25 '42 400w

"Mr. Corey is convinced that no other country has even done anything remotely equal to the creation of our new Army. His book makes it plain that there is indeed a great achievement going on before our eyes, but one hopes that eventually a more critical chronicler will tell the story." F. S. Adams

N Y Times p4 S 27 '42 950w

"Mr. Corey has attempted a big job in telling the tale of our national effort geared into total war. Carping critics can find many faults in it. The big thing in this book is its tonic quality. The reader ends it with the firm conviction that the Yanks are coming, Paul Bunyans all. They are." R. E. Dupuy

+ Sat R of Lit 25:18 O 24 '42 320w

COREY, LEWIS. Unfinished task: economic reconstruction for democracy. 314p $3 Viking 330.9 Economic policy. Democracy. Totalitarianism (W) 42-10624

The author, recently appointed to the department of economics at Antioch college, suggests the construction of a new economic world, in which small business may be revived, and monopolies converted into a public corporation administered jointly by labor, government, and management. He urges the present generation to "unlearn, relearn, and learn anew," that the economic peace of the future may be a lasting one. Index.

"This book may well be a landmark in the current retreat from the Left. It is a powerful denunciation of statism and political romanticism, a plea for dispersion of power, and a defense of essential features of the old order as requisites of freedom and democracy. Corey still writes as a socialist; but he repudiates all doctrinaire, radical, revolutionary schemes." H. C. Simons

+ Am Econ R 32:616 S '42 2550w

"This is one of the most penetrating analyses of the economic and political condition of American democracy to come out of the crisis. It breaks sharply with the traditional defenses and fearlessly postulates the basis upon which democratic society can win the war and the peace." R. F. Harvey

+ Ann Am Acad 223:221 S '42 550w

Booklist 38:362 Je 1 '42

Reviewed by L. S. Keyes

Harvard Law R 56:669 Ja '43 1600w

Reviewed by Harold Strauss
Nation 154:690 Je 13 '42 950w

"One hesitates to dim so excellent a proposal by criticism of the arguments used in its behalf, but I cannot escape the feeling that Mr. Corey has not yet come near the heart of the difficulty he so clearly perceives and attacks with so much zest. Even on the economic level he is singularly blind to the reasoning of those who favor continued programs of government investment. . . . On his very last page Mr. Corey . . . says, 'Justice, in final analysis, is not simply a product of institutional arrangements.' One would have welcomed a realistic analysis of the problem with which he is dealing, illuminated by this insight, somewhat earlier in the book." George Soule

New Repub 106:576 Ap 27 '42 950w

"Overlong and not too well organized, but in general an excellent job nonetheless."

+ — New Yorker 18:79 Ap 25 '42 70w

"'Upon the men of our generation,' says Mr. Corey 'falls the duty to unlearn, relearn, and learn anew.' To this injunction he has responded with earnestness, intellectual vigor and a deep sense of moral responsibility. The result is a major analysis of the economic and political problems of our society, fresh and almost free of the rigidities of the doctrinaire." J. R. Walsh

+ Survey G 31:430 O '42 700w

CORLE, EDWIN. Coarse Gold. 251p $2.50 Dutton

42-19754

Thru the eyes of Chris Wick, philosopher and searcher for truth, is told the story of two phases of a Nevada mining town. Coarse Gold was the scene of a gold rush in 1892; by 1900 the rush was over and the desert took over the town. Chris stayed on as the only inhabitant. In 1942 the town was on the verge of a new birth due to a new war and the need of another product—tungsten.

Booklist 39:102 N 15 '42

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
Books p2 O 4 '42 850w

"Simple unaffected writing. Excellent characterization. Well-told tale. Recommended for the thoughtful reader." E. H. Crowell
+ Library J 67:738 S 1 '42 50w

"The writing is good, if verbose and adolescently philosophic in spots, but the book is going to puzzle a lot of people."

+ — New Repub 107:554 O 26 '42 90w

"For all the weaving of past with present and the learned musings of Christopher Wick the Solitary, speculating over some of the knottier riddles of the universe, 'Coarse Gold' is not in the least a complicated or difficult book to read. On the contrary, it reads all too swiftly and easily, ending long before we would have it end, disappointing us only because there is not more of it. This speaks well of its purely narrative, story-telling qualities. But, more than that, the book has style, has its own way with itself, bears the marks of a real story writer." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p6 O 11 '42 600w

"This subject matter is worthier of Mr. Corle's fine talent than any he has hit on up to now and there is an added robustness of style, which ought to relieve him once and for all from any further comparison with Robert Nathan. The brief glimpses into the lives of the dead and gone prospectors of the gold-rush era have something of the disturbing veracity of 'Spoon River'."

+ New Yorker 18:90 O 17 '42 120w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 32:xii winter '43 40w

CORMACK, MARIBELLE. A recruit for Abe Lincoln; il. by Hamilton Greene. 296p $2 Appleton-Century.

Lincoln, Abraham—Juvenile literature
(W) 42-24741

The story of Jeff Wade, a young telegrapher stationed in or near Washington during Civil War days. Many of the characters are historical, including President Lincoln himself. The mystery of Jeff's birth is solved thru Lincoln's knowledge of frontier law cases. For children ten to fourteen.

"Either in collaboration or personally Miss Cormack has given young people several excellent historical stories, of which this will be to many the most rapidly read and readily remembered." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 N 15 '42 350w

Horn Bk 19:37 Ja '43 120w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 27 '42 110w

CORNISH, LOUIS CRAIG. Philippines calling. 313p $2 Dorrance

284.9 Philippine Islands—Church history.
Philippine Islands—Description and travel
42-24206

"Dr. Cornish has traveled widely in the Philippines as a representative of the American Unitarian Association. His special field of interest is the Independent Catholic Church under the leadership of Archbishop Aglipay. Besides giving a full account of this movement, the author surveys briefly the history of the Philippines and reports upon his own observations of the land and the people." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:1359 N '42 70w

"Joint credit as author should go to the author's wife, Frances E. F. Cornish, who contributed several chapters dealing with their travels through the archipelago some years ago, apparently 1933 or 1939. Between them they have produced a volume divided among several interests, including numerous essential geographic and other facts, religion, politics, economics, and the impact of the present hostilities, together with the writers' views on the future. This makes a somewhat unusual and irregular book but one with both present interest and a permanent reference value." R. G.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 3 '42 450w

Springf'd Republican p6 D 29 '42 330w

CORRINGTON, JULIAN DANA. Working with the microscope. (Whitlsey house publication) 418p il $3.50 McGraw

578 Microscope and microscopy

(W) 41-24339

Manual on the preparation of specimens to be used in microscopy, picturing procedure and equipment. For amateur workers, and for extra-curricular clubs in high schools and colleges. Lists sources of supplies. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:153 Ja 1 '42

"The enthusiast who faithfully follows the author through his progressively graded chapters, carrying out each item of technique as he comes to it, will become a good microscopist. The book is exceptionally well printed and illustrated, and it is notably up to date in its treatment of material and methods." H. M. Parshley

+ Books p16 My 31 '42 300w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:27 Ap '42

Pratt p22 My '42

CORWIN, NORMAN LEWIS. Thirteen by Corwin; radio dramas; with a pref. by Carl Van Doren. 338p $2.75 Holt

792 Radio plays

(W) 42-4037

Thirteen radio plays by one of America's ace radio writers, who received top award in 1938 for his program Words Without Music. Contents: The odyssey of Runyan Jones; Radio primer; They fly through the air with the greatest of ease; The plot to overthrow Christmas; Daybreak; Old salt; A soliloquy to balance the budget; Ann Rutledge; Seems radio is here to stay; To Tim at twenty; My client Curley; Appointment; The oracle of Philadelphia. Glossary.

Booklist 38:229 Mr 1 '42

CORWIN, N. L.—Continued

"Corwin's experience and skill as a director, his familiarity with the complex technique of radio production, add up to a lot when it comes to the writing of his own scripts. . . . The reader, even if he hasn't any idea of writing or producing a radio play, may find the production notes appended to each almost as interesting as the plays themselves." Ruth Lechlitner

+ Books p26 Ap 5 '42 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '42

"The best of Norman Corwin's radio plays (and that means about the best written). . . . Uneven as the plays are they make remarkably good reading."

+ New Yorker 17:71 F 14 '42 30w

Pratt p20 D '42

"Reading this collection of thirteen of Corwin's radio plays, the reader will look in vain for those hallmarks of slow artistic development, the sober introspection, the long digested thoughts of others. Corwin did not develop more slowly than the others; he merely got a later start in network radio. . . . As a poet to be judged by more competent critics Corwin's works might lack maturity, as indeed any work by a man of his years might. And as one listens to his programs week after week one is conscious of faltering dramaturgy here and there. But that is the fault of the medium rather than the man. . . . Van Doren likens him to Marlowe, but the reference appears to be chronological rather than stylistic—both seem to stand at the doorway to their field, rather than in the center." A. N. Williams

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 F 14 '42 2000w

Reviewed by E. J. R. Isaacs

+ Theatre Arts 26:347 My '42 500w

Wis Lib Bul 38:65 Ap '42

CORY, HERBERT ELLSWORTH. The emancipation of a freethinker. (Science and culture ser) 313p $3 Bruce pub.

B or 92 Roman Catholic church—Converts 41-25930

"The author of this book was received into the Catholic Church at the age of forty-nine in 1933. He had passed the first eighteen years of his life in 'a gentle nebulous congregationalist Christianity.' Then in turn an agnostic Humanist, a Liberal, a Marxian, he plodded on in his search of truth finally discovering 'the conservative and yet ultrarevolutionary truths of the pure Tradition of Christianity.'" Cath World

"Covering as it does an academic career at Brown, Harvard, the University of California, Johns Hopkins, and the experiences of a man who underwent training in literature and science, this book possesses an interest for countless types of readers. . . . One can hardly doubt that these pages will as the author hopes convey inspiration and guidance to many still searching for the peace which he has found." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 154:763 Mr '42 320w

"To the extent that this book needlessly offends 'Protestants, atheists and agnostics,' as the general editor suggests that it might, or reconfirms others in the spirit of arrogance, it will fall short of Dr. Cory's purpose, the emancipation of free thinkers." D. M. Cantwell

Commonweal 35:566 Mr 27 '42 900w

COSTAIN, THOMAS BERTRAM. For my great folly. 504p $2.75 Putnam

Ward, John—Fiction (W) 42-17801

A romantic tale of England and the Mediterranean in the early seventeenth century when James I. against the wishes of many true Englishmen, was determined on making peace with the Spaniards. The chief historical figure is the pirate, John Ward, and the story is mainly of his deeds as seen thru the eyes of a young and ardent admirer, the narrator, Roger Blease.

"Never is there any sense of reality in the thing. The author has steeped himself in the period but the result is not quite happy. He is so charmed by the discovery of the thieves' slang of that day that he makes most of his characters speak like gangsters and hardly ever in the genuine prose and phrase of the time. . . . In spite of its defects, the book is highly readable—another victory for what Stevenson called 'the brute, Incident.'" R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic 170:142 O '42 200w

Booklist 39:48 O 15 '42

Reviewed by Page Cooper

Books p10 Jl 26 '42 700w

"That the writer's 'most serious purpose' has been fulfilled is beyond a doubt. The early part of the seventeenth century is shown here, as he aimed at showing it, in a multiplicity of colorful detail." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 26 '42 700w

"Mr. Costain, on a slim basis of fact, has built up a better-than-average roistering romantic tale, with pretty ladies, dashing men, and the usual martial trimmings."

+ New Yorker 17:58 Jl 25 '42 70w

"This is a novel, and by no means a serious historical thesis. It is as full of excitements as the indolent's garden is of purslane. It is gusty, and ribald, and almost a shade too vernacular. There are sea-fights and land-fights, lusty duels, diabolic plots, and snaky intrigues. Its characters, John Ward chief among them, are flamboyantly decorative and romantically enthralling. It is true that the narrator and technical hero is rather too much like a modern Boy Scout, but John Ward makes up for that defect." C. D. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 25:12 Jl 25 '42 450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:137 O '42

COTLOW, LEWIS N. Passport to adventure.

298p il maps $3.50 Bobbs

910.4 Voyages and travels 42-5561

A New York insurance man, whose hobby is traveling and photographing animals, describes some of his adventures in Spain, Mexico, Africa, and South America. At one time he spent four months in the Congo, photographing animals and natives. Index.

Booklist 38:272 Ap 1 '42

Reviewed by M. C. Hubbard

Books p14 Je 7 '42 550w

N Y Times p9 Mr 15 '42 440w

"The author tells anecdotes and adventures in a fresh and entertaining manner that may well prove an antidote for the necessary and sober reading of other contemporary literature. Perhaps it provides an 'escape,' but only to dangers and excitements of a different sort and in less-publicized portions of our war-torn world."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 Mr '42 480w

COTTLER, JOSEPH. Man with wings; the story of Leonardo da Vinci. 257p il $2.50 Little

B or 92 Leonardo da Vinci—Juvenile literature (W) 42-8083

A biography of Leonardo da Vinci, written for young people, and stressing his versatility, his great achievements not only as painter and sculptor but also as engineer and inventor.

Booklist 38:311 Ap 15 '42

Books p12 My 10 '42 600w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 23 '42 180w

"In showing how the achievements of Leonardo's brilliant mind were united with unusual personal charm, Mr. Cottler has produced an absorbing biography and illustrated it with excellent photographs." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:259 Jl '42 130w

"Indispensable new biography for young people and many adults, due to its great clarity and fine style." Elizabeth Beal

+ Library J 67:321 Ap 1 '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 38:67 Ap '42

COULSON, CHARLES ALFRED. Waves; a mathematical account of the common types of wave motion. 156p $1.50 Interscience [55 Oliver]

531.33 Wave motion, Theory of [A41-3801]

"This little book, which is one of the series of University Mathematical Texts, gives a concise account of the common types of wave motion. Starting with the fundamental equation of wave motion, as many problems as possible are discussed: waves on strings, waves in membranes, waves in bars and springs, waves in liquids, sound waves, and electrical waves." J Phys Chem

"While all of these topics have been discussed by theoretical physicists many times, still the present compilation is noteworthy for its clarity of presentation and its conciseness." Geo. Glockler

+ J Phys Chem 45:1337 N '41 80w

"The author has done a valuable service by bringing together into one book a general and unified treatment of many types of waves which ordinarily are discussed as parts of widely separated fields. This approach makes it more evident to the student that the fundamental problem encountered is essentially the same for all waves even though they may differ greatly as regards their physical nature. . . The book should be altogether suitable for senior and graduate courses in American colleges and universities." H. K. Schilling

+ R of Scientific Instruments 12:503 O '41 300w

COULTER, FRANCIS C. Manual of home vegetable gardening; il. by Tabea Hofmann. 279p il $2.50 Doubleday

635 Vegetable gardening 42-13510

The first third of this book contains generalizations on the planning of the garden, the gardener's tools, and soil improvement. There are also concluding chapters on herbs, weeds, insects, and chemiculture. The body of the book contains an alphabetical list of the common vegetables with cultural notes.

Booklist 38:381 Je 15 '42

"Beginners, and many experienced vegetableers as well, can read Mr. Coulter's volume with profit and satisfaction." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p12 Jl 12 '42 60w

COULTER, JOHN WESLEY. Fiji, little India of the Pacific. 156p maps $2 Univ. of Chicago press

919.61 Fiji (W) 42-50793

A study of the history, economic and social conditions of the Fiji islands, particularly as they have been affected by the immigration from India. Index.

Christian Century 59:1595 D 23 '42 130w

Scientific Bk Club R 14:3 Ja '43 480w

COUPLAND, REGINALD. Cripps mission. 91p il 75c (pa 1s) Oxford

342.54 India—Politics and government. Cripps, Sir Stafford 42-20098

Short summary of the events during Sir Stafford Cripps's visit to India in the spring of 1942. The author, an Oxford professor, was already in India, and was asked to join Sir Stafford's staff. Contents: India and the war; Distrust and disunion; On the eve of the mission; The Declaration of Independence; The new constitution; Defence; The breakdown; Independence now.

Booklist 39:7 S '42

"Here is a book I can recommend without hesitation—a small book of big significance. It is clear, concise, logical and dispassionate, and Mr. Coupland should be congratulated upon his sincere effort to do justice to both the sides involved in the dispute. However, I must add in the same breath that I can conceive of an equally clear, concise, logical and dispassionate Indian arriving at diametrically opposite conclusions. In other words, it is not enough to be fair." Krishnalal Shridharani

+ Books p3 Ag 30 '42 1000w

"Prof. R. Coupland has achieved a double purpose. He has written both a lucid first-hand account of one of the most significant and dramatic undertakings of our time and a cogent summary of the clashing interests and deep-rooted antagonisms that make up political India." H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 31 '42 700w

"This brief account of the pathetic and futile exchange of views furnishes no revelations. It is an official account and could not be anything else: it is a bit of paper fluttering in the storm of history. The story of India must be studied objectively; it will never be easy to understand all the factors involved—should they be understood, the problem would not yet be solved."

Commonweal 36:597 O 9 '42 150w

Reviewed by P. M. Buck Jr.

Geog R 32:699 O '42 60w

"The outcome of the new declaration of British policy has yet to be seen in historic perspective, but for a contemporary account we shall have nothing more informing, authentic or fair than Professor Coupland's 'brief record.'" + Times [London] Lit Sup p350 Jl 18 '42 240w

COURANT, RICHARD, and ROBBINS, HERBERT ELLIS. What is mathematics? an elementary approach to ideas and methods. 521p $5; educ ed $3.75 Oxford

510 Mathematics (W) 41-25632

An attempt to explain the "ideas and methods" of mathematics in a text that "presupposes only knowledge that a good high school course could impart . . . [but that] requires a certain degree of intellectual maturity and a willingness to do some thinking on one's own." (Pref) The authors are members of the department of mathematics at New York university. Index.

Booklist 38:303 Ap 15 '42

"This is not a book in philosophy; but there are probably few philosophers who can not gain instruction and clarification from it. It succeeds brilliantly in conveying the intellectual excitement of mathematical inquiry and in communicating the essential ideas and methods of several branches of mathematics. Although relatively little space is devoted to the discussion of issues concerning the foundations of mathematics, and although occasionally fundamental notions are carelessly formulated, the philosophy which characterizes modern mathematics is illuminatingly exhibited." E. N.

+ J Philos 39:221 Ap 9 '42 300w

"The book would make invaluable supplementary reading for anyone studying mathematics at the college level. Laymen had better attempt it only if they have a good deal of time and mental energy to spare."

+ Nature 154:441 Ap 11 '42 420w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:9 Ja '42

"The authors have set themselves an ambitious goal. 'The book is written for beginners and scholars, for students and teachers, for philosophers and engineers.' They did not promise too much. Without doubt the work will have great influence. It should be in the hands of every one, professional or otherwise, who is interested in scientific thinking." E. E. Kramer

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 23 '42 550w

Pratt p16 D '42

COURLANDER, HAROLD. Uncle Bouqui of Haiti; decorated by Lucy Herndon Crockett. 127p $2 Morrow

Tales, Haitian (W) 42-18468

Folk tales from Haiti, featuring black Uncle Bouqui, who fancies himself as clever, but is always outwitted in the end; and his small, crafty friend Ti Malice, who does the outwitting. Grades four to six.

COURLANDER, HAROLD—Continued

Booklist 39:15 S '42

"Here is an addition, not only to a child's library, but to those bookshelves of a general collection where folkstories of the world are treasured." M. L. Becker

+ Books p22 N 15 '42 250w

"The material is fresh and amusing." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:332 S '42 60w

"These irresistibly funny stories were collected from native storytellers of Haiti, making a new treasure-trove for our own storytellers. Recommended for children eight to twelve." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:685 Ag '42 80w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:884 O 15 '42 20w

COURNOS, JOHN, ed. Book of prophecy from the Egyptians to Hitler; with an introd. by [the editor] decorations by John C. Wonsetler. 274p $2.50 Scribner

133.3 Prophecies (W) 42-9210

Anthology of prophecies, beginning with the prophecy of prophecies from the Egyptian pyramids about 2900 B.C., and coming down to the significant prophecies about the present. Partial contents: Isaiah; Ezekiel; The Revelation of St John the Divine; Saint Malachy; Nostradamus; William Blake; Madame Blavatsky; Count Leo Tolstoy; Rasputin; Adolf Hitler.

Books p18 Mr 29 '42 200w

N Y Times p8 Mr 29 '42 360w

Reviewed by Albert Parry

Sat R of Lit 25:7 Jl 25 '42 1900w

Time 39:79 Mr 30 '42 400w

Wis Lib Bul 38:82 My '42

COURTNEY, CHARLES. Unlocking adventure [prepared] in collaboration with Tom Johnson. (Whittlesey house publications) 335p il $2.50 McGraw

B or 92 Locks and keys (W) 42-24656

Autobiography of a man whose career has been based on his clever fingers, which have been insured for as high as a hundred thousand dollars. His specialty is opening difficult locks, safes, and treasure chests. At times he has been employed by ex-Kaiser Wilhelm, the ex-king, Alfonso of Spain, and Sir Basil Zaharoff; he worked on the chests which held the Russian crown jewels; he has worked with divers under the sea. His story is as exciting as fiction.

Booklist 39:200 Ja 15 '43

"Mr. Courtney's has been a unique career, and it makes a fascinating story."

+ Books p34 D 6 '42 180w

"In addition to its full roster of dramatic incident, this well-written book contains interesting information about great locksmiths, good locks, and protection against burglary."

+ N Y Times p38 N 29 '42 500w

COUSINS, NORMAN. The good inheritance: the democratic chance; with a reading list by the Council for democracy. 318p $3 Coward-McCann

321.4 Democracy. Athens—History. Greece—Civilization. Reconstruction (1939-) 42-4560

"In his review of Athens' struggle for survival as a democracy, the author attempts to show its parallels to the present fight for democratic values. He believes that Athens failed because of weaknesses which may be repeated today. Conversations of typical Americans are quoted to illustrate contemporary problems of democracy and the threat of anti-democratic movements. These problems are clarified in a plea for a fight to the finish against totalitarian forces." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:246 Mr 15 '42

"Apparently Mr. Cousins' hope lies in some vague form of international organization, but it is too vague to be clearly comprehended by the reader. This is disturbing. The first half of the book showed the author to be an exceptionally clear, direct thinker. If the impact of war has thrown such a man into a confusion comparable to that of the Athenian populace after the death of Pericles what has it done to the fuzzier minds of the majority? Fuzzy thinking sunk Athens, and there is no convincing reason to doubt that it could sink us. It is this melancholy fact that makes 'The Good Inheritance' a bit depressing." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p6 Je 7 '42 1650w

"Among the considerable number of new books on democracy that have come to his notice the present reviewer finds it hard to recall a more straightforward and useful lesson for our times than is contained in the present volume." Simeon Strunsky

+ N Y Times p23 My 17 '42 1450w

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun

Sat R of Lit 25:6 Mr 21 '42 500w

"This is a book that many teachers of history have written—in their minds. Now that Mr. Cousins has seen fit to write it on paper, potential authors can be greatly gratified that he has done the job so well." William Habberton

+ Social Educ 6:283 O '42 350w

COUSINS, NORMAN, ed. Treasury of democracy; epilogue by Stephen Vincent Benét. 306p $3 Coward-McCann

321.8 Democracy (W) 42-1833

Aphorisms or short extracts with a bearing on democracy. The first section of the book contains aphorisms on democracy, arranged chronologically from Homer to Thomas Wolfe. The second section—the living affirmation of democracy, is composed of the statements of seventy-seven modern writers and thinkers, written especially for this volume, "or adapted by the writers themselves from previously published materials." Index.

Booklist 38:226 Mr 1 '42

New Yorker 17:65 Ja 24 '42 30w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster

Sat R of Lit 25:7 Ja 31 '42 650w

"The special force of this book lies in the fertilizing relationship between the 'aphorisms' and the 'living affirmations.' After the rapid historical tour the reader finds a greater pith, point and perspective in the statements by living leaders. The statements were mostly written for this book (the rest were selected or adapted by the authors from previously published material) in answer to the request to 'compress in 500 words some of your hopes or fears for democracy today.' The results are surprisingly varied, considering that no effort was made to allocate aspects of the subject." Marshall Bragdon

Spring'd Republican p6 Ja 24 '42 1300w

COVERT, MRS ALICE LENT. End of reckoning. 314p $2.50 Kinsey

42-19158

A story of an Oklahoma town from early settlement days to the nineteen thirties. The chief character is Jesse Trauber, originally a Missouri farmer, who became a saloon keeper in Paradise when he failed to get a free farm. Jesse at first was an honest and righteous man in spite of his trade but an embittered family life and too much success changed him by slow degrees, and in the end Senator Trauber, sick, hated and feared, faces death alone.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p13 Ag 16 '42 180w

"How this young and ambitious farmer, apparently of a naturally honest nature, developed into a first-rate crooked politician is a convincing and interesting story, something of a tour de force. His very strength became his weakness, for it embittered all the personal relationships which might have brought him happiness. His rogue's progress is engrossing.

but his inhuman heartlessness robs the story of the warmth that a glow of sympathy for the malefactor would have given." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 16 '42 650w

"Mrs. Covert's novel is a facile narrative, full of lively incidents and at times of excellent vulgar, folksy talk. In spite of these merits, however, the characters, after the first six chapters, are not convincing." R. W. Smith

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:9 S 5 '42 270w

COWLES, WILLARD BUNCE. Treaties and constitutional law; property interferences and due process of law. 315p $4.50; pa $3.50 Am. council on public affairs

342.733 U.S.—Constitutional law. U.S. Constitution—Amendments—5th amendment. U.S.—Foreign relations 42-9148

"This book seeks to answer two basic questions: 'first, whether or not the due process and just compensation clauses of the Fifth Amendment . . . constitute limitations upon the provisions of the international treaties of the United States, in their character as domestic law in the United States; and second, if they are and if a court should hold such a treaty provision binding upon it, notwithstanding the constitutional consistency, would there be a duty on the part of the United States to assure the property-owner just compensation, which he could enforce against the United States as a claim founded upon the Constitution?' The answers reached by Dr. Cowles are both in the affirmative." Am Pol Sci R

Am Hist R 47:944 JI '42 110w

"It is not unreasonable to expect that when this war is over, the treaty-making power will assume renewed importance. If so, judge, lawyer, and student alike will find this volume by Dr. Cowles a valuable aid interpreting the effect of treaties upon domestic law. The work is characterized not only by an unusual clarity of expression and excellent factual presentation of cases, but by a purposiveness which is delightful. From start to finish there is an orderliness in the method of attack which reminds one of a first-rate mystery story." W. O. Farber

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:979 O '42 550w

"The high quality of research which has gone into the book is evident from the fact that the author has collected a considerable body of material almost wholly without the benefit of prior discussions, digests, or even indices. The cases are well briefed, with particular attention paid to such helpful matters as the arguments of counsel and historical settings. Unfortunately, however, the book suffers from the fact that the author is too intent upon proving his thesis." Delmar Karlen

+ — Columbia Law R 52:1244 S '42 850w

"Dr. Cowles' experience as a member of the bar of the Court of Claims plus his training and experience in the field of international law qualifies him as an authority on this subject. He writes with force and precision. His innate conservatism may have prevented him from writing the last word, but he has done an excellent job." J. D. Larkin

+ Harvard Law R 56:158 S '42 1300w

COWLEY, MALCOLM. Dry season [and other poems]. [32p] $1 New directions

811 42-5638

"[This] is Malcolm Cowley's first book of verse since 'Blue Juniata' (1929). His dry season derives from Eliot's; his portraits of the 'lost people' follow the satirical pattern set by Eliot. . . . But the lost people in the dry season of whom he writes are largely those expatriates of his own generation who wandered in a 'wilderness of days' through the decadent capitals abroad, who 'moved on brightly among the ruins.'" Books

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner
Books p13 JI 19 '42 280w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 17:69 F 14 '42 40w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. Assignment in Guiana. 248p $2 Knopf

(W) 42-5682

Detective story.

Booklist 38:369 Je 1 '42

"As ever, Mr. Coxé provides an ingenious plot and grim prose. Suitable for riddlers who don't care whether or not the characters are 'sympathetic.' A necessity of course for this author's large following." Will Cuppy

+ Books p22 Ap 5 '42 180w

"An exciting, fast-moving, short novel, with interest well sustained to the end. . . . Recommended." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 67:182 F 15 '42 50w

"The author gives us mystery, adventure, romance and a bit of international intrigue, all intricately interconnected in such a way as to afford thrilling entertainment as a momentary respite from the horrors of war." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 5 '42 200w

"Terse and dramatic, and the stubborn Bostonian comes across with a clever solution."

+ New Yorker 18:88 Ap 11 '42 50w

"Good!"

+ Sat R of Lit 25:30 Ap 11 '42 40w

Time 39:92 My 4 '42 30w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. Charred witness. 231p $2 Knopf

42-18660

Detective story.

Booklist 39:122 D 1 '42

"We wouldn't say that the story is up to this author's usual standard." Will Cuppy

Books p22 O 18 '42 130w

"George Harmon Coxé can always be depended upon for action—and for a diverting tale." Kay Irvin

N Y Times p25 O 11 '42 240w

"Standard brand."

Sat R of Lit 25:20 O 31 '42 40w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. Silent are the dead. 258p $2 Knopf

41-28293

Detective story.

Booklist 38:235 Mr 1 '42

"This contains much newspaper atmosphere, camera lore, plenty of suspects and a nice line of suspense. Hard, but not too hard. Of the author, Erle Stanley Gardner has said, 'His work is uniformly entertaining, gripping and exciting.'" Will Cuppy

+ Books p11 Ja 4 '42 250w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 106:470 Ap 6 '42 70w

"It is an exciting, rapid-fire story of the sort for which George Harmon Coxé is well known." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 4 '42 240w

"Tough, with an authentic newspaper background."

New Yorker 17:60 Ja 10 '42 60w

"Well worked out plot, convincingly written and packed with action. Casey the newspaper photographer is excellent addition to tough 'tec ranks. Better grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ja 10 '42 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 4 '42 120w

COYLE, MRS KATHLEEN. Josephine; with drawings by Peggy Bacon. 174p $2 Harper

Cats—Legends and stories 42-8904

Josephine was a cat of marked personality. She appeared one day before the door of the author's Paris apartment, a wild mistreated cat, with no faith in humankind. After a period of nursing, Josephine became quite a character and attached herself firmly to the household. The story follows her career thru marriage, motherhood, and various vicissitudes until the day when she had to be sent off to the country to live, because the landlord abhorred cats.

COYLE, KATHLEEN—Continued

Booklist 38:330 My 1 '42

Bookmark 3:15 My '42

"As one looks back from the last page, all too quickly reached, over the story and Peggy Bacon's living pictures of the Sixth Arrondissement, one sees that this is really a book about Paris. It is about a lost Paris—lost as a girl is lost who is not dead, whom those who love her dare now to remember only by some little thing that once was hers. This little cat belonged to lovely Paris." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 Ap 5 '42 400w

"It is a pleasant little book that Mrs. Coyle has written, and Peggy Bacon has illustrated it as pleasantly."

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 26 '42 330w

COYLE, MRS KATHLEEN. Major, and the others. 117p $1.50 Dutton

42-21979

Collection of eleven stories about a charming Irish family and their animal and bird friends. Major, the great black dog who was an integral part of the writer's childhood, occupies the greater part of the spotlight.

"If you were so happy as to have had a grand dog to remember, his clear spirit will come back with Major, whatever his breed may have been. . . Though the human family is technically in the background spiritually, they control the story by keeping up a pleasant wonder what on earth they will do next. This is a book against dark days."

+ Books p34 N 8 '42 400w

"Major and the Others is by a distinguished Irish writer, Kathleen Coyle and in these sketches of her childhood animal friends her wit and her sympathy are nicely linked. . . We recommend it as the book for animal lovers who also love good literature."

+ Cath World 156:376 D '42 110w

"Written for grownups, but will be equally enjoyed by younger readers. There's a casual friendliness and understanding in all the incidents, a homely beauty that leaves one feeling very refreshed. Can be read in an hour's time, a very worthwhile way to spend your next spare-time hour." Lena Ruppert

+ Library J 67:845 O 1 '42 70w

COYLE, MRS KATHLEEN. To hold against famine. 282p $2.50 Dutton

42-1187

The book "deals with the plight, largely psychological, of three very different women living in occupied Paris: Mme. Masson, a distinguished doctor; her daughter Marianne, a febrile type whose neuroses have deepened as the result of rape by a couple of representatives of the wave of the future; and the friend of the two women, Suzanne, courageous and optimistic." New Yorker

"Like Kathleen Coyle's earlier books, 'To Hold Against Famine' is sensitive and luminous with intelligence. . . This new book, doubtless drawn out of the agony of imagination, has less resiliency than the earlier novels; its intensity and singleness of purpose are at points almost overpowering. Echoing this mood, the prose rhythm of the book is less variegated than that of, say, 'Who Dwell With Wonder,' and it may not have so wide an appeal as some of Kathleen Coyle's earlier novels. But to readers who prize the scrupulous perceptiveness of her work, both its matter and its manner will hold adventure." Mary Ross

+ Books p2 F 15 '42 700w

"Too introspective and psychological for many, but it will be read by those wishing to dwell upon individual feelings and reactions." Margaret Winning

Library J 67:86 Ja 15 '42 90w

"There are beautiful passages in the story, images and moments of great artistic precision. The scene in the painter's studio when Marianne Masson and her friend Suzanne put it to him that he should marry Marianne to save her and the child, comes off with breathtaking intensity. Miss Coyle's talent as a writer is beyond doubt. But hers is a specific talent, which—at its present stage at least—does not lend itself to every theme. One cannot play a symphony on a piano, let alone on a harpsichord; particularly not if it is a modern symphony, full of loud, dissonant violence." Marianne Hauser

+ — N Y Times p6 F 8 '42 800w

"I don't suppose the tenuous novels of Kathleen Coyle will ever command a large audience. However, 'To Hold Against Famine,' because of its theme, may win her new readers, and deservedly. . . Miss Coyle writes so that we see the war from an unusual and entirely feminine oblique angle. No politics, no male preoccupations with right and wrong or with problems of warfare; only the female's fierce sense of outrage that she, the physical bearer of the continuity of civilization, has become a cipher and a slave. . . It is certainly one of the most original novels produced by the war." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:60 F 7 '42 230w

"Miss Coyle has dared to use contemporary events such as any newspaper might serve up daily. But she gives them a form that should long outlast and long illumine them." Bess Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 F 14 '42 800w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 31:x spring '42 20w

COZZENS, JAMES GOULD. The just and the unjust. 434p $2.50 Harcourt

(W) 42-17992

"The scene is a county seat during a murder trial. By day the trial proceeds inexorably. But when court is adjourned, the lawyers are human beings struggling with their personal crises. The procedure of the law and the life of the community are not separate, for each shapes the other." Publisher's note

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (13) B & T (1) N Y Times (8) RB (1)

"The most endearing quality in The Just and the Unjust is the almost effortless way in which [the author] makes you identify yourself with a small Connecticut village. The village could be any little town, anywhere along the North Atlantic coast. Cozzens gives you the feel of it perfectly. . . In tangy, humorous writing he has dramatized the legal process in scenes so human and so clear that at the end you realize you have been watching democracy at the core—and almost at its best." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 170:101 Ag '42 250w

Booklist 39:11 S '42

"Research, sincerity and a thoroughgoing examination of the ways of legal justice have gone into the writing of James Gould Cozzens's new novel, 'The Just and the Unjust,' and on those grounds one applauds his efforts. While Mr. Cozzens does a notable job of portraying his characters—the defendants, the lawyers for the defense, the district attorney and his assistant—in a three-day trial of two gangsters who had murdered a member of a narcotic ring, and while the testimony and cross-examination possess the quality of exact realism and sound reporting, the book as a whole, with all its tremendous detail, lacks spark and drama." Rose Feld

+ — Books p5 J 26 '42 950w

"Mr. Cozzens does a grand job in emphasizing this drab and nasty slaughter, and in showing throughout the book how little it has to do with the life and the people of Childerstown. Childerstonians are far more interested in their local lawyers and judges than they are in the Zollicoffer murder. So is the reader."

+ Boston Globe p19 J 22 '42 500w

"There is not much high idealism in the book, and little emphasis upon the dignity of man, even implicitly. But there is a lot of horse sense about human nature and, in the end, a pretty tenable and practical philosophy of law. Besides that, it is something of a relief to have a novel, and especially one so skillfully written and with such an abundance of clever turns of word and thought, in which the element of romance is played down to an irreducible minimum."

Christian Century 59:1154 S 23 '42 160w

"It is a pleasure to report that not only has a great American novelist come of age, but that, unlike most other American novelists, he has developed a sense of morality. It is curious that, for his best book, Mr. Cozzens takes a theme that has been worn threadbare by the worst and cheapest writers, and by virtue of his great skill and understanding, makes it into what could very easily become an American classic. . . . The objectivity of the book is complete; I know no other living novelist whose objectivity is complete. There is nothing so mawkish as a hero or a heroine. This is the way things are, with something of good and evil in everyone." Harry Sylvester

+ Commonweal 36:354 J1 31 '42 900w

"Double interest slows plot action, but the telling is realistic and characters well drawn. The murder is of little dramatic interest, involves no local people except jurymen. Book-of-Month-Club selection for August, but this reviewer believes its popularity will be limited." L. M. Kinloch

Library J 67:629 J1 '42 80w

Reviewed by A. G. Hays

New Repub 107:205 Ag 17 '42 600w

"In 'The Just and the Unjust' Mr. Cozzens has not only dealt with his most ambitious theme; he has handled it in such a manner as to leave no doubt of his stature as a major novelist. . . . Abner Coates' story carries a suspense and a significance that are bigger than the court room in Childerstown; it is as big as all the communities in the country. Because that is so 'The Just and the Unjust' reaches major dimensions." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p1 J1 26 '42 950w

"A careful, serious, rather low-pressured novel about lawyers and the law. I should estimate it as not up to 'The Last Adam' or 'S.S. San Pedro,' Mr. Cozzens' best books to date, but it is an honest job, full of that accurate, unbiassed characterization of more or less ordinary people that is Mr. Cozzens' particular forte." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:57 J1 25 '42 450w

Pratt p11 D '42

"'The Just and the Unjust' I read at a sitting, or rather in bed, through a night of intolerable heat. It was the source and form of unbroken pleasure. Fundamentally Mr. Cozzens, remarkable for a novelist, knew something: he knew the law; he wrote with the particularity of an exact and brilliant lens; and his facts were colored by remembered emotion. Undeniably 'The Just and the Unjust' was an elevated work, but the story was so well contrived, at once so apparently reasonable and satisfying, that its gravity was no more insistent than the sea under my windows." Joseph Hergesheimer

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 J1 25 '42 650w

Time 40:76 Ag 3 '42 550w

Wis Lib Bul 38:137 O '42

CRABB, ALFRED LELAND. Dinner at Belmont; a novel of captured Nashville. 385p $2.50 Bobbs

42-7627

As a matter of fact there are five dinners at Belmont, ranging in time from 1858, when General William Walker came home from his exploits in Nicaragua, to 1865, when the Civil war was over and the engagement of a Union officer to a Southern girl is announced. The novel is mainly a pen picture of Nashville during the Civil war. The deus ex machina is a nameless stagecoach driver, who always appears in the nick of time.

Booklist 38:426 J1 1 '42

"This is one of those Southern novels that are fun to read, and read as if they must have been fun to write. Although 'Dinner at Belmont' will certainly be tapped for Hollywood it has qualities that indicate that the author was aiming at more than Hollywood. He does not quite get there, but there are several diverting and original elements in what is apparently a first novel." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p5 Mr 29 '42 800w

Reviewed by L. M. Field

N Y Times p7 Mr 22 '42 550w

Reviewed by A. B. Stapleton

Sat R of Lit 25:15 Ap 4 '42 380w

CRAIG, ALEC. Above all liberties. 205p $2.50 Norton [7s 6d Allen, G]

098.12 Prohibited books. Censorship. Liberty of the press [A42-3037]

Essays on the liberty to print, especially as regards material dealing with sex. Partial contents: "Merry England;" Edmund Curll; The making of a law; Havelock Ellis; The strange case of Count Potocki of Montalk; The wider censorship; Contrast with U.S.A.; The problem of pornography. The survey covers English, French, and United States cases. Bibliography. Index.

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 18 '42 180w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 23:111 F 14 '42 1200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p105 F 28 '42 1100w

CRANE, ALAN. Pepita Bonita. [39p] col il $1.50 Nelson

42-20336

"Pictures in two colors show a young pelican with a broken wing, who met with kindness at the hands of a friendly family in Mexico." Horn Bk

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p32 N 15 '42 150w

"The sketches of Mexican village life, of the animals and birds dwelling there, are authentic and attractive." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:419 N '42 40w

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson

Library J 67:955 N 1 '42 50w

"With its fine drawings, excellent local color and genuine humor, 'Pepita Bonita' will readily find a place among the picture-story books enjoyed by the 5 to 7 year olds." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 O 11 '42 240w

CRANE, MRS FRANCES (KIRKWOOD). Golden box. 312p $2 Lippincott

42-12027

Detective story.

"Frances Crane's second mystery, following last year's 'The Turquoise Shop,' is another neat job, suitable for all who like their shivery reading polite, sufficiently speedy and thoroughly baffling as it purls along." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 My 24 '42 200w

"The mystery is neat and satisfactory, and the story makes pleasant reading." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 My 17 '42 260w

"Nice plot and fine small-town atmosphere."

+ New Yorker 18:76 My 16 '42 50w

CRANE, MRS FRANCES (KIRKWOOD). Yellow violet. 286p $2 Lippincott

42-51783

Detective story.

"Hooray again for the really delightful puzzlers of Frances Crane, who has followed up 'The Turquoise Shop' and 'The Golden Box' with another humdinger. 'The Yellow Violet' is her best, which makes it a necessity on any shopping list." Will Cuppy

+ Books p20 Ja 17 '43 380w

"The plot becomes more and more tangled as the story proceeds, and the final explanation of all that has happened is a bit confused. However, there are lively and exciting doings along the way, and that makes up for a great deal." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 3 '43 180w

CRANE, F. K.—Continued

"Nice writing."

New Yorker 18:52 Ja 2 '43 70w

"Lively and breezily written tale of murder, fascist intrigue, etc., in California. Characters entertaining and action rapid but yarn is slightly plot-heavy. Readable."

+ — Sat R of Lit 26:20 Ja 9 '43 50w

CRANKSHAW, MABEL. The England I cannot forget. 184p $1.75 Dorrance

914.2 England—Description and travel 42-1712

"A happy holiday in Britain, ended by the war in 1939, is retold in letters to her family by Mabel Crankshaw. . . Only unusual part of the rambling account (told not without humor) is the hurried voyage home on a blacked-out British ship." Springf'd Republican

Christian Century 59:22 Ja 7 '42 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 18 '42 50w

CRAVEN, AVERY ODELLE. Coming of the Civil war. 491p $3.75 Scribner

973.711 U.S.—History—1815-1861. U.S.—History—Civil war—Causes. Slavery in the U.S. 42-12135

An analysis of the causes of the Civil war as they were manifested in American history, politics and journalism from 1820 to 1860. The author's thesis is that the war was not "inevitable" but that moderates on both sides might have prevented it. Index.

Booklist 38:423 Jl 1 '42

"Here is a deliberate, measured, lucid recital of the way one calamitous blunder after another, and not inexorable destiny, made the conflict inevitable; which naturally arouses uneasy comparisons with the course of events during the last twenty years. Have we done it again? It is a chilling suggestion. . . 'The Coming of the Civil War' is a scholarly work, but never pedantic. It is carefully documented and moderate in tone, but it is written smoothly enough to make it easy reading for the layman. It may be classified as popular history if you are careful to lay the emphasis on the 'history' not on the 'popular'; for it is the sort of book that will not be out of place on the bookshelf of any scholar." G. W. Johnston

+ Books p5 My 17 '42 1400w

Christian Science Monitor p18 O 16 '42 280w

"Not a 'popular work' but will be widely read by serious students of American history." R. H. McDonough

Library J 67:317 Ap 1 '42 80w

"This [is an] unbiased and well-written study."

+ Nation 155:159 Ag 22 '42 120w

Reviewed by T. E. Strevay

New Eng Q 15:552 S '42 700w

"This is an immensely valuable book, but it is valuable for its parts rather than for the whole. Students assuredly must not look here for an answer to the great American war-guilt question; they should not be too disappointed, for there is no answer. . . It is to be wished that Professor Craven had canvassed, for our benefit, the question of popular support to secession in 1860-61, and that he had analysed more thoroughly the 'last crisis'—that of Lincoln's election. But these may come in subsequent books. Mr. Craven writes more impartially than we might have expected, less objectively than we had hoped. Perhaps the unwary reader will need to be reminded that there were happier states than that of slavery and that no free Negro was ever known to run the other way." H. S. Commager

+ — N Y Times p3 My 24 '42 1600w

"Not entirely convincing, perhaps, but a rich, thoroughgoing performance, much of it from primary sources."

New Yorker 18:79 My 9 '42 60w

"Dr. Craven's book is a biased and partial treatment of a very complex phase of American history. But it is full of fresh material, it throws much new light on public feeling 1830-1860 and the forces which produced it, and it compresses a vast deal of erudition into a concise and often beautifully written exposition." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:5 My 30 '42 1350w

"This book is another example of a familiar conservative view of the Civil war, the Negro people and slavery shared by many writers, northern as well as southern, decked out in scholarly trappings. It is certainly not new; and, in the present reviewer's judgment, it is no more convincing than its predecessors." S. L. Jackson

— Springf'd Republican p8 My 12 '42 900w

Wis Lib Bul 38:118 Jl '42

Reviewed by R. H. Gabriel

Yale R n s 32:407 winter '43 1000w

CRAWFORD, PHYLLIS (JOSIE TURNER, pseud). Last semester. 270p il $2 Holt

(W), 42-24494

In her last semester at a southern woman's college Janey Lou discovered how much her parents had sacrificed to keep her in college. To her dismay Janey Lou also learned that her lackadaisical scholarship might even keep her from graduating with her class. The story describes her frantic efforts to retrieve in one semester what she had lost in the several preceding ones, and what came of the struggle.

"It is as lively a story as we have this year." M. L. Becker

+ Books p28 N 15 '42 380w

"There are all too few stories which portray campus life with such a quick sense of the contemporary as does this. Bright, amusing and convincing, save for a few minor inconsistencies, this one offers to girls looking forward to their own college days a lively preview and an excellent set of personal values to consider." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p47 N 15 '42 320w

CREED, VIRGINIA. Voyage of the heart. 327p $2.50 Duell

42-24768

A cruise ship is the background for this character study of a sensitive, startlingly beautiful young American bride. Elise was totally unprepared for marriage to a wealthy playboy, and the cruise ship men who fell in love with her only complicated matters more. Then she met a man who really understood and loved her, only to lose him again. The effect of this encounter changed the unawakened girl into a hardened, bitter woman.

"The novel is a psychological pattern of intricate interlacings and delicate textures, composed with breadth and assurance as well as fluency and a sense of form. It is a narrative that demands one's close attention, for its richness cannot be skimmed, but it generously rewards one's concentration. . . Here is a fascinating group of people, with every one drawn with crisp and sometimes cruel clarity." Lisle Bell

+ Books p12 N 1 '42 750w

"On the whole, characterization is good. For reader who enjoys the life and indiscretions of society." Emily Garnett

Library J 67:909 O 15 '42 70w

Reviewed by L. M. Field

N Y Times p18 N 1 '42 650w

CREESE, JAMES. Extension of university teaching. 170p $1.25; to members gratis Am. assn. for adult educ.

378.13 University extension 41-21414

"The first chapter, entitled 'University dilemmas,' recounts a number of facts concerning colleges and universities. The second chapter, which describes the historical background of university extension, is the best part of the book despite the fact that it is repetitious and includes much curiously unrelated material.

Chapter iii deals with the role of the universities in the national defense effort and certain immediate issues that have resulted. The fourth chapter describes the extension of university facilities to meet the needs of various professional groups. The final chapter [is] entitled 'Scholarly learning and the world of action.' Library Q

"A stimulating little volume on university extension work is this, and a timely one now when the emergency of war makes new demands upon our institutions of higher learning." + J Home Econ 34:252 Ap '42 150w

"The chief value of the book lies in its clear description of a number of individual programs and activities. Persons who are not familiar with university extension can get a fairly good notion of the way it appears to those on the firing line, while practitioners in the field may discover some activities they would like to try out in their own programs. The lack of a clear and understandable organization is the basic flaw of the book. An exacting critic would discover other deficiencies and errors of interpretation but these may perhaps be excused by the fact that the volume aims to be nothing more than a quick and impressionistic account. Its style is occasionally somewhat irritating, particularly when it expresses a rather shopworn humanism. . . . Throughout the book one gathers the impression that Mr. Creese, at the time he undertook to make his survey, had had little or no experience with extension activities. The book itself—and the merits and demerits which one may detect in it—seem to point overwhelmingly to this conclusion." C. O. Houle

+ Library Q 12:318 Ap '42 300w

School & Society 54:340 O 18 '41 30w

CREGAN, MAIRIN (MRS JAMES RYAN). Rathina; il. by Flora De Muth. 279p $2.25 Macmillan

(W) 42-22933

"A realistic story of home life, just outside Dublin, where the Donovans and O'Briens live side by side, enjoying their horses and dogs and the pleasures of the country, generally. Events center around Eileen's love for the 'perfect' horse, Blackbird, and her grief when the O'Briens are obliged to sell him." Horn Bk

Booklist 39:123 D 1 '42

Cath World 156:379 D '42 30w

"A fresh story written with real feeling for style." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 37:116 N 20 '42 30w

"Though the interest is sustained and the action spirited, the charm of the story rests less in plot than in the setting of a dignified home in Ireland, peopled by a gracious family, made real by an adroit pen." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:425 N '42 110w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:889 O 15 '42 20w

"I liked this very much, but hesitate to recommend too highly because of lack of plot." R. W. Stewart

Library J 67:1070 D 1 '42 90w

"There is plenty of action to hold the interest, but there is also, and this is what gives Mairin Cregan's story a substance and quality rare in books for the 10 to 14 year olds, real characterization that shows the imagination and knowledge of human nature. . . . Flora de Muth's fine drawings catch the spirit of the tale and the Irish scene. A book to be recommended." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 17 '43 500w

CRESSY-MARCKS, VIOLET OLIVIA (RUTLEY) (MRS FRANCIS EDWIN FISHER). Journey into China; introd. by Sir Percy Sykes. 324p il maps $3.75 Dutton [21s Hodder]

915.1 China—Description and travel 42-21296

The author, an experienced traveler, journeyed from Burma thru the interior of China to Cheng Tu and Chungking, Manchoukuo, Siberia, and finally to Koko Nor in Tibet. This book is an account of the day-by-day adventures of the trip begun in 1938, as well as a record of her observations on China at war. Index.

Booklist 39:100 N 15 '42

"This is a big book, beautifully got up and lavishly illustrated with the author's somewhat inexpert photographs. Mrs. Cressy-Marcks's narrative style is not good, however." Rodney Gilbert

+ Books p16 O 18 '42 1150w

Reviewed by Emma Olcott

Library J 67:843 O 1 '42 80w

N Y Times p37 O 25 '42 500w

"So-called world travelers are usually much too interested in chalking up mileage to gather material for really good books about the countries they visit. Violet Cressy-Marcks is a traveller and explorer in varied regions, but this fine book has depth as well as all the elements that make up fast and exciting travel narrative; though some readers might be as well pleased had she skipped a few side excursions into ancient Chinese history and studied a little Wade spelling of Chinese names. The journey she describes was an unusual and fascinating one in spite of its rather prosaic title similar to many other recent books." Nym Wales

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 O 24 '42 500w

"An accomplished traveler and raconteur gives us a book on China to round out our recent volumes on those parts of the world so vitally concerned with the war effort. In it will be found the atmosphere and color of a vast country."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:2 O '42 480w

CROCKETT, CHARIS (DENNISON) (MRS FREDERICK EUGENE CROCKETT). House in the rain forest. 300p il $3 Houghton

919.5 Netherlands New Guinea. Ethnology—New Guinea 42-36129

The author, an anthropologist, and her husband, who had accompanied Byrd to the South Pole, spent an adventurous honeymoon among the recently reformed New Guinea cannibals. Among her other activities Mrs Crockett found time to measure nearly 900 natives, listen to their folk tales, and write this record of her experiences. In his introduction Ernest Hooton says the book is "jammed with good descriptive writing, excellent anthropology, and good humor."

Booklist 38:273 Ap 1 '42

Bookmark 3:12 My '42

"It's an illuminating and highly amusing narrative of life among the cannibals written with an informality that makes it good reading for the least scientific-minded reader. . . . 'The House in the Rain Forest' is excellent entertainment in addition to, or in spite of being, as Dr. Hooton indicates, excellent anthropology." Rose Feld

+ Books p5 Ap 5 '42 1150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '42

"This is a clear-eyed, open-hearted, modest and amusing introduction to place and people, in the wilderness back from the northwestern tip of the big island, under the Netherlands' wise rule. . . . There is a constant lively charm in the personal anecdotes and experiences which illustrate the various features of primitive custom, character and belief. The birds and animals that made themselves at home in the Crocketts' household offer their own humorous and delightful invitation to the reading of this uncommonly rewarding 'travel' chronicle."

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 29 '42 600w

"So human, amusing, and neatly told that you may hardly notice what sound popular anthropology it is."

+ New Yorker 18:79 Mr 28 '42 60w

Pratt p22 O '42

"Here is a delightful book, infectiously humorous, shiveringly adventurous, and crammed with little known facts about the cannibalistic

CROCKETT, C. D.—Continued
inhabitants of New Guinea, now being overrun by the Japs, who are not likely to find the going easy." Linton Wells
+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 Ap 18 '42 650w
Wis Lib Bul 38:66 Ap '42

CROFTS, FREEMAN WILLIS. Fear comes to Chalfont. 270p $2 Dodd
42-19428
Detective story.

"If you fancy a yarn with a superior sleuth in the fine old British tradition, here's one. . .
Here's an agreeable test of your snooping powers and a meaty story to boot." Will Cuppy
+ Books p17 Ag 23 '42 200w
Boston Globe p19 Ag 12 '42 20w
"Thoroughly sound detective work is the keynote of this, as it is of all the Inspector French stories. If you want quick solutions by accident or intuition you must seek elsewhere." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p18 Ag 30 '42 180w
"Solid and satisfying."
+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 Ag 22 '42 40w

CROSBY, LEE, pseud. See Torrey, W.

CROSS, RUTH. Wake up and garden! the complete month-by-month gardener's manual. 326p il $2.95 Prentice-Hall
635.9 Gardening 42-10912
Devoted chiefly to flower gardens. Chapters on general subjects include lists of things to be done in each successive month. Index.

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon
Books p15 Ap 19 '42 100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '42

CROWELL, MRS GRACE (NOLL). Facing the stars [and other poems]. 53p $1 Harper 811 41-19490
Poems appealing to the religious side of the readers' nature. Some have already appeared in magazines.

"A new volume of poems by Mrs. Crowell is always welcome. . . Always her thought is clear, her faith undaunted and her words apt.
There is a deep serenity in her poetry that is more cheering than cheerfulness."
+ Christian Century 58:1339 O 29 '41 40w
Churchman 156:31 Mr 15 '42 20w
Wis Lib Bul 38:12 Ja '42

CROWNFIELD, GERTRUDE. Proud lady; il.
by Agnes Lehman. 259p $2 Lippincott
(W) 42-19446

The little Swedish settlement of New Castle, Delaware, in the years 1669 to 1670 is the background of this story for older girls. The arrival of the traitor, Long Finn, who incited the rebellion against the English, and the participation of a headstrong Swedish boy in the rebellion provides the action.

"Miss Crownfield has chosen an interesting and less well-known incident from American history and made a worth-while plot. There is action and suspense. Illustrated in black and white by Agnes Lehman. Recommended."
Elizabeth Babcock
+ Library J 67:796 S 15 '42 70w
School & Society 56:135 Ag 15 '42 20w

CROY, HOMER. Family honeymoon. 313p $2.50
Harper
42-15423

When Professor Jordan married the charming widow, Hetty Armstrong, it was with the best intentions of being a good father to her four young children. But he had not counted on the children joining the honeymoon trip to the Grand Canyon, and the results of that unconventional arrangement nearly disrupted the whole affair.

Booklist 38:441 J1 15 '42
Wis Lib Bul 38:120 J1 '42

CRUM, WILLIAM LEONARD; FENNELLY, JOHN FAUNTLEROY, and SELTZER, LAW-RENCE HOWARD. Fiscal planning for total war. 358p $3 Nat. bur. of economic research 336.73 Finance—U.S. War—Economic aspects. World war, 1939—Finance 42-22247

"The authors of this report constituted the Directing Committee of a study commissioned by the Conference on Research in Fiscal Policy, which in turn is sponsored by the National Bureau of Economic Research. The report is based on the work of an active staff of fourteen professional members, assisted by several special collaborators and a long list of consultants. The chief use of the report will be as an analytical handbook for students of fiscal policy. . . The book falls into two main parts.
Chapters 1-5 deal with the relation of war finance to its 'real' setting; chapters 8-12, with taxes of various sorts. Chapter 6 (Desirable Amounts of Taxation and Borrowing) and chapter 7 (Taxation: Needs, Limitations, and Possibilities) afford a transition. Chapter 13 (Government Borrowing) might well have been treated as an appendix." Am Econ R

"A very useful guidebook." A. G. Hart
Am Econ R 32:885 D '42 1900w

"This is probably the most rounded and carefully considered document yet issued on the problem of war finance and taxation in the United States. Behind it stand the skill and resources of the National Bureau of Economic Research pioneer in statistical studies of the national income. That does not mean that all its conclusions are scientifically unassailable. Much even of the statistical material on which such studies must be based is necessarily in the nature of estimate, while the recommendations of policy do not inevitably flow from the figures presented. The authors explicitly take sole responsibility for the opinions in the report." George Soule
+ New Repub 107:419 O 5 '42 550w

CRUMP, IRVING. Our United States secret service. 264p il $2 Dodd

332.9 Counterfeits and counterfeiters.
Secret service—U.S. Crime and criminals—
U.S. (W) 42-23374

"How the agents of the Treasury department carry on war against counterfeiters in their protection of the nation's currency." Subtitle

Booklist 39:131 D 15 '42
Books p40 D 6 '42 150w

CRUSE, THOMAS. Apache days and after; ed.
with an introd. by Eugene Cunningham.
328p il $3.50 Caxton printers

B or 92 Apache Indians. Indians of North America—Wars 42-805

History of the Indian campaigns against the Apaches and others in Arizona and New Mexico in the 1870's and 1880's of the last century, written by an officer who took an active part in the actual fighting. Brief bibliography.

Reviewed by J. F. Davidson
Canadian Forum 21:382 Mr '42 180w
Christian Century 59:498 Ap 15 '42 200w

"This book is written with an admirable modesty, is very readable, and gives many interesting sidelights on famous personalities, as well as some unflattering hints concerning red tape and professional jealousies. As to historical accuracy, it checks in all important details with the standard authority, Lieutenant

Britton Davis's 'The Truth About Geronimo.'"
K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 F 5 '42
390w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 28 '42 500w

CUFF, SAMUEL HORATIO. Face of the war, 1931-1942; with maps by James McNaughton and Robert Bright. 290p $3 Messner

940.53 World war, 1939- (W) 42-17285

Survey of events leading up to the present war, and an outline of the war's progress thru February, 1942. Includes 73 maps. Index.

Booklist 39:7 S '42

"For study courses in school or discussion circle there could hardly be a more succinct and factual guide book to recent history. The events prior to World War II are recorded with impartial objectivity. Of course, impartial objectivity is always one's own objectivity, not the other fellow's. But Mr. Cuff has tried to be rigidly honest in recording the face of the war, not its soul."

+ Books p20 O 18 '42 80w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 20w

"Valuable for background material and dates."

+ New Repub 107:150 Ag 3 '42 40w

"There must be many thousands of persons in this country who feel that they have lost their grip on history; that it has come too fast for them to comprehend. For anyone who has that vague feeling when the armchair strategists start discussing the events of the last 12 years, 'The Face of the War,' can be recommended."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 O 16 '42 700w

CULLIMORE, ALLAN REGINALD, ed. Through engineering eyes; science selections from literature; re-ed. by Frank A. Grammer and James H. Pitman. 166p pa $1 Pitman 600 Science, Technology 42-5148

"This book of pocket size contains extracts from the writings of 27 famous men translated into English by various authorities and in most cases bearing directly or indirectly upon the development of scientific and engineering thought. The period from 1000 B.C. to the present century is represented, but most of the space is devoted to the period preceding the birth of Christ. The longest article consists of interesting quotations from the Greek traveler and historian, Herodotus . . . but Homer, Archimedes, Caesar, Roger and Francis Bacon, Leonardo, Cellini and Ben Franklin are also allotted considerable space." (Eng N)
This book is a revision of a book entitled Selections for engineering students, which was privately printed by the Newark College of engineering.

"The compiler states that the selections have been taken from books which he has read and enjoyed, and a perusal of the volume furnishes convincing evidence of his own high taste. The book should prove of interest to all readers and be of especial value to scientific and engineering students, as well as to older and wider-read members of these professions."
C. M. Spofford

+ Eng N 128:71 Ja 29 '42 280w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:29 Ap '42

CUNNINGHAM, CHARLES E. Timothy Dwight, 1752-1817. 403p il $3.75 Macmillan

B or 92 Dwight, Timothy 42-5859

Biography of an early president of Yale, who changed that institution from a struggling college to a national institution. He was a minister, educator, author; a grandson of Jonathan Edwards; and held his office as president of Yale from 1795 to 1817. Bibliography. Index.

"The biography is a scholarly and interesting contribution to the intellectual history of the early republic, but it is also a very human document presented with charm of style and understanding of the personal qualities which drew people to Dwight during his life." V. F. Barnes

+ Ann Am Acad 223:235 S '42 750w

Booklist 38:367 Je 1 '42

"Mr. Cunningham has done his work thoroughly and shrewdly. His wide-sweeping research would have pleased his hero, and in [almost] every respect he has caught and recorded the color, the zest and the versatility of Dwight's career." Allan Nevins

+ Books p5 F 22 '42 1500w

"This great president of Yale College has long deserved the full length and 'clearer portrait' here given to us. But this is not just another scholarly biography, although it is indeed that. It is biography dressed in a charming style, that leads one, page after page, to live with its subject through the events of a long life as a forward-looking educator and as the outstanding leader of the New England churches during the dark days following the Revolution." S. E. Mead

+ Christian Century 55:600 My 6 '42 700w

Reviewed by A. G. Higgins

Library J 67:129 F 1 '42 80w

"Mr. Cunningham is nowhere sharply critical of Dwight. He does not point out that the man's thought is deficient in depth and in passion. On the whole, he admires the great president of Yale, and he does all that can be done to make his reader like him. His book is pleasant reading, written with good humor and not a little brilliancy of wit. Based in large part upon primary sources of information, it shows unusual skill in the techniques of research and also in the concealment of them. One closes the book with the feeling that here is an important task thoroughly and finally done." Odell Shepard

+ Nation 154:235 F 21 '42 800w

"There has long been a pressing need for a full-length biography of this great President of Yale, and we are fortunate indeed that the first one to appear is such an exceptionally good job." S. E. Mead

+ New Eng Q 15:365 Je '42 1200w

"Though Mr. Cunningham has succeeded in giving us a true and lively picture of Dwight as an educator, it may be felt that he has not sufficiently studied the problems of the man's extraordinary reputation in other fields." R. D. French

Yale R n s 31:851 summer '42 850w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN. Bancock murder case. 250p $2 Dutton

42-21435

Detective story.

Booklist 39:139 D 15 '42

"An admirable successor to 'Murder at Deer Lick' and 'The Strange Death of Manny Square' by one of those authorities on English." Will Cuppy

+ Books p25 O 4 '42 250w

"Roden's sleuthing is as good as ever, but one misses the homely backwoods flavor that made the other stories about him so different from the general run of mystery tales." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 O 4 '42 200w

New Yorker 18:76 O 10 '42 90w

"Good local color, some exciting situations, interesting if slightly overdrawn people, and a thrilling though rather obvious solution. Fair enough."

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:19 O 5 '42 30w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN. Death at the Bottoms. 286p $2 Dutton

42-10935

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p18 My 3 '42 250w

"Some minor points in the plot remain a bit obscure, but in the main the story is told with the clarity and skill for which Mr. Cunningham has become famous." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p17 My 10 '42 180w

CURTIS, ANNA L. Stories of the underground railroad; foreword by Rufus M. Jones; ill. by William Brooks. 115p $1.75 Island workshop

326.973 Underground railroad. Slavery in the U.S. 41-21620

"Authentic records of incidents and personalities in that system by which Quakers and other law-abiding persons conspired to defeat the operations of the fugitive slave law in pursuance of a higher law of humanity." Christian Century

Christian Century 58:1243 O 8 '41 40w

"Stories could easily be made into plays. Illustrations rather poor, but print is clear. Recommended." Dorothy Lawson

+ Library J 67:1068 D 1 '42 70w

New Yorker 17:146 D 6 '41 20w

CURTIS, MRS BARDELLA SHIPP. Sacred Scriptures and religious philosophy; a comparative study. 320p $3 Caxton printers

289.3 Mormons and Mormonism 42-14145

"This is a survey of religion from the Mormon standpoint. The author hopes it will be used as a textbook—in Mormon schools, of course. It surveys the course of Hebrew and Christian history, summarizes briefly the opinions of a considerable number of scientific and literary persons about religion, but never gets very far from the main issue, which is Mormon apologetics." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:1223 O 7 '42 160w

"The writer has browsed here and there in the fields of archaeology, sociology, the various sciences, and the sacred Scriptures—chiefly among the more popular volumes. Much of that which she has found—fact, fake, and fiction—is grist for her mill, viz., to write a book that glorified Mormonism. This modern Faith, in practice, is superior to this pseudohistorical apologetic." I. G. Matthews

— Crozer Q 19:257 J1 '42 60w

CURTIS, MONICA, ed. Norway and the war; Sept. 1939-Dec. 1940. (Documents on int. affairs) 154p $3 Oxford [10s 6d Royal inst. of int. affairs]

940.53481 World war, 1939—Norway. World war, 1939—Diplomatic history [A 42-542]

"This publication includes all the documents inserted in the Norwegian White Book, which appeared in three editions in the course of the summer of 1940, each new edition supplemented by new documents, the last one printed in July, 1940. The British publication is greatly enlarged by documents from other sources, British, German, even French and American. All Norwegian and German documents are rendered in English." Am Hist R

Reviewed by Halvdan Koht
Am Hist R 47:867 J1 '42 420w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:776 J1 '42 40w

Reviewed by T. K. Derry
Spec 167:384 O 17 '41 410w

Times [London] Lit Sup p487 S 27 '41 60w

CURTIS, WILLIAM REDMOND. Lambeth conferences; the solution for Pan-Anglican organization. 355p $4 Columbia univ. press

283 Lambeth conferences. Church of England 42-4225

"The major part of this volume is confined to a study of the first two Lambeth Conferences. Beginning with an account of the framework of the Anglican communion in its widest connection, [the author] outlines the steps which led to the calling of the first Lambeth Conference in 1867, and the part played by Bishop Whitehouse of Illinois, who preached the opening sermon." (Churchman) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is based entirely on printed material and deals in detail with the first two conferences only. A writer on this interesting subject is greatly hampered by the fact that the recorded proceedings of the Lambeth Conferences are not accessible, with the partial exception of those of the first conference, which were published in an abridged form. The author is not critical, nor does he often avail himself of the privilege of generalizing. The style is clumsy, and the proofreading was not successful." G. N. Tucker

Am Hist R 48:178 O '42 230w

Christian Century 59:386 Mr 25 '42 260w

Reviewed by E. C. Chorley

Churchman 156:19 My 1 '42 180w

"This well-documented study of British institutions, most interestingly told, gives knowledge not alone of the spirit and practices of a world-wide church but also insight into the British method of progress by constitutional evolution rather than by swift revolution." R. E. E. Harkness

+ Crozer Q 20:83 Ja '43 400w

"The book is mainly a plain and utterly unemotional rehearsal of facts; but the facts are built into an orderly structure in which each part has significance. . . . The book introduces many once prominent Anglican figures, but only a few of these take on distinctive personality, Archbishop Tait being a pleasing exception. With all its limitations the work is admirably done and at once becomes indispensable reading for students both of Anglicanism and of the ecumenical movement." J. T. McNeill

+ — J Religion 22:332 J1 '42 390w

"A valuable and exhaustive treatment of the development of the consciousness of world mission by the sister churches of the Anglican communion, of which the Protestant Episcopal church is the American representative." C. D. Kean

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 28 '42 200w

CURTISS, JOHN SHELTON. Appraisal of the Protocols of Zion. 118p $1 Columbia univ. press

296 Protocols of the wise men of Zion 42-15455

"[In this book] are published, under the auspices and sponsorship of the group of American historians, the results of a careful and objective investigation into the history and credibility of the famous—or infamous—'Protocols of the Elders of Zion.' These 'Protocols' have been repeatedly cited and drawn upon, during the past thirty years, to prove the existence of a sinister and world-wide Jewish 'plot' against Christians and Gentiles, and hence to stimulate and justify 'anti-Semitic' movements in one country after another. . . . Dr. Curtiss's study has been read and checked in manuscript by the whole group of sponsoring historians, and these individually accept and endorse his findings as completely destructive of the historicity of the Protocols and as establishing beyond doubt the fact that they are rank and pernicious forgeries." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

"No intelligent and fair-minded reader need be concerned with this document any further, save as it may still be used, unfortunately, to arouse fear and hatred in the minds and hearts of ignorant persons. For this service we owe thanks to the author. As a supplementary book to be used by students of historical method, however, though it displays the skill of a competent craftsman, it is unavoidably lacking in the revelation of living personages. There is nothing here of the very truth and inner life of history. And, therefore, it will not be very attractive to undergraduate students looking forward to the teaching and writing of history." E. M. Hulme

+ — Am Hist R 48:299 Ja '43 450w

Reviewed by M. Q. Sibley

Am Pol Sci R 36:800 Ag '42 230w

"Admirable piece of work. The book, exhibiting the soundest historical techniques, presents a closely woven and cumulative web of evidence largely circumstantial in nature, to be sure, but highly convincing to any objectively minded person. The Protocols stand as a bizarre but malicious hodgepodge of plagiarisms, fabrications, inconsistencies, inaccuracies, and stupidities that only the millions with established anti-Semitic prejudices could accept as an authentic document." J. O. Hertzler

+ Ann Am Acad 223:201 S '42 550w

Canadian Forum 22:188 S '42 360w

"The 'Protocols' have already been blown sky-high, torn limb from limb, deflated, discredited and unmasked as a vicious and contemptible forgery. But in view of the ninety-nine lives that any sufficiently libelous lie seems to possess, perhaps it is well to have the document once more subjected to critical scrutiny. The author applies a precise and scholarly technique to the analysis. The result is more devastating than any amount of mere indignation."

+ Christian Century 59:732 Je 3 '42 70w

"If Christians, particularly the clergy, will read this book carefully and then proceed with vigor and authority to make its contents known, they will do much to set back the menacing tide of anti-Semitism which threatens not only the Jews, but Christians as well. Like all fascist 'evidence,' the Protocols have been suspect. A lot has been written to show that they are forgeries, but not until Dr. Curtiss published his book did we have the word of a first-rate historian and scholar on the subject." W. C. Kernan

+ Churchman 156:17 D 1 '42 150w

"Dr. Curtiss has performed a necessary service with admirable skill and insight." C. T.

+ Current Hist 3:261 N '42 220w

Social Studies 33:288 O '42 30w

CURZON, COLIN. Body in the barrage balloon. 213p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Hurst]

42-16502

Detective story.

"This refreshing novelty might be called, without much margin of doubt, a burlesque spy story. As such, it is almost as impressive and several times as funny as the real thing." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 J1 12 '42 430w

"The Body in the Barrage Balloon' is the wacky, witty, uninhibited demonstration of Flight Lieutenant Colin Curzon's use of his leisure moments; and it's as gorgeous a bit of spoofing as we have ever seen. . . This superb opus is no mere boisterous burlesque. The situations and the talk have all the joy of the brilliantly idiotic. The writing sparkles all the way through. The whole book is a delirious delight. Hats off to this R. A. F. officer in his pilot's uniform!" Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p18 J1 12 '42 280w

"Light and terribly funny."

+ New Yorker 18:56 J1 11 '42 50w

"Murder is convenient peg on which to hang extravagantly amusing mixture of fun and thrills with hair-raising finish. Fantastic."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:21 J1 18 '42 40w

CUSHING, FRANK HAMILTON. My adventures in Zuni [il. by Fanita Lanier]. 178p $7.50 Peripatetic press, 1330 Commerce, Dallas

970.3 Zuni Indians 42-5912

"My Adventures in Zuni' is a reprint, from the 'Century Illustrated Monthly Magazine' of 1882-1883, of articles written by young Cushing sixty years ago. The reader walks with Cushing into the daily lives of the Zuni primitives, into their homes, into their fields and into their spiritual worlds peopled by Those who walk with the gods." Books

"The story is anthropologically authentic, ethnologically factual, and so simply, sincerely and charmingly told that it is entertaining and highly readable for the layman wanting an hour of escape. E. DeGolyer's introductory essay on the Zuni of yesterday and today, its people, their history and their traditions, makes a fitting backdrop for the drama of Cushing's life among them." A. N. Clark

+ Books p14 S 6 '42 450w

"E. DeGolyer, in resurrecting a story long dormant among the ethnologist's files, has made a distinguished contribution to regional literature. The ceremonial masks by Fanita Lanier are painted in color. Her use of Zuni symbolism is excellent. The bindings for this limited edition are the work of Hazel Dreis." Fern Maddox

+ Sat R of Lit 25:18 F 28 '42 360w

CUSHMAN, MRS CLARISSA (FAIRCHILD). Young widow. 309p $2 Little

42-7193

Story of the "man-problem" in the life of a young and attractive widow who feels her loneliness the more bitterly because she had loved her husband so devotedly.

Booklist 38:331 My 1 '42

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p17 Ap 12 '42 170w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 Mr 22 '42 170w

CUSHMAN, ROBERT EUGENE. Independent regulatory commissions. 780p $5 Oxford

353.04 U.S.—Administrative commissions 41-17004

"Presents a comprehensive survey of the legislative history of the independent regulatory movement in the US; a study that casts great light on the origin and development of that governmental institution. Gives the more important facts about the various independent commissions; their constitutional status. The third division of this highly important work is devoted to the British experiences, describing agencies which have similar function. The book concludes with an analysis of the basic problems relating to the independent regulatory bodies." (Commonweal) Index.

"It is perhaps too much to expect that any one man in any one book should combine both the historical and the functional method of approach, but this is manifestly necessary before final conclusions and recommendations can be made. Professor Cushman has done a splendid piece of work on the historical side. Despite the absence of the functional analysis needed for a three-dimensional view, the book is a most valuable contribution to an understanding of the commissions." F. F. Blachly
+ — Am Pol Sci R 36:138 F '42 1350w

Reviewed by E. G. Jennings

Columbia Law R 42:333 F '42 2050w

Commonweal 34:619 O 17 '41 80w

"The publication of this book by Professor Cushman has been awaited with eager interest. The author's work on the staff of the President's Committee on Administrative Management and his previous stimulating writings dealing with the general subject matter justified assurance that the volume would be a worthy one. The assurance has been amply sustained." Walter Gellhorn

+ Harvard Law R 55:700 F '42 1100w

Management R 31:224 Je '42 50w

"This volume is required reading for those who wish to be well informed in regard to the present structure of their government." W. J. Dunn

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 14 '42 750w

CUTHRELL, MRS FAITH (BALDWIN). See Baldwin, F.

D

DABNEY, VIRGINIUS. Below the Potomac; a book about the new South. 332p pl $3 Appleton-Century

917.5 South (W) 42-8376

"A native Southerner, editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, critically examines the social, economic, racial, religious, and political problems that he believes have been and still are holding back the development of the Southern states. His solution includes more tolerance and liberalism in religious and social la-sues, a greater opportunity for the Negro to raise his economic status, a stronger opposition political party, less differential in wages." (Library J) Index.

DABNEY, VIRGINIUS—Continued

"While the author is far from being a professional Southerner, his book is lit up by some of the best qualities that one would associate with an agrarian civilization: mellowness, urbanity, tolerance, and a quiet, insistent sense of humor." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic My '42 200w

Booklist 38:307 Ap 15 '42

"What Mr. Dabney does is all to the good. . . Some of the essays are thoughtful and illuminating, and indeed of the entire book it can be said that the parts are better than the whole; that is one of the qualities of good journalism." H. S. Commager

+ Books p3 Mr 29 '42 1850w

"Mr. Dabney has written a book that does little to satisfy our social scientists, and therein lies its greatest glory. On the other hand, we come out of the pages much colder than we went into them. The book just lacks punch. There is no 'oomph.'" George Streator
Commonweal 36:329 J1 24 '42 1350w

"Shrewd, convincing, and without apparent political bias. Recommended." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 67:223 Mr 1 '42 80w

Reviewed by W. J. Gold

Nation 154:633 My 30 '42 650w

"His style is that of a journalist rather than a literary man, and at times I had the feeling that some of his chapters would read better in a newspaper or a magazine than between board covers. Further, his book lacks the profundity of Mr. Cash's bold and at least partly successful effort to analyze the Southern temperament, as it also lacks the sheer brilliance of Clarence J. Cason's '90' in the Shade,' one of the most acute studies of the South ever made. But these criticisms do not impair the value of the present work as an honest and careful piece of reporting, which is easy to read, accurate, sensible and balanced in its judgments." Herschel Brickell

+ N Y Times p1 My 10 '42 1300w

Pratt p22 O '42

Reviewed by H. W. Odum

Sat R of Lit 25:7 Ap 4 '42 950w

"Here is a thoughtful, balanced picture of the south by a well-known newspaper man."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 My '42 250w

"Mr. Dabney has written a very interesting book about the new South. And it is a very helpful book, because it is so realistic. He makes clear that the sleepy ol' South is not merely sleepy nor is it today exclusively a region of romance. He does not omit present-day flaws in Southern civilization, but discusses in a very frank fashion the stubborn obstacles to a balanced civilization and progress: the economic conditions, the race issue, 'Barriers to the Ballot,' low standards of education which, however, are slowly being raised, political chicanery and 'mountebankery' and other afflictions." E. W. Knight

+ Social Forces 21:113 O '42 400w

"This readable volume, characterized by a facile journalistic style, will assist greatly in the education of 'professional southerners,' community leaders, average citizens and politicians. They should find this book easy to take because it presents a picture of progress made since the genesis of the movement for southern regional development little more than a decade ago. It also makes an integrated statement of objectives yet to be attained." W. W. Alexander

+ Survey G 31:365 Ag '42 550w

Wis Lib Bul 38:83 My '42

DADE, HARRY ARTHUR. Letters of Harry Arthur Dade of Kew, Surrey, England, to his refugee son. 191p il $2.50 Univ. of N.Mex. press

940.5342 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English 42-19539

"A World War veteran, a scientist, and now a commander in British Home Guard, writes weekly to John, his eight-year-old son, a somewhat heedless but manly and self-reliant boy living with foster parents in New Mexico. The letters, detailed and with warm charm in manner and style, personalize and clarify daily lives of the British people during the bombings of 1940-41." Library J

"Writing honestly to one child, Harry Dade unconsciously produces something of which we are sharply in need: a pattern for writing to children away from home, even a world away in time of war."

+ Books p18 Ja 17 '43 450w

"Recommended for all libraries." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 67:627 J1 '42 90w

D'AGOSTINO, GUIDO. Hills beyond Manhattan. 297p $2.50 Doubleday

42-206

Novel about a young French architect in the United States, and his attempt to adjust himself to the American way of life. While working on the country house of an American manufacturer, Chambord becomes interested in the struggles of the country workmen on the estate, and their attempt to thwart the wealthy people from the city who want to found a hunt club in the valley. Because he is on the side of the villagers Chambord sees more of Sheila Stewart, and eventually his Americanization is complete.

"Though there is a case for those who would quarrel with the author for his choice of characters, which, while they are recognizable American types, may not be as generally typical as the author seems to think, it cannot be denied that in his choice of the drama between the haves and the have-nots of the community, he presents in miniature the chief battle of our time. The fact that his French hero finds salvation among the villagers is a challenging comment on what Europe can best understand and appreciate in America." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Books p5 Ja 25 '42 700w

"The author buries his 'message' skillfully in a story that runs along easily and holds your interest to the end."

+ New Repub 106:214 F 9 '42 80w

"Many of D'Agostino's social and political deductions are presented with simple clarity. How much his writing would gain if it were less accommodating, and how much it might lose seems hard to tell, as his short-cuts to happiness have a great charm. However, I think that there is much in this story important enough to call for a more thorough development of his characters and ideas." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 18 '42 750w

"Sincere, though awkwardly done."

+ New Yorker 17:67 Ja 24 '42 70w

"Guido D'Agostino is successful in portraying the more earthy women in 'Hills Beyond Manhattan'; the spiritual Judy Warren does not emerge as clear a personality. But on the whole, the women as well as the men in this novel are convincingly alive."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 18 '42 420w

DAHLBERG, GUNNAR. Race, reason and rubbish; a primer of race biology; tr. from the Swedish by Lancelot Hogben. 240p il $2.25 Columbia univ. press [8s 6d Allen, G]

575.1 Heredity

[A 42-3975]

A popular exposition of the science of race biology, particularly in relation to the beliefs held by Nazis concerning the superiority of the Aryan race. Author is a Scandinavian scholar.

"Anyone who is still looking for a book by an author who is obviously intelligent, informed and balanced by a perfectly impartial objectivity will find in this volume an adequate recompense for all of the weary hours of wading through entertaining but meaningless junk and narrow prejudiced dissertations which reflect the natural confusion of tongues rised from our maniacal degree of educational specialization. The purpose of the book is to evaluate our knowledge of the race problem as it relates to man. The author does not dash headlong into that subject, but devotes over half of his space to a clear, concise and delightfully humanized exposition of the fundamentals of genetics." J. McA. Kater

+ Commonweal 37:308 Ja 8 '43 550w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
New Statesman & Nation 24:26 Jl 11 '42 750w
Times [London] Lit Sup p350 Jl 18 '42 200w

DAICHES, DAVID. Virginia Woolf. (Makers of modern literature) 169p $1.50 New directions

B or 92 Woolf, Virginia (Stephen) 42-18036

A critical and literary analysis of the works of Virginia Woolf, including a few biographical details of her life. The author is a young American critic and lecturer on modern literature at the University of Chicago. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Daiches's study is a useful one. It is in the highest degree helpful to have Mrs. Woolf's problems as an artist so illuminatingly defined, her techniques so painstakingly catalogued and evaluated. Nor is Dr. Daiches's book a study of technique in a narrow sense. It is informed with insight into the relation of technical problems to currents of thought and feeling in the writer's time. The book is a competent and intelligent guide to Mrs. Woolf's work and says as much, perhaps, about that work as a handbook of its kind could. It is doubtful, however, whether Mr. Daiches's approach is the most fruitful one for a writer as personal and elusive as Mrs. Woolf." Howard Doughty
+ — Books p27 S 27 '42 600w

"Brilliant is the jacket's word for Mr. Daiches. Happily his is a brilliance that illuminates more often than it dazzles, and no one still in doubt as to precisely what Virginia Woolf was driving at can remain so after Mr. Daiches' commentary. . . Mr. Daiches, while never writing down to the level of any particular reader, and while respecting the mystery of genius, implies no mystery where none is, thus making his personally conducted tour a delight for all, and they will be many who care to follow." Robert Finch

+ Canadian Forum 22:244 N '42 2650w
"This is a judicial, well-mannered, and illuminating book on Virginia Woolf." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 S 26 '42 480w

Reviewed by David Burnham
Commonweal 36:567 O 2 '42 400w

Reviewed by H. I. A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p3 O 16 '42 250w

Reviewed by Louis Kronenberger
Nation 155:382 O 17 '42 500w

Reviewed by O. H. Dunbar
New Repub 107:472 O 12 '42 180w

"It is perceptive, thoughtful, and lucid, if a shade too generous in the face of Virginia Woolf's glaring limitations. Mr. Daiches stresses far too lightly the plain fact that Mrs. Woolf, an exquisite writer, possibly even a genius, employed the resources of her virtuoso technique on a sadly limited segment of experience. She will remain minor simply because she did not know enough kinds of people. Nevertheless, Mr. Daiches' compact little book is the best job yet done on its subject." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 18:54 Ag 8 '42 180w
Time 40:78 Ag 17 '42 700w

DAILY, STARR, pseud. Release. 234p $2 Harper

248 Conversion 42-9997

"This is an intimately personal account of a mystical experience. Some thing happened to Starr Daily while he was in prison to change the whole course of his life from confirmed criminality to social adjustment and inner peace. His story makes an interesting contemporary page in the great literature of mysticism. The classical steps leading to the final release and ineffable certainty are all here. . . There are many observations on prison life and hints for a more constructive criminology." Churchman

"As a study in personality and religion, it is extraordinary if not unique among the records of reformed men. It also throws a great deal of light on the administration of penal institutions and the minds of the men who are confined in them, but the main thing is its witness to the power of religion, whether in prison or out. This seems rather a conventional statement, but it is not a conventional book. Read it and see."

+ Christian Century 59:322 Mr 11 '42 110w

Reviewed by S. L. Riddle
Churchman 156:17 Ap 15 '42 150w

"Book jacket blurbs are often to be discounted, but the first sentence on this book's jacket is sober truth: 'This is one of the most strange and dramatic personal histories of our time.'"

+ Gordon Poteat

+ Crozer Q 19:252 Jl '42 300w

DALBIEZ, ROLAND. Psychoanalytical method and the doctrine of Freud; with an introd. by E. B. Strauss; tr. from the French by T. F. Lindsay. 2v 418;340p $9 (40s) Longmans 131.34 Psychoanalysis. Freud, Sigmund 42-3106

"A study of psychoanalysis and the writings of Freud. Dr. Dalbiez believes that Freud made no clear distinction between psychoanalytic method and doctrine and that he failed to present his beliefs convincingly. Dr. Dalbiez seeks to bridge the gap between method and doctrine left by Freud himself and other writers by subjecting psychoanalytic method to psychological scrutiny and psychoanalytic doctrine to philosophical scrutiny and succeeds in demonstrating that the facts brought to light by psychoanalysis in no way destroy spiritual, religious and moral values." Publisher's note

"The fact that Freud is neither a theologian, a moralist or a philosopher should not blind us to his importance as a psychiatrist. For those who can disentangle his medical contributions from his tangential vagaries there remains much of value. . . It is this distinction, between Freud's doctrine and method, that Dr. Dalbiez has demonstrated so clearly. The result should be a better understanding of what must always remain a great achievement in the field of psychiatric research." A. C. Washburne, M. D.

+ Commonweal 36:66 My 8 '42 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p540 N 1 '41 1100w

DALE, EDWARD EVERETT. Cow country. 274p il $2.75 Univ. of Okla. press 978 West—History 42-15483

"[The cow country is] that gigantic oval, stretching from the Big Bend of the Rio Grande to the Canadian border, from the breaks of the Mississippi to the Rockies. . . The story begins just after the Civil War, when the mesquite thickets of lower Texas, overflowing with wild longhorns, began to send their mile-long herds serpentine toward the end of steel in Kansas, whence they clanked their way to the beef-hungry North and East. . . The great days of the trail drives north came in the 'seventies and the middle 'eighties, when the stocking of the high northern plains was accomplished. By 1885 inflation had brought about overstocking and overgrazing; and the terrific winter of 1886-1887 destroyed untold numbers of cattle, bringing financial ruin to many cattlemen. . . Since that time cattle raising has become a soberer but more substantial business." Christian Science Monitor

DALE, E. E.—Continued

"By assembling these essays in book form, the author has made available much interesting and authentic information concerning the cattle industry. The picturesque and intriguing style of the author, together with the relating of many humorous incidents, will make the book one of special interest to the general public as well as to educators. The Cow Country ranks in the first class of books on the cattle industry." O. B. Peake
+ Ann Am Acad 224:229 N '42 450w

"The book has much in its favor, but most of what he has to say has already been covered pretty thoroughly—and in many instances somewhat more ably—by other writers."

Books p14 O 11 '42 200w

"Dale, Texas-born, in early years a cowboy on the short grass of southwestern Oklahoma, later a Harvard Ph. D., professor of history and author of many books, is admirably fitted to tell this thrilling story succinctly, with enthusiasm but with restraint. . . Dr. Dale writes genially, and with charm; his evaluations of cowboy characteristics, especially of cowboy humor, are delightful." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 10 '42 450w

Reviewed by Hal Borland

N Y Times p4 Ag 2 '42 1000w

"Happily, Dale has not allowed a Harvard Ph. D. or a professional job to deaden his writing. Here, more than in his earlier and somewhat technical book on the range cattle industry, he aims at the general reader and makes a center hit. The cowpuncher he reveals is less lurid and less noisy than the fakes of screen and fiction but is equally fascinating and a heap more convincing." Wayne Gard

+ Sat R of Lit 25:38 My 16 '42 550w

DALE, HAROLD EDWARD. Higher civil service of Great Britain. 232p $2.75 (10s) Oxford 351.10942 Civil service—Great Britain

42-12517

"There are nearly half a million Civil Servants, in time of peace; but Mr. Dale's book deals with fewer than six hundred of this number. The 'higher' Civil Service of which he writes consists of the permanent administrators at the very top of the various public departments, together with a small group of lawyers and other professional men holding high specialist positions." New Statesman & Nation

"At the outset, it must be said that this is a most illuminating book. Written by a retired member of the higher civil service who recently concluded nearly forty years of experience with the rank of principal assistant secretary and a C.B., the sparkling pages of this 'inside' story differ refreshingly from the customary 'official' productions. Although the author respects the confidences of his one-time colleagues, he writes with the sure touch of one who has lived behind the scenes. The result is an exciting, diverting, and highly instructive volume, to find the equivalent of which one would have to go back perhaps to Sir Henry Taylor's more sardonic essay, The Statesman." L. D. White

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:763 Ag '42 1350w

Reviewed by O. P. Field

Ann Am Acad 224:219 N '42 900w

Economist 142:246 F 21 '42 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:784 Jl '42 10w

"The book is not merely factual and descriptive; it interprets the intricate relations of the civil servant, the Minister, Parliament, and the public, general and particular, with an artistry which is as delightful as it is just. Its urbanity, its humour, and its invincible common sense combined present the most truthful picture of the higher Civil Service between, say, 1919 and 1939 yet published, and it will not easily be superseded." Thomas Jones

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 2 '41 400w

"Mr. Dale has been himself a 'higher' Civil Servant, and writes with the knowledge of the intelligent 'insider.' He criticises his former colleagues as one who loves them; and the reader is sometimes left wondering whether he realises how devastating some of his criticisms are. . . Mr. Dale's book is repetitive and slow-moving. But it is candid, within the author's lights; and it deserves to be read by everyone who is thinking seriously about [England's] future." G. D. H. Cole

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:64 Ja 24 '42 550w

Reviewed by Thomas Lodge

Spec 167:470 N 14 '41 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p588 N 29 '41 850w

DALGLIESH, ALICE. Gulliver joins the army; il. by Ellen Segner. 93p $1.50 Scribner 42-24593

The excitement began when Mr Majolica bought a rabbit instead of an Easter lily. Before long the family had so many animals that they had to move to a farm in Connecticut. Gulliver, the shepherd dog, was Tony's special pet, and when Tony went to war Gulliver joined the ranks of Dogs for Defense, Inc. The story ends with dog and master, both in the army, meeting for a brief interval in England.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p14 N 15 '42 400w

"This is a story of today, telling of saving, Red Cross work, and all the live subjects which interest children, and written with humor and understanding. The line drawings contribute to the reality of the story."

+ Horn Bk 19:34 Ja '43 70w

"Plenty of action, humor, and friendliness. Modern to the last degree and a delightful picture of family life, with the dog as central character." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 67:1106 D 15 '42 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 13 '42 110w

DALGLIESH, ALICE. They live in South America; color pictures by Katherine Milhous; sketches by Frances Lichten and Katherine Milhous. 184p $1.20 Scribner

918 South America—Juvenile literature

(W) 42-13536

"In preparation for writing this book, the author took an airplane trip of 14,000 miles around the coast of South America. The result is a school reader which will be both interesting and helpful in the teaching of South American history and geography. There are quiz questions, things to do at the end of each chapter, sketch drawings, a frontispiece and a few illustrations in color; with a table of pronunciations which will be especially appreciated." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

"Informal treatment probably will invite reading for both enjoyment and instruction. . . A 'good neighbor' book in best sense. Several illustrations beautifully reproduced in brilliant colors." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 67:582 Je 15 '42 80w

Wis Lib Bul 38:141 O '42

DALI, SALVADOR. Secret life of Salvador Dali; tr. by Haakon M. Chevalier. 400p pl $6 Dial press

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 43-502

Autobiography of a modern Spanish painter now living in the United States. "Dali tells of his boyhood in Spain, his strange schooling, his first realization of his talent as an artist, his expulsion from art school, his courtships, and his quarrels. He recounts in full his early Paris days, his first exhibit, and his entrance into the surrealist movement. He writes of his trips to New York and his reactions to America." (Publisher's note)

"This is a remarkably skillful piece of writing. Despite its annoying and dreary stretches of mystification, assumed archness, childish exhibitionism and frequently unsuccessful attempts to play with words as if they were jewels or fireworks, it is impossible not to admire this painter as writer. As a whole, he succeeds in doing exactly what he sets out to do, conveys the impressions, gets the effects, puts across the thoughts and moods, communicates the snobishness, self-adoration, comedy, seriousness, fanaticism, in short the concept of life and the total picture of himself he set out to portray." E. D. Wolfe

Books p2 D 27 '42 2000w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 108:88 Ja 18 '43 1700w

"For some faddists who have in the past bought art as they have bought hats, because they had a Paris label, the book may have an appeal. The Narcissism which Dali so candidly admits seems to me the candor of the spoiled child who will take his audience into his confidence if that is the only way of attracting their wearied attention. Dali's revelations have been termed shocking, too intimate, sadistic, pornographic, revolting. But it seems to me that his advertising sense is at work here as in his painting. The same formula has been followed, the same academic wax-work has been treated to the same cosmetic decoration. This is not Buddha but a spoiled child contemplating his navel." Howard Devree

— N Y Times p4 Ja 17 '43 850w

"Reading 'The Secret Life' is something like spending a night locked up all alone in a waxworks horror show. It's easy enough to say it's unreal, repulsive, silly—but you know that these adjectives do not tell the whole truth. The maddening thing is that our antagonism to Dali is based not alone on the obvious fact that he glories in his own deviations from the norm but also on the fact that these deviations, in a mild form, are latent in most of us. That is why I do not think you can toss this book aside as exhibitionistic trash. It is a true human document and will remain so as long as paranoia is human." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 18:50 Ja 2 '43 800w

DALLIN, DAVID J. Soviet Russia's foreign policy, 1939-1942; tr. by Leon Dennen. 452p $3.75 Yale univ. press

327.47 Russia—Foreign policy. World war, 1939—Russia

The author takes two quotations as texts for this volume: (1) "Russian policy is a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma" (Winston Churchill); and (2) "Our policy is simple and clear" (Joseph Stalin). Index.

Reviewed by J. C. Shipman

Library J 67:1011 N 15 '42 110w

"A somber and most competent book; less personal than that by Mr. Scott, leaving out all discussions and descriptions not immediately pertinent to the main subject, it yet arrives broadly at the same conclusion." Hans Kohn

New Repub 108:123 Ja 25 '43 1000w

"With the limited amount of documentary material at his disposition Mr. Dallin has done an extremely good job of historical reconstruction and interpretation. His qualifications for this task were excellent. A Russian by birth, he has spent many years in Europe and is familiar with the main diplomatic currents of that Continent. . . . What emerges from this background is a scholarly, well-rounded and, in the main, very convincing picture of Soviet foreign policy during the last three years." W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 3 '43 1650w

DALY, ELIZABETH. House without the door. 273p $2 Farrar

(W) 42-17991

Detective story.

Bookmark 4:18 N '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p12 Jl 19 '42 250w

"The plot is an unusual one, and it is developed with all the skill that Elizabeth Daly has made manifest in her other books." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p15 Jl 26 '42 240w

"Muddled family affairs and a neat solution in this excellent story."

+ New Yorker 18:56 Ag 8 '42 40w

"Pleasantly exciting ring-around-a-rosy sort of yarn, with perceptive sleuth and good terminal wriggle to the plot. Pretty good."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 Jl 25 '42 40w

DALY, MAUREEN. Seventeenth summer, 255p $2.50 Dodd

(W) 42-12642

Story of young love. Angie was seventeen and was going to college in the fall; Jack was eighteen and drove his father's bakery truck. All thru one summer they carried on their innocent friendship, and when the time came for Angie to go to college, and Jack to go to Oklahoma to live, it seemed as tho a pleasant dream had vanished. The place is Fond du Lac, Wisconsin.

"Well done." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic Je '42 50w

"It is the story of a girl's first love told with charm, delicacy, and a sensitive appreciation of youthful emotions. For the girls its appeal is the complete sincerity and seriousness of treatment." M. C. Scoggin

+ Atlantic 170:149 D '42 180w

Booklist 38:368 Je 1 '42

Bookmark 3:15 My '42

"Maureen Daly has done this expertly with a technical skill that is above that of the average first novelist. To read the book is to revel for a few hours in small town heat, the slow pace of living, Fourth of July parades; little girls with their hair pinned up and their feet bare; the dimness of road-side houses where juke boxes play and young couples dance slowly together; potato salad and new crisp evening dresses, and most of all, the breathless, expectant sense of a seventeen-year-old, that the world is really beginning for her, that she has stepped into life." Anne Brooks

+ Books p4 My 10 '42 850w

"This Intercollegiate Fellowship novel brings to light a new and extremely gifted young author whose assets are her absolute naturalness and simplicity of style. Her story of first love as it affected the lives of two young people is told with an honesty which is both poignant and refreshing. It is written with keen insight and, as one would expect, an understanding of the joys and heartaches of youth."

+ Cath World 155:381 Je '42 180w

"Seventeenth Summer" is such an excellent beginning to a career that one hopes the author will not be led astray by the delusive splendors of Hollywood offers or the slick and easy opulence of writing for the women's magazines on their terms. For her work is at present at a turning point. If she continues to read life with her present honesty and an increasing depth, she will be an important writer; whereas if she devotes her undoubted talents for conveying nuances of emotion and all the tremulous, half-realized feelings of youth to the business of turning out a conventionalized series of boys meeting the usual series of girls, she will make a lot of money and get nowhere." J. G. E. Hopkins

+ Commonwealth 36:88 My 15 '42 550w

"The story of a girl's first love affair told with charm, delicacy, and sensitive appreciation of youthful emotions." M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 67:897 O 16 '42 30w

"Seventeenth Summer" deals with one of the oldest themes in the world, the theme of first love, and deals with it in a fashion which is so unhackneyed and so fresh that one forgets how often the same story has been told before." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p7 My 8 '42 650w

"Just a couple of kids in love, and Miss Daly seems to be about the right age to make it sound real and touching and quite important. Or maybe she's a good writer—more than likely, in fact."

+ New Yorker 18:77 Ap 25 '42 70w

DALY, MAUREEN—Continued

Reviewed by Rebecca Lowrie

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 My 30 '42 360w

Wis Lib Bul 38:97 Je '42

DALY, ROBERT WELTER. Soldier of the sea.
306p $2.50 Morrow

42-19443

Story of the British marines during the last years of the eighteenth century. The hero is the third son of a titled family, with an honorable record in the history of England. Peter was at first destined for the Church, but on the death of his two older brothers in war, took his place as a lieutenant in the marines. His life at sea vies for interest with his pursuit on land of the mysterious Felice.

Booklist 39:102 N 15 '42

"Here is a wide-ranging and excellent story. . . The parallels between the events of this story and the actions of the Commandos of our own time, while not labored by the author, will be obvious to every one. . . R. W. Daly's writing is very good for this kind of romance. His tone is always literate and he knows just how much character delineation is necessary in a story the accent of which is primarily on drama and excitement." Milton Hindus

+ Books p12 S 13 '42 550w

"Despite the familiar ingredients the story is more than a mere romantic yarn of the kind that do well enough for entertainment in pleasanter periods. Mr. Daly (now Ensign Daly) is a realist, and the story is serious at bottom, not out of place in these times we are living through. That he knows his eighteenth century, especially life at sea and naval warfare, those who read his first novel, 'Broad-sides,' which appeared two years ago, can attest. . . The prose of the first novel has lost much of its sweep and rhythm in the new story, and there is even a paucity of detail and complications. But there is action aplenty, and that of an honest and substantial kind, the kind, for example, that men in the services can read with respect as well as for entertainment." F. T. M.

+ — N Y Times p32 S 27 '42 550w

"So long as it is a ship with its seething life of forecabin and messroom that fills the picture, Mr. Daly is at his best. He can depict all that with the kind of dash and brilliance that make for real excitement. He can make it vivid and enthralling. But he seems to need the roll of planks under his feet. When he takes his titular young hero, Peter Dickoe, ashore, he runs into trouble." C. D. Abbott

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:14 S 12 '42 320w

DANA, HENRY WADSWORTH LONG-FELLOW. Dana saga; three centuries of the Dana family in Cambridge. 61p il pa $1

The author, 105 Brattle st, Cambridge, Mass.

923.2 Dana family

42-9864

"Account of nine generations of one family, resident for three centuries in one place. . . Mr. Dana's monograph traces the Danas back to 1571 and then gets down to the serious yet engaging work of telling the history of the Cambridge family. The first Richard Dana came to Cambridge in 1640, and with the passage of time his descendants became identified with this place somewhat as the Adams and Quincy families were with the village of Braintree." New Eng Q

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 5 '42
480w

"This is an important and interesting American family and Mr. H. W. L. Dana has done a valuable piece of work in preserving its history in such a charming and careful manner." J. D. Hart

+ New Eng Q 15:386 Je '42 420w

DANE, CLEMENCE, pseud. (WINIFRED ASHTON). Saviours; seven plays on one theme.
302p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Heinemann]

792 Radio plays

42-18569

Seven plays written for radio broadcasting. The "one theme" is the coming of the "saviour" in the hour of England's peril, Arthur, Alfred, Elizabeth, Nelson, and the Unknown Soldier.

"Were we to consider them objectively, we might hazard that at times they are confused by too many voices. On the other hand, the dramatic situations are developed sharply, in prose, and the poetry, often lyric in quality, comes either as climax or as a kind of musical heightening. There is no uncomfortable artificiality. The plays certainly are a contribution to the growing body of radio poetic drama." W. P. Eaton

+ Books p16 S 20 '42 170w

Reviewed by C. W. Durgin

Boston Globe p19 S 9 '42 100w

"Moving, prophetic, beautifully written."

+ Library J 67:630 J1 '42 20w

"There is good reason to admire Miss Dane's courageous trust in her producer, her players and her public. Without ambition like hers, this new art will make slow progress. But now and then we wonder whether ambition should not have fathered sterner stuff than some of the long, easy-flowing speeches of Merlin, 'as narrator,' and whether all the thirty characters in Remember Nelson can become defined and dramatic in the mind of the hearer and prove their necessity to the play. The answer does not rest with the reader. It must come from the hearers."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p368 J1 25 '42
1200wDANIEL, HAWTHORNE. North America, wheel of the future; with charts by Jack Rosé. 300p $2.75 Scribner

330.9 Economic conditions. World war, 1939—Influence and results. World politics. North America—Economic conditions

42-9069

A survey of the economic resources of the North American continent and the Pacific countries as they are and will be in the future if the United Nations win the present struggle. The author's thesis is that the United States and Canada will in the future become the industrial and economic center of the world. Index.

"Though not entirely convincing, Mr. Daniel's exposition offers interesting points of contrast and similarity to the teachings of Geopolitik." R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:772 J1 '42 60w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 67:223 Mr 1 '42 100w

"I don't mind Mr. Daniel's guessing about the future, even though I think some of his guesses are ill advised. . . What really terrifies me is Mr. Daniel's doctrine that broadly speaking, this is just another war, with no implication of sweeping social change, and that after it is over we shall go on much as before. If he happens to be right, then the same causes that brought about the first and second world wars will bring about the third and presumably the fourth and fifth and so on." Bruce Bliven

Sat R of Lit 25:9 Ap 4 '42 950w

Social Studies 33:240 My '42 30w

Reviewed by C. B. Mahon

Survey G 31:392 S '42 260w

DANIELS, EARL RICHARDSON KNAPP. Art of reading poetry. 519p $2.50; college ed $2 Farrar

808.1 Poetry. Reading

41-27847

Guide to the reading and enjoyment of poetry, by a professor at Colgate university. Includes many poems, quoted in full, as examples. Index of poems.

Booklist 38:230 Mr 1 '42

"I confess to finding The Art of Reading Poetry a not very satisfactory book. . . The best part of his book are the quotations, which are fortunately plentiful." Theodore Maynard
— + Cath World 156:375 Je '42 360w

"An admirable approach to the subject of poetry. The student, or teacher looking for aids to class instruction, will find it an intelligent guide, while the confirmed poetry lover, caught first by the charm of the selections, will find that his pleasure is in no way lessened as he goes on with the author's interpretations."

+ Wis Lib Bul 38:84 My '42

DANIELS, NORMAN A. Mausoleum key. 255p $2 Gateway

42-24972

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 D 20 '42 150w

"The solution of the mystery is, almost from the beginning, fairly obvious to the reader, if not to Cameron, and the plot is far too wildly melodramatic to be convincing." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p22 N 15 '42 160w

DARBY, ADA CLAIRE. Jump lively, Jeff! drawings by Grace Paull. 280p $2 Stokes

(W) 42-19439

On his wedding day Eugene Field is reported to have rescued a small colored boy who was doing his best to fight off three older boys. Also, it is said, Mr Field gave his bride, along with jewelry and other gifts, a poodle imported from Paris. These two incidents form the basis for this story of Jeff Davis Hickman, the dog Tootles, Jeff's Aunt Carolina and her numerous children, Aunt Jane and many other inhabitants of St Joseph, Missouri, in post-Civil war days.

"Jeff is an engaging lad, and his experiences are described with sympathy and sincerity. Reader, however, is never permitted to forget lowly position of the Negro in a white man's world. Use of word 'niggers' even though realistic for the period, is offensive and author's attempt to spell the dialect and pronunciation of Southern Negroes makes book almost unreadable by children of the age to enjoy it." E. D. Briggs

+ Library J 67:959 N 1 '42 70w

"Some librarians will wish that Miss Darby had not gone in so much for dialect, but story seems sufficiently strong to carry emphasized Negro speech of another day. Recommended for both school and public libraries. For boys and girls eight to twelve." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 67:959 N 1 '42 90w

School & Society 56:135 Ag 15 '42 40w

DARBY, RUTH. Beauty sleep. 274p $2 Doubleday

42-10299

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p18 Ap 19 '42 120w

"The story is well plotted and well written. The author has a sense of humor and knows enough not to let it run wild." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 19 '42 140w

"Unusual murder method—which takes a lot of believing—sundry pungent suburban peccadilloes, and engaging pair of detectives. Average." Sat R of Lit 25:16 Ap 18 '42 40w

D'ARCY, MARTIN CYRIL. Death and life. 180p $2 (5s) Longmans

237.2 Immortality

A discussion of immortality by a Roman Catholic priest. Part one sets forth the arguments for a belief in immortality; part two treats of the Church's teachings concerning the nature of the after-life and the meanings of hell, purgatory and heaven.

Christian Century 59:1394 N 11 '42 70w
Times [London] Lit Sup p412 Ag 22 '42 800w

DARLING, MRS ESTHER (BIRDSALL). No boundary line. 288p $2 Penn

42-13734

As a matter of discipline Madge Dean's father, finding his daughter selfish, cynical and arrogant, takes her back to Alaska with him out of the luxurious California environment in which she has been raised. The rigors of an Alaska winter and a budding romance help to bring out the better side of Madge's nature.

"An amusing narrative, with some lively impressions of community life in a still sparsely settled region." Lisle Bell

Books p16 Je 7 '42 150w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p20 My 24 '42 140w

DARLING, FRANK FRASER. Seasons and the fisherman; a book for children; il. by C. F. Tunncliffe. 70p $1.75 Macmillan [6s Cambridge]

639.2 Fishing—Juvenile literature [A42-4956]

"Dr. Darling tells story of seas and rivers about the British Isles, of inhabitants of the waters and use man makes of them." Library J

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ap 12 '42 90w

Reviewed by A. E. Brown

Library J 67:415 My 1 '42 80w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p8 Jl 19 '42 120w

New Yorker 18:78 My 23 '42 70w

DARNALL, JOSEPH ROGERS, and COOPER, VIOLA IRENE. What the citizen should know about war time medicine; il. by André Jandot. 237p $2.50 Norton

616 Medicine, Military (W) 42-50636

Describes the organization of the medical department of the army and navy in wartime. The first part of the book explains what has been done to mobilize medicine in the present war. Partial contents: Medicine takes to the air; Military psychiatry; Military sanitation and hygiene; Communicable diseases; immunization; The venereal problem in wartime; Wartime surgery. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:178 Ja 1 '43

"In those chapters which deal with specific diseases the authors are sometimes too technical to be readily understood by the lay reader, but on the whole the sum and substance of their writing conveys ample assurance that our fighting men, ashore, afloat and in the air, are receiving far better care than ever soldiers did in any other war. And that, we take it, is what the civilian wants and needs to know."

+ — N Y Times p6 D 20 '42 460w

"This work is outstanding in all respects. . . An excellent bibliography and index have been appended." C. B. M.

+ Spring'd Republican p6 D 25 '42 900w

DAUGHERTY, CHARLES MICHAEL. Street of ships. 259p il $2 Holt

(W) 42-6003

"The story of a boy from Connecticut who came to New York [in 1851] to learn the shipping business and establish himself as a merchant." (Introd) For older boys.

"The straightforwardness of the story is convincing; the events are so striking that a lurid style would have spoiled them. . . As for South Street itself, the special charm of that waterfront pervades the story, and inspires most of its line drawings of the period."

+ Books p10 My 10 '42 300w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 24 '42 100w

DAUGHERTY, C. M.—Continued

"Mr. Daugherty has the knack of telling a lively tale that sustains the interest; he knows ships and writes of them with contagious enthusiasm, and we may expect to have still better sea stories from his pen." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p8 Ag 2 '42 550w

DAUGHERTY, MRS SONIA V. (MEDWED-DEFF). Way of an eagle; an intimate biography of Thomas Jefferson and his fight for democracy; decorations by James Daugherty. 352p $2.50 Oxford

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas—Juvenile literature (W) 42-414

"At home in Virginia or abroad in France, it is the human, many-sided Jefferson that is here shown. Warm-hearted, devoted to his family, music-loving, a great architect, he appears as father and neighbor and Virginia gentleman. But the other side is not overlooked. He was all that we have mentioned, but he was, as well, the astute and farsighted diplomat and statesman, yet always believing in the sound instincts of the people. Great leader in democracy, his life is especially timely." (Horn Bk M) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 33:194 F 1 '42

"More history than biography, the figure of Thomas Jefferson threads its way through his turbulent and critical times, so that the impression of the book is of a panorama rather than a portrait. In those times every man mattered, everything he did counted. Concerned less with being right than with being himself, and becoming the first largely by refusing to compromise on the second, Jefferson comes on the scene already a man, less the subject of the story than one of its leading characters. . . The young reader has [here] a personal experience. The many pictures are typical Daugherty decorations, always in the throes of something. For that matter, Jefferson was, a good deal of the time." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 18 '42 650w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 18:35 Ja '42 80w

"For some readers there may be a superabundance of historical detail, leaving them somewhat confused. At times the style is overwritten and heavy. Lisitzky's Thomas Jefferson still remains the indispensable biography, but high school readers who wish to delve still further into this interesting period will find this full-length biography rewarding reading." Dorothea Dawson

+ Library J 67:133 F 15 '42 80w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p10 Mr 1 '42 120w

"Sonia Daugherty does her young readers the honor of writing for them as if they were her contemporaries. In Jefferson she has a hero peculiarly timely for the year 1942, and her portrait of him is intimate and full-bodied."

+ New Yorker 18:30 My 23 '42 90w

Wis Lib Bul 38:99 Je '42

DAVENPORT, MARCIA (GLUCK) (MRS RUSSELL W. DAVENPORT). Valley of decision. 790p $3 Scribner

(W) 42-23593

Story of the Scott Iron Works and the family that owned it—the Old Man, William Scott, Clarissa, his wife, their children, grandchildren and great-grandchild—from the panic of 1873 to Pearl Harbor. The story opens with the coming into the family home in Old Allegheny of Mary Rafferty, Irish "tween-maid," who later came to be closest friend, counselor and mainstay of the best among the Scotts.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (11) B & T (1) N Y Times (11) PW (1) RB (2)

Booklist 39:102 N 15 '42

"When you stop to think, it is appalling to realize what Marcia Davenport must have known, to write this novel of Pittsburgh, England, Czechoslovakia and people who have lived in these and other places. Because Mrs. Davenport is a story-teller as well as a writer who savors life and is curious about its differing colors and patterns, this is a realization that comes to you only after you have finished this rich and well-knit story, which sweeps you forward through the vivid course of five generations with no impediments of erudition. 'The Valley of Decision' is a novel in the spacious tradition whereby your circle of friends and range of experience are widened; it is, moreover, as enjoyable as it is distinguished." Mary Ross

+ Books p4 O 25 '42 1450w

"One would need the patience of Job to read the 788 pages of Marcia Davenport's interminable novel. To keep one's interest from flagging the author dishes up for us murder, suicide, adultery, fornication, prostitution, difficult pregnancies—all sprinkled with a profusion of 'hells' and 'damns.'" B. L. Conway
— Cath World 156:505 Ja '43 270w

"[The author's] choice of detail is vivid and effective. She has a seeing eye, an understanding heart and a surgeon's touch. At times the sweep of the plot is almost too broad, and requires all the novelist's craftsmanship to hold it within bounds." L. E. Cannon
+ Christian Century 59:1493 D 2 '42 460w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.

Commonweal 37:47 O 30 '42 490w

Nation 155:692 D 19 '42 300w

"In the vast scope and crystalline detail of 'The Valley of Decision,' Marcia Davenport has achieved a truly monumental work which never for one instant loses its quality of stirring human interest." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p2 O 25 '42 1400w

"Every so often, reviewers (me, for example) announce flatly that the three-generation family novel is done for. Just about as often, and frequently the same week, a successful three-generation family novel appears. For instance, here is 'The Valley of Decision' written with such energy, boldness, and copiousness that I am forced to admire it, even though its pattern bores me stiff. I imagine it will enjoy a popular triumph, and it deserves to, for it is an honest and spirited, if somewhat repetitious, work. . . All in all, a sturdy, lively, not too incisive American chronicle, easy to read, perhaps a year from now a bit hard to remember." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:78 O 31 '42 450w

"It is a cavalcade of America, industrially, socially, and domestically, and in its awareness of the elements that have entered into the making of a substantial middle-class society, in its warmly liberal, yet firmly and intelligently held, attitude toward those elements it is one of the most satisfactory books to appear in some time. To be sure, it has faults. Its length could have been reduced by the omission of details or incidents too fully developed for the nicest proportions, its earnestness goes almost unrelieved by humor or laughter, and the relentless march of time and the generations tends to stride unheedingly over the bodies of individual characters. Its scope is such, however, that weaknesses which would ruin a less expansive performance are here reduced merely to matters for mild regret." Bess Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 25:15 O 31 '42 650w

Reviewed by Alden Stevens

Survey G 31:602 D '42 70w

"Author Davenport has packed her book with descriptions of the unfeminine workings of Bessemer, open-hearth furnaces, skip-hoists, cast-houses. The men who pump lifeblood through the heart of Pittsburgh come alive in her pages—Irish steelworkers of the 1870s, Slovaks and 'Hunkies' pouring in from the mills of Europe. Novelist Davenport's description of this hard, world-transforming valley of steel and furnaces is the most memorable part of her impressive work."

+ Time 40:111 O 26 '42 350w

Wis Lib Bul 38:186 D '42

DAVID, JULIAN, pseud. of DAVID L. MACKAYE and MRS JULIA GUNTHER MACKAYE. Three Hanses; with ill. and decorations by Warren Chappell. 284p $2 Little

Andersen, Hans Christian—Juvenile literature 42-20650

A modern novel for young people based on the youth of Hans Christian Andersen. Tho the two other Hanses in the story are fictitious and the adventures of the three are invented, it is a story "that might have happened" in Denmark a hundred and twenty years ago.

Booklist 39:52 O 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p26 N 15 '42 270w

"Equally good for boys or girls is an entrancing story about Hans Christian Andersen called The Three Hanses."

+ Cath World 156:381 D '42 110w

"Hans Christian's well-known traits of character, his humor, his wistfulness, his awkward charm, his never-flagging imagination, his self-esteem, all play a part in this unusual and romantic story of three Danish boys, highly different in natures, but devoted to each other. Important for its convincing picture of Andersen." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:429 N '42 100w

"Adventures of these three friends are melodramatic and unusual. Dickens-like spirit and atmosphere of old-time Denmark permeate book. Uncommon and worth-while." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 67:957 N 1 '42 70w

"Mr. Chappell's drawings are well matched to the text for distinction of style. Both serve worthily in illuminating young Andersen and his times." I. S.

+ N Y Times p30 N 15 '42 300w

DAVID, PAUL THEODORE. Barriers to youth employment. 110p $1.75 Am. council on educ. 331.3 Youth, Unemployment, Child labor 42-14018

"Concerned with entrance requirements for certain occupations; the practice of seniority; governmental restrictions upon child labor and youth employment; state and federal minimum-wage laws. It is the purpose of the book to explore the manner in which these 'institutional' factors operate, to assess their importance as barriers to youth and to consider the extent to which existing policies and practices should be revised to facilitate youth employment both now and in peacetime." School & Society

"Although the material is highly controversial, the author maintains his sense of proportion and objectivity. His approach to the specific issues between adults and youth seems almost too succinct and statistical, and yet his conclusions are always provocative and to the advantage of the young worker." M. D. Irish

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:789 Ag '42 300w

"In brief criticism, it may be said that this reviewer regards as unfortunate the extensive attention and space devoted to details of seniority, employment stabilization, and work-spreading programs. All this material has been more adequately and critically appraised in the literature of the field. . . On the other hand, however, it should be said that the present volume does an excellent job of pointing to the restrictive effects exerted by several highly important obstacles to youth employment. Moreover, the author's suggestions for changes are both practical and economically sensible. Finally, the volume is well written and well organized, and represents a highly worth-while contribution to the literature of labor economics." Dale Yoder

+ Ann Am Acad 223:246 S '42 500w

J Home Econ 35:49 Ja '43 370w

New Repub 107:206 Ag 17 '42 100w

School & Society 55:596 My 23 '42 100w

DAVIES, ARTHUR POWELL. American destiny; a faith for America. 120p $1.50 Beacon press

917.3 U.S.—Civilization 42-13538

"The author believes that 'not by design, but by necessity, the American people are moving toward world ascendancy.' It is because this nation not only began with a revolution; it is a revolution, and its faith in the freedom of man is the only faith which can unite the world." Churchman

"In a world gone berserk it is cheering to read a prophecy of good. . . Mr. Davies writes lucidly and fervently." John Cournos

+ Atlantic 170:146 S '42 100w

Christian Century 59:698 My 27 '42 110w

"The author's thesis is fundamentally religious, and this little book is full of illuminating ideas for both the preacher and the layman." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 156:17 Je 15 '42 360w

Reviewed by J. D. Kingsley

New Repub 107:204 Ag 17 '42 50w

DAVIES, JOSEPH EDWARD. Mission to Moscow. 659p il $3 Simon & Schuster

327.73 Diplomatic memoirs. U.S.—Foreign relations—Russia. Russia—Foreign relations —U.S. (W) 41-52060

"A record of confidential dispatches to the State Department, official and personal correspondence, current diary and journal entries, including notes and comment [from 1936] up to October, 1941," written by the United States ambassador to the Soviet union from 1936 to 1938. Index.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (24)
PW (12) RB (3) W (1)

Reviewed by S. N. Harper

Am Hist R 48:314 Ja '43 900w

Reviewed by W. W. White

Am Pol Sci R 36:795 Ag '42 260w

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic Ap '42 230w

Booklist 38:175 Ja 15 '42

Bookmark 3:11 Mr '42

"In a curious way this is a book to give heart to embattled democrats. It is another chapter in the tragic story of how our own mistakes and the mistakes of peoples like us have drawn the United States into a world war for the second time in a generation. But this chapter of the story is also an unargued but convincing proof that we learn from our mistakes, and that Americans and democracy both have a tough and puzzling vitality unsuspected by the totalitarians." Joseph Barnes

+ Books p1 Ja 4 '42 1300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '42

"Speaking generally, Mission to Moscow ranks as one of the outstanding sources of knowledge on the state of Europe during the years that preceded the German assault on the peace of the world. But its more particular interest lies in the view it presents of Russia. In this respect, while it contains no philosophical discussion, it is still another book that inevitably rouses reflection on the issue that is supposed to divide America and Russia so sharply that 'never the twain can meet.'" Alvin Adey

+ Current Hist 2:139 Ap '42 1350w

"Mr. Davies shows himself in these highly illuminating memoirs to have been a canner judge of men and events than many a professional diplomat. He took his job seriously, travelled about the country extensively, and talked with all conditions of men from Stalin down to the lowly mujik. The result—pieced together from his reports to the State Department, from his diary and from personal letters—is one of the best informed books to appear in recent years on Soviet Russia." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 20:571 Ap '42 140w

DAVIES, J. E.—Continued

"Davies' approach to the Russian experiment seems honest and sincere; and his estimate strikes a nice balance between Eugene Lyons' condemnatory Assignment in Utopia and the Dean of Canterbury's eulogistic Soviet Power. The author found Stalin strongly entrenched; was astonished at the extent of military preparedness; and predicted bitter resistance to the expected German aggression. Important, timely material. Should be popular." R. H. McDonough

+ Library J 66:1093 D 15 '41 100w

"Of the outstanding importance of Mr. Davies's book on his term as American Ambassador in Moscow there can be no sort of question. It is possible to disagree with his views. It is legitimate to argue that some of his conclusions are excessively simple. But no one can read his illuminating pages without a sense that his judgment is well balanced, his power of observation both sharp and profound, and the width of his interests remarkable." H. J. Laski

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 10 '42 400w

"The book was a mish-mash, unbelievably dull, of every opinion, left, right, and center, that has been expressed about Russia in the last ten years. With one important exception: on the Red Army Mr. Davies sticks to one story, that it was and is a highly efficient army. I'm delighted to give him credit for that. For the rest, his book is a confused muddle of uncorrelated impressions which, like the Bible, might yield proof for any opinion about the matters he discusses. Take the Moscow trials." Margaret Marshall

— + Nation 154:118 Ja 31 '42 1150w

"To me the charm of this book is first of all its acuteness. How well Davies understood, and how accurately he judged! But also pleasant writing, in a frank, vivid way, and the grateful homely references to his wife and children and friends. I knew Mr. Davies well and respected him immensely; but until I read this book I was not fully aware how extremely smart he is. Although there are some lines at which I have to cavil. For instance, I get tired of Mr. Davies saying that he is a capitalist. I'll bet Stalin got tired of it, and Litvinov and all the rest of the Russians... But these errors, are superficial, and I rate it a first-class book." Walter Duranty

+ — New Repub 106:60 Ja 12 '42 700w

Reviewed by Kingsley Martin

New Statesman & Nation 23:391 Je 13 '42 850w

"By its very nature this book was certain to possess compelling news interest and definite historical value. Mr. Davies, who was Ambassador to the Soviet Union from 1936 to 1938 and subsequently served in the same capacity in Belgium, sets down his impressions of Russia from the time when he entered on his mission to the present. He has been given the unusual and valuable privilege of publishing his reports to the State Department... The author conveys the impression of being a very amiable man. There is practically no spice of malice in his comments on men and affairs; almost the only objects of disparaging comment are Hitler and the Nazi regime." W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 4 '42 2000w

"'Mission to Moscow' is not really a book but a compilation of confidential dispatches to the State Department, reports to the President, diary entries, and personal correspondence. It would be silly to assert that it has either the news value or the human interest of Mr. Shirer's 'Berlin Diary,' with which it might superficially be compared. It is more a semi-official reference work which throws light on the circumstances that have lodged the Capitol and the Kremlin in the same bed and, incidentally, demonstrates the farsightedness and true patriotism of Mr. Roosevelt's whole foreign policy. It may well be contrasted with such a book as Sir Neville Henderson's 'Failure of a Mission,' the record of a man who, at the most charitable estimate, failed to see and evaluate the forces under his long, patrician nose, whereas Mr. Davies, merely a simple businessman without experience in diplomacy, guessed right and on the whole advised his government correctly during his entire incumbency." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:55 Ja 3 '42 1250w

"This is a book of exceptional importance for the understanding of the main international developments of our time. . . It marks the first time that the State Department has opened its contemporary files to the public. This fact alone gives the volume a historical value not surpassed even by Ambassador Dodd's remarkable Berlin Diary or Sir Neville Henderson's revealing Failure of a Mission." Michael Greenberg

+ Pacific Affairs 15:124 Mr '42 1100w

"'Mission to Moscow' is one of the most significant books of our time. It is a readable, lucid, timely and informative piece of work. As a reference source it will become increasingly valuable as the years go by. But right now it is indispensable to the expert and layman alike." H. C. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 Ja 10 '42 1100w

"Mr. Litvinov, in an extensive estimate of this book, which the publishers have used as a 'blurb,' describes it as 'the most important contribution to the literature on the Soviet Union.' It deals, it is true, with his own period of office, and the American Ambassador has an equally high opinion of Litvinov's statesmanship, but if we are thinking of the light which the book throws on Soviet policy, it cannot be said that this estimate is exaggerated." Bernard Pares

+ Spec 168:559 Je 12 '42 950w

Spring'd Republican p6 D 29 '41 1100w

Reviewed by E. M. Kayden

Survey G 31:258 My '42 460w

"A valuable and timely book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p266 My 30 '42 1450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:45 Mr '42

DAVIES, RAYMOND ARTHUR, and STEIGER, ANDREW J. Soviet Asia; democracy's first line of defense. 384p maps $3 Dial press

915.7 Russia, Asiatic. World war, 1939—Russia (W) 42-20635

A survey of the economic and industrial resources of Asiatic Russia and its place in the present international conflict. Bibliography. Index.

Am Hist R 48:409 Ja '43 20w

Booklist 39:68 N 1 '42

Reviewed by E. M. Kayden

Books p22 O 11 '42 500w

"Of course Maurice Hindus' volume on 'Russia and Japan' is by far better written, John Scott's 'Behind the Urals' is based on more intimate knowledge of the situation. But the new book by Davies and Steiger has a much broader scope. The others dealt only with parts of the subject. 'Soviet Asia' gives a comprehensive general description, well supplemented by a number of excellent maps."

+ — Boston Globe p19 Ag 10 '42 250w

Canadian Forum 22:252 N '42 650w

Christian Science Monitor p18 S 29 '42 400w

Reviewed by Jean Gottmann

Geog R 33:162 Ja '43 500w

"After the reader has discounted the enthusiasm and made allowance for the naivete he will find much to enjoy in this survey of a fascinating portion of the earth's surface." John Scott

+ — Nation 155:272 S 26 '42 650w

"A good book, painstaking and well written, to fill a vital need."

+ New Repub 107:357 S 21 '42 60w

"No doubt the authors, like most travelers in the Soviet Union, did not always enjoy the fullest opportunities for firsthand observation. They have made the best of the material which they did obtain; and with the aid of compilations from other sources have composed a readable and informative book on a little known part of the world. Its value is somewhat diminished in places by the authors' tendency to echo the style of Soviet official propaganda. One grows a little weary, even suspicious, of the stereotyped collective farmer who tells how he emerged from rags to riches. . . The accounts of the methods used in collectivizing agriculture and of the Bazmach movement in Central Asia leave out some essential facts." W. H. Chamberlin

+ — N Y Times p19 Ag 23 '42 1100w

"Good factual background material, but the authors, both newspapermen, appear to lean toward the Soviet viewpoint and may be a trifle optimistic."

+ — New Yorker 18:59 Ag 22 '42 60w

Reviewed by A. J. Grajdanzev

Pacific Affairs 25:494 D '42 700w

"Of necessity, for the canvas is so huge, the story is sketchy. Yet, the picture drawn by the authors is fascinating for its color, its little-known information, the promise it holds for Russia's distant future. The constant effort to tell the story in terms of the little man who inhabits and develops this vast territory adds to the general interest of the book. . . Like so many works on Russia, the book suffers from an overdose of praise for the Soviet system. Such laudatory generalities are introduced even when the authors present overwhelming factual evidence of Soviet achievement. The result is the weakening of the very case the two writers are trying to present." Mark Gayn

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:7 O 5 '42 600w

Time 40:80 Jl 27 '42 900w

Wis Lib Bul 38:185 D '42

DAVIS, ALLISON; GARDNER, BURLEIGH BRADFORD, and GARDNER, MRS MARY R. Deep South; a social anthropological study of caste and class; directed by W. Lloyd Warner. 558p $4.50 Univ. of Chicago press

309.175 South—Social conditions. South—Economic conditions. Negroes—Moral and social conditions 41-23645

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"The vivid snapshots and portraits of classes and cliques would be more revealing if framed in the context of other groups and types of social relations. Indeed, the two key concepts of caste and class are emphasized far out of proportion to their importance in a social anthropological study. . . The series of studies represented by the present volume bids fair to extend our knowledge of culture as a whole and of society as a functioning system. Significantly, the abstractions made are those relevant to a scientific conceptual scheme and not those of social politics. One gets a different insight into the nature of culture from museum collections and from the files of social agencies, and yet another from the systematic comparative analyses of living cultures as they function in communities. Sociologists should profit from such broad studies, for from them one gains perspectives that can never come from piecing together relics, hypothetical reconstructions, or piecemeal studies of single aspects of society, however valuable and necessary are the latter." L. C. Copeland

+ — Am J Soc 48:432 N '42 950w

"There is no other single book which does such an excellent job of portraying the social and economic systems of a community. Warner's masterly research will be distributed through six volumes. Lynd's famous 'Middletown' job does not give an adequate picture of social structure. Davis and the Gardners do a straight-forward job of writing and presentation without excess baggage of theory. . . Almost any sentence that Allison Davis writes is worth serious reflection and rereading. Many of his best ones are in this book." John Dollard

+ Am Anthropol 44:704 O '42 1100w

"One serious theoretical cloud hovers over the entire study: the unnecessary and thoroughly confusing distinction between 'overt' behavior and verbalization. . . On the positive side there are many things to be said. The book is brimfull of fascinating hypotheses. The discussions of clique behavior, particularly, deserve closer investigation; however, one wishes that instead of, or in addition to, the study of cliques through items in the society columns of newspapers the authors might have presented an intensive analysis of a single clique. Data more intimate than journalistic accounts are needed before we can accept the authors' statement that a man's clique mates are his 'real friends' upon whom he depends for help in emergencies." Robert Schmid

+ — Am Soc R 7:261 Ap '42 1250w

"As a contribution to our knowledge of sociology and interaction of a small, deeply divided human group, this book deserves high place." W. E. B. Du Bois

+ Ann Am Acad 220:274 Mr '42 650w

"Occasionally the authors labor the obvious, but for the most part they have written a penetrating study of the clash of race and class in the cotton country, and every student of the South can consult it with great profit."

+ Nation 154:405 Ap 4 '42 120w

"This volume, with its substantially more than 500 pages of presentation, is a distinctive contribution. It has some beautiful writing in it in many places and many accurate portraits, alongside much that is not well integrated and that seems often naive." H. W. Odum

+ Sat R of Lit 25:15 F 28 '42 700w

DAVIS, CALVIN VICTOR, ed. Handbook of applied hydraulics. 1084p il $7.50 McGraw

627 Hydraulic engineering 42-23681

"An engineering handbook representing the joint efforts of 18 contributors. Fundamental principles are given and examples are drawn from recently constructed projects. A knowledge of elementary hydraulics is necessary." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 39:133 D 15 '42

"Assembling such a variety of subjects within the covers of a book entitled 'Handbook of Applied Hydraulics' appears to be unfortunate and must tend to limit the usefulness of some of the important sections of the book. Only by an extreme stretch of imagination can the design of dams be classed as applied hydraulics, consequently the notable section in this book on buttress dams and the sections on earth, rockfill, and arch dams may well be overlooked by engineers seeking up-to-date information on these subjects. On the other hand, because the sections on such subjects as water supply, sewage disposal and hydroelectric power development were written to be included in a book on hydraulics, they present a large amount of information on the hydraulic aspects of such work, information that is difficult to find in other texts."

Eng N 129:103 N 5 '42 400w

DAVIS, CLYDE BRION. Follow the leader. 525p $2.75 Farrar

42-18360

A record of the life of a commonplace American from the turn of the century to Pearl Harbor. Charles Martel was a sickly, puny child who grew up to be a quite ordinary little man. But the World War swept him away from his middle-western home town, made him, most unexpectedly, a hero, and returned him safely and with a kind of self-confidence that made possible business and financial success in the years to come.

"The special quality of Mr. Davis's novel is a mixture of artlessness and irony. The artlessness is on the surface and produces an effect of humor without exaggeration. The irony is submerged and is far from being funny. . . Mr. Davis never hates his characters, as so many contemporary realists do; and the result is that we believe in them." R. M. Gay

+ Atlantic 170:144 S '42 150w

"Readers who may find the first half of the volume slow reading are urged to keep on to the second. Davis gets into his full stride as a story-teller with his master descriptions of Charley's experience on the transport taking him to France. His satire is subtle; in fact there may be some who will think Charley quite a nice little guy." Rose Feld

+ — Books p4 Ag 9 '42 1200w

DAVIS, C. B.—Continued

"Well, Mr. Davis, I never read propaganda novels, not that I'm averse in theory, but they're so awfully boring. It seems to me that you have pulled a coup; that you have written a serious message to your country in the form of a novel that's interesting and easy to read; that never once do you state an opinion and that you are even willing to be whimsical. For you have made Charley Martel so real, so unexaggerated, so nice when he's nice, that it is fun to think of all the self identification that's going to go on when lots of people read your book, untroubled by the face in the mirror." Dorothy Hillyer
+ Boston Globe p19 Ag 12 '42 900w

"Unlikely to be in demand with average reader." M. E. Clark

Library J 67:682 Ag '42 70w

"The section of this book that deals with Charles Martel as a puny, sniveling youngster in a small city in Missouri is so superior to what follows as almost to be different in kind; once Charley returns from the war (the First World War) and becomes a power in the community he begins to read like a smooth-paper success story."

+ — Nation 155:178 Ag 29 '42 100w

Reviewed by John Cournos

N Y Times p6 Ag 9 '42 1050w

New Yorker 18:58 Ag 22 '42 110w

Pratt p12 D '42

"The one hundred and forty pages about the war compensate for all that has gone before, and almost make up for what comes after. . . That such a flabby fellow could become a tycoon (Mr. Davis's word) may strain the credulity, but an uncarping spirit is necessary if one is to follow the course of Clyde Brion Davis's homely fairy-tales." Phil Stong

— + Sat R of Lit 25:11 Ag 8 '42 650w

DAVIS, DARRELL HAUG. Earth and man, a human geography. 675p il maps $4.25 Macmillan

910 Geography 42-16208

"[This book] is divided into five parts. Part I is a short introduction which traces the evolution of geographic knowledge and examines its present objectives. Part II, which is entitled 'Man and Environment,' is concerned with the distribution and the activities of man. . . Part III, entitled 'Limiting Effects of the Environmental Factors,' traces the influence of such elements as climate, drainage, soils, land forms, mineral wealth, and contact with the sea on human activity. Part IV, 'How Man Obtains His Livelihood,' is concerned with man's economic activities and their environmental basis. . . Part V, in the form of an appendix, explains map projection, topographic mapping, land surveys, solar rotations, and so on." Ann Am Acad

"In this reviewer's opinion [this] is now the best book available in its field. Although at times Professor Davis' style of writing is rather involved, the book as a whole is reasonably well written, and a careful choice of materials keeps interest and readability high. The selection of pictures, maps, and charts is particularly fortunate." W. H. Heicher

+ Ann Am Acad 225:251 Ja '43 400w

"The book does not pretend to contain all of geography or to be without slips, but it is a fascinating presentation of the subject that is worth the attention of every geography teacher." Mark Jefferson

+ Geog R 32:698 O '42 330w

DAVIS, EARL HARRISON. Birth certificates; a digest of the laws and regulations of the various states. 136p $1.50 Wilson, H.W.

312 Birth certificates (W) 42-18570

Information on how and where to obtain a birth certificate in each of the forty-eight states. For those needing birth certificates for entrance into defense training and defense industries, civil service jobs, etc.

Booklist 39:2 S '42

Library Q 12:880 O '42 90w

Wis Lib Bul 38:133 O '42

DAVIS, FITZROY. Quicksilver. 620p $3 Harcourt

(W) 42-22143

"A story of the personal dramas behind the drama of the footlights. It moves from city to city, from crowded railway coaches to noisy dressing rooms, from stage doors to catch-as-catch-can hotel rooms, as the two dozen actors and actresses in the company of Evelyn Navarre, 'the first lady of the American theatre,' troupe across the face of America in a road revival of 'Romeo and Juliet.' It moves also through the clash of temperaments, the crises of ambition and love and jealousy, that flower in the forced companionship of a theatrical company on the road." Publisher's note

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (8) N Y Times (4)

Booklist 39:138 D 15 '42

"'Quicksilver' is a long book, over 600 pages, but one turns to the last one with reluctance and regret. The enchantment that lurks in the smell of grease paint is not alone responsible for this; it is the masterly direction which Mr. Davis has given to this excellent production." Rose Feld

+ Books p5 S 20 '42 1000w

"There is a good deal of technical brilliance in this novel, and a good deal of fumbling—rather too much of the latter to carry the reader through its 620 pages."

+ — Christian Century 59:1495 D 2 '42 130w

"Though Davis has not mastered the form it is a first novel of unusual quality. Stage characters are well drawn, if his nontheatrical people are shadowy and ill-observed. Anyone who goes to the theater will like it regardless. Truest portrayal of stage today that I know. Recommended for limited purchase." George Freedley

+ — Library J 67:738 S 1 '42 70w

New Repub 107:650 N 16 '42 60w

"An initial literary effort of real merit and a novel of the theatre whose authenticity ought to interest Sinclair Lewis, among others. 'Quicksilver' is a valid and worth-while job that contains some of the best theatrical reporting in many days. . . Mr. Davis might be accused of an old theatrical fault—not knowing when his show was over. The book would seem to have carried greater impact if allowed to end with the tour instead of being carried through to the Hollywood variety of happy ending." Jack Gould

+ — N Y Times p6 S 20 '42 950w

"Although written with no great respect for the niceties of the English language, the book manages to be absorbing even to readers not overly interested in the stage. The author tells his story with that single-mindedness, so characteristic of theatrical folk, which makes of every town, for the actor on the road, a triangle between station, hotel, and theatre. The characters are developed largely through their attitudes toward their parts—a striking, and in this case wholly successful, literary device."

+ — New Yorker 18:71 S 19 '42 120w

"The story he tells, as Romeo and Juliet struggles through a season's tour of triumph and despair, is a strong dose, especially for young hopefuls, but its central values are the right ones. And he has peopled his book with characters who are real and make one believe in their realness as theatre artists. For this, one forgives a style that needs pruning, and more than occasional echo of other writers."

+ — Theatre Arts 26:730 N '42 220w

Wis Lib Bul 38:186 D '42

DAVIS, FORREST. The Atlantic system; the story of Anglo-American control of the seas. 363p $3 Reynal

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—U.S. Sea power 41-23738

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"It is well written, interesting reading, and has been provided with a good bibliography and index." Waldo Chamberlin

+ Am Hist R 47:820 J1 '42 150w

"The book is written in a lively style—too lively in places for strict historical accuracy. The general reader may rejoice in the absence of footnotes, but the serious student of politics will discover that this lack of 'scholarly apparatus' severely curtails the book's utility for reference purposes—a defect partially corrected by an excellent index." H. H. Sprout

+ — Am Pol Sci R 36:155 F '42 850w

"The book is based primarily upon secondary works and memoirs, from which have been extracted ammunition to defend the thesis. It is consequently a less substantial contribution to the subject than the Sprout volume, Toward a New Order of Sea Power, which went far more deeply into original sources and presented the material in a far more objective fashion. With those limitations, however, Mr. Davis' well-written and suggestive volume serves a useful purpose in bringing together much interesting discussion of one of the cardinal points in our foreign policy." R. G. Albion

+ — Ann Am Acad 225:240 Ja '43 390w

Bookmark 3:4 Mr '42

"Smoothly contrived, this treatise is not adequate as a popular guide to the political relations of the English-speaking peoples. It has too many gaps. . . . What Mr. Davis has himself observed (his two chapters on the war and aftermath of 1914-18) is well done. His view of Wilson is provocative. . . . As a substitute for references Mr. Davis offers at long, padded bibliography. What he wants known as his chief debts are acknowledged in a special note. But does it suffice? Nowhere does he include the great, labyrinthine collection of British Documents on the Origins of the War, 1898-1914 as edited by Messrs. Gooch and Temperley. Yet he moves through its mazes with immense aplomb and with an economy of effort which the professional student might envy." L. M. Gelber

+ — Canadian Hist R 23:209 Je '42 360w

"The intrinsic value of the book is not great; but its symbolic significance is great. It is symbolic, I fear, of an overwhelming deluge of books which is beginning to roll off the presses. A day will come—soon, one hopes—when victory having been won, the authors of these volumes will be ashamed of their intellectual soft-mindedness. But that does not matter. What does matter is that misinterpretations of the past may have dangerous and tragic effects on the future. If there really was an Anglo-American system which operated for the benefit of the whole world, what need is there of change? Why not continue the old system? Why bother about the peace settlement? Let us enjoy and bequeath to our children the glorious treasure of perfection which has been evolved in ages past. Unfortunately, continuation of the old system will surely result in a new world war before many decades are past." Albert Viton

+ — Christian Century 59:147 F 4 '42 800w

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 26 '42 600w

Reviewed by James Van Zant
Churchman 156:17 F 1 '42 270w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:569 Ap '42 40w

"Mr. Davis has produced a political-naval masterpiece that is as valuable as the best of strategic and tactical treatises. Civilians have here a manual by which to test public opinion and to understand vital problems of national defense against a human rather than a technical background. It reveals the tragedy of unsound, wishful, and malicious thinking, which, during the period in question, has done more to harm democracy than a dozen enemy battle fleets could have hoped to accomplish." Alexander Kiralfy

+ Nation 154:345 Mr 21 '42 900w

"Like all writers who find themselves dismissing the humanitarian-welfare view of politics in favor of the power view, Mr. Davis is ineluctably compelled to survey the whole world, searching for a firm foundation for the power he seeks to realize. But, fascinated by his title, 'The Atlantic System,' he never quite gets around to his tremendous job. This gives his book an inconclusive quality in spite of its pseudo-magisterial tone. Moreover, he at no point stops to investigate the uses to which the power he covets shall be put, or how, resting here on the infirm Atlantic Charter alone. Yet within the limits defined the book is one of the best arguments this reviewer has seen in a long time." C. H. Grattan

+ — N Y Times p21 Mr 22 '42 1250w

Social Studies 33:91 F '42 300w

Wis Lib Bul 38:11 Ja '42

DAVIS, FORREST, and LINDLEY, ERNEST KIDDER. How war came; an American white paper; from the fall of France to Pearl harbor. 342p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

940.532273 World war, 1939—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations (W) 42-20390

Papers on American foreign relations from the spring of 1940 to Pearl Harbor. Contents: When war came; Atlantic frontier—the Vichy policy; Destroyers for bases—all aid to Britain; Diplomacy in a "World-Wide Arena"; "White War" in the Pacific—Japan joins the Axis; Warning to Moscow; The Hull-Nomura conversations—War in Russia; Atlantic charter; The sands run out—Pearl Harbor; Postscript: The grand alliance. Index.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (6)
N Y Times (3) W (1)

Reviewed by S. F. Bemis

Ann Am Acad 224:203 N '42 380w

"There is much for the student in this book, much for the merely curious reader. Some personalized flashes are pertinent to the development of otherwise mystifying phases of policy; others just provide stage business. The opening, which cinematographs inside-Washington on December 7, reads like a thriller; the authors can well expect to be approached for movie rights to the first chapter." C. W. Morgan

+ Atlantic 170:140 O '42 330w

Booklist 39:29 O-1 '42

"This book, like Alsop and Kintner's curious 'American White Paper' of two years ago bears a strong odor of official inspiration; but there are plenty of revelations, and this may be as good a way as any of getting them into print at a time when more formal publication would scarcely yet be practicable. Whoever it was who guided Messrs. Davis and Lindley . . . made rather a happier selection than the unknown mentor who chose Alsop and Kintner. . . . This is a much more solid job, more carefully detailed, without the keyhole-column gayety of the earlier work, and with its new information filled out by thoughtful and thoroughgoing study of already available sources. It does not lack the sprightly, intimate touch." Walter Millis

+ Books p1 Ag 30 '42 1700w

"An excellent and valuable account of the major events that have shaped American foreign policy for the past two years. But if you perhaps expected to find a textbook of recent history you will be pleasantly surprised to find a kind of film in words. . . . It is a thrilling documentary film." Otto Zausmer

+ Boston Globe p19 S 23 '42 410w

"How War Came is a cross between the 'I saw it' books now being written by American journalists returning from Axis countries and the histories which will some day be written on the pre-war American period. Combining the best features of both types, it is easy to read and fairly thorough, although, perhaps, not always completely objective." J. G. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 S 24 '42 390w

DAVIS, FORREST—Continued.

"This volume serves a real purpose as a colorful review of these past two years. As an objective evaluation of our foreign policy it is less serviceable. The authors frankly admire the leading American officials in question—personally as well as in their administrative capacities. The fault, whether it be of skill in handling matters or in basic intent, is always on the other side. And no mention at all is made of the conditions that enabled the nazis to come to power in Germany or the Kwantung group in Japan to seize and maintain the reins of power. But possibly this is what should be expected of 'An American White Paper from the fall of France to Pearl Harbor.' The theme is that we did everything possible for peace." Edward Skillin, Jr.
— + Commonweal 36:476 S 4 '42 420w

"Both authors have studied American foreign relations with care and thoroughness besides being exceptionally reliable and well informed political reporters. They write clearly and with full understanding of the grave issues in which the United States was involved. Though as good journalists they do not let the narrative drag or miss any chance to enliven it with a picturesque touch, it is the knowledge on which the book is based that in the end will make it a valuable source for the serious student of American diplomacy." Alvin Adey
+ Current Hist 3:70 S '42 850w

"Messrs. Davis and Lindley are distinguished journalists and biographers. They have written a corking good tale which deserves wide reading. It is a true story. But it is not the whole story. This they grant. Its lacunae, however, are larger than they admit." F. L. Schuman
+ — Nation 155:273 S 26 '42 1500w

"A very illuminating book, one that helps to define our past and probably our future policies toward the world at large. The trouble with their white paper is that it has too many blank pages." Malcolm Cowley
+ — New Repub 107:260 Ag 31 '42 1300w

"The title is well chosen. This is a first-rate journalistic account of how the war came to the United States; it does not pretend to explain why it came. . . . What this book chiefly lacks is perspective. Even a journalistic account (it should not be called a White Paper) of recent events should take some account of the background of those events, and failure to sketch in the background factors leads to an astigmatic view of the foreground." H. S. Commager
+ — N Y Times p1 Ag 30 '42 1650w

"Mildly disappointing. In the sense that the authors have failed to reexamine the clichés of the period, but worth reading."
+ — New Yorker 18:58 Ag 29 '42 130w
Time 40:98 S 14 '42 1250w

DAVIS, FREDERICK CLYDE. Deep lay the dead. 304p $2 Doubleday

42-22575

Detective story.

Booklist 39:122 D 1 '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p16 O 11 '42 130w

"Good."

+ Boston Globe p19 O 28 '42 30w

"The story's detail of 'war effort' is worked out with plenty of convincing ingenuity." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p10 O 13 '42 120w*New Yorker* 18:92 O 17 '42 80w*Sat R of Lit* 25:41 O 24 '42 40w

"Good hunting."

Sat R of Lit 25:41 O 24 '42 40w

DAVIS, HAROLD LENOIR. Proud riders, and other poems. 86p $2 Harper

811

42-8441

Poems about the people of the American west, by the author of Honey in the Horn (Book Review Digest, 1935). "It is mainly regional: the landscape, nature, characters, experience of the Far West, from Oregon to Mexico. Mr. Davis divides the book into pastoral and narrative." N Y Times

"Rather heavy-footed the lines, but interesting for the portraits they inclose of the patient dwellers on Far Western hills. A native of Oregon, Mr. Davis in his boyhood herded sheep and punched cattle. The locale with which he is familiar is reproduced with considerable success." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 18 '42 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '42

"In his narrative poems he reminds me of the vigor and color and sentimentality of Bret Harte. Decent, desperate and disreputable people tell their stories of crop campers, steel gangs, Mexican sheep-herders. The violence of hard work mixes with the eroticism of the brothel. Mr. Davis could compete with Bret Harte, Kipling or Robinson Jeffers. There is characterization in his verse. The question is whether there is character to his verse. At the moment, I think, it is too much of a mixture of a poet-novelist. One should add that the book has to be read carefully, since it is considerably misprinted—one poem (an enumeration of grasses) has been printed twice under different titles." P. M. Jack

+ — N Y Times p4 Ap 26 '42 550w

"'Proud Riders and Other Poems' is a distinguished collection. It is distinguished not only because of the authority of material and concept, because it presents a locale, the far west of the United States, in singularly fresh and vivid terms; but because it has a peculiarly intense quality of emphasis on a personal landscape. It is as if a man talked to himself about the things and the people he loved, seeing again with clear eyes those colors and forms and outlines which affected him, relating lovingly and without self-consciousness common insights raised to new poignancy and significance." S. H. Hay
+ Sat R of Lit 25:15 Ag 15 '42 340w

DAVIS, HAROLD THAYER. Analysis of economic time series. 620p $5 Principia

519 Time series analysis. Economics, Mathematical 42-1354

"In addition to the problems of statistics in general, time series present many special questions. To meet the peculiar problems of observations ordered in time, whether these be of economic, biological, astronomical, or meteorological character, a great variety of statistical methods have been devised. . . . These varied methods, some good, some bad, have been described in articles scattered through journals dealing with all sorts of subjects, and several distinct literatures have grown up, largely independent of one another, without the benefit of mutual criticism and articulation with more fundamental considerations common to all of them. It is therefore a distinct service to have brought together in one volume a great part of the statistical methods that have been applied to time series. The impressive volume by Professor Davis does this, and much more. It is concerned not only with the technique of analysis but also with the results of actual analyses of many historical series, and further, with the construction of an economic-historical-political cosmogony based on the statistical findings." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by Harold Hotelling

+ Ann Am Acad 221:219 My '42 1200w

"It is doubtful if many sociologists will read The Analysis of Economic Time Series in its entirety, for its second chapter, The Technique of Harmonic Analysis, will stop most. And until sociologists have more data available on at least an annual basis, they probably will not have occasion to apply many of the methods described. However, this book may be profitably sampled and with pleasure for the author displays a wide range of familiarity with economic history, treats carefully the logic of scientific research, and enlivens his presentation with quotations from Lewis Carroll." M. J. Hagood

Social Forces 21:119 O '42 240w

DAVIS, HERBERT JOHN. Stella; a gentlewoman of the eighteenth century. 103p $1.75 Macmillan

B or 92 Johnson, Esther. Swift, Jonathan. 42-50363

"In the history of the literature of England there is no more peculiar incident than the friendship between Jonathan Swift and Esther Johnson, the 'Stella' of his poems. . . Dr. Davis, without offering any theories of his own, reviews their strange friendship for us. . . Dr. Davis is president of Smith College and engaged on a comprehensive edition of Swift's prose." N Y Times

"Being limited in time and space by the exigencies of the lecture-form, Mr. Davis has to assume a great deal of detailed knowledge of the history of Swift's friendship with Stella, of her social position in Dublin and of her activities in the world of politics and ecclesiastical affairs. To those readers who possess this knowledge his sensitive and subtle study will be a delight." S. C. Chew

+ Books p12 Ja 10 '43 700w

Reviewed by Thomas Lask
N Y Times p8 D 27 '42 550w

DAVIS, HUGH O. America's trade equality policy; introd. by William S. Culbertson. 137p $3 Am. council in public affairs

337 Favored nation clause. U.S.—Commercial policy. Tariff—U.S. 42-10538

"Dr. Davis's book traces the development of the most favored nation clause in the United States from the first commercial agreement signed with France in 1778 to the application of the clause to the trade agreements negotiated by Secretary Hull under the Reciprocal Trade Agreements act of 1934." Am Econ R

"Dr. Davis's book shows careful scholarship, but it is not easy to read. The first part of the book in particular is burdened with long, and to some extent repetitious, quotations phrased in legal language and printed in type so fine as to tax the patience of most readers. The discussion of the application of the most favored nation clause in the Hull trade agreements program is brief and in some cases unsatisfactory." Carl Kreider

+ — Am Econ R 32:614 S '42 550w

Reviewed by J. D. Larkin
Am Pol Sci R 36:788 Ag '42 550w

"More careful editing and revision would have enhanced the merit of this otherwise scholarly work." P. S. Peirce

+ — Ann Am Acad 223:244 S '42 360w

DAVIS, JOHN MERLE. Cuban church in a sugar economy; a study of the economic and social basis of the Evangelical church in Cuba. 144p $1; pa 75c Int. missionary council

277.291 Cuba—Church history. Missions—Cuba. 42-9991

"Survey of the economic problem of the evangelical churches in Cuba. . . This is the second in a series of four volumes—one on Mexico already published, two on Jamaica and Puerto Rico now in process—in which Dr. Davis presents the results of his careful surveys of evangelical missions in Latin American countries of the Caribbean area. It is essential, he believes, that the churches of Cuba (as of any other country) become self-sustaining. His research and analysis show why they are not; his constructive suggestions indicate how they may become so." Christian Century

"The general reader who is interested in social and economic problems in one of our nearest Latin American neighbors will find valuable information in Mr. Davis' book. Others will find added interest in his fresh and unbiased treatment of some of the underlying problems of the Cuban Evangelical Church." W. S. Rycroft

+ Ann Am Acad 222:238 Jl '42 650w

+ Christian Century 59:466 Ap 8 '42 130w

DAVIS, JULIA (MRS PAUL WEST). Sun climbs slow. 255p $2.50 Dutton

42-5122

An American woman, after losing her husband in Spain, adopted two Spanish refugee children, and slowly but efficiently taught the six-year-old boy the ways of normal living. The baby sister remembered very little of the war, so was a different problem. The children's father, failing in an attempt to provide a home for his family in Mexico, joined forces with the children and made Tia Jean their stepmother.

Booklist 38:330 My 1 '42

"This is a story told with emotion, but without sentimentality. The exasperating willfulness of the children, as well as their agony, is affectionately expressed. The character of Jean Curtis has a truth and simplicity not quite realized in Jaime Aineto, but they are all real, breathing people, whose destiny you want to know." Diana Forbes-Robertson

+ Books p7 Mr 8 '42 650w

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 29 '42 700w

Reviewed by H. R. Burdett

Library J 67:224 Mr 1 '42 50w

"One feels that the author who herself has undertaken the care of two Spanish refugee children, must have put a great deal of her own experience into this book. However, her forceful description of the war in Spain proves that she is a writer who can visualize far more than what she has witnessed." Mari-anne Hauser

+ N Y Times p16 Mr 15 '42 800w

"A sensitive and delicate story. . . The background of the Spanish civil war is done convincingly; the small boy and girl are themselves interesting, which is unusual for children in novels. On the whole, an appealing book."

+ New Yorker 18:63 Mr 7 '42 60w

"Miss Davis's treatment of these developments, difficult and delicate, is all that could be desired. Her writing, without being in itself a resounding thing, has all the simple eloquence of truth-telling. Jaime, and Jean, and the children, and others glimpsed more briefly, are parts of a testament of courage, just as the title itself is part of that courageous poem by Clough which Winston Churchill quoted in one of his speeches." R. L. Nathan

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 Mr 21 '42 360w

Wis Lib Bul 38:87 My '42

DAVIS, KENNETH SYDNEY. In the forests of the night. 302p $2.50 Houghton

(W) 42-7194

Psychological study of a drunkard, a United States forester of fine potentialities, whose courage had been weakened by a war neurosis, dating back to the European war. The place is northern Minnesota, and the crisis comes when an investigator sent out by the government to look into Kendall's derelictions, arrives in the midst of the man's last big spree. The end is absolute tragedy.

"The story is told with skill, with promise: if it were not, the reader would experience much less solicitude for the writer who had to live with it and to carry the burden it must have been. Clearly, it is a thing that a man would have to get off his chest and out of his system, on pain of going the way his characters go; and that, for a writer, would mean that it had to be written. Whether it had also to be published—that is not for the honest bystander to judge." Wilson Follett

Atlantic Ap '42 250w

"This first novel is a remarkable story, one suggesting a tour de force; but it is better than a mere tour de force. It has depth, as well as strength. . . For all its symbolism, this is a very modern, fast-paced novel, moving with the speed of a James M. Cain story, with action aplenty for all its greater seriousness. From the point of view of perfection, it might well have been reduced by a third, cut to novelette length. . . There is some suggestion of stuffing. But the stuffing is palatable stuffing; the criticism is offered by way of suggestion in reviewing a superior first novel. Mr. Davis should go on from here. He is one with whom it appears advisable to get in on the ground floor." F. T. Marsh

DAVIS, K. S.—Continued

+ — Books p4 Mr 29 '42 750w

Reviewed by S. E. Hyman

New Repub 106:643 My 11 '42 550w

"Mr. Davis's first novel makes its mark as a strong characterization of an unusual man against an unusual background. . . It is admittedly difficult to judge a first novel with an eye to the future—if that should be done at all. Mr. Davis overemphasizes and overwrites almost all of the time, as young writers are apt to do. His style is always going beyond his material and milieu. . . I find the prose style the only unresolved and unsound matter in the novel. The sense of character is psychologically satisfying, the environment is credible, naturally; and the story is a thriller. But the writing is good only when it is simple, in the monotone of Minnesota, not in the mixed jargon of everything that Mr. Davis has read." P. M. Jack

+ — N Y Times p6 Mr 22 '42 700w

"The flow of interesting first novels has thinned sadly during the last two years. The times are hardly shaped to nourish an impulse to start a writing career. It is with a certain surprise, therefore, as well as pleasure, that you read a book like 'In the Forests of the Night.' It has a dozen faults, including a touch of Thomas Wolfe fever, from which the author will recover, but it is marked by a sense of what writing really is, it is pithy with character, and it is not enfeebled by the usual self-revelations of the beginning young novelist." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 18:68 Mr 21 '42 320w

"This is a first novel of unusual calibre, full of crudeness and awkwardness, but alive, honest, understanding. It is a work of reflection and compassion, and, though its interest lies in something deeper than plot, an excellent yarn in its own right. . . Mr. Davis is amateurish at times and not particularly successful in handling the romantic incidents of his tale or in the portrayal of the women in it, but he is sensitive, convincing, and moving in his interpretation of his main characters and sure and effective in the dramatic conflict precipitated both within their individual natures and in their relations to each other." Amy Love-man

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:16 Mr 28 '42 600w

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). Americans every one; il. by Leonard Weisgard. 123p $1.50 Doubleday

42-36228

Nine short stories for young readers, each story describing the difficulty of a child from a foreign country, having his or her own trials getting adjusted to American ways.

Booklist 38:372 Je 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 Ap 26 '42 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '42

"Although designed for a worthy purpose it is doubtful if such an approach will further tolerance and appreciation for all nationalities. Illustrated with Leonard Weisgard's stylized drawings. For children nine to twelve but not recommended." H. Y. Long

+ — Library J 67:583 Je 15 '42 100w

"Sympathetic, interesting stories that are well written but probably will not be very popular." Sonja Wennerblad

+ — Library J 67:583 Je 15 '42 40w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:885 O 15 '42 10w

"These stories, so simple and so plausible, carry a message which is always important, but never more timely than now when war nerves, oversusceptible to suspicion and intolerance of the newcomer, are apt to make us forget the generosity and hospitality which is one of America's greatest gifts. So real are the children that I wish Leonard Weisgard had been less stylistic in his treatment of them in his illustrations." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p8 My 10 '42 300w

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). Plow Penny mystery; il. by Paul Brown. 275p $2 Doubleday

42-22580

Mystery story for grades five to seven, describing the adventures of a group of children and their pets living in Connecticut.

"For the eight-to-twelves a mystery is never amiss: it keeps up interest and sharpens attention. But if the mystery is tied up with the daily life of lively children, who talk just as such children really do today, the story rises at once above the level of such literature, and if along with all this some matter of character building is involved, naturally and not brought in by the ears—why, that's a good story, and this is exactly that kind of story." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 3 '43 320w

"Recommended for all libraries with ever-recurring demand for 'mysteries.'" A. L. Shea

+ Library J 67:1068 D 1 '42 70w

"The mystery is slight, but the children are lively and real." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 D 13 '42 120w

DAVIS, NELLE PORTREY. Stump ranch pioneer. 245p $2.50 Dodd

917.96 Frontier and pioneer life—Idaho 42-21288

An account of how the Davis family, leaving their dust-bowl ranch behind them, migrated north and west and settled down on a stump farm in the Idaho panhandle. The five years after the migration witnessed much hard work, the making of a new home, clearing of land, and the gradual return of hopes for security for the father and mother and a bright future for the two children.

Booklist 39:47 O 15 '42

"Mrs. Davis tells their story with charm and simplicity, and never with heroics. This is an authentic pioneer story, done by a most observant woman and done very well. My only complaint, for which some editor may be responsible, is an almost British liking for quotes around words and phrases that have been perfectly good American for a long time." Stewart Holbrook

+ Books p19 O 11 '42 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

"This stimulating chronicle is a story of courage and hard work, whole-hearted adaptability and resourcefulness. It is also a story of neighborliness, among the pioneers and the old-timers, whether in relieving a food shortage or helping to build a house."

+ N Y Times p8 O 11 '42 400w

DAVIS, RAYMOND EARL. Elementary plane surveying; text and manual. 2d ed 464p il maps $3 McGraw

526.9 Surveying

42-1401

New edition of a work first published in 1936 (Book Review Digest, 1936). "For the new edition the entire text . . . has been rewritten to present in more logical sequence the essentials of measuring, calculating, and mapping. New material is presented on construction, handling, and adjustment of instruments; slide rule; planimeter; compass; stadia; plane table; calculation of areas; land surveying; and surveying operations connected with construction. Many examples and illustrations have been added. In particular the chapters on Errors, Topographic Surveying, and Route Surveying have been extensively revised." (Pref. to the 2d ed) Index.

Booklist 38:237 Mr 1 '42

Eng N 128:79 Mr 26 '42 70w

DAVIS, ROBERT. Hudson Bay express; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 262p $2 Holiday

(W) 42-50613

"Modern story from James Bay region in eastern Canadian wilderness. An Indian and a white boy train dog teams, carry freight for mines, and then assist in foiling enemy plot to bomb Great Lakes district by discovering and smashing enemies' refueling station and signaling post." (Library J) For ages eleven to fifteen.

Booklist 39:186 Ja 1 '43

"A thrilling tale of adventure and achievement." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 24 '42 70w

"Robert Davis has again drawn real boys in difficult situations, met with courage and enterprise. Henry Pitz has made fine drawings for a fine book."

+ Horn Bk 19:37 Ja '43 130w

"Splendid tale of the North both in interest and in material included. Author's usual fine style." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 68:38 Ja 1 '43 70w

"Mr. Davis tells a story vividly and concisely. Not only are the boys and dogs real, but the book manages to convey a sense of what it means to live shut away from the rest of the world for seven months of the year. . . 'Hudson Bay Express' is a book that fills all the requirements of the 'exciting story' so often sought; at the same time it presents authentic information about dog teams and sledging. The illustrations have spirit and imagination, and the book is designed and printed with distinction." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 3 '43 550w

DAVIS, SHELBY CULLOM. Your career in defense. 311p $2 Harper

371.425 Occupations. Industrial mobilization (W) 42-2673

Information on the opportunities in defense industries. The first section of the book considers the various types of workers: unemployed; just out of high school; just out of college; a white-collar worker; forty plus; and jobs for women. The second section describes different types of work: in shipyards, aircraft factories, metal works, machine shops, arsenals, explosives plants, and government offices. Appendices contain explicit descriptions of particular jobs.

"It will be of immediate assistance to vocational advisers in schools and colleges."

+ Books p18 F 8 '42 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '42

Current Hist 2:228 My '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 38:42 Mr '42

DAVISON, ARCHIBALD THOMPSON; DAVIS, KATHERINE K., and KEMPF, FREDERIC W., eds. Songs of freedom. 144p il $1.75; school ed 96c Houghton

784 Songs (W) 42-17516

Collection of songs with words and music, all intended to foster the idea of democracy. Songs are grouped under headings: Songs of the United States; Patriotic and army songs; Songs of occupations; Songs of the South; Spirituals; Chanteys; Cowboy songs; Songs about special places or groups; Songs of Latin America; Songs of Canada; Songs of the British Isles; Songs from Europe; Hymns. Index.

Booklist 39:118 D 1 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

"A particularly valuable collection for our time." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:423 N '42 70w

"Recommended for schools and all libraries with music collections." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 67:740 S 1 '42 100w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:889 O 15 '42 20w

Wis Lib Bul 38:133 O '42

DAWSON, CAROLYN BYRD. Remind me to forget. 267p $2 Doubleday

42-36152

Detective story.

Booklist 38:310 Ap 15 '42

"The story, while lacking in distinction, offers variety of character types, with incident, romance and suspense." K. I.

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 29 '42 200w

"Richly melodramatic affair with mysterious 'investigator' who turns up at critical moment, autocratic old lady, and other plot-proof trap-pings. High-tension."

Sat R of Lit 25:18 F 28 '42 40w

DAWSON, CHRISTOPHER HENRY. Judgment of the nations. 222p $2.50 Sheed 261 Christianity and politics. Sociology, Christian. Reconstruction (1939-)

42-22598

"Christopher Dawson, the well-known English Catholic thinker, here presents both a brief account of the factors in European and Russian history leading to the rise of the 'cult of power,' and his own plea for future reorganization of world society in a league of federations of nations. Each federation is to be based upon community of culture, as exemplified by the Christian culture of western Europe." New Repub

"Few contemporary writers are as competent as the author to deal with the subject discussed in this group of essays. . . No serious reader will fail to recognize here the expression of the matured thought of an historian-philosopher familiar with past events and also able to study them under the penetrating light of moral principles." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 156:244 N '42 700w

Reviewed by C. L. Willard, Jr.

Churchman 156:19 D 15 '42 180w

New Repub 107:690 N 23 '42 120w

DAWSON, PETER, pseud. See Glidden, J. H.

DAY, CLIVE. Economic development in Europe; a revision and extension of Economic development in modern Europe. 746p il $4 Macmillan

330.94 Europe—Economic conditions

(W) 42-3574

"Economic Development on Modern Europe, published in 1933 [Book Review Digest, 1933], covered the history of four leading countries [England, France, Germany and Russia] during the past two centuries. The present book goes back to medieval origins, continues the analysis to the outbreak of the second World War, and includes a study of economic history in three additional countries [Italy, Spain and Ireland]." (Pref) Index.

"Professor Day is 'more concerned to illustrate the vital processes than to provide the student with a furniture of facts.' In reading the book the reviewer gained the impression that more facts are given than might be expected from this statement, and they are well chosen to lend concreteness to the narrative. The author has another part of his plan 'a discussion of the interrelation of economics and politics in history,' and this adds to the merit of the volume. Professor Day is in general careful in the use of data and in his discussion, but since so many topics are treated, it is to be expected that readers will find something with which to disagree. As an illustration, some may object to the way in which the phrase 'property rights' is used in a number of places." Clement Akerman

+ Am Econ R 32:859 D '42 650w

Am Hist R 48:165 O '42 40w

DAY, JOHN. Economic history of Athens under Roman domination. 300p $3.50 Columbia univ. press

330.9385 Athens—Economic conditions

42-7396

Scholarly study of the economic development of imperial Athens from 200 B.C. to 300 A.D. The author is assistant professor of Greek and Latin in Barnard college. Bibliography. Index.

DAY, JOHN—Continued

"An economic history of Athens dedicated to both Westermann and Rostovtzeff raises great expectations, and these expectations are not disappointed. Although one could wish that the book were easier reading; that it did not at times lose itself in detail, that the non-specialist were aided by more evident organization, and that the chronological approach did not prevent the unified treatment of such main topics as slavery, imports, and grain supply; nevertheless, this account of the fortunes of Athens from the fourth century B.C. to the fourth A.D. is thorough, scholarly, and well documented." H. J. Loane

+ Am Econ R 32:583 S '42 1150w

"The chief characteristic of the book is its comprehensiveness. Not only has Professor Day drawn on the formidable literature now available for Athens itself, but he has made full use of the works which deal with the economic movements of later Greece as a whole and the Hellenistic world in general. One may say that all the data relevant to his subject have been carefully and cautiously appraised and woven into a text which proceeds soberly from start to finish." W. S. Ferguson

+ Am Hist R 48:73 O '42 700w

"It is primarily a tool for the professional student and will be welcomed as such. It is copiously annotated and is equipped with a very full bibliography and an admirably classified (fourteen page) index." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 19:257 J1 '42 70w

DAY, JOHN F. Bloody ground. 324p il $3 Doubleday

917.69 Mountain whites (South). Kentucky —Social life and customs 42-930

An Associated Press reporter presents a sociological survey of the mountain countries of Kentucky, presenting in dramatic form the story of their feuds, schools, churches, snake cults, hospitals, funerals, marriages, etc.

"'Bloody Ground' is a rare and workmanlike job of reporting." Robert Wilder

+ Books p18 N 9 '41 800w

"Though Mr. Day does not attempt to present an answer to the problem, his book can well serve as a guide for sociologists. It is vastly entertaining, as well."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 4 '42 450w

"Written in entertaining and fast-moving style. A good corrective to those who see the mountaineers through rose colored glasses and forget their poverty, disease, ignorance, superstition. Yet the point of view from which the book is written—typically 'liberal' and humanitarian—induces a myopia of its own."

+ Commonweal 35:443 F 20 '42 100w

DEAN, AGNES LOUISE. Let us be merry; il. by Dorothy Bayley. 170p $1.75 Knopf

811 Children's poetry 41-10783

Collection of children's poems, suitable for recitation. There are both singing stanzas and free verse.

"Excellent school recitations." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 D 21 '41 100w

"Introduces a new poet for young readers, one who writes with deftness and ease, a good sense of rhythm, and a sympathetic understanding of children's interests and moods. May be added to the shelf with Elizabeth Maddox Roberts."

+ Wis Lib Bul 38:70 Ap '42

DEAN, LEON W. Old Wolf; the story of Israel Putnam; il. by Henry S. Gillette. 276p $2 Farrar

Putnam, Israel—Juvenile literature 42-20096

A partly fictionalized, robustly told biography of a Revolutionary soldier and national hero, by the author of Stark of the North Country (Book Review Digest, 1941). Selected bibliography.

Booklist 39:107 N 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p18 N 15 '42 280w

"Old Wolf would be hard to beat for thrills. Mr. Dean knows how to write—one can hear the ping of the bullets through the leaves on the shores of Lake Champlain and feel the heat of the flames beginning to scorch the captives whom the Mohawks have bound to a tree."

+ Cath World 156:381 D '42 140w

"Because of lustiness of some of language and episodes, this would be better for use with senior high school age than with younger children. Live and interesting book by author of Stark of the North Country. Recommended." M. R. Lucas

+ Library J 67:741 S 1 '42 90w

DEAN, ROBERT GEORGE. Layoff. 231p $2 Scribner

42-1549

Detective story.

"Easy to read, with picturesque ensemble and conversation on the light side." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 Ja 18 '42 180w

"'Layoff' is an amusing yarn with a sufficiency of puzzlement." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 18 '42 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 18 '42 120w

DEAN, ROBERT GEORGE. On ice. 237p $2 Scribner

(W) 42-17990

Detective story.

Booklist 39:34 O 1 '42

"Tony Hunter scores again, unraveling two tricky killings with the frequently chuckle-headed assistance of his pal, Bill Griffith. Some of their slickest teamwork, we'd call it." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 J1 26 '42 150w

"If you can guess who did the dirty work you are as good a detective as Tony Hunter and a better one than Bill Griffith." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 9 '42 150w

"Straight mystery, logical and well constructed."

+ New Yorker 17:60 J1 25 '42 70w

DEAN, SIDNEY WALTER. Knight of the revolution. 312p il $2.50 Macrae Smith co.

B or 92 Marion, Francis—Juvenile literature 41-22340

A biography of Francis Marion, whose daring in the swamps of Carolina during the Revolution earned him the nickname of the Swamp Fox. "His Huguenot forefathers, sacrificing property and life for religious freedom, conditioned him to risk life and property for political liberty. His mother's race provided his code of chivalry; childhood gave him knowledge of the swamp, from which came his nom de guerre. Indian warfare skilled, knowledge of his men perfected him in the creation of one of those bands that for all their differences from today's 'commandos' had the same basic audacity and thrusting power." (Books) Bibliography. No index.

"A fast-moving story, honestly thrilling. Historic figures such as Lafayette, DeKalb, the hated Tarleton, the 'inflated nincompoop' Gates, Moultrie, Rutledge, Marion's own men, have blood in them. Famous stories such as Palmetto Fort, the dinner of yams, the escapes, the raids for powder, are woven tightly into the tale. It is a tale of hero-worship, but it provides evidence that Marion was a hero. Some older readers could learn from it about the Revolution." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Mr 8 '42 250w

"In writing this well-documented biography, Mr. Dean has not only given vitality to an exciting chapter in American history, but has separated truth from legend while making Marion's cool courage in the face of hair-breadth escapes as thrilling as the raids of the Commandos of today." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:260 J1 '42 130w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 40w

"A warm human picture of the 'Swamp Fox,' Francis Marion." M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 67:896 O 15 '42 10w

"It is an inspiring story, well told, of a man who typifies the selflessness of true patriotism, and it gives an illuminating picture of the war as fought in the South." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 1 '42 90w

DE ANGELI, MRS MARGUERITE (LOFFT). Up the hill [il. by the author]. 88p $2 Doubleday

(W) 42-24961

Story of a Polish family living in a mining town in Pennsylvania. The boy Tad wants to become an artist but his father tells him there is no money in painting and he should stick to mining. Tad's little sister makes a Christmas wish for him and the artist painting a mural in the church helps the boy with his drawings and at Easter time when the mural is uncovered Tad's father agrees to let Tad go to the art school in Philadelphia.

Booklist 39:143 D 15 '42

"The richly colored pictures of this latest book by the artist-author of 'Henner's Lydia' are just as satisfactory to a child's love of beauty and kindness as in her earlier books, and the story has closer connection with today. It is indeed today itself and a little of tomorrow, for in the town where Aniela, a little Polish girl, lives with her family, tomorrow's task of creating America in the hearts of newcomers is now going on." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 15 '42 350w

"A happy Christmas chapter opens a book of unusual charm and timeliness. . . . Easter celebrations close the delightful book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:420 N '42 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:885 O 15 '42 30w

"Beautiful, lovable story. . . . Recommended for children nine to twelve." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:1106 D 15 '42 70w

New Yorker 18:111 D 12 '42 50w

DEARBORN, WALTER FENNO, and ROTHNEY, JOHN WATSON MURRAY. Predicting the child's development [prepared] with the cooperation of Howard H. Long, John M. Ratcliff, William J. E. Crissy [and others]. 360p il $4.50 Sci-art pubs.

136.7 Child study. Growth 42-3854

"In 1922 Professor Dearborn and his associates measured, physically and mentally, 3592 children entering the first grade in three different metropolitan areas of Boston. Thereafter, as long as these children remained at school, they were measured each year until the conclusion of the study more than twelve years later. . . . The results of the enterprise are now embodied in a large number of special studies not only by Dearborn himself and his advanced students who were associated with the research during its course but also by specialists of other institutions who were graciously given access to the material. Professor Dearborn has attempted in this work to present only some of the major discoveries that have followed from these various analyses, thus making Predicting the Child's Development a summary of more extended studies." Am Anthropol

"There are weaknesses in the investigation which Professor Dearborn himself has taken care to emphasize, but there can be little doubt that it represents as great an advance in the understanding of growth and the means of studying it as we have had in a long time." H. L. Shapiro

+ Am Anthropol 44:510 J1 '42 550w
School & Society 54:452 N 15 '41 100w

DEARING, CHARLES LEE. American highway policy. 286p $3 Brookings

388.1 Roads 42-5965

"Dr. Charles L. Dearing of the staff of the Brookings Institution undertakes in this volume to study the basic concepts upon which governmental units—local, state, and Federal—may base highway taxation and administrative programs. He does not undertake to explore the problems of the application of these basic concepts to the special beneficiaries of highway transportation facilities, or to provide an equitable basis for the establishment of any parity relationship of competitive opportunity among highway and railroad transportation." Ann Am Acad

"I do not question the soundness of the scholarship or the sincerity of the author. Nor would I condemn the study as a piece of special pleading. I am, however, troubled by the fact that substantial propositions are summarily dismissed." H. M. Dorr

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:556 Je '42 600w

"The material is well assembled and logically arranged. The treatment is concise and logical, and confined to the problem attacked. The author wisely refrains from straying from this course to discuss collateral problems, particularly those pertaining to the equitable distribution of highway taxation, upon which data adequate for critical discussion are lacking." G. L. Wilson

+ Ann Am Acad 221:223 My '42 390w

Booklist 38:362 Je 1 '42

"Though addressed to the general public, this book provides thought-provoking reading for highway engineers and administrators."

+ Eng N 128:79 F 26 '42 240w

DEARLE, DENIS ARTHUR. Plastic molding; a comprehensive study. 131p il $4 Chemical pub. co.

668 Plastic materials (W) 41-52035

"Written for the student and layman, this exposition of the subject is general, omitting the description of chemical analyses of the plastic compounds, and devoting the study to the practical aspects of the industry." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Chem & Met Eng 49:163 Ja '42 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:10 Ja '42

DEBENHAM, FRANK. Astrographics; or, First steps in navigation by the stars; a primer for the airman cadet. 118p il $2.75 Chemical pub. co. [7s 6d Heffer]

629.1325 Navigation (aeronautics) 42-17582

"The best way to explain it is to do it." Here we have the principle that Debenham has followed in baring the mysteries of spheres, time, stars, latitudes, altitudes and other phases of astrographic navigation. . . . The approach is graphic, which means that the beginner is led by easy stages to a mastery of fundamental principles through diagrams which are admirably clear and simple. A knowledge of trigonometry is essential to digest the text." N Y Times

N Y New Tech Bks 27:35 J1 '42

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert
N Y Times p35 N 22 '42 260w

DEBO, ANGIE. Road to disappearance. (Civilization of the Am. Indian) 399p il maps $3.50 Univ. of Okla. press

970.3 Creek Indians 42-1342

"The history of the Creek Indians has received partial treatment before. . . . This is the first book, however, which devotes full attention to the story of these interesting people."

DEBO, ANGIE—Continued

Miss Debo borrows from anthropological data, particularly from the writings of Swanton and Speck, to reconstruct the picture of Creek society at first white contact. . . The 'road to disappearance' with which Miss Debo is primarily concerned is the procession of treaties, aggressions, and arbitrary decisions by which the Creek have been successively divested of their lands and their status as a nation." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by M. E. Opler

Ann Am Acad 221:233 My '42 550w

"'The Road to Disappearance' is undoubtedly a sound and scholarly recital of the facts of this sad tale. But it will serve the student rather than the general reader. Though it deals with an exceptionally interesting people in particularly tragic circumstances, it lacks any dramatic appeal." Erna Fergusson
Books p50 D 6 '42 700w

DECEMBER 7; the first thirty hours; by the correspondents of Time, Life, and Fortune. 229p il $2 Knopf

940.5373 World war, 1939—U.S. (W) 42-18235

The reports sent in by some fifty reporters on the staffs of Time, Life and Fortune, covering the events of December 7, and the American public's reactions.

Booklist 39:7 S '42

"This book is almost unbearably repetitious, terribly uneven, rubbishy in spots, often searingly trite, speckled with the worse defects of 'Time's' style, yet not only readable but exciting as it reiterates the story of just how the knife sank into America's back. No carefully polished narrative has yet matched this for cumulative effect." J. M. Minifie

+ Books p15 Ag 16 '42 650w

"Trivial? Possibly—but trivialities which stage-set a great drama. Inconsequential? Possibly, also—but what did you say when you heard the news?" S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p4 Ag 16 '42 900w

New Yorker 18:56 Ag 8 '42 40w

Pratt p23 D '42

Time 40:80 Ag 24 '42 1600w

DEEPIING, WARWICK. I live again. 269p $2.50 Knopf [8s 6d Cassell]

42-20093

Story of reincarnation in which the hero is reborn four times. He appears first as an eighteenth century footman; then as a Victorian man of wealth; next as a self-centered Edwardian, killed in the first World war; and finally as the son of his third incarnation. Thru all his changes the same ruthless woman appears, until she is finally softened and converted by true love.

Booklist 39:71 N 1 '42

"Mr. Deeping's bizarre pattern gives him a long-range look at English life, and no doubt was chosen with that purpose in mind. Beyond the hurdles of plot he develops a continuity of theme. In a final scene against the background of the present, he affirms his belief that 'the strange madness of men' will pass." Lisle Bell

+ Books p24 O 18 '42 240w

"Not well enough done for libraries to buy from their cut book budgets." Margaret Winning

— Library J 67:845 O 1 '42 70w

"The pattern of this novel, which stretches from Tyburn to the bombed streets of London yesterday, is unusual, certainly. And it will appeal strongly to readers who like a dash of supernatural speculation in their fiction. So far as the story values are concerned, the four episodes of 'I Live Again' are uneven in quality. Mr. Deeping is a practiced historical romancer and writes, in general, with more dash and conviction about eighteenth-century footmen than about nineteenth-century mathematicians." M. W.

+ N Y Times p24 O 11 '42 600w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

Spec 169:224 S 4 '42 120w

"It might have been a better book if there had been a closer relation between the four lives, a better considered principle of development, but as a lively essay in the writing of short biographies it is a sufficiently diverting entertainment."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p425 Ag 29 '42 270w

DEFERRARI, ROY JOSEPH, ed. Essays on Catholic education in the United States. 556p $4.50 Catholic univ. of Am.

377.82 Roman Catholic church in the U.S.—Education 42-14157

Collection of essays on different phases of Catholic education in the United States. The book is divided into five sections: Fundamental principles; The divisions of the educational system; The professional schools; Some special fields; Catholic education within special groups. Chapter bibliographies. No index.

"Many of the contributors to this symposium acknowledge the debt that Catholic education owes to the Catholic University of America, which for fifty years has been the inspiration and guide of hundreds of Catholic teachers. This volume adds to the debt, for its tells with frankness the weaknesses and strong points of Catholic education in the United States. The editor promises new editions in the future which will keep the question up to date." B. L. Conway

+ Cath World 155:500 JI '42 950w

School & Society 55:484 Ap 25 '42 20w

DE FORD, MIRIAM ALLEN (MRS MAYNARD SHIPLEY). Shaken with the wind. 298p $2.50 Doubleday

42-18659

This is the story of a lonely woman, pretty, inefficient, ignorant Blanche Rankin, from the age of fifteen to forty. At fifteen, in 1903, Blanche married money and position, but threw them away when such a life proved boring and dull. Other men loved Blanche, some gave her periods of security and happiness, but at forty she is reduced to answering ads in a Matrimonial Register.

"Blanche is in no way an interesting person, but her author makes Blanche's story surprisingly interesting. What was apparently conceived as a problem novel reads like the utterly believable story of one ineffectual, lazy, sensual, girl who grew up an ineffectual woman." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p4 JI 26 '42 1050w

"The novel's chief interest—and it's quite a readable book—comes from its shrewd documentation of the period of the early Nineteen Hundreds, of the California and San Francisco that Blanche knew, of the various people who floated in and out of her life, and of the various panaceas for loneliness to which she resorted—spiritualists, inspirational courses and lectures, cults, drink and casual affairs." Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p20 JI 26 '42 700w

New Yorker 17:58 JI 25 '42 60w

"Miss DeFord has created an individual in Blanche Rankin and she has drawn a type. Given the bad breaks and nature Blanche had to start with, there was only one end possible. You can put your finger on many of the causes for her predestined failure—and Miss DeFord's interest in social backgrounds is clear and deepening, but Blanche has grown in the telling of her story to be a person in her own meager right escaping the stigma of horrible example. 'Shaken With the Wind' is a book that falls in the category of feminine-social fiction and yet it is able to stand the strict test of narrative interest as well." G. G. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 25:12 JI 25 '42 700w

DE FORD, MIRIAM ALLEN (MRS MAYNARD SHIPLEY). They were San Franciscans. 321p il $3.50 Caxton printers

920 San Francisco—Biography 41-26781

Collection of stories about some San Francisco characters. Contents: The miser who brought the stars to earth; James Lick; The spirit of '49: Sam Brannan; Cabby to impresario: Tom Maguire; America's Marx and his rebel: Henry George and Kate Kennedy; Reconstructed rebel: Asbury Harpending; Lady fire buffer: Lillie Hitchcock Coit; Chinese and dynamite: Dennis Kearney and Burnette Haskell; Last of the Tolstoyans: Fremont Older; Charlatan or dupe? Albert Abrams; The Christ angel: Ella May Clemmons; Gentleman Jim: James J. Corbett; Laureate of Bohemia: George Sterling.

Booklist 38:273 Ap 1 '42

"Because she knows San Francisco so well, because she thinks of it in terms of the people that helped make it, because, too, she thinks of the people about whom she writes in terms of the city, Miss de Ford's book is almost as much an interpretation of San Francisco as it is of the San Franciscans she has chosen to write about. The most casual reader can not help noting that it is the city itself that comes through as the hero of the book—the 'impetuous, easygoing, hedonistic, tolerant' city, as the author aptly enough calls it. This, undoubtedly, is part of the author's intent." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p10 Ja 25 '42 750w

"Gossipy and readable stories."

+ Nation 154:45 Ja 10 '42 30w

DE FOREST, LEE. Television, today and tomorrow. 361p $3.75 Dial press
621.388 Television (W) 42-8214

"Written by America's well-known pioneer in radio telephony, a man who has devoted forty years to wireless research, it is intended for laymen 'who turn inquiring minds to this new entity promising another revolution in science and invention.' Its author hopes 'that it shall not be too involved in thought nor too technical in expression, and yet shall be informative and clear. It is designed to provide an outline of the nature and scope of television.'" (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '42

Reviewed by H. A. von Urrf

Library J 66:667 Ag '41 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:30 Ap '42

"In June, 1940, the editorial committee submitted 'We Present Television' as the principal recommendation of the Scientific Book Club. It now offers the above title not only as excellent supplementary reading but as the presentation of different and more detailed material."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 Ap '41 330w

DEGERING, EDWARD FRANKLIN, and others. Outline of organic nitrogen compounds. 1st planographed ed 381p $6 Purdue Univ. Dept. of chemistry, Lafayette, Ind.
547.8 Nitrogen compounds 42-15657

"This book represents a development of ten years in the teaching of the chemistry of organic nitrogen compounds to graduate students. The material is presented in outline form, and is accordingly brief and to the point. The total coverage is, nevertheless, fairly comprehensive. This volume is designed specifically for graduate students, research workers, and specialists in the field of organic nitrogen compounds." (Chem & Eng N) Indexes.

Reviewed by T. B. Johnson

Am Chem Soc J 64:2729 N '42 330w

Chem & Eng N.20:877 Jl 10 '42 70w

DEITRICK, MRS MARION ROLFE (JOHN-SON). See Johnson, M.

DÉ JONG, DAVID CORNEL. Benefit Street. 315p $2.50 Harper
42-24103

Benefit Street is in Providence, Rhode Island, and is lined with apartment and boarding houses of more or less shady character. This "Grand Hotel" novel tells the stories of the fourteen tenants of one such house, ending with an account of what happened to them in the New England hurricane of September, 1938.

"It is all very entertaining, some of it really sad, and much very good. If we choose we can read into this all sorts of larger significances." R. M. Gay

+ Atlantic 171:144 Ja '43 200w

"Mr. De Jong, as an artist with a Dutch strain in him, is attracted by the qualities of color and quaintness. That is evident not only in his writing but in his painting (the dust cover of this book is based on one of his pictures). 'Benefit Street' is exciting enough to make you regret that you can't grab the first train out to Providence." Milton Hindus

+ Books p12 O 18 '42 850w

"In all of his individual portraits, De Jong is excellent; his characters stand out in clear and impressive relief. It is in some of his intramural liaisons that one questions the validity of his tale. As he develops it, practically all of the emotional and intimate life of his people is lived in their relationship with each other." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p16 O 25 '42 750w

"'Benefit Street' is a novel which would be a good one, if it did not try to plumb the depths of experience reached by a William Faulkner or a D. H. Lawrence, and then turn out to be only a slightly more sordid Jerome K. Jerome story. It is disappointing to see that the author senses that he has in his head a gripping, dynamic story of human decay and struggle which he cannot bring to birth." C. D. Kean

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 15 '42 600w

DE JONG, DOLA (MRS JAN HOOWIJ). Niekernik, Nakkernak and Nökkernok; with ill. by Jan H. Hoowij. 117p $1.50 Scribner
(W) 42-21770

Story of three little old men who lived in a clearing in a huge forest. There were lions in the forest and one day the three little men caught a lion in the cupboard and that was the beginning of a whole series of startling adventures.

Cath World 156:373 D '42 50w

"A jolly nonsense story. Dutch children are very fond of stories by this writer, with pictures by her artist husband, and American children are lucky to read this one in English, for it is full of fun." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:421 N '42 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:884 O 15 '42 20w

"The black-and-white pictures have been drawn in a fine spirit of fun. They and the story express that effortless quality of mirth which small children delightedly accept. Eight-to-10-year-olds will approve this on sight and it makes good reading aloud for the younger ones." I. S.

+ N Y Times p38 N 15 '42 220w

DE KIEWIET, CORNELIUS WILLEM. History of South Africa; social and economic. 292p maps $3.75 (15s) Oxford

330.968 South Africa—History. South Africa—Economic conditions A42-568

"This work presupposes a knowledge of the political story in the reader, and is concerned, as the title implies, with the underlying forces which have produced the South African polity as it exists today, a polity unique in the Empire, and indeed in the world, consisting as it does of some two million white people living permanently among a native African population of some seven and a half millions. The comparative poverty of most of the South African soil, the low rainfall over the greater part of the country apart from the east-coast belt, which was already in the hands of powerful native tribes when the Boers first came into contact with them, is the key to much South African history." Spec

"A brief but extremely interesting and valuable book." Paul Knaplund

+ Am Hist R 48:63 O 42 700w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:580 Ap '42 20w

DE KIEWIET, C. W.—Continued

"The scholarship and penetration give the reader that exhilarating intellectual pleasure which one gets only once or twice in a decade; a mature mind has been stretched to the full and one's own mind has to be equally exerted." A. J. P. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 5 '41 250w

"Dr. de Kiewiet is an enviable historian. He has a magnificent subject, and one not traversed before; he has a sense of historic drama linked in an uncommon manner with a sense of justice. He has abundant knowledge and a lucid, grave style." Freda White

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:292 My 2 '42 380w

Social Studies 33:96 F '42 10w

"If it is the function of history to throw light upon the present, this book must be accounted good history indeed. In its pages contemporary conditions in the Union are rendered understandable in the light of their past development. It is a story not easily told, for the skein of South Africa's economic and social evolution is fearfully interwoven, and would in less skillful hands become badly tangled. Professor De Kiewiet is an expositor of parts who tells his story clearly, yet with richness of phrase and figure. It is true that certain points are frequently reiterated, but he has his justification in that the points are vital and might otherwise be overlooked." Leonidas Dodson

+ Social Studies 33:234 My '42 430w

"This work, scholarly rather than popular, is a valuable contribution to the literature of South Africa as an integral part of the British Empire." D. O. Malcolm

+ Spec 167:266 S 12 '41 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p420 Ag 30 '41 1100w

DE LA BEDOYERE, MICHAEL, count. Christian crisis, 210p $1.75 Macmillan [7s 6d Burns]
261 Sociology, Christian. Roman Catholic church. Christianity 41-15293

"A Roman Catholic journalist analyzes the debacle of civilization in terms of the crisis of Christianity. He shows how various secularist philosophies have replaced Christianity and by drawing on men's loyalties have led them in the wrong direction, often using the same phrases and ideals as Christians." Churchman

Reviewed by R. C. Miller

Churchman 156:17 Mr 1 '42 150w

Reviewed by Joseph Calderon

Commonweal 35:573 Mr 27 '42 550w

"We shall understand this book only when we know that the author is an English, Roman Catholic journalist who has contributed articles to the Catholic Herald every week over the course of many years. It is written wholly from the standpoint of a loyal Catholic." R. E. E. Harkness

Crozer Q 19:246 Jl '42 500w

Manchester Guardian p7 D 17 '40 170w

"Since this book went to press there have been indications that the possibility of joint action is being recognized both at Westminster and at Lambeth, so that M. de la Bedoyere's book may have a more friendly reception among the hierarchy and the pious of his own faith than it could have expected even ten years ago. Nevertheless it must have taken some courage to write it, for its essence is something that is always resented—a call of the self-righteous to repentance. It also demands courage to respond to his implied claim that Christians—even lax Christians—are, by virtue of their faith and their hold upon the abiding principles of our civilization, the only surviving aristocracy of the modern world, and must assert their leadership."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p98 Mr 1 '41 1250w

DE LA MARE, WALTER JOHN. Bells and grass. 144p il $2.50 Viking [7s 6d Faber]
821 Children's poetry (W) 42-11653

In his preface the author describes the recent discovery of a commonplace book full of scribbled poems written over thirty-five years ago. With these as a starting point he has made this book of children's poems, old and new, all of them wise, witty, and fanciful. The American edition is beautifully illustrated by Dorothy Lathrop. Index.

"The voice that we hear in the poems is that of the sweetest singer of this century. The lyrics in this book, do not, of course, have the haunting overtones and subtle sound effects of his more elaborate work, but they sing themselves with effortless grace and delicious lightness." Elizabeth Drew

+ Atlantic 170:108 Ag '42 280w

Booklist 38:430 Jl 1 '42

Bookmark 4:9 N '42

"Here are poems for any one able to approach the world around him and feel the world within, with the directness and simplicity of early childhood. The audience for this book will thus be found among clear spirits of every age except the early teens, a time of life that seems to feel itself in honor bound to repudiate its immediate past. Save for this brief interval, the dateless verses can be offered to the right people from babyhood on, as long as they stay alive." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 24 '42 470w

"Some of the verses may remind us of Milne and some of Mother Goose, but most of them—like the little song 'All the way from Adam'—are drenched in the wistful, whimsical, early-morning music of the essential De La Mare. And Dorothy Lathrop's illustrations are of a quaint and charming suitability." Katherine Brey

+ Cath World 155:625 Ag '42 300w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 27 '42 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '42

"It seems hardly possible that this year could bring with it such a treasure as these new poems by Walter de la Mare. . . . They are unmistakably Walter de la Mare's poetry. . . . Here are the touches of humor, here the real and the unreal worlds, side by side, or rather, merging into each other. . . . There could be no happier combination of author and illustrator than this. Dorothy Lathrop is inspired with the same kind of imagination as Mr. de la Mare, and the result is a book of great beauty, for which we may give thanks to the publishers, too." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:182 My '42 140w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 18:407 N '42 30w

Reviewed by Miriam Snow

Library J 67:631 Jl '42 60w

"Poems full of beauty, humor, and inspiration." P. D. Edie

+ Library J 67:893 O 15 '42 40w

"Mr. de la Mare, in a charming and illuminating preface, tells us how he recently discovered some of these poems, many of them written thirty-five years ago, in a long-forgotten notebook and how, recovering the youthful mood, he was impelled to add to their number; yet so richly has he retained the pristine vision and the delighted apprehension that it would puzzle an acuter critic than I can pretend to be to distinguish the old from the new; for the truth is that even the latest have been written by the immortal child who still in the heart of the ageing poet views the world with eyes of wonder." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 18 '41 300w

"Mr. de la Mare [has not] changed under the reparation of forty years. His lunar magic remains his own, with its peculiar tint and odour. If you look into the mushroom ring of poems in this book, you will find some difficulty in picking out those spored two days ago from those spored forty years ago. . . . Many of the poems are additions to nursery rhyme, with Cock Robin, witches, and 'candle, candle, burning clear.' Many are lyrics with an audacious turn of humour in the last line." Richard Church

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:479 D 6 '41 500w

"'Bells and Grass' is a book for all ages. Here, as in the earlier volumes, we find music and humor and a winning absurdity, the real and the shadowy unreal side by side. . . Dorothy Lathrop's pictures have the moonlit quality of the poems; jacket and end papers in particular spread before us the child's and the poet's world, a world of shy, wild creatures and flowers, of field and hill and village touched with a light that is both dreamlike and real. The publishers have made this volume to be treasured for the beauty and distinction of its design and workmanship as well as for its content." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Je 14 '42 400w
New Yorker 18:64 Je 27 '42 30w

Reviewed by Laura Benét
Sat R of Lit 26:12 Ag 22 '42 250w

"This is a book in which children of all ages will delight; there are echoes of nursery rhymes to catch the ear of little children and tales and oddities to stir the imagination of those somewhat older." Sheila Shannon

+ Spec 168:16 Ja 2 '42 380w

"Many of the poems in this volume, some of them, perhaps, deriving from the commonplace book of so many years ago, are songs of childhood in the simple sense, akin to the nursery rhyme in their imaginative statement of the matter-of-fact. Here and there, in 'Sambo,' for example, or 'The Orchard,' the imaginative rendering of facts is slight. But in the lightest of his verses there is a rhythmic and musical adroitness and also a suggestive humour which preserve the link between the worlds of fact and of dream."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p558 N 8 '41 600w

Wis Lib Bul 38:166 N '42

DE LA MARE, WALTER JOHN. Mr Bumps and his monkey; il. by Dorothy P. Lathrop. 69p $2 Winston

(W) 42-22581

A story, part legend, part allegory, but told with realistic detail, of the friendship between the sailor Mr Bumps, and the monkey, Jasper. When he bought the monkey from an African chieftain, Mr Bumps knew he was an unusual animal and so it proved, for Jasper learned to speak English, to mimic men, and finally—when he had been stolen and sold to a showman—he performed on the stage. However, after a time the friends were re-united and Mr Bumps took the little monkey back to his own people.

Booklist 39:73 N 1 '42

"Yes, it is a story like none other. Perhaps the foreword by Miss Lathrop, whose colored lithographs have the same magic and wonder, is quite right in calling it a perfect story. It will be a long time before we match it—or reach the depths of its meaning." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 15 '42 550w

"The English poet has woven into the simple narrative the magic of his imagination and no one who reads it is likely to forget Jasper, the quiet monkey who learned to speak English. . . Mr. Bumps is for all ages."

+ Cath World 156:374 D '42 110w

"A delightful adventure in childhood fiction."

+ Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 20w

"The illustrations add fascination to a moving story of a small, subtle animal, seen with imagination." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:426 N '42 110w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 67:884 O 15 '42 50w

"Appealing, imaginative story told with sensitivity. Illustrations by Dorothy Lathrop are exactly right. Recommended for children ten to thirteen." M. N. Miller

+ Library J 67:955 N 1 '42 90w

"This is not the first time this haunting, tender tale has been published in the United States. It appeared here first in Story Parade and later in the first collection of stories from that magazine, but it is a fine thing to have it at last in a separate volume, especially one of such pleasing format." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p8 N 15 '42 320w

"This book about a British sailor and his monkey, Jasper, is a poignant story of a trained animal in captivity and a delicious bit of imaginative writing. . . Miss Lathrop's beautiful pictures are as subtle as the writing; her color plates of Jasper's wistful face peering out from his exotic costumes will haunt you." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 18:112 D 12 '42 80w

DE LEEUW, ADELE LOUISE. Gay design. 279p $2 Macmillan

(W) 42-22582

A career story for older girls. Nancy Gay learns that her family need the money that was to have gone into tuition at art school, so Nancy gets a job in a dress-pattern-making firm. The story relates step-by-step the progress of Nancy's advance until she is accorded the honor of having her designs labeled "Gay Design."

Booklist 39:73 N 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p28 N 15 '42 300w

"Detailed information seems well integrated with story interest. . . Commendable for its realism, without pessimism, about difficulties of getting started and of attaining recognition along the way. For girls twelve to sixteen." Maude Adams

+ Library J 67:957 N 1 '42 60w

Wis Lib Bul 38:191 D '42

DELEHANTY, ELIZABETH. Arise from sleep. 216p $2.50 Viking

(W) 42-7499

Story of two young Americans who, on business of their own, venture across the Atlantic to Italy just before the war breaks out. They become involved with Fascist schemers and are in desperate danger before they finally make their escape together.

"'Arise From Sleep' is distinctly unusual and it will be interesting to see what this new author develops into; she represents a strange mixture of clear sight, vividness, keen feeling and romantic sentimentality. The glimpses she gives of life and character in Italy today have a compelling authenticity and few novelists have more ably set forth the true indecency and horror of life under Fascism." Iris Barry

+ Books p3 Ap 5 '42 750w

"Reading this book will remind you of Graham Greene, James M. Cain and Geoffrey Household. Its style is crisp and visual. The imagery is a curious blend of the blunt and delicate. Altogether a notable contribution to imaginative writing in our day." J. N. Vaughan

+ Commonweal 35:652 Ap 17 '42 350w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 S 4 '42 100w

New Repub 106:582 Ap 27 '42 50w

"A gentle tear might be shed for Miss Delehanty's book. This American first novel is full of broken promises: an exciting beginning slows up with a jerk; interesting descriptions fall off into tired echoes of prominent contemporaries; a love scene hovers between freshness and vulgarity. The impression grows of a weak sun striving through a mass of cumulus, and the cumulus is heavy with all the English and American novelists of the last two decades." Philip Toynbee

New Statesman & Nation 24:246 O 10 '42 110w

"Miss Delehanty develops Paganini's character logically throughout the book. He comes to life far more convincingly than Robert and Paula, whose love story seems a bit too conventional and easy-going. The plot, though well-constructed and entertaining, might have gained in depth if the author were a little less eager to hold the reader's attention at any price. But all in all, this is a fine first novel, clever, original and well worth reading." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 22 '42 700w

"Not the best modern adventure story, but adequate."

New Yorker 18:67 Ap 4 '42 60w

DELEHANTY, ELIZABETH—Continued

Reviewed by John Hampson

Spec 169:246 S 11 '42 210w

"Miss Delehanty in this first novel has brought off a nice and nearly successful mixture of effects. . . . Rather unfortunately, she has chosen to add to this a love affair which, a little fruity at the start, grows steadily more and more luscious and scarifying."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p437 S 5 '42 360w

DE LIMA, AGNES, and others. Little red school house; with an introd. by John Dewey. 355p il $3.50 Macmillan

371.36 Education—Experimental methods. New York (city). Little red school house, inc. (W) 42-36032

The "little red school house" is an experimental progressive school in New York city headed and directed by Miss Elisabeth Irwin. This book, in a series of chapters contributed by various hands, describes the work and ideals of the school and the curriculum of each group from the nursery years thru the eighth grade. Index.

Booklist 38:204 F 15 '42

"Miss De Lima makes no pretense that here is a non-partisan view. Identified with progressive education from its beginning, she spent a year at the school to gather material for the book, and she frankly supports everything for which the school stands. She and her fifteen collaborators have produced the most comprehensive and detailed guide to progressive education in practice." Mabel Spinney

+ Books p16 Je 14 '42 850w

"The presentation in this book is so clear, so interesting, so honest, and so disarmingly reasonable that a school which is developing an activity program might well use the book not only for its own guidance but for converting the opposition. Few parents or conservative teachers who had once read this account could fail to understand what an activity program is like, and few could resist its appeal." P. B. Diederich

+ El School J 42:706 My '42 500w

"An excellent account of a much-discussed subject." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 67:39 Ja 1 '42 110w

Pratt p11 O '42

"This book might be called an autobiography of a school,—the Little Red School House. It is written by Agnes de Lima. Yet in a very real sense it is written by the school. 'We' talk throughout the pages, and 'we' means Elisabeth Irwin, the vigorous pioneer in education, the teachers, the parents, the children. Each has solo parts where you hear the individual voices. But throughout you hear the voice of the composite school. That Miss de Lima has been able to transmit this composite voice so clearly is no small achievement. No one with less human sensibility, with less educational background, with less social penetration, could have achieved this Trilby-like success." L. S. Mitchell

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ja 31 '42 700w

School & Society 55:84 Ja 17 '42 40w

"The philosophy and practice of the Little Red School House are of vital significance at this perilous moment in American life, when those concerned with education must face anew and squarely the imperative that confronts them: the necessity of fortifying children with disciplined powers of thought and action, honest and independent mental attitudes, unshakable values and human sympathies, the habit of cooperation, and the determined will to put their best into democratic society. The book bears witness to this need, and to a wise and gallant effort to meet it." Katharine Taylor

+ Survey 78:285 O '42 700w

DE MENT, JACK A. Fluorescent chemicals and their applications. 240p il $4.25 Chemical pub. co.

535.3 Fluorescence 42-8187

"It is the object of the author, who is a chemist with The Mineralogist Laboratories and associate editor of The Mineralogist Magazine, to tabulate in the present volume the greater number of the known fluorescent substances. Nearly 3,000 such chemicals have been listed. In addition, there are chapters which deal with the sources of ultraviolet light, technique of observing fluorescence and the applications of fluorescent chemicals." Chem & Met Eng

"While it is true that the book contains some information that may be interesting or helpful to the chemist, yet it is necessary to point out some serious deficiencies. Its style gives evidence of haste and carelessness in composition. The treatment is superficial and too often pseudo-scientific. Its discussions, which are sometimes poorly balanced, indicate a lack of comprehension and understanding of present scientific viewpoints. The price for such a small book seems inexcusably high." G. R. Fonda

+ Am Chem Soc J 64:1983 Ag '42 300w

"The book, intended primarily for the research chemist, is well and interestingly written. However, it is doubtful if the information would be of much value to practicing engineers."

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:212 My '42 130w
N Y New Tech Bks 27:24 Ap '42

DE MENT, JACK A., and DAKE, HENRY CARL. Uranium and atomic power; a comprehensive, practical and theoretical exposition of the uranium minerals, based on the chemistry of uranium, and including the possibilities of atomic power. 335p il $5 Chemical pub. co.

546.79 Uranium. Radioactivity 42-5728

"Uranium is discussed mainly from a chemical point of view, presenting unusual facts pertinent to the subject. Chapters are devoted to the study of atomic power, the various uranium minerals, prospecting for those minerals, the physics and chemistry of the subject, and specific and special methods in uraniumometry. The volume concludes with a good bibliography and appendices containing tables." N Y New Tech Bks

"A diligent reader will possibly glean information out of this collection. The reviewer was often reminded of the style of popular magazines, and he was therefore not always aware of studying a scientific treatise. . . . Taken with a grain of salt, the book by Messrs. De Ment and Dake will make good reading." F. C. Nachod

Chem & Met Eng 49:167 Je '42 300w
N Y New Tech Bks 27:13 Ja '42

DEMILLE, GEORGE E. Catholic movement in the American Episcopal church. 130p $2.50 Church hist. soc.

283.73 Protestant Episcopal church in the U.S.A.—Catholic movement 42-847

A study of the rise, historical development, conflicts, and present status of the Anglo-Catholic movement in the Protestant Episcopal church in America. The author prefers the terms Catholic, or high church, instead of the more usual term Anglo-Catholic. Bibliography. Index.

"A more fair-minded and judicious history of this very controversial question could not be written."

+ Christian Century 58:1579 D 17 '41 230w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 156:16 Mr 1 '42 330w

DEMING, DOROTHY. Ginger Lee: war nurse. 227p $2 Dodd

(W) 42-2417

Penny Marsh's chum, Ginger Lee, is the heroine of this story. Ginger's year (1941) in a southern army camp, her work, her adaptation to army rules and schedules, and her romance, are described for older girls.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Mr 8 '42 300w

"Characterization is good, and the hospital setup and aspects of nursing seem authentic; in these respects, superior to Ann Bartlett, Navy Nurse by Martha Johnson. A romance with satisfactory outcome, this book apparently concludes, rather than reopens, the series. Format like the 'Penny Marsh' books, with same age appeal." Maude Adams
+ Library J 67:225 Mr 1 '42 60w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p8 Je 21 '42 30w
Wis Lib Bul 38:71 Ap '42

DE MONTMORENCY, SIR GEOFFREY FITZ-HERVEY. Indian states and Indian federation. (Current problems ser) 166p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

342.54 India—Politics and government. India—Constitutional history [42-20572]

"Small handbook on confusing subject little understood in the United States, by former Governor of the Punjab. . . Thesis is governmental relation of the Indian states, those ruled by native princes, to the British Government. Problems involved in fitting these states (some five hundred and seventy) into an Indian federation are explained, with their historical background." Library J

Reviewed by Taraknath Das
Ann Am Acad 223:214 S '42 950w

Reviewed by F. L. D. Goodrich
Library J 67:581 Je 15 '42 100w
Spec 168:314 Mr 27 '42 150w

"Sir Geoffrey brings a balanced as well as an informed judgment to bear on questions of Indian States polity. The few previous books exclusively devoted to this theme have usually been both voluminous and partisan; but this contribution to the Current Problems series will neither tire the reader who knows a little of India and wants to know more, nor irritate those who have a background of knowledge and experience."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p150 Mr 28 '42 600w

DEMPEWOLFF, RICHARD. Famous old New England murders and some that are infamous. 293p il $2.50 Daye

343 Murder. Crime and criminals—New England 42-17788

"There are eight of them; and grim tales they are. But one of the most striking features of this collection of famous—and infamous—old New England murders is its variety. There are crimes of greed and of horrible mania, of desperate impulse and of infatuation; and there is one which remains a strange and fascinating mystery—the case of the victim found alive and hearty after his supposed murderers had been condemned to death." N Y Times

"It is no trouble for murder fans to find fault with an author's selections. Every one has his own favorites. But I think Mr. Dempewolf has chosen very well indeed. I found it a rousing good book from first to last. It contains many illustrations, every one of them good and one that is superb." Stewart Holbrook

+ Books p14 Jl 12 '42 850w
+ N Y Times p9 Jl 12 '42 480w

"Fine collection."
+ New Yorker 18:56 Jl 11 '42 40w

DEMPSEY, PAUL WHEELER. Grow your own vegetables. 184p il $2 Houghton
635 Vegetable gardening (W) 42-8822

The author of this manual for the home vegetable garden, has been for twenty-five years connected with the Waltham Field Station of the Massachusetts State college, and has, moreover, raised the vegetables for his family of eight in his own kitchen garden. The book contains specific directions for raising various kinds of vegetables as well as general chapters on soil, planting, storing, and preparing vegetables for the table. Index.

Booklist 38:303 Ap 15 '42

"An excellent volume." R. S. Lemmon
+ Books p15 Ap 19 '42 120w

"The book should prove of greater value to the experienced gardener than to the beginner, and for the specialist there are exhaustive appendices of fertilizers, diseases and pests, the care of the soil and its produce."

+ Boston Globe p17 Ap 22 '42 190w
Wis Lib Bul 38:64 Ap '42

DENISON, MRS MURIEL (GOGGIN). Happy tramp; the story of a little girl and her old English sheep dog; il. by Marguerite Bryan. 260p $2 Dodd

(W) 42-14631

An English soldier recovering from wounds received in the present war, with his ten-year-old daughter, came to America to care for prize English sheep dogs on an American estate. Biddie's special pet among the dogs, because he was the runt, plays an important role in the Bensons' decision to stay in America. For readers of ten and older.

"There is something about these Denison children, sturdy, self-willed, yet touchingly willing to attempt self-discipline as soon as they get the idea, that appeals to little girls. They will recognize Biddie as one of themselves." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Je 7 '42 450w

"The training of the dogs is an interesting background and there is a fairly exciting plot."
+ Cath World 156:376 D '42 50w

"Muriel Denison's new book, 'Happy Tramp,' with illustrations by Marguerite Bryan, will find its way into the hearts of eight- to twelve-year-old readers. . . It's fun to follow this story of Biddie, a dauntless little girl and her devoted Runt. Dog lovers will surely like it, for it is brimming over with dogs of all kinds." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 28 '42 160w

"[An] unusual story, brimful of lovable dogs. A gay story, with underlying spirit of devotion and courage. Recommended." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 67:631 Jl '42 50w

DENKER, MRS NAN (WATSON). Aweigh on a windjammer; an adventure book. 221p il $1.50 Wilde

42-23953

The adventures of a South African boy who ran away to sea, and for years sailed in all types of vessels "down under." On the eve of becoming skipper of his own ship he learned that his country needed him, and he gave up his dream, and returned to the veldt. For older boys.

"The whole thing is well done and full of life. Should interest boys from twelve to sixteen." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 67:1070 D 1 '42 50w

"The chapter headings of this book lead the reader to anticipate breathless suspense; Anchors aweigh, Sea legs, Poachers, A knife in the dark, Man overboard, Men without fire, Deserters, Gold, Gold rush, The wreck of the Elizabeth, Treasure. Yet the reading is disappointing because of the lack of vivid detail—the descriptions are too general and the tense moments passed over in such a matter of fact manner that they are gone before one quite realizes what is happening." M. G. Springfield Republican p7e D 27 '42 110w

DENNIS, WESLEY. Flip and the cows; pictures by [the author]. [63p] $1.50 Viking (W) 42-22827

Picture story book about Flip, the colt. Flip was terrified of cows and when he found himself in a field with a whole herd of them he did the one thing calculated to free him of his fear forever. For ages five to eight.

Booklist 39:73 N 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 O 11 '42 200w

DENNIS, WESLEY—Continued

"Every picture in the book is irresistible."

A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:419 N '42 60w

"Story and pictures have equal charm. Recommended." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 67:955 N 1 '42 50w

"How an unpremeditated but neatly turned somersault saves the day for Flip and proves that facing one's fear is worth more than any amount of running away is demonstrated conclusively and hilariously in pictures which have captured the endearing foolishness, the combination of grace and leggy awkwardness, the sense of wild movement which belong to all foals." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 N 29 '42 190w

"The ingratiating foal of Mr. Dennis's first picture book is still only a colt and continuing his education in this second volume. There is humor in his encounter with five alarmingly curious cows, and the action drawings of horses and cattle are superb." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 18:106 D 12 '42 40w

DENNISON, LEONIDAS RICHARDSON.

Devil mountain. 271p il $2.50 Hastings house

518.7 Venezuela—Description and travel

42-24585

The author of this book of adventure in the wilderness, is an American mining engineer who has made many trips into unexplored regions of Venezuela. On one trip he was flown by a free-lance aviator to view a hitherto un-mapped mountain, Auyan-Tepui, at that time inaccessible by any other means.

"The author is observant and writes entertainingly though rather amateurishly, of Indian customs, jungle scents and sounds and arduous river travel. The book is somewhat marred by an assumption of white man's superiority, but despite this defect it is worth reading as an account of a far away land, previously unvisited."

+ Books p21 O 18 '42 300w

"Except for the presence of the mysterious 'Devil Mountain' in the whole narrative's background, this book does not differ greatly from others of its kind. It is written in an easy, if not particularly expert, colloquial style, and with a pleasant, unboastful spirit. Twenty-seven photographs offer varying interest, and there is a good, clear map."

+ N Y Times p38 N 29 '42 440w

Spring'd Republican p6 D 17 '42 300w

DENNY, HAROLD NORMAN.

Behind both lines. 209p $2.50 Viking

940.5472 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939—Prisoners and prisons (W) 42-25461

In November 1941, the author, an American war correspondent, was caught in the front line of battle in Libya and captured by the Germans. This book is a record of his experiences in prison camps in Italy and Germany and his eventual release.

Booklist 39:198 Ja 15 '43

Reviewed by Allen Raymond

Books p5 N 22 '42 1000w

Cath World 156:635 F '43 200w

Reviewed by W. R. Deuel

N Y Times p3 N 22 '42 900w

"A straightforward job, sensibly and effectively handled."

+ New Yorker 18:99 N 28 '42 50w

"The genial personality of the author shines through his description of the trials borne in common with his fellow-prisoners and I feel sure he did much to raise their morale. There is no word of complaint or captious criticism in all his contacts with the Imperial forces, and, after his capture, not even of his jailors. On the contrary, he stresses every kindness he received, particularly from the Italians who were 'as friendly as their duties permitted and sometimes went well beyond their duties on our behalf'. . . Mr. Harold Denny was taken prisoner in November 1941; after reading this refreshing and illuminating volume, we cannot but regret that the New York Times was deprived of the services of this trained observer for the period of his internment." Murray Harris

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 N 28 '42 600w

"The whole book is an account of an amazing odyssey, but Mr. Denny has made no attempt to color it as a heroic one. His descriptions of the desert warfare are tersely vivid, precise and comprehensive." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 9 '42 750w

DE POLNAY, PETER.

Magnificent idiot [Eng title: Boo]. 300p $2 Doubleday [8s Secker & Warburg]

42-16840

Boo, the chief figure in this satirical novel, is a handsome young man—and a congenital idiot. His father, a butler, does all he can to cover up his son's lack; the father's mistress becomes interested in the boy and leaves him a fortune; and a beautiful woman, tired of life and addicted to drink, falls in love with him and marries him. Tho the tragic end is inevitable the story is told with lightness and humor.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Drew

Atlantic 170:160 D '42 330w

"This story might have floundered into half a dozen pitfalls, but the author keeps a tight rein on his wild plot. The narrative is consistent within itself, however remote from everyday realism. And the style matches the bizarre pattern of emotions." Lisle Bell

+ Books p14 O 11 '42 450w

Boston Globe p21 N 18 '42 160w

"Improbable, unnatural, and obviously satirical. Appeal limited. Conservative libraries avoid." G. W. Hill

Library J 67:845 O 1 '42 70w

"There are suicide, murder, two deaths by motor accident, but comedy is first in a tragedy-comedy of the reactions of sophisticated people to a simpleton's uncomplicated actions. The idea has freshness, and good invention marches with tough tenderness to give attractiveness to an unusual novel." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 9 '42 130w

"Shows a lively style, a good sense of dramatic incident and a capacity for ironic characterization. . . Dealing with the subtle problem of the identification of the human subconscious, the author has room for great inventive improvisation. That he spoils it by lapsing too frequently into a clever, smirking tone, is entirely his own fault. Had he taken his book more seriously, it could have attained the ironic strength which the theme deserves." Isaac Rosenfeld

+ New Repub 107:520 O 19 '42 120w

"Boo surprised me by compelling me to read it right through with speculative interest. I was uncertain of the legitimacy of a novel about a mindless boy. . . But Mr. de Polnay handles his idea very reasonably, and with neither too much nor too little tenderness. . . The characters are alive and rational and sensitive, and Mr. de Polnay's talents carry the whole thing off much more agreeably than one might suppose." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 168:44 Ja 9 '42 170w

"There are some sharply ironical passages in the novel and moments of comedy with the youthful and heady flavour of bitterness that Mr. de Polnay finds so much to his taste. The garnishings, indeed, though not quite so piquant as on the earlier occasions, provide what is most enjoyable in this unexpected dish. The principal substance, however, is of dubious quality; Boo, to be candid, seems a too artificial creation, whose fascination or pathos is not apparent to the reader."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p653 D 27 '41 450w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM.

Sweet Genevieve. 301p $2.50 Scribner

(W) 42-12601

The Jenny Breen loved her sweetheart David, devotedly, she hated the small town life of Sac Prairie more and resented the tyrannical rule of her father. Her chance of escape came when the leading lady of a showboat troupe fell ill, and Jenny was given her place. In time Jenny married a young actor, had a baby and lost her husband—first to another woman and then in the war—and finally she came home again to Sac Prairie and David.

Booklist 38:427 J1 1 '42

"In lyrical prose with occasional purple splotches, Mr. Derleth brings Jennie's odyssey to a conclusion that will be heart-warming to lovers of romance." Page Cooper

Books p10 My 3 '42 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '42

"There are several vivid descriptions of river life and of the Sac Prairie atmosphere, but the story is a series of predictable incidents taken from the yellow pages of stock. You know what will happen between Jennie and the handsome, enigmatic leading man. . . You know that ultimately young love will conquer all obstacles; but if the author makes you believe it, it is because he has drawn a skillful picture of Davey, the boy who waits back home, the only credible character of them all." Margaret Donaldson

+ — N Y Times p16 My 31 '42 440w

Wis Lib Bul 38:120 J1 '42

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Wisconsin; river of a thousand isles; il. by John Steuart Curry. (Rivers of America) 366p $2.50 Farrar

917.75 Wisconsin river (W) 42-23237

"Derleth has given us full measure, let us say the Wisconsin River in flood. He is descended from a Bavarian family (originally French and named d'Eriette) which came to America more than a century ago and settled in Sauk Prairie." (Books) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:99 N 15 '42

Reviewed by C. B. Firestone

+ Books p7 N 1 '42 1100w

"Mr. Derleth has little humor, and in writing this book he suffers somewhat from the handicap of having written several other books about the Wisconsin-Fox Waterway. Perhaps because they are such old stories to him he writes what seems to me a bit perfunctorily. . . He seldom quits description for interpretation, and he often substitutes generalization for the sharp, speaking, representative peculiarity of the precise fact." Horace Reynolds

+ — N Y Times p16 N 1 '42 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 38:161 N '42

DE ROUSSY DE SALES, RAOUL JEAN JACQUES FRANCOIS. Making of tomorrow. 338p $3 Reynal

901 World politics. World war, 1939-

(W) 42-5535

A French journalist, long a resident of the United States, surveys the causes of the present world conflict, considers what part the United States plays in it and what may be accomplished in the future for democracy. Index.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (11) B & T (1) N Y Times (1)

"This book by a Franco-American journalist is an attempt, shrewd and in some of its aperçus profound, to analyze the elements of the world situation that are fundamentally new." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic My '42 650w

Booklist 38:327 My 1 '42

Bookmark 3:10 My '42

"Instead of predictions de Roussy de Sales offers, in the second half of the book, two analyses. The first is a shrewd study of American democracy. . . The second analysis is of the Germans and their barbarian revolt. . . The author offers no blueprints of the future; but between these two studies there is no doubt of where his hopes reside. Because he is always thoughtful, his book is not always easy reading, but it is a rewarding book for those who will take the time to follow its play of ideas. To me it suffers from its lack of organization; had it been more severely pruned, its leading themes more carefully reasoned and co-ordinated, I suspect that it would have supplied a more lasting analysis of our times." Walter Millis

+ — Books p5 Ap 19 '42 1500w

"In a literary style most vivid, graceful and enthralling, M. de Sales expounds with great force ideas that are not always well founded, but are always arresting and commanding." C. W. Thompson

+ Cath World 155:246 My '42 600w

"Unusual interest and importance attach to this book. M. de Sales, a French journalist who has lived for a long time in this country, possesses some of the best qualities of the Latin mind. He is learned and cultured without being heavy and pedantic. He writes sharply and epigrammatically without falling into mere wisecracking. He is lucid without the weakness of oversimplification. And he has obviously thought much and hard, as every civilized and intelligent man must, about the crisis of contemporary civilization, about the uncertain contours of the world of tomorrow. Even on those aspects of history and philosophy and contemporary politics where he does not, in this reviewer's opinion, make out a convincing case, he is always stimulating and worthy of serious attention." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Christian Century 55:594 My 6 '42 1400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '42

"M. Roussy de Sales is a first-rate journalist. His intelligent interpretation of our palsied world makes good copy for any editor. Even when he digresses, as he frequently does, it is usually to make some sparkling comment. He makes sharp deductions from the evidence as when he illustrates post-war pacifism from the cult of the Unknown Soldier. Yet as one reads along, one becomes aware that interlarded with brilliant observations is much that is banal." J. N. Moody

+ — Commonweal 36:138 My 29 '42 700w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:771 J1 '42 60w

Reviewed by E. P. Potter

Library J 67:318 Ap 1 '42 70w

"The title of this profound book is not altogether apt, for the book is weakest when dealing with 'tomorrow.' In estimating future prospects the author's critical intelligence betrays him into a skepticism that is unable to sustain his faith in any of the visions of a better world in which he would like to believe. It is most valuable in its searching analysis of the historical roots and the present problems of the world catastrophe." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ — Nation 154:464 Ap 18 '42 1000w

Reviewed by George Soule

New Repub 106:677 My 18 '42 850w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p1 Ap 26 '42 1550w

"Books on the war fall roughly into two divisions: those that try to answer the question 'What's happening?' and those that try to answer the question 'What's it all about?' Books in the first category have been numerous and often excellent, those in the second rarer and often confused and marred by special pleading. Of these what's-it-all-about books I recommend, as one of the most lucid that have come my way, 'The Making of Tomorrow,' by the brilliant political journalist Raoul de Roussy de Sales." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:74 Ap 18 '42 450w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 18:56 D 26 '42 200w

Pratt p19 D '42

"Here is an author who says at the end of his book that he has raised several questions without trying to answer them. . . It might be wondered why anybody should buy such a work when the counters are covered with books that will tell you the answers to practically all current questions; but you will find it worth your three dollars none the less." Elmer Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 Ap 18 '42 1650w

Reviewed by Alzada Comstock

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 19 '42 750w

Reviewed by Mildred Adams

Survey G 31:331 J1 '42 430w

DE ROUSSY DE SALES, R. J. J. F.—Continued
 "This book about the issues of World War II offers no solutions, draws few conclusions, tells nobody who has thought about the subject at all any fact that he did not know before. Nevertheless, it is one of the important books about World War II. Reason: it brings into the open some of the fears that are secretly gnawing at democratic minds. Its method is that of the doctor who tries to make a mental patient cure himself by laying bare the hidden causes of his psychosis. Its therapeutic value is great, for the democracies are bedeviled by fear."

+ Time 39:88 My 4 '42 1950w

Wis Lib Bul 38:95 Je '42

"Mr. de Sales does not provide us with any plan for making tomorrow, but he does set forth, with great skill and intelligence, the limiting conditions within which tomorrow will, with our aid or without it, inevitably be made. Supposing anyone to have a neat plan for the making of tomorrow, I should think he could do nothing better, as a precaution, than to read this book carefully, and then take another look at his plan." Carl Becker

+ Yale R n s 31:805 summer '42 1600w

DE SEVERSKY, ALEXANDER P. Victory through air power. 354p il maps $2.50; pa $1 Simon & Schuster

940.544 World war, 1939—Aerial operations. Aeronautics, Military. Air defenses

(W) 42-11421

"This book tells how America can win the war. It shows how air power has won all the crucial battles to date. It explains why the United States is ideally equipped to use that weapon and take the offensive against the Axis. Major Seversky fought as a pilot in the last war. He has designed fighting planes and bombsights. He holds many aviation records and honors. His knowledge of military aviation has enabled him to call the turn on almost every major development on the various fighting fronts." Publisher's note

Appeared on Best Seller list in: ALA (1) Books (31) BM (1) N Y Times (17) PW (11) RB (5) SB (2) W (1)

Reviewed by F. V. Drake
 Atlantic Je '42 750w

Booklist 38:328 My 1 '42

Bookmark 3:6 My '42

"Major Seversky writes with indignation, but it does not weaken the urgency of the story he has to tell. In places he rubs thin the line between fact and possibility in the terrible new weapons he is describing. To talk of round-the-world non-stop flights, for example, or giant bomber armadas attacking us from over the two Poles does not strengthen his central point to our minds. But most of this book describes advances in the science of mass destruction as real as Rotterdam or Chungking." Joseph Barnes

+ Books p1 Ap 19 '42 1400w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 17 '42 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '42

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
 Foreign Affairs 20:775 J1 '42 50w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
 Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 30w

Manchester Guardian p3 S 25 '42 270w

"It is easy to pick minor flaws in 'Victory Through Air Power.' Some of Major de Seversky's interpretations of war events are highly questionable. . . But while many specific statements of this book may be questioned, an openminded reader is obliged to conclude that the author is more nearly right than wrong in his views." D. W. Mitchell

+ Nation 154:603 My 23 '42 1550w

"Perhaps no airman today has a more devoted following and a more bitter opposition than Major de Seversky. Like the late Billy Mitchell, to whom the book is dedicated, the Major has talked and written himself into such disfavor at the War Department that his very great abilities are being shamefully neglected, despite the fact that some of America's best planes are directly traceable to Seversky designs. Be that as it may, his book is interesting, provocative and instructive reading."

J. G. Harrison

+ New Repub 106:609 My 4 '42 1250w

"This is an air war. The statement has been made several times and with varying degrees of emphasis; and it is both the defect and the virtue of what is probably the most brilliant book yet to appear on the war that Major de Seversky really believes it. No one has produced a more intelligent and comprehensive analysis of any feature of the world struggle. Probably no one has written anything more truly prophetic; and no one is more wrong-headed." Fletcher Pratt

+ N Y Times p1 My 3 '42 850w

"Major Alexander de Seversky would not agree with me but I don't see how a layman can make an intelligent judgment on his startling book, 'Victory Through Air Power.' All I can do is suggest that it is the duty of every adult citizen who can lay his hands on $2.50 to buy it and ponder its message. . . This book should have an explosive effect on our military thought. It goes far beyond the exciting but rather vague generalities of Colonel Kernan's book. It sets a pattern for victory. Perhaps it is not the only pattern. Perhaps it is not the best one. It is at least a concrete one." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:74 Ap 25 '42 340w

Reviewed by H. A. DeWeerd

Pol Sci Q 57:432 S '42 1350w

Pratt p19 O '42

"It may well be that the name Seversky in the Aviation period of world stabilization will occupy a place commensurate with that of Admiral Mahan. His book is literally packed with original material; it is a book of destiny. . . This is a 'must book' for the air-minded as well as for all who stand in need of constructive hope, and for the confused who inquire and want to be shown a clear road to victory without the destruction of our civilization and our loved ones." H. E. Hartney

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 My 2 '42 1350w

"Contention and criticism will doubtless follow the publication of this book. The views of its author have long made him a thorn in the side of military and bureaucratic conservatives and of certain selfish commercial interests. His aeronautical record, however, speaks for itself, and it is to be hoped that his will no longer be a voice crying in the wilderness. . . Major Seversky's ideas on military aviation [should be] respected, and followed. This book is a challenge." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:1 My '42 1800w

"Few people in Great Britain will be inclined to go with him all the way, preferring to regard his prophecies as some years before their time and unlikely to be reached during the present war. Naval and military strategists may be horrified and denounce his doctrine as heretical. But whether one believes that his forecast of events five years ahead will come to pass then, or not for some years after, the fact remains that Major Seversky has made a most thought-provoking contribution to the study of aviation in its relation to world war."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p450 S 12 '42 2050w

"Major Seversky's power of analysis is great, his imagination is bold and sweeping, his grasp of his subject masterful. Beside his vision of the future of air power, the conceptions of those in charge of our present air strategy seem earthbound and cautious. But his enthusiasm sometimes carries him too fast and too far. . . Nevertheless, he has written a brilliant book. He shows what might be done in three-dimensional warfare if we could only break through the crust of two-dimensional thinking." F. S. Dunn

+ Yale R n s 31:810 summer '42 750w

DE SHERBININ, BETTY. Bindweed. 278p $2.50 Morrow

42-7957

Story of an Argentinian family, living in Buenos Aires. The family, after the death of the mother, falls under the domination of his widow, Senora Barros. She arranges her daughter's marriage, rules her son-in-law, controls his mother, etc., but when it comes to her niece and adopted daughter Clara, she finds her control has its limits.

Booklist 38:384 Je 15 '42

Bookmark 3:15 My '42

"The story is so swift, the characterizations so keen and the setting so unusual that the theme is saved from being too obvious. Miss de Sherbinin's second novel is as full bodied as her first. There is nothing to betray her youth—she is only twenty-five—except that while she analyses the older generation she sympathizes with the younger. She is a natural-born story-teller and a sound and skillful writer. Added to this is her familiarity with a locale which is unknown to most of us and interesting to all of us." Agnes Rothery

+ Books p8 Ap 12 '42 600w

"The book is immature, because the author has not taken the trouble to integrate her ideas and to let her characters grow slowly. . . The adroit manner in which the heroine's mother maneuvers her engagement does justice to an ancient and honourable art. But as the story goes on and the hero tries to break away the author loses her grip on reality. She has ability, however; what she needs is a little time."

— + Cath World 155:253 My '42 200w

Commonweal 36:187 Je 12 '42 70w

"A pleasant, though uninspired, book."

Nation 154:497 Ap 25 '42 120w

"Whether 'Bindweed' is actually representative of Argentine mores is a matter which I cannot pretend to determine. In any event, it is a plausible, shrewd and biting little tale which, though it ends somewhat grimly, is not unamusing." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 12 '42 700w

"The South American background is interesting and the atmosphere of suffocating affection is skillfully created."

New Yorker 18:86 Ap 11 '42 80w

"A book like this is the writer's gift to the lover of novels who finds too few genuine novels to love. Its material is entirely fresh, its point of view mature, and it is written with a compactness and simplicity that may lead the unwary, accustomed to more clamorous tones, to mistake restraint for slowness." Bess Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 Ap 11 '42 600w

DE SILVA, HARRY REGINALD. Why we have automobile accidents. 394p maps $4 Wiley

614.862 Automobiles—Accidents. Automobiles—Driving 42-20412

A survey of the various factors which are involved in the high rate of automobile accidents in the United States. The author is a research associate in the Institute of human relations at Yale. Partial contents: The development of our national highway accident problem; Speed; Skill; How highway safety is measured; Incompetent drivers; Pedestrians; Training and examining drivers; Control of the licensed driver; A proposed highway accident prevention research program. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. W. Hedrich

Am J Pub Health 33:87 Ja '43 320w

Booklist 39:64 N 1 '42

DESMOND, MRS ALICE (CURTIS). Jorge's journey; a story of the coffee country of Brazil; il. by Flora Nash De Muth. 158p $1.75 Macmillan

(W) 42-11248

Jorge was a twelve-year-old orphan who lived in Brazil and worked on the great Gomes coffee plantation. Jorge had only one pet, his parrot, and when the man with whom he lived threatened both Jorge and his parrot, the boy gave Chiquita to the little daughter of the plantation owner, and he himself ran away. On his way to São Paulo, Jorge worked to earn his living and learned much about coffee growing, harvesting, and selling. Arrived at his destination he was able to do a great favor to Senhor Gomes, and earned a trip to the United States.

Booklist 38:372 Je 1 '42

"The book is timely and useful in a school library, and its decorations, jacket and end papers particularly attractive." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 3 '42 430w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:119 N 20 '42 10w

"Teachers will welcome book for both its South American background and its excellent information on well-known product. Recommended." R. W. Stewart

+ Library J 67:476 My 15 '42 100w

Wis Lib Bul 38:141 O '42

DESMOND, MRS ALICE (CURTIS). Martha Washington, our first lady. 308p il $2.50 Dodd B or 92 Washington, Martha (Dandridge) Custis—Juvenile literature (W) 42-24817

A partly fictionalized biography of General Washington's wife beginning with the ball when, at fifteen years of age, she was introduced to society, and ending with her death. For older girls. Bibliography.

Booklist 39:186 Ja 1 '43

"A valuable biography for the teens." M. L. Becker

+ Books p18 N 15 '42 400w

Cath World 156:378 D '42 180w

"Recommended for all libraries for young people's collections." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 68:38 Ja 1 '43 100w

"Certainly, the energetic, steadfast friendly woman portrayed here is a figure to touch one's imagination and sympathy. The author has cast a rosier glow over her romance with Washington than have most of his biographers, and she is pretty hard on the dashing Sally Cary, who held such a large part of George's affections; but in any case she has given us a warmly human biography which girls in their 'teens will find highly readable." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p8 D 27 '42 850w

"A sympathetic and romantic portrait of Martha Dandridge Custis Washington which to girls in their middle and late teens, may prove as easy to read as a novel. It is fluently written and gives much personal and period detail—perhaps too much, but all of it of the kind to interest the feminine mind and helpful in re-creating the past." K. S. W.

+ — New Yorker 18:114 D 12 '42 50w

DEUEL, WALLACE RANKIN. People under Hitler. 392p $3.50 Harcourt

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement. Germany—Economic conditions. Germany—Social conditions (W) 42-36022

The author was, for a number of years in the 1930s, the Berlin correspondent of the Chicago Daily News. His book is first, an attempt to explain why Hitler came to power and secondly, an account of what life is like, in Germany and Nazi-dominated countries, under the Hitler regime. Bibliographical note. Index.

"This book by a journalist is full of material one recognizes from other books and sources, and it is sometimes pretentious in its generalizations about the Germans, as in the ludicrous opening chapter, 'The Germans: Are they Human?' Yet it is a worthwhile addition to the books on Germany if only because it tries to show the life under National Socialism of the ordinary citizen."

— + Am Hist R 48:182 O '42 100w

"In the present year of decision this work deserves to be regarded as required reading for sociologists and laymen alike." F. L. Schuman

+ Am J Soc 48:291 S '42 230w

Reviewed by Nelchior Palyi

Am Soc R 7:455 Je '42 320w

"There is more personal drama in Shirer, and Otto Tolischus wrote a crisper survey of the causes of Nazi military and economic achievements. Mr. Deuel sometimes displays a slight tendency to miss the forest for the individual trees. But he provides a mine of valuable information, not so much about Germany at war as about the everyday life of the German under the Nazi order—or disorder." W. H. Chamberlin

DEUEL, W. R.—Continued

+ Atlantic Ap '42 200w

Booklist 38:188 F 1 '42

Bookmark 3:13 Mr '42

"Unforgettable book. . . It is tremendously important to read it." W. L. Shirer

+ Books p3 F 8 '42 1350w

"This is a mature, comprehensive study of the Nazi system. The author, one-time foreign correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, spent nine years in Germany, before and after Hitler's rise to the Chancellorship. Consequently, there is a steadier line of continuity in People Under Hitler than is discernible in most books on the subject." J. F. Thorning

+ Cath World 155:250 My '42 450w

Christian Century 59:322 Mr 11 '42 130w

Reviewed by G. E. Shipley, Jr.

Churchman 156:17 Mr 1 '42 300w

Commonweal 35:443 F 20 '42 130w

"The present work of Mr. Deuel . . . needs no apology for it is one of the very best. Objective, factual, utterly impersonal—it builds up a picture of life under Hitler so terrifying, yet so convincing that it should become one of our primary sources for knowledge of the Third Reich." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 20:781 Jl '42 80w

"The volume is well written, offers a 'fair' appraisal of the Nazi regime, and is recommended to libraries not already over-stocked on the subject." R. H. McDonough

Library J 67:85 Ja 15 '42 100w

"Deuel's book is a treasure-trove of information—an ideal combination of clean thinking, painstaking research, and brilliant journalism." Ruth Norden

+ Nation 154:196 F 14 '42 750w

Reviewed by Sybille Bedford

New Repub 106:304 Mr 2 '42 240w

"One is somewhat disappointed to find that Mr. Deuel has in part been content to cover well-traveled ground, such as the history and psychology of Hitler, rather than eager to supply information about subjects in which Americans are vitally interested. We should have liked to hear a little about such enigmatical figures as Fritz Berber, rather than more about Hermann Goering, particularly since nothing new is reported about Goering. Still it is a good book, right in spirit and purpose, worthy of the traditions of American journalism." G. N. Shuster

+ N Y Times p1 F 8 '42 1200w

"The second part of 'People Under Hitler' contains the real stuff. It is called 'Brave New World' and is to my knowledge the first writing to offer anything like a detailed picture of the way Germans actually live and think. . . This is an excellent book to read to prepare yourself in advance, just in case some Americans a year or so from now start suggesting that maybe after all we can do business with Hitler." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:59 F 7 '42 700w

Pratt p23 O '42

"By far the best parts of this volume are Mr. Deuel's own words, not his quotations from other writers. He may have thought that these bolstered his views. If so, he did not need them. He speaks with complete authority in his own right. What he has written is a standard work about our principal enemy. We shall have to know more about this foe in order to defeat him." H. C. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 F 7 '42 600w

"Although Mr. Deuel was the Berlin correspondent of the Chicago Daily News from 1934 until January, 1941, his book is not—like several recent books, by his American colleagues with similar experiences—a piece of reporting. Instead, he has written, from his well-filled notebook and personal observation, the most comprehensive account of National Socialist planning since Professor Roberts's House that Hitler Built." John Stapleton

+ Spec 169:222 S 4 '42 650w

Reviewed by Alzada Comstock
Spring'd Republican p7e F 8 '42 650w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel
Survey G 31:331 Jl '42 330w

Time 39:84 Mr 9 '42 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p410 Ag 22 '42 850w

"Mr. Deuel, taking his stance as an appraiser rather than as a narrator, gives us beautifully balanced chapters on politics, art, diet, music, business, and sociology in modern Germany, as the Nazi ideology has distorted each field. To every chapter he brings much that is new, and to even more of the material he brings his great talent for analysis and balanced estimate. There is also a wealth of anecdote and incident which he uses to clinch his points." W. L. White

+ Yale R n s 31:614 spring '42 420w

DEUTSCH, BABETTE (MRS AVRAHM YARMOLINSKY). Rogue's legacy, a novel about François Villon; drawings by Allen Pope. 392p $2.75 Coward-McCann

Villon, François—Fiction (W) 42-2903

Fictionized biography of François de Montcornier, the vagabond French poet, better known as François Villon. The author has used all available scraps of historical material on this thief and wastrel, who was also a poet, whose poems are remembered today, almost five hundred years after his death.

"Most effective is Miss Deutsch's handling of the medieval sense, part religious and part esthetic, of the transiency of youth and worldly glory. This was Villon's central theme and Miss Deutsch keeps us ever aware of the many and compelling reasons he had for meditating on beauty's ruin, the skull beneath the skin. Villon's contribution was the burden of remorse, the painful awareness of time's defacing hand. Miss Deutsch's contribution is to make us see Villon's life and his poems as one—the life a breathing illustration of the verse and the verse an essence wrung from the life." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p4 Mr 1 '42 850w

"When one is all through with it, one wonders whether these 400 pages were really worth the trouble. Here is not a grand adventure yarn, but the sordid case history of a weak and gifted character going to wrack and ruin. No matter how well you write such matter, you do little at the end but give the reader a dirty taste for his mouth. The illustrations are pleasant." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:652 Ap 17 '42 280w

"Small wonder that people are constantly writing biographies of him, novels and operas in which he sings and fights his swashbuckling way through an unfriendly world in which he always seems to manage to have a good time—or that Miss Deutsch, herself a poet of exquisite taste, should present him with gusto and understanding, as an eternal seeker after an ideal, a carouser and lover, dreamer and thief, a tarnished, damned soul, whose poetry alone revealed the genuine virtue of his spirit."

+ Nation 154:320 Mr 14 '42 150w

"The extant documentation concerning Villon in 'Rogue's Legacy' is brought to such a sharp and living fictional focus that the result for the reader is very like draining a huge beaker of that ruddy Beaune that the poet loved so well. . . Miss Deutsch, as all lovers of contemporary poetry know, is a talented poet in her own right; and this fact is perceptible often enough in the development of her François Villon. Her sensitivity often illuminates obscure moments that the dryer presentations of the pedants have left in deep shadow." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p5 F 22 '42 850w

"Miss Deutsch has done a careful piece of work. . . The background is convincingly fifteenth-century, and Villon himself is a convincing enough rogue, but it's hard to believe, as one reads this book, that Villon was also an immortal poet."

+ New Yorker 18:59 F 28 '42 80w

"Miss Deutsch's portrayal of Villon's relatives, cronies, and of the hot, gusty, noisy life of the mid-fifteenth century is vivid and highly-colored. She has evidently studied the period, though there are a few slips. She cannot avoid—has any novelist except Helen Waddell?—indulging in the historical pathetic fallacy. She gives us the clamor and vice and violence as they seem to us, not as they seemed to the men and women then alive. . . . She can, however, bring alive Villon's associates. The old canon, Villon's mother, the courtiers, fribbles, fops, and poets, the thieves and rogues, the whores and murderers—these are all produced with a magnificent bravura: and all who love Paris, L'Île de la Cité and Notre Dame, and the great roads of France will rejoice in this book by one who has known and can render that inalienable fascination." R. E. Roberts

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:7 F 21 '42 800w

DEUTSCH, LEONHARD, ed. Treasury of the world's finest folk song; with explanatory text by Claude Simpson; lyrics verified by Willard Trask; il. by Emery I. Gondor. 430p $5 Howell, Soskin

784.4 Folk songs (W) 42-23412

Collection of folk songs with music. The arrangement is by country, and for each country there is a brief introductory survey. The compiler has not tried to be comprehensive, and has made an effort to avoid duplicating other collections. There are songs from the Swedish, Norwegian, Danish, German, Flemish, English, Scottish, Irish, Welsh, French, Italian, Spanish, Catalan, Basque, Finnish, Lettish, Lithuanian, Russian, Ukrainian, Polish, Wendish, Yiddish, Bohemian, Moravian, Slovakian, Hungarian, Bosnian, Serbian, Montenegrin, Bulgarian, Macedonian, Rumanian, Greek, and American.

Booklist 39:98 N 15 '42

"These songs will be sung, not filed for reference. They have been chosen for that purpose as 'the world's finest,' in the sense of the most beautifully singable, in the opinion of Dr. Deutsch, whose life has been spent in this blossoming field, gathering music 'that has made Europe a singing continent.' Scarcely one of these would not brighten the program of a song recital, and for this purpose the lyric versions of Willard Trask, lying well in the voice, are especially commendable." David Tilden

+ Books p4 O 4 '42 800w

"In his handling of the songs Mr. Deutsch has used good judgment. He has retained the original form of the tunes and, as he says, has 'nowhere tried to "improve" rhythm or melodic line.' His piano accompaniments are simple and unpretentious. He has not, however, retained the original words, nor even the original titles. It is all right to provide English texts, particularly in skillful versifications like Mr. Trask's. But at least one verse in the original tongue should have been included, and certainly the original title. It might have been useful to have metronome markings for each score. Mr. Simpson has written an intelligent introduction and informative explanatory texts." Howard Taubman

+ — N Y Times p2 O 18 '42 650w

"A volume which for continuous and sustained musical delight would be hard to equal." D. M.

+ Sat R of Lit 26:31 Ja 30 '43 650w

DE VIGHNE, HARRY CARLOS. Time of my life; a frontier doctor in Alaska. 336p $3 Lip-pincott

B or 92 Alaska. Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 42-21801

Autobiography of one of Alaska's pioneer doctors. Beginning when he was a frightened small orphan in New York city, back in 1884, the doctor describes graphically his career as newsboy, hobo, and gun runner, before he took up the study of medicine. In Alaska he was known as Doc, all other doctors were just Doctor. In 1933 when he delivered his two thousandth baby, he named the baby after himself, and the city of Juneau dedicated the telephone directory to him. The book abounds in lively anecdotes.

"The writing is simple and interesting with strong views expressed on various subjects. For instance, he likes neither missionaries nor specialists. He fitted perfectly in a community of rugged individualists." C. C. Lund
+ Atlantic 170:170 D '42 200w

Booklist 39:69 N 1 '42

"Dr. De Vighne's memoirs are chockful of good stuff. He puts on no airs. He understands that, as a medical man, he had many deficiencies. But he was on the spot, and he did the best he could. He seems to have few regrets. Nor should he have." Stanley Walker

+ Books p4 O 18 '42 1250w

"Very readable. Recommended for all libraries." J. G. Fogg

+ Library J 67:737 S 1 '42 60w

"A fascinating book, written in a fresh muscular prose that takes hold of you on the first page and doesn't let go until about page 265, when Dr. De Vighne takes himself out of the spotlight and turns it on his medical experiences. This section is good doctor reminiscence in a dramatic setting, but the punch in 'The Time of My Life' is in the tale of a tough who grew up." E. N. Arling

+ — N Y Times p32 O 25 '42 700w

DEVINE, CARL THOMAS. Inventory valuation and periodic income. 195p $3 Ronald

658.787 Inventories 42-14576

"A critical examination and comparison of inventory valuation and their effect on income. Includes a chapter on the cyclical behavior of the various systems." Management R

Reviewed by L. L. Vance

Am Econ R 32:883 D '42 600w

Management R 31:224 Je '42 30w

DEVOE, ALAN. Lives around us; a book of creaturely biographies; woodcuts by Frank Utpatel. 221p $2 Creative age

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of (W) 42-20267

"Twenty nature studies by author of Down to Earth, dealing with habits of insects, birds, frogs, and other creatures of fields and woods." Library J

Bookmark 4:6 N '42

"Alan Devoe, who writes at his Phudd farm up in Columbia County, of his country neighbors, does so with a sympathy and simplicity which brings them warmly to life. . . . If we may introduce a note of personal prejudice, it may be that in this volume Mr. Devoe is a shade too objective, and in formalizing his biographies almost to a scientific accuracy, he has deprived his readers of the chance to make his acquaintance more intimately." W. P. Eaton

+ — Books p8 D 20 '42 500w

"When he writes of the earth's birth, growth and habits, or when he expresses a doubt about the immortality of the soul, or man's unique endowment of reason, he is of course talking nonsense. But such lapses are rare, and might well be omitted. We enjoyed his presentation of facts; we were not interested in his fantastic hypothesis of what happened 'millions of millions of years ago.'"

+ — Cath World 156:254 N '42 180w

"Recommended for public and all high school libraries." Rice Estes

+ Library J 67:679 Ag '42 80w

"Alan Devoe, author of 'Phudd Hill' and 'Down to Earth,' has written in 'Lives Around Us' another book of nature studies of the same distinguished quality, in which scientific fact and keen observation of the living subject are conveyed through the medium of a style of great clarity, beauty and perception." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p10 S 6 '42 650w

Pratt p12 O '42

"One welcomes another Devoe book as one would a returning season, or a friend who has been away. . . . If you will hush the more insistent voices of the world today around you, and listen attentively, you will hear, from Mr.

DEVOT, ALAN—Continued

Devoe, something lastingly true, that is well expressed. And that is a great deal in a world where we hear so much that is untrue, and where even the true is often so badly expressed." D. C. Peattie

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 S 26 '42 230w

DE VOTO, BERNARD AUGUSTINE (JOHN AUGUST, pseud). Advance agent. 277p $2.50 Little

(W) 41-28072

Complicated spy story which takes place in the United States. Two love stories become involved when the activities of a Massachusetts millionaire with Nazi sympathies are investigated by federal agents.

Booklist 38:177 Ja 15 '42

"The narrative is not without some moments of confusion, but the characters emerge with allegiances rightly labelled. Their worst fault is a tendency to overdo their dialogue." David Tilden

Books p13 Ja 25 '42 480w

"All who like a good spy story—and the word 'all' includes highbrows, midbrows and lowbrows—are sure to like 'Advance Agent' by John August. Dubious characters such a story must have, and it has them; but what is more to the point is that the author has the skill to make them plausible." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 25 '42 490w

"An excellent story of spying and counter-spying. . . Suspense, and lots of it."

+ New Yorker 17:68 Ja 24 '42 40w

"Up-to-minute tale of subversive activities, moving at break-neck speed through one melodramatic situation after another—plus palpitating romance. Exciting."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:18 Ja 31 '42 40w

"'Advance Agent' was evidently intended in part to alarm the nation regarding the activities of German consular agents and so-called American peace movements. At the time of its serialization in 'Collier's' this purpose was possibly pertinent, but now it seems as outmoded as Japanese lanterns."

Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 25 '42 280w

DE VOTO, BERNARD AUGUSTINE (JOHN AUGUST, pseud). Mark Twain at work. 144p il $2 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Clemens, Samuel Langhorne (Mark Twain, pseud) (W) A42-3264

"This volume contains the 'Boy's manuscript,' the 'Huckleberry Finn' notes, and part of the most interesting manuscript preparatory for 'The Mysterious Stranger.' It also contains three essays by Mr. DeVoto, one about the writing of each of the three books involved." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by R. M. Gay

+ Atlantic 170:140 S '42 180w

"The net result of the evidence produced by Mr. DeVoto is to increase our respect for the artist in Mark Twain, an artist working the hard way by trial and error, but still managing to strip his subject to its essentials and for long stretches at a time to be true to his best material. Since Mr. DeVoto never forgets that he is dealing with an instinctive and great artist, his criticism of Mark Twain is the best that we are likely to have for some time to come." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p7 Jl 12 '42 1150w

"When DeVoto is not attempting to defend any thesis, either about Twain or the frontier or himself, he gives us some of the ripened insights that can come only through years of devoted attention to an author. Then he observes how much of the folk-mind itself is revealed through Huck's eyes, the folk-mind of a period that was shaped by 'the tremendous realities of conquering a hostile wilderness and yet shadowed by the unseen world.' Then, too, he stresses the democratic significance of the fact that Twain's most heroic character is Nigger Jim. We can be grateful for these insights, even though DeVoto seems determined to prove through his tub-thumping exaggerations that he possesses every temper except the critical temper." F. O. Matthiessen

+ New Repub 107:179 Ag 10 '42 1200w

"As I have already suggested, I am not sure Mr. DeVoto is right in all his details. But whether he is or not, 'The Symbols of Despair' will take its place as something more than one of the most exciting critical essays in our literature. Whatever may be said of the details, it is profoundly true to the spirit of Mark Twain. The heart-breaking poignancy with which the sufferings of that great heart are brought home to us is beyond all praise. And something like this, surely, is what an artist of outrageous fortune and live." Edward must do if he is to suffer the slings and arrows Wagenknecht

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 5 '42 1100w

"Mr. DeVoto brilliantly records the results of his study of these and other relevant documents. He ponders all his evidence, reasons shrewdly, and unfolds the story of his deductions with skill comparable to that of a mystery novel writer. Consequently, this book sets forth information which hereafter will be indispensable to scholars, and sets it forth in such a way as to make fascinating reading." Walter Blair

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 Je 20 '42 450w

Time 40:76 Jl 20 '42 850w

Wis Lib Bul 38:119 Jl '42

"The most valuable parts of this volume are the critical discussions of the novels themselves. No fairer or more penetrating studies of 'Tom Sawyer' and 'Huckleberry Finn' have ever been written. But Mr. DeVoto's work would lose none of its vigor if he were more generous towards his predecessors." G. S. Haight

+ Yale R n s 32:176 autumn '42 900w

DEWEY, JOHN, and KALLEN, HORACE MEYER, eds. The Bertrand Russell case. 227p $2.50 Viking

B or 92 Russell, Bertrand Arthur William Russell, 3d earl 41-10645

Nine scholars present the facts in the case of Bertrand Russell vs the College of the city of New York. Contents: Behind the Bertrand Russell case, by H. M. Kallen; Social realities versus police court fictions, by John Dewey; Trial by ordeal, new style, by W. H. Hamilton; The problems of education in a democracy, by Richard McKeon; A scandalous denial of justice, by M. R. Cohen; The attitude of the Episcopal church, by G. E. Shieler; The case as a school administrator sees it, by Carleton Washburne; The college, the community, and the Bertrand Russell case, by Y. H. Krikorian; The general pattern, by Sidney Hook.

"Despite its numerous scholarly detours, it is an interesting book. Perhaps the most disturbing aspect of the case is the interference by the court with an action of the Board of Education." E. W. Knight

Ann Am Acad 219:184 Ja '42 550w

Reviewed by P. A. Carmichael

J Philos 38:573 O 9 '41 3600w

Nation 154:664 Je 6 '42 210w

DIAMANT, GERTRUDE (MRS ALTER BRODY). Days of Ofelia; il. by John O'Hara Cosgrave, 2d. 226p $2.75 Houghton

917.2 Indians of Mexico, Mexico—Social life and customs (W) 42-36130

"Ofelia Escoto, her 10-year-old maid, was the opening wedge of the author's interest in the lives of the ordinary people of Mexico, where she had come to make intelligence tests of the Otomi Indians. Gives an excellent and readable interpretation of Mexican life and the problem of the leaders who say

'from this we must forge a nation.'" Wis Lib Bul

Appeared on Best Seller list in: ALA (1) Books (10) B & T (1) N Y Times (2)

"This book is valuable not only for its literary charm but also for its bearing on the whole process of inter-American—or, for that matter, international—understanding. . . I am going to add The Days of Ofelia to my list of twenty must books for Mexico." G. C. Vaillant

+ Atlantic 170:130 S '42 650w

Booklist 38:273 Ap 1 '42

Bookmark 3:12 My '42

"Ofelia is Pippa passing. [But she] does not sing the choruses. For that, Miss Diamant has used, with ironic artistry, a representative collection of the ideological clichés of the last decade, as if she had picked them up around Mexico where the earlier visiting authors dropped them. If it were done with malice—and, indeed, one cannot be sure—the neat, shiny tags could not have been clipped to the given episodes with more exquisite incongruity and delicate humor. . . It is a tribute to the author's skill that one thinks of Ofelia as if by first-hand acquaintance; she might be the little girl next door, such a nice child; you can see she comes of gente decente, honest people." Isabel Paterson

+ Books p1 S 6 '42 2050w

Reviewed by J. A. Magner

Commonweal 36:621 O 16 '42 280w

"Delightful account of everyday happenings of Mexican life. . . Travelers and nontravelers will both enjoy. Attractively illustrated." M. J. Messler

+ Library J 67:629 J1 '42 80w

"A pleasant, informative record of one person's living and traveling in Mexico."

+ Nation 155:245 S 19 '42 150w

"Miss Diamant has written a personal record of her stay in Mexico that is fresh, tender and beguiling, yet somehow manages to say as much of importance about our southern neighbors and their way of life as any scholar's tome. More than the usual Mexican picture book, it is the work of a sensitive observer."

+ New Repub 107:358 S 21 '42 70w

"Ofelia is indeed one of the most lovable and interesting heroines this reviewer has met, in fact or fiction, in many a long day. And in Gertrude Diamant and her book there is the humor that springs from human understanding, like the affection of which, indeed, it is a part. In its charm and penetration and pictorial skill, 'The Days of Ofelia' brings Mexico to our acquaintance with a vivid intimacy." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 A 30 '42 1450w

"This fragile volume is quite uninteresting but not in the slightest degree trivial. It reminds one of Flandrau's 'Viva Mexico!', that classic which Alexander Woolcott will not willingly let die. It reminds one also of the delightful and far too unfamiliar travel books of Henry Baerlein. It is rather more astringent, perhaps, than either Flandrau or Baerlein." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:57 A 29 '42 650w

Pratt p21 D '42

"Intelligence and charm twine through her book so effortlessly that it is without a dull phrase, which is a backhanded way of saying that much of it is scintillating. It gets close to laughter and tears and works up to a gripping climax. . . This may not be a profound book so far as Mexico as a whole is concerned, but it is a warm, delightful book. The reader will lay it down with a sense of full satisfaction, except for the deep regret that he has to say 'adios' to the Escotos perhaps forever." Carleton Beals

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 A 22 '42 750w

Social Studies 33:336 N '42 10w

"It is a delightful story, everyone will enjoy it, and we shall profit, too, by such a picture of Mexicans as human beings. It is not only the next-best thing to a trip to Mexico; because it is thoughtful and honest, it is also a good preparation for such a visit." Elizabeth Wilder

+ Social Studies 34:46 Ja '43 250w

Wis Lib Bul 38:85 My '42

DIAZ DEL CASTILLO, BERNAL. Cortez and the conquest of Mexico by the Spaniards in 1521; abr. & ed. by B. G. Herzog, and il. with sixteenth century Indian drawings of the Conquest. 165p $2.50 Scott, W.R.

972 Mexico—History. Cortés, Hernando (W) 42-36109

Eye witness account of the conquest of Mexico by the Spaniards, written by one of the followers of Cortez, and translated and abridged for grades five to seven.

Booklist 38:279 Ap 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 Je 14 '42 300w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:119 N 20 '42 20w

"B. G. Herzog seems to have wrought a miracle in achieving so readable a narrative. . . I think many boys will be fascinated with this book as a true tale of remarkable adventure. . . The eyewitness narratives seem to me of real value in bringing history to life against a background of authentic art of the period for the boys and girls of this epochal time." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk M 18:117 Mr '42 130w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 18:175 My '42 110w

"Not only an account of the daring and trickery of Cortez, of the hardships of the soldiers, but also of the valiant resistance of the Aztecs. Attractively printed, with authentic illustrations made by Indians to tell story of conquest for the chronicle of Fra Sahagun. Book will be more useful to high school libraries than young people's rooms in public libraries." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 67:269 Mr 15 '42 130w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 30w

"Mrs. Herzog has done her editorial work skillfully. . . The directness of the style, the rapidity with which event follows event, please boys and girls who delight in the epic quality of the narrative. Designed with taste and distinction, well printed and easy to handle, this volume is a useful and important addition to books for young people." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 8 '42 400w

DICE, CHARLES AMOS, and EITEMAN, WILFORD JOHN. Stock market. 2d ed 486p $4 McGraw

332.6 Stock exchange. Speculation. Stocks 41-12490

Second edition of a book which first appeared in 1926 (Book Review Digest, 1927). "The reader will welcome a more than doubling of charts and figures, while noting the omission of numerous tables found in the first edition and also a contraction of the Appendix on 'Stock Market Terminology.' Illustrative material has been brought down to date. . . The volume, like the first edition, is written from the customer's point of view and deals not so much with technical procedure in the mechanism of the market as with the relationship of the customer to the market. Interest is maintained in security price movements as exemplified on the exchange. The analysis of causes, however, remains restricted as in the first edition. In the final chapter (which is new) the traditional theory of the relationship of price to earnings is treated but too briefly and inadequately, as are also the principles of growth stocks and leverage. More valuable is the new material dealing with manipulation and the federal acts of 1933 and 1934 relating to securities and exchanges which has been included." (Am Econ R) Index.

Reviewed by J. E. Kirshman

Am Econ R 32:390 Je '42 220w

Management R 31:72 F '42 60w

DICK, ARTHUR A. Blueprint reading; a visualized method of instruction. 157p il $2.40 Ronald

744.532 Blueprints

The purpose of this book is "to teach students to read blueprints and . . . to give these students an understanding of the fundamental principles underlying mechanical drawing." (Intro) Index.

Booklist 38:229 Mr 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:37 Jl '42

DICK, CAPPY, pseud. See Cleveland, Robert

DICKENS, MONICA. One pair of feet. 310p $2.50 Harper [10s 6d Joseph, M] 610.73 Nurses and nursing (W) 42-36290

Miss Dickens, who several years ago wrote a book about being a cook-general, here tells the story of her experiences as a probationary in an English hospital.

"Nurse Dickens, who is incidentally the great-granddaughter of the author of 'Pickwick Papers,' has a roving eye, a quick laugh, gay vitality." Page Cooper

+ Books p10 Ag 23 '42 550w

"Shrewd observations and amusing comments make good reading." M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 67:895 O 15 '42 20w

"The book is an excellent account of that complicated, absurd, efficient, incredible organism that is a hospital." M. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 8 '42 180w

"Miss Dickens's cheerful book may do much to stimulate reform of the nursing profession, the more so that she is tart but not spiteful. . . It is a mark of Miss Dickens's talent that her portraits give the impression of photographs of real people; and her self-portrait is as sharp and unaffected as the rest." Freda White

+ New Statesman & Nation 24:49 Jl 18 '42 300w

"No more detailed introduction to a lively, unconventional and humanly observant record will be needed by readers of Monica Dickens's earlier memoir of her experiences as a 'cook-general,' the book called 'One Pair of Hands.' The wit which flashed with such merciless brilliance upon the shadowy world of 'below-stairs' now gleams upon the hospital. But if there's mischief in Miss Dickens's mirth, there is also plenty of human sympathy. And there's stuff for a handful of novels in her little vignettes."

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 23 '42 600w

Reviewed by M. S. Ulrich

Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ag 29 '42 400w

"Miss Dickens has both broadened and deepened her outlook since the writing of her first book, but there is still the same sense of adventure, the same delight in novel and rather dangerous events, and, except for her inborn dislike of those in authority, the same sympathy for anyone placed at a disadvantage by illness or poverty."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p251 My 16 '42 300w

Wis Lib Bul 38:134 O '42

DICKERSON, ROY ERNEST. Understanding myself. 180p $2 Assn. press

137.5 Psychology, Applied. Personality 42-36438

"The executive secretary of the Cincinnati Social Hygiene Association and associate director of the American Institute of Family Relations, who has had wide experience in dealing with folk, especially with youth in the YMCA and Boy Scout groups, here sets down a mass of material by which the reader may analyze himself psychologically and bolster up his sociological and spiritual backbone. Can You Manage Your Emotions?—How to Re-make Yourself—Are You Unhappy—How to Control Your Conflicts; What Are Your Fears, Desires, Wishes?—You and Your Ego and Let's Take a Look at Ourselves, are the chapters." (Churchman) Index.

Booklist 39:193 Ja 15 '43

"[The book's] simplicity, directness and concreteness make it intelligible to anyone who is sufficiently mature to have felt the needs that it aims to meet."

+ Christian Century 59:1495 D 2 '42 100w

Churchman 157:31 Ja 15 '43 120w

DICKINSON, CLARENCE EARLE, and SPARKES, BOYDEN. Flying guns; cockpit record of a naval pilot from Pearl Harbor through Midway. 196p $2 Scribner

940.544 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939—Aerial operations (W) 42-25675

Experiences of an American naval pilot during the first six months of the Pacific war.

Booklist 39:135 D 15 '42

"Lieutenant Dickinson's enthralling story is one of courage, resourcefulness and endurance, told with detachment and a restraint approaching humility." P. J. Searles

+ Books p5 N 29 '42 700w

Reviewed by Gilbert Cant

Nation 155:724 D 26 '42 900w

"Out of this war to date have come many personalized accounts of battle experiences in various parts of the world. This one, 'The Flying Guns,' ranks with the best, just as the principal of its two authors—Lieutenant Clarence E. Dickinson, U. S. N.—has been recognized by the Navy Department as the fleet's outstanding combat flier." R. G. Doyle

+ N Y Times p6 N 15 '42 600w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 22 '42 600w

DICKS, RUSSELL LESLIE. Who is my patient? a religious manual for nurses. 149p $1.50 Macmillan

258 Sick, The. Consolation. Nurses and nursing

Simple guide to practical religious information for nurses, to be used with patients who need religious consolation. The author is assistant professor of pastoral work in Southern Methodist university, and is associate minister of the Highland Park methodist church, in Dallas, Texas.

"While the present volume is addressed particularly to nurses, its discussions are no less relevant to the minister and to all who have occasion to impart spiritual strength to the suffering."

+ Christian Century 59:187 F 11 '42 100w

Churchman 156:16 F 15 '42 50w

"This is a little book of worth to minister as well as nurse." W. R. McNutt

+ Crozer Q 19:256 Jl '42 200w

"This book is to be warmly commended as a practical guide for nurses. And the clergyman who himself reads it before handing it to a nurse will find his own helpfulness in the sick-room increased." C. T. Holman

+ J Religion 22:333 Jl '42 140w

"This is preeminently a book for nurses who want to make of their work not merely a livelihood or a good technique, but a high calling or ministry. Doctors and ministers also will find a careful reading of it highly rewarding. Its most efficacious use will be in the classroom of a school of nursing as a textbook for young, inexperienced students. But it should be taken in small doses under the direction of a spiritually-minded instructor who will use it simply as a basis for more extensive elaboration." C. C. Marshall

+ Survey 78:29 Ja '42 500w

DICKSON, CARTER, pseud. See Carr, J. D.

DIES, EDWARD JEROME. Soybeans, gold from the soil. 122p maps $1.75 Macmillan 633.34 Soy bean (W) 42-10360

Popular history of the soybean, describing briefly its use in ancient Egypt and in China, its introduction into America, and the growth of the soybean industry here. Statistical tables and charts, bibliography, index.

Booklist 38:364 Je 1 '42
Christian Century 59:531 Ap 22 '42 30w
Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '42
J Home Econ 34:683 N '42 70w
Pratt p18 D '42
Wis Lib Bul 38:116 Jl '42

DIEUAIDE, FRANCIS RAYMOND. Civilian health in wartime. 328p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

613 Hygiene. World war, 1939—Medical and sanitary affairs. Public health (W) A42-4394

A book on the effects of war on civilian health and how they can be prevented, by an associate professor of medicine at Harvard. Contents: Health and the impact of war upon it; The nutritional background; Increased strength through better diets; Safety from infectious diseases; Shelter and raiment; Mother and child; The aging and the aged; Occupation and recreation; About our doctors and nurses; Mental calm and vigor; Epilogue—Morale and the second world war; Suggestions for further reading. Index.

Booklist 39:96 N 15 '42
Bookmark 4:7 N '42
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '42

"Dr. Dieuaide's book deserves a wide hearing. If its sage suggestions are taken to heart by large numbers of intelligent citizens, it will be a contribution toward victory over the Axis powers equal in its effectiveness to the invention of some new weapon of destruction." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:1 S '42 1000w

Reviewed by C. B. Moore
Spring'd Republican p10 O 22 '42 950w

DILLER, ROBERT. Farm ownership, tenancy, and land use in a Nebraska community. 192p maps pa $2 Univ. of Chicago press [12s Cambridge]

333 Land tenure—Nebraska. Agriculture—Nebraska 41-9755

This study is confined to a single mid-Western community, the countryside of the author's home town of Diller, Nebraska. The purpose of the study was "to develop an account, not without some analysis and explanation of cause and effect, of the farm properties in Diller, covering mainly the period since settlement and showing who has owned the land and for how long, how owners have come by their estates and how they have disposed of them, what the mortgage history of the land has been, to what extent tenancy has occurred and its character, and what sort of farming has been tolerated by landlords and practiced by the farmers of the community under the prevailing natural and economic conditions and within the framework of such institutions and devices of property in farm land as the investigation discloses." (Pref) Index.

"Unfortunately, the author has not indulged in much reading of history, and consequently he elaborates on some problems that require no elaboration and neglects others that have been generally neglected. His understanding of land policies is superficial, being confined to the laws of land disposal. The treatment of tenancy is neither new nor fresh and adds little to our understanding of the development of this important institution. The most interesting feature of the book is the statistical compilations of mortgages, conveyances, and periods of ownership. When carried out on a wider scale such statistics will be valuable to the historian and agricultural economist. The author includes an illuminating indictment of the rectangular system of survey, long held to be one of the most admirable features of Federal land policy." P. W. Gates

+ Am Hist R 47:434 Ja '42 230w

"Other areas can profitably be studied just as Mr. Diller has studied the Diller community. When more such studies have been made, it will be time to question the general validity of Mr. Diller's conclusions—conclusions with which this reviewer is not disposed to quarrel in so far as the Diller community is concerned—and surely there are many 'Diller communities' throughout the Middle West. In the meantime it will be profitable reading for all agricultural economists—and particularly all land economists—as an example of what can be done with studies of land tenure in relation to agriculture." M. M. Kelso

+ J Pol Econ 50:156 F '42 450w

DILLON, CONLEY HALL. International labor conventions; their interpretation and revision. 272p $3 Univ. of N.C. press

331 Labor laws and legislation, International 42-7757

"The present study is a careful and detailed analysis of the near-governmental functions of the I.L.O. on the legislative and judicial sides. Like the I. L. O., this study is done in parallel columns. It examines the process of revising conventions (multilateral treaties) in three separate chapters, which follow a general introduction on the origin and background of the I.L.O., with emphasis on the legal nature of its constitution. The three chapters on Revision are followed by three on Interpretation. These two parts of the study are succeeded by a chapter on the 'Effect on Treaty Law and Technique' of the I.L.O. system. The concluding chapter ties up the discussion of interpretation and revision and returns the reader to the basic theme." (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography. Index.

"The study is a valuable contribution to the technical literature of the revision and interpretation of multilateral treaties. It concludes on a cautious note." Lefur Magnusson

+ Ann Am Acad 223:247 S '42 380w

Reviewed by J. B. Andrews
Harvard Law R 55:1239 My '42 550w

Reviewed by Bruno Lasker
Survey G 31:439 O '42 390w

"However presumptuous it may be for one who has never published a book to criticize the work of a fellow-teacher written after many years of diligent research, I cannot conceal my disappointment over the fact that, after having collected his material so carefully, Professor Dillon has presented it so poorly. The book often lacks both coherence and clarity. While events as late as 1940 are occasionally mentioned, much of it speaks as of 1933... In addition, the subject matter of the book is not tied together; what is said about revision and what is said about interpretation seem to straggle apart and are not linked together even by the closing chapters... Future investigators will be indebted to Professor Dillon for his pioneer work, with its good bibliography and index, but they will, I trust, expound and comment with greater accuracy and penetration." W. G. Rice, Jr.

+ Yale Law J 51:1421 Je '42 900w

DILTS, MARION MAY (MRS PAUL KOPP). Army guide for women. 214p il $2.50 Longmans

355 U.S.—Army (W) 42-23885

"Here is a useful handbook for the Army wife—which means that its information will be useful also to the woman who is thinking about going into military service. The author is the wife of an Army officer, and her purpose has been to answer such questions for other women as she had first to answer for herself. From the elucidation of uniforms and insignia to the presentation of facts about the soldiers' food, pay and physical welfare, the book's purpose is admirably fulfilled." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 39:95 N 15 '42

DILTS, M. M.—Continued

Books p20 D 13 '42 250w

Christian Century 59:1291 O 21 '42 50w

"Everyone will be interested in this book which [is written] in popular style. . . Recommended." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 67:793 S 15 '42 70w

+ N Y Times p8 O 25 '42 240w

Wis Lib Bul 38:182 D '42

DISCOURSE upon the exposition and understanding of statutes with Sir Thomas Egerton's additions; ed. from mss. in the Huntington library, by Samuel E. Thorne. 194p $5 Huntington lib.

340 Law 42-14465

"The Discourse is here printed 'from two versions found among the Ellesmere Papers, now at the Huntington Library.' Both manuscripts are in Thomas Egerton's hand, but the author of the Discourse is unknown. The editor concludes that it was written 'prior to 1571, and probably prior to 1567.' It is described in the preface as 'the earliest treatise yet brought to light on the interpretation of statutes in England.' In a learned Introduction of one hundred pages, Mr. Thorne seeks 'to place the Discourse in perspective.'" Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by C. C. Crawford

Am Hist R 48:89 O '42 500w

"Will interest every student of public law and English constitutional history, and will be indispensable for the specialists concerned." James Hart

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:588 Je '42 260w

"It is hard to speak in terms too appreciative of Professor Thorne's introduction. It combines, more fully than any previous treatment of this subject, the historian's appreciation of the significance and influence of new political factors, with the lawyer's mastery of the detail of legal thought and practice. It is the first book dealing especially with our legal history which takes adequate account of the growth of the idea of legislative sovereignty in its influence upon that history. Small though it is, this scholarly volume is likely to take a place second to none among those modern books, all too few in number, whose aim is the preservation of a true historical perspective and avoidance of the anachronisms which have so often warped traditional notions of our past development—and in particular, of the development of our legal institutions and ideas." C. H. McIlwain

+ Harvard Law R 56:148 S '42 1250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p539 O 31

'42 330w

DISNEY, DOROTHY CAMERON, and PERRY, GEORGE SESSIONS. Thirty days hath September. 278p $2 Random house

42-25511

Detective story.

Booklist 39:139 D 15 '42

"Guilty secrets, reasonable motives and clever work by Sheriff Brent bring this collaboration off nicely. The manner, as always with Miss Disney, is smooth as silk." Will Cuppy

+ Books p26 N 1 '42 220w

"There are many complications in this story, but all of them are inherent in the characters and backgrounds of the persons involved. The narrative runs so smoothly that one is at a loss to determine how much of it is Dorothy Disney's and how much is the work of Mr. Perry." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 N 1 '42 200w

New Yorker 18:84 O 31 '42 50w

DISNEY, WALT, and WILLIAMS, CHESTER SIDNEY. Victory march; or, The mystery of the treasure chest. col il $1 Random house

42-18952

"When Donald Duck swings into action, something gets done in a hurry. This account of his rallying all the dear familiar creatures of the Disney world to the war stamps campaign, against opposition put up, as might have been expected, by the Big Bad Wolf and his relatives, marches through a series of hair-breadth escapes to direct action on the part of the little reader. . . This excellent conclusion has been reached through a series of stunts: by pulling tabs, turning wheels and lifting hinged flaps." Books

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 Je 7 '42 250w

Reviewed by Marjorie Flack

Sat R of Lit 25:25 N 14 '42 30w

DIVER, MRS MAUD (MARSHALL). Royal India. 317p $3.50 Appleton-Century [18s Hodder]

954 India—Politics and government. India—Kings and rulers. India—History (W) 42-51089

"A descriptive and historical study of India's fifteen principal states and their rulers." (Sub-title) Index.

Reviewed by H. C. Abbott

Books p18 Ja 24 '43 600w

"The author's point of view is undoubtedly British, but she demonstrates that it is possible for a British view of India to include a sincere admiration for its people and traditions and to be free from any desire for 'exploitation.' People who discuss the Indian problem ought to know at least so much of the history of India as is contained herein."

Christian Century 59:1595 D 23 '42 260w

"For most readers Mrs Diver will have provided a new concept of the diversity in the Indian picture." H. L. B.

Spring'd Republican p6 Ja 25 '43 500w

"Mrs. Diver, avoiding politics, so far as is possible, writes in an amiable, colloquial style that should attract many readers who have neither time nor taste for the more weighty books about the States."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p500 O 10 '42 750w

DIXON, CLARICE MADELEINE. Keep them human; the young child at home. 156p $1.50 Day

649.1 Children—Management (W) 42-17828

Practical advice for mothers and nursery school teachers on the subject of bringing up children in the present wartime. Partial contents: Democracy begins where you are when you are under six; Whose home is this? Whose world is this? You can take it with you—a happy childhood; Let's play outdoors; Play can be creative; Young artists; Once upon a time; How do you make worlds?

Booklist 39:4 S '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:157 N '42

DIXON, HAROLD F. The raft [as told to Robert Trumbull]. See Trumbull, R.

DJANG, TIEN KAI. Factory inspection in Great Britain; with an introd. by William A. Robson. 255p $4 Norton [12s 6d Allen, G]

331.82 Factory inspection A42-4547

"Dr. Djang describes the creation of the Inspectorate in 1833; he traces its growth from modest beginnings to a corps of officials numbering hundreds; he explains the internal organization of the Factory Inspectorate, its methods of procedure, the system of recruitment and training; he shows the need for specialists in industrial medicine, electrical engineering, and various other aspects of the work. The author deals only incidentally with the substantive provisions of the great mass of protective legislation which, starting with the Health and Morals of Apprentices Act, 1802, is now to be found in the Factories Act, 1937, the Truck Acts, and many other statutes affecting the lives, health, safety, welfare and economic status of millions of industrial workers. His object is rather to show the immense importance of inspection as an instrument for securing compliance with these beneficent provisions." (Introd) Chronological data. Annotated bibliography. Index.

"To be commended not only as an excellent history and study of the working of British factory inspection but as being the work of a Chinese anxious to learn for his country's future use all he could of a branch of public administration in which Britain has an example to offer."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 JI 29 '42 50w
Times [London] Lit Sup p263 My 23 '42 300w

DOANE, DONALD CALVIN. Needs of youth; an evaluation for curriculum purposes. 150p $2.16 Teachers college

373 Education, Secondary. Education—U.S. Education—Curricula 42-14063

"This study evaluates the commonly assumed needs of youth with respect to their adequacy as focal points for instruction or for organization of the curriculum." Social Studies

School & Society 55:372 Mr 28 '42 60w

"The chief merit of the study would seem to lie in the fact that the needs of youth catalogued have been expressed in the framework of courses already existing in a large number of schools. The volume should, therefore, be welcomed in local schools as a practical aid in making curriculum adaptations to these significant needs of high-school youth." J. L. Trump

+ School R 50:603 O '42 650w
Social Studies 33:240 My '42 30w

DOBERSTEIN, JOHN W., comp. On wings of healing; prayers and readings for the sick and shut-in; il. by W. P. Schoonmaker. 104p $2 United Lutheran pub.

248 Sick, The 42-12940

"A book of selections, biblical and other, prose and poetry, designed for the comfort, encouragement and religious fortification of those in bodily illness." Christian Century

Booklist 38:435 JI 15 '42
Christian Century 59:530 Ap 22 '42 40w

DODD, STUART CARTER. Dimensions of society; a quantitative systematics for the social sciences. 944p il $12 Macmillan

301 Sociology 42-2147

"In his preface, Professor Dodd acknowledges the tutorship of G. A. Lundberg, whose Foundations of Sociology was [published in 1940 (Book Review Digest, 1940)]. Dodd's companion volume is a compilation of data presented in pictures, tables, and diagrams, which the author subsumes under a system of notation called the S-theory. His purpose is to substitute a set of symbols for the loose verbal descriptions often used in social studies. In this way, he believes, sociologists may register more exactly their observations and conclusions." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by J. G. Smith
Am Econ R 32:858 D '42 500w

"The S-theory has yet to take its first step toward a generative mathematical symbolism. No number of imposing references to highly cultivated fields of mathematics, and no reckless abuse of the mathematical vocabulary, can of themselves transform a theory not yet mathematical into anything more substantially mathematical than a feeble mathematical pun." E. T. Bell

Am Soc R 7:707 O '42 1050w

"The claim is made here that S-theory, whatever else its inadequacies may be, does develop such a system (italics in text) for the sociological segment of knowledge, better than any other sociological system offered to date" (p. 839). Is his very far-reaching claim justified?

The reviewer's opinion is quite definitely that it is not, if by 'better' be understood promising to make greater contributions to the systematic generalized analysis of social phenomena." Talcott Parsons

Am Soc R 7:709 O '42 2650w

Reviewed by Howard Woolston
Ann Am Acad 221:230 My '42 500w

Reviewed by W. S. Robinson
Pol Sci Q 57:453 S '42 850w
Social Forces 20:498 My '42 1450w

DODGE, MRS CONSTANCE (WOODBURY).

Weathercock. 370p $2.50 Dodd 42-21087

Historical novel of colonial and revolutionary North Carolina. The central character is Carrington Pryde of Pryde's Halt, altho his tyrannical aristocratic grandmother is a close second. Madam Pryde ruled her plantation and her grandson, until the day when Carr learned to know about poverty and injustice thru his meeting with two young lads from the back country. From that day Carr became a weathercock, tossed about by his love of comfort and his sense of justice. It was his love for a fine young Quaker woman which finally resolved his difficulties.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p12 S 20 '42 330w

"With its double theme of family and social conflict, study of a plantation matriarchy, battle descriptions—including the battle of Alamance, fought five years before Bunker Hill—and its due measure of romance, this is a tale to rank with the best of the season's output." Drake De Kay

+ N Y Times p34 O 4 '42 500w

DODGE, DAVID. Shear the black sheep. 284p $2 Macmillan 42-17799

Mystery story.

"Better add David Dodge to your list of household necessities, if you care for vigorous puzzles with the business touch and plenty of other trimmings." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 JI 19 '42 230w
Christian Century 59:911 JI 22 '42 90w

"The story is full of unexpected developments and lively action." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p16 JI 19 '42 200w

New Yorker 18:60 JI 18 '42 70w

"Mr. Dodge works most of his magic by formulae (Dashiell Hammett's), but they are good formulae, particularly the one for a Bloody Mary. Of its type, all you can desire!" G. R. S.

Sat R of Lit 25:8 S 5 '42 140w

DOHERTY, FELIX. Song out of sorrow. ltd ed 95p $1.50; pa 75c Playwright's press, 368 Congress st, Boston

812 Thompson, Francis—Drama 42-15240

"Biographical drama about the Victorian poet, Francis Thompson." Library J

"Mr. Doherty has written an interesting play with more bluster than brilliance about a young writer redeemed by a street girl but we regret very poignantly that he called the young man Francis Thompson." E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 155:762 S '42 500w

"One of the brighter spots of the 1941-42 season in New York. Recommended."
+ Library J 67:630 JI '42 20w

DOLCH, EDWARD WILLIAM. Teaching primary reading. 307p $2.50 Garrard

372.4 Reading 41-10862

"A discussion of the fundamental problems in teaching beginning reading based on the latest developments in the mental and physical approaches to the problem; short professional bibliography." School & Society

DOLCH, E. W.—Continued

"This publication is a definite contribution to the literature on the teaching of primary-grade reading. There are places where one wishes that the author could have gone into more detail. However, because his discussion is limited to a volume no larger than this, the book will probably be read by a much larger number of teachers and thus offer a more effective service to the children in our primary schools. It is hoped that every primary-grade teacher will have access to this book on the teaching of reading." D. E. Kibbe

+ EI School J 42:389 Ja '42 550w

School & Society 54:48 Jl 19 '41 30w

DOLLARD, JOHN. Victory over fear. 213p $2 Reynal

157.3 Fear 42-20877

"Dr. Dollard looks at the subject of fear from virtually every angle. 'When fear comes,' he says, 'stop (don't run) and think.' What is more, he gives some constructive suggestions as to what to think about. The subjects he covers include your own mind, anger, sex, security, death, bravery, social change and many more." N Y Times

Booklist 39:95 N 15 '42

"May be useful in both college and public libraries." G. E. Brown

+ Library J 67:679 Ag '42 80w

"Two of the chapters will be of special interest at the present time: The Dilemma of Security and Today's Fears. There will be few who have not given a good deal of thought to both subjects. The practical value of what the author says lies, naturally, in the way he tries to create a state of mind with which to meet the fear of insecurity, change, pain or death. . . . There are a lot of questions that Dr. Dollard doesn't answer, but you can say the same thing about a good many other wise men." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p16 S 13 '42 300w

Wis Lib Bul 38:157 N '42

DOLLOFF, EUGENE DINSMORE. It can happen between Sundays; a radiant midweek service. 111p $1 Am. Bapt.

264.7 Church services 42-24913

"Plans and specifications for reviving the midweek service." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:1360 N '42 10w

"'Go-getter' parsons will do well to study this book as a guide to numerical and popular success in the conduct of the 'Glad Service.' However, those pastors who cannot bring themselves to the employment of service-club methods, will find scant comfort from their perplexity over the midweek service." M. C. Westphal

Crozer Q 20:83 Ja '43 300w

DOLPH, EDWARD ARTHUR, ed. Sound off! soldier songs from the revolution to World war II; music arr. by Philip Egner; il. by Lawrence Schick. 621p $3.50 Farrar

784.7 War songs (W) 42-15326

This new edition of a volume first published in 1929 (Book Review Digest, 1929) contains a supplementary section of songs: Remember Pearl Harbor, including Kings of the Highway, Song of the Signal Corps, Song of the Army Engineer, etc. Bibliography. Index of first lines.

Booklist 38:428 Jl 1 '42

"This best of soldier song books contains songs that were popular in all of our wars, and songs of the regiments—songs you have heard and songs you would like to hear, either again or anew. Try them all on your piano, or your neighbor's." F. P. Adams

+ Books p1 Je 14 '42 1350w

DOMAN, NICHOLAS. Coming age of world control; the transition to an organized world society. 301p $3 Harper

321.04 International cooperation. Reconstruction (1939-) 42-15343

"After tracing broad currents of history, which culminated in nationalistic movement of nineteenth century, Professor Doman shows how destructive force of Nazism, in its drive for world domination, has undone whole fabric of nationalism; and how democratic nations must institute and work toward a complete change in world organization to counteract this destructive force. Latter part of book is devoted to problems involved in creating new world federation to insure lasting peace." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

Am J Soc 48:616 Ja '43 330w

Reviewed by C. A. Berdahl

Am Pol Sci R 36:775 Ag '42 850w

Reviewed by Howard Doughty

Books p8 Jl 19 '42 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '42

"One of best of recent books dealing with geopolitics." M. A. Gray

+ Library J 67:413 My 1 '42 100w

Reviewed by J. D. Kingsley

New Repub 107:204 Ag 17 '42 300w

"That the world-wide convulsion of our times will call for and lead to bold and unforeseen solutions is almost certain. . . . But Mr. Doman's scheme for a kind of democratic Roman Empire embracing the universe is, I think, based on some false premises and seems to leap rather lightly over serious obstacles." W. H. Chamberlin

+ — N Y Times p15 Je 7 '42 1300w

"It is a courageous, far-sighted, thoughtful, and highly intelligent book, that will be welcome and useful to every reader, even if he may not agree with every detail." Hans Kohn

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 Jl 4 '42 340w

"Mr. Doman's analysis of the principles underlying a lasting peace, a truly cooperative international order, is one of the most acute which has recently appeared." Phillips Bradley

+ Survey G 32:26 Ja '43 220w

DONAHEY, MRS MARY AUGUSTA (DICKERSON). Apple Pie inn; il. by Henrietta Jones. 222p $2 Crowell

42-19444

"One family with broken fortunes, another, never rich but with pluck, turning their house into tourist home, and a son of well-to-do divorced parents are chief characters in mystery story sure to be enjoyed by ten- to twelve-year-old girls." Library J

"Merry and entertaining." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 28 '42 200w

"Not much value as literature but has well-sustained plot with plenty of action." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 67:741 S 1 '42 50w

DONER, MARY FRANCES (MRS C. L. PAYZANT). Glass mountain. 299p $2.50 Doubleday

42-21648

The Great Lakes and the Chautauqua circuit provide the background of this story of a brave woman, and a man whose gnawing ambition nearly ruined both lives. Irene and Timmy first met as children, when he was happy as the adopted son of a fine family, and Irene was the dependable one in a family of slack tenant farmers. Inspired by a Chautauqua lecturer the girl determined to grow up to "be somebody." Timmy was equally determined to captain his own boat on the Great Lakes. When they met again years later, both were on the way to realize their childhoods' ambitions.

Booklist 39:71 N 1 '42

"Miss Doner, who is herself the daughter of a captain, pictures with warm and pleasant realism the shore life of the men who sail the Great Lakes and the women who love them, a life timed to the rhythm of ships, passing, loading, getting mail in port; a special world with its own codes, its grapevine intelligence system and its integrities." Page Cooper

+ Books p10 S 20 '42 600w

"The book has the quality of an old-fashioned patchwork quilt, colorful and friendly and warm." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p28 S 27 '42 600w

DORF, PHILIP. This war; a survey of world conflict. 124p il maps pa 48c Oxford book co, inc, 222 4th av, N.Y.

940.53 World war, 1939-

41-26625

"Background of the war, with an analysis of military and political factors." Social Studies

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:572 Ap '42 10w

Social Studies 33:48 Ja '42 10w

"A handy and condensed reference." E. C. Lindeman

+ Survey G 31:37 Ja '42 120w

DORPALEN, ANDREAS. World of General Haushofer; geopolitics in action; with an introd. by Herman Beukema. 337p maps $3.50; text ed $2.75 Farrar

320.1 Geopolitics. Haushofer, Karl 43-71

"[This] study is an attempt to reduce to simple terms the mysteries which have been prowling under the name of Geopolitik. As much as possible the ideas of the German geopoliticians have been presented in their own words. In addition, excerpts from their writings have been included at the end of each chapter. It seemed important in view of the existing confusion as to the real objectives of Geopolitik to acquaint the reader with them in their original form. The Zeitschrift für Geopolitik has been used up to May, 1941, the latest issue available in this country." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by Paul Hagen

Books p18 Ja 24 '43 650w

Library J 67:1067 D 1 '42 40w

"Mr. Dorpalen's book seems to me the most enlightening and incisive study which has appeared on this subject. Dorpalen obviously dislikes Haushofer and all his works, but his approach is that of exposition and rational analysis; he does not reiterate his moral indignation." H. C. Hatfield

+ New Repub 108:155 F 1 '43 950w

"Particularly good in Mr. Dorpalen's book are the descriptions of the era between 1904 and 1914, of conditions in Japan, of Germany's changing policy toward certain other countries and the role of Haushoferism in Germany's economic planning, population policy and war strategy. . . . There are a few shortcomings which could have been avoided. One is the complete disregard of radio's role in German geopolitics; another is the author's viewpoint about the probable success of Haushofer's theories." J. H. Haas

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 10 '43 440w

"The author's attempt to explain the theory and its application, with the use of copious selections from the leading German writers in the field, is somewhat hampered by the fact that he himself doesn't seem to appreciate how completely phony it is. Flaccid, often downright careless writing. The introduction by Colonel Herman Beukema, U.S.A., is both sensible and scholarly."

New Yorker 18:52 Ja 2 '43 140w

Time 41:92 Ja 11 '43 440w

DORRANCE, WARD ALLISON. Sundowners. 343p $2.50 Scribner

42-18491

Story of a young boy's life on a Missouri farm in the early nineteen hundreds, of his brief sojourn in the city, and his ultimate return.

"What makes 'Sundowners' interesting and worth reading are the excellent descriptions of good old Missouri auction sales, heifer midwifing, hunting and fishing, and general loafing around the bluffs and rivers. Missouri is beautiful to those who know her waters and green bottom lands and cave-haunted hills, and Mr. Dorrance has done splendid homage to that beauty." C. G. Finney

Books p8 Ag 16 '42 900w

"Real rural frankness and several questionable incidents, but effect of novel as a whole is beautiful." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 67:682 Ag '42 80w

"With some editing, Mr. Dorrance's novel about a boy who grew up on an upper-class Missouri farm and his grandfather who is his chief mentor could be a progressive school textbook in nature study. . . . A well-written book but insufficient diet for adult readers."

+ Nation 155:178 Ag 29 '42 120w

"Dorrance writes with a natural poetic expression, at times homely, at times lyrical, comparable to the prose of Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings. Like her he has a deep feeling for simple folk, for animals, for the expressive quiet of woods and the mysteries of river and stream. And like her he knows the heart of a boy. . . . The plot has other weaknesses, the induction of characters who are momentarily important but peter out into nothing. Dorrance is better at creating and fusing the drama of human beings and nature than he is with the ordinary relationships of men and women." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 16 '42 700w

"In this novel the author accurately makes the plantation owners and their spacious houses thoroughly American—with pioneer trimmings; there is no imitation of English gentlemen and their country 'places' as was not uncommon in South Carolina, Virginia, and elsewhere. The poor whites are men and women, not sociological cases; and the Negroes, who are neither comic wittlings, nor fawning serfs, are treated without patronage and condescension. The novel is better by the inch than by the yard." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 Ag 29 '42 400w

Time 40:104 S 14 '42 100w

DOUGLAS, BRUCE, pseud. See Douglas, T. W.

DOUGLAS, LLOYD CASSEL. The robe. 695p $2.75 Houghton

Jesus Christ—Fiction (W) 42-24099

Novel based on the life of the young Roman soldier, Marcellus, who was in charge of the crucifixion of Christ, and who won His robe when the garments were "parted among them."

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (12) B & T (1) N Y Times (13) PW (2) RB (2)

Booklist 39:71 N 1 '42

"When Marcellus is asked if ever he had seen Jesus after his death, he replies that he saw a man looking at him. In these words are the secret of the book's undeniable power. It is not about people who 'saw something.' It is about people looking straight at some one. Many will read it who were never able to get through a Lloyd Douglas novel before and these will go through it with a sense of immediacy." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 O 18 '42 800w

Canadian Forum 22:310 Ja '43 420w

"Perhaps the narrative is a bit too diffuse and attempts to cover too much ground, but on the whole it is an interesting effort at explaining a time of crisis that had many points of similarity to our own. It is skillful story-telling with high intent." L. E. Cannon

+ Christian Century 60:138 F 3 '43 260w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '42

DOUGLAS, L. C.—Continued

"This melodramatic story is told on a level which never gets trivial enough to hurt your religious feelings. There is even an atmosphere of genuine devotion around the person of the Lord. But though there seem to be no seriously objectionable details in the book, the story of the magic robe with its many superficial sensations seems to me not adequate to the holy story. It is like returning from an overcrowded festival into the atmosphere of chastity and contemplation when I turned from all this fictionized hokum to the plain reports of the New Testament, for which I want no additions or embellishments." Max Fischer

Commonweal 37:100 N 13 '42 650w

Reviewed by John Cournos

N Y Times p7 O 25 '42 1000w

"The material gets away from Mr. Douglas, and the book too often seems long and rambling. In attempting this kind of book he is swamping his real literary bent, which is for short, clear, hortatory parable. 'The Robe' could easily have been his most brilliant parable, at one fifth its length." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 25:16 O 31 '42 400w

Reviewed by R. K. Washburn

Spring'd Republican p7e N 1 '42 650w

Time 40:102 N 9 '42 270w

Wis Lib Bul 38:187 D '42

DOUGLAS, THEODORE WAYLAND (BRUCE DOUGLAS, pseud). Border range. 286p $2 Macrae Smith co.

42-569

Western story.

Booklist 38:210 F 15 '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p15 F 1 '42 70w

DOUHET, GIULIO. Command of the air; tr. by Dino Ferrari. 394p $4 Coward-McCann

623.74 Aeronautics, Military 42-50172

"Translation from the Italian, by Dino Ferrari, of five monographs and magazine articles written between 1921 and 1930 by a pioneer in the Mitchell-Seversky school, which urges an independent air force, coordinated with, but separate from army and navy. . . Part of material is controversial, but most is logical argument, reiterating necessity, not only of air supremacy, but of absolute dominance in the air for ultimate victory in any future war. Both history and prophecy are employed. Many things advocated in theory by General Douhet have been put into practice in present war." Library J

"This book must be regarded as one of the really influential works of our times; but it is doubtful that Douhet's prophecies will ever be fully realized, and it would be dangerous now to accept his doctrine as the one true and perfect gospel for modern war." Walter Millis

+ — Books p6 D 6 '42 2000w

"Recommended for all interested in aviation development and air power in war." F. L. D. Goodrich

+ Library J 67:949 N 1 '42 120w

Library J 68:36 Ja 1 '43 20w

Reviewed by H. A. Deweerd

New Repub 108:59 Ja 11 '43 500w

"The publication here of the unabridged text of General Giulio Douhet's celebrated writings on aerial warfare—his original four books in one well-translated volume—may be justly accepted as marking America's 'coming of age' in the matter of aviation thinking. . . For the average layman, naturally, some parts of the Douhet book will prove heavy going. But the effort is exceedingly worth while." A. P. de Seversky

+ N Y Times p1 D 27 '42 2200w

DOW, DOROTHY (MRS J. E. FITZGERALD). Time and love. 107p $2 Liveright

811

42-3901

Collection of verse by the author of Dark Glory (Book Review Digest, 1932). Many of these poems have appeared in The Conning Tower, The New Yorker, and Poetry.

"Dorothy Dow is an accomplished mimic of the talents of our best poets, but what she accomplishes is only the strategem. A close perusal of her work will reveal in residue only the artifice which she could scrape from the surface of their art. But she is so cleverly adept that some of her poems come off strikingly." Maurice Swan

N Y Times p5 Ja 18 '42 160w

"In her latest book, Time and Love, Miss Dow frightens me a little because she still seems to find it profitable to be a bad-loved soul. I suppose the resemblance between her first poem ('O less for record than excuse, / And less for either than for blame') and Miss Millay's 'Though less for love than for the deep / Though transient death that follows it' is accidental, but certainly the resemblance in mood is not. As for the war, Miss Dow can still enjoy love and Nature. . . Is it possible that there is altogether too much of this sort of yessing, and not enough of the diagnosing Mrs. Laing deplores? I think so. The poet cannot make another England or another United States by reaffirming the beauties of Nature and the ugliness of war." Marian Castleman

Poetry 60:347 S '42 300w

DOWNER, MARION. My room is my hobby; drawings by the author. 141p $1.75 Lothrop

747 House decoration. Furniture 42-36355

"An enthusiastically written book on creating a new room or renovating an old one to make it attractive and to give it individuality. Besides developing ideas for style and color, furniture, floors, and curtains, and the important final original touches, the author recommends a few constructive hobbies as a means of further enjoyment." Booklist

Booklist 39:107 N 15 '42

Cath World 156:379 D '42 20w

"Recommended for both adults and juvenile collections." Maude Adams

+ Library J 67:1015 N 15 '42 80w

"Miss Downer's suggestions all seem valid and practical. Her presentation of them, however, seems a curious mixture of adult language combined with a deliberate attempt to write down to an age level. If this minor annoyance is disregarded, 'My Room Is My Hobby' is well worth any girl's reading time." + — Spring'd Republican p7e N 22 '42 130w

DOWNY, FAIRFAX DAVIS. Indian-fighting army; il. from drawings by Frederic Remington, Charles Schreyvogel and R. F. Zogbaum. 329p $3.50 Scribner

973.8 Indians of North America—Wars. U.S.

—Army—History. West—History 41-23731

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"This book in the main is a collection of some of the best-known stories growing out of the warfare between the Indians and the United States Army during the two decades following the Civil War, tales that can stand re-telling when done as well as Mr. Downy has rendered them. He has presented them in as thrilling a style, probably, as they have ever been made known to the reader. . . This undocumented book is obviously intended for popular reading, for which it is well fitted in spite of a few lapses from historical accuracy that the average reader will not notice." Grant Foreman

+ Am Hist R 47:693 Ap '42 180w

"Here is a vivid and deeply impressive account of the important battles between the United States Army and various Western tribes during the twenty-five-year period, 1865-1890. . . For all the general excellence of this book it contains some unhappy fumbles. 'Fort Keogh in Wyoming' appears in the text, and the jacket matches this gem with 'Fort Laramie in Montana.' The Northern Pacific Railway is said to have been stretching its rails 'to the south' in 1868, though the road was not begun until 1870, and its route was to be far to the north." W. J. Ghent

+ — N Y Times p27 Ap 5 '42 1000w

Pratt p18 My '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:13 Ja '42

DOWNEY, FAIRFAX DAVIS. War horse; il. by Paul Brown. 236p $2 Dodd

(W) 42-12309

The story of Barbara, a chestnut mare, and of Jim Thomas, Texas cowboy, who together and apart fought in the first World war, and finally, by a stroke of good luck, were able to return to Texas, never to be separated again.

Booklist 38:372 Je 1 '42

Books p10 My 10 '42 450w

"A very moving and delightful tale."

+ Cath World 156:376 D '42 90w

"Sympathy for all war horses is bound to be quickened by the bravery of this little mare. The telling service of the United States Artillery on the battlefields of France is recalled in dramatic terms, touched with the light of humor. Paul Brown's drawings are adequate accompaniment." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:256 Jl '42 100w

"Any lack in style and dramatic quality is more than compensated for by human interest, good humor, and picture of men and horses in action. Illustrations by Paul Brown are ideal for text." Laura Wang

+ Library J 67:534 Je 1 '42 100w

"Major Downey has written an inspiring tale, full of stirring incidents and with the ring of truth. Horse stories are always in demand, and 'War Horse' not only has an especial interest today but is likely to remain a popular addition to the list of good books about horses for a long time to come. Paul Brown's lively, authentic drawings add to the appeal of the tale, for readers from 10 on." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 26 '42 280w

"The author knows his horses and his Army; Barbara's story is derived in part from that of a real war horse, a sergeant's mount in Mr. Downey's regiment in France. Occasionally, as fictionalized, it is farfetched; always it is frankly sentimental, but what good horse story isn't? Illustrated to perfection by Paul Brown's expert horse drawings."

+ New Yorker 18:76 My 23 '42 70w

DOWNS, MRS ELIZABETH. Let's make plans [a guide for club women]. 258p $2.25 Knopf 396.062 Women's clubs (W) 42-24591

A handbook for club members designed to aid in the planning and presentation of programs. Index.

Booklist 39:178 Ja 1 '43

"Highly recommended for any library no matter how small." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 67:949 N 1 '42 50w

DOWNS, ROBERT BINGHAM. Resources of New York city libraries, a survey of facilities for advanced study and research; sponsored by the A. L. A. Board on resources of American libraries. 442p $4.50 A.L.A.

027.07471 Libraries—New York (city)

42-23382

"Survey of the collections in almost 400 libraries in New York's five boroughs. The libraries range in size from large general public and university libraries to highly specialized collections. The survey is arranged by subject. The chief objectives are to provide a basis for closer cooperation in the region and to assist scholars everywhere in finding materials in their fields." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:63 N 1 '42

Reviewed by Karl Brown

Library J 67:1062 D 1 '42 1550w

School & Society 56:420 O 31 '42 20w

"Will fill a long-felt need."

+ Special Libraries 33:343 N '42

DOWNS, ROBERT BINGHAM, ed. Union catalogs in the United States; sponsored by the Am. lib. assn. Board on resources; contributors: Arthur B. Berthold [and others]. 409p maps $5 A.L.A.

025.3 Catalogs, Union

42-18942

"The four librarians who made this study have based their discussions and conclusions on firsthand investigation of union catalogs throughout the United States." (Booklist) Contents: The administrative, fiscal, and quantitative aspects of the regional union catalog, by LeRoy C. Merritt; The National union catalog in the Library of Congress, by George A. Schwegmann; Manual of union catalog administration, by Arthur B. Berthold; Directory of union catalogs in the United States, by Arthur B. Berthold.

Booklist 39:1 S '42

"Mr. Berthold's part is in many respects a pioneer job. In the past, compilation as well as the administration of union catalogs has largely been a trial and error affair. We are now supplied with standard procedures and recommendations applicable not only to union catalogs but also to bibliographical centers. Added also in the appendix are instructions and forms which will prove useful to the staffs of union catalogs as well as to those who are interested in the workings of those instruments. In criticism of the directory of union catalogs, does it sound too strong if we say that it is an extraordinarily useful tool made almost unusable by poor typography? It is hoped that it can be reprinted in better form and be kept up to date." Rudolf Hirsch

+ — Library J 67:1004 N 15 '42 1200w

School & Society 56:104 Ag 1 '42 70w

Special Libraries 33:263 S '42 80w

DOWRIE, GEORGE WILLIAM, and FULLER, DOUGLAS RAYMOND. Investments. 631p $4 Wiley

332.67 Investments

41-19571

Intended to serve as a textbook for college classes in investment, as a reference book for the personnel of financial institutions, and as a source of information for the private investor. The five main divisions of the work are: The nature of investment; The mechanism of investment; Investment policy; Investment analysis; Investment management. Index.

"Although the book covers a wide range of material on investment, the treatment of the subject, on the whole, is conservative, timely and effective. The book is well balanced, its organization is good and the presentation is clear. It is quite evident that the authors have a good background in economics and practical investment plus the ability to present their information in a compact, satisfactory text." N. G. Riddle

+ Am Econ R 32:169 Mr '42 750w

"This book, written by a Professor of Finance and the Vice-President of the North American Investment Corporation, reflects a commendable blending of the theoretical and practical investment viewpoints. It is excellently written and well organized. The book might be criticized on the score of the brief treatment accorded certain topics such as the security markets and government regulation of security issuance and trading. Likewise, the chapters dealing with security analysis are considerably condensed. It is apparent, however, that such treatment was the deliberate intent of the authors. They are to be congratulated on an excellent volume, one which appears to be well adapted to the standard one-semester college course on investments." J. C. Dolley

+ — Ann Am Acad 220:257 Mr '42 600w

DOYLE, ROBERT J. Tuffy; with stroboscope phot. by Frank J. Scherschel. [64p] $1 Simon & Schuster

Photography of animals 42-19357

Photographs and short text describe the lively adventures of a very real little bear, who investigates an apartment, fights with a teddy bear, and has a strenuous time of it generally.

"I have seldom seen such fur in print. It is a baby's book or one for a grown-up animal-lover—especially if the latter takes pictures." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 S 13 '42 180w

"Every animal lover will cherish the pictures, of which some have already appeared in Life."

+ Cath World 156:372 D '42 70w

DRAGO, HARRY SINCLAIR (WILL ERMINE, BLISS LOMAX, pseud.). Buckskin empire. 268p $2 Doubleday

42-7628

Western story.

Booklist 38:310 Ap 15 '42

"'Buckskin Empire' harks back to the days when America still had plenty of frontier and fighting spirit, when possession was nine points of the law and the point of a gun was the tenth point. It is a robust chronicle of the Southwest, with the railroads inching across the plains to challenge the freight supremacy of the wagon trains, a clash of interests in which both sides resorted to arson, bribery and bloodshed. Mr. Drago lets you see the struggle with dramatic detachment; his story is colorful and crammed with action. And there are romantic embellishments in keeping with the pace of events." Lisle Bell

+ Books p16 Mr 22 '42 380w

DRAGO, HARRY SINCLAIR (WILL ERMINE, BLISS LOMAX, pseud.). Pardners of the Badlands. 281p $2 Doubleday

42-21649

Western story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p22 O 18 '42 50w

"The tale is fast and lively, cleverly devised and well written, perhaps the best thus far of all the stories in which Mr. Lomax has exploited his two typical trouble-shooters." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p37 O 4 '42 240w

DREHER, CARL. The coming showdown. 419p $3 Little

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy, Reconstruction (1939-). Economic conditions (W) 42-8686

"A successful businessman and engineer explains what has happened to our business system since the early nineteenth century, why he thinks it won't last much longer, and how we might organize a democratic collectivism." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by P. J. Searles

Books p15 Ag 16 '42 600w

Reviewed by S. D. Kirkpatrick

Chem & Met Eng 49:231 S '42 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '42

"'The Coming Showdown' is a good book for the more thoughtful to read carefully and then to brood over." B. M. Gross

+ Nation 155:97 Ag 1 '42 180w

"Challenging and hard-hitting discussion of American industrialism." D. W. Petegorsky

+ New Repub 106:611 My 4 '42 700w

"What Mr. Dreher refuses to face, like all the leftist literary exploiters of capitalism's admitted weaknesses, is that collectivism works in practice only when it is thoroughly undemocratic. . . . There is this much to be said for his book: Any reasonably intelligent child ought to have his faith in capitalism and his desire to preserve it as a way of life renewed by reading Mr. Dreher's muddle-headed alternative." E. V. Bell

— N Y Times p18 My 31 '42 1100w

"A hard-hitting, well-informed work, sharply written from a clear, neo-Veblenist viewpoint. Better have a look at this."

+ New Yorker 18:87 Ap 11 '42 50w

DRESSER, DAVIS (DON DAVIS, BRETT HALLIDAY, pseud.). Corpse came calling. 230p $2 Dodd 42-18361

Detective story.

"'Full of thrills and tough situations.' And booze." Will Cuppy

Books p13 Ag 9 '42 100w

"A typical Michael Shane yarn with violent action on every other page. The pages in between are reserved for alcoholic refreshment." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 Ag 2 '42 200w

DRESSER, DAVIS (DON DAVIS, BRETT HALLIDAY, pseud.). Michael Shayne takes over. 4v in 1 $2.49 Holt

42-20562

Four novels describing the exploits of the detective Michael Shayne. Contents: Dividend on Death; Private Practice of Michael Shayne; The Uncomplaining Corpses; Bodies are Where you Find Them.

"Lively stuff." Will Cuppy

+ Books p23 S 20 '42 80w

"Michael Shayne of Miami is certainly one of the best of the tough sleuths, and the stories about him are tops in the tough class. It is good news, therefore, that a Michael Shayne omnibus has gathered into one volume four exciting Shayne tales." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p25 O 11 '42 180w

DREWRY, JOHN ELDRIDGE, ed. See Saturday evening post (periodical). Post biographies of famous journalists

DRIGGS, HOWARD ROSCOE. Westward America; with reproductions of 40 water color paintings by William H. Jackson. 312p $5 Putnam

978 West—History. Overland journeys to the Pacific (W) 42-5757

A pictorial history of the development of the American west. The author is a descendant of pioneers, and as a boy helped herd cattle past Fort Bridger; the illustrator has been familiar with the west since the 1860's, when he photographed and painted many of the scenes described in the book. The emphasis is upon the famous transcontinental trails: the Oregon and California trails, the Santa Fe, and others such as the one which led into Death Valley. Bibliography. Index.

"This is the best of all the picture books about the West." H. S. Commager

+ Books p5 F 15 '42 750w

"Himself a contemporary of the men who made history on the treks, Mr. Jackson was a bullwhacker and mule-skinner on these trails seventy-five years ago. Some of the paintings in this book were done from sketches made by Mr. Jackson on the scenes as early as 1866. Faithfully and lovingly he has created the best pictures I have seen of the early Far West and in so doing memorialized his youth. Mr. Driggs's text well supports Mr. Jackson's water colors. . . . Sometimes he is able to give us precious contemporary testimony of feeling, and that is rare. We know a great deal about what these ancestors of ours did. Too often we know too little how they felt." H. M. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 F 27 '42 330w

"Here is a Western book for the general reader who wants to feel the lift and enthusiasm of America's sunward migrations. It is not a book for the student who is hungry for new facts. The facts of trail locations, names, dates and numbers are necessarily elementary. What the authors do give, in a measure unprecedented in books of this kind, are the facts of atmosphere and tone derived from personal experience. Both the author and the illustrator know their West, old and new, by personal contact." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p4 F 22 '42 1350w

DRIVER, ERNEST CHARLES. Name that animal; with drawings by Olive Driver. 527p $5 The author, 119 Prospect st, Northampton, Mass.

590.12 Zoology—Nomenclature 42-11017

"A guide to the identification of the common land and fresh-water animals of the United States, with special reference to the area east of the Rockies." (Subtitle) The author is zoologist at Smith College.

"The author, in addressing himself to beginners rather than experts, has constantly sought simplicity and clearness. . . The book is helpfully illustrated by numerous simple sketches contributed by the author's wife, and there are extensive bibliographies which point the way for more specialized studies." H. M. Parshley

+ Books p12 Ag 2 '42 250w

Reviewed by C. B. Moore
Springf'd Republican p6 My 18 '42 550w

DRUCKER, PETER F. Future of industrial man; a conservative approach. 298p $2.50 Day 330.1 Economic policy. World politics. Reconstruction (1939-). Industry and state (W) 42-21925

An attempt to analyze the underlying causes of this war and to present a solution for the problems of the peace to come. Mr Drucker's thesis is that while civilization has become fixed on an industrial base, our habits of government and international relations are still feudal or pre-industrial; that in the peace, society must be organized on the basis of the self-governing industrial plant.

"It is obviously easier to analyze a past that is historically finished than to describe a future that is still in a very embryonic stage of development. So one naturally finds less concrete exposition and more general reflection in this new book than in the author's keen and penetrating study of the totalitarian state, The End of Economic Man. However, Mr. Drucker, an Austrian economist now resident in this country, reveals in his present work the qualities that won the applause of a discriminating audience for its predecessor. He possesses a fund of historical and economic knowledge; his mind does not follow conventional grooves; his style eschews the cliché and achieves frequent paradoxes and occasional profundity." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Atlantic 170:154 N '42 200w

Booklist 39:63 N 1 '42

"'The Future of Industrial Man' makes no attempt to be a definitive book. But it is a penetrating book. It ought to be required reading for some of our so-called reformers and social planners, who have so utterly lost touch with the nature of free institutions that they are leading us a little farther every day toward a totalitarian 'solution' to the industrial problem. Mr. Drucker's flash of light illuminates this gloomy scene, so that those who have stumbled in their search for freedom can pick themselves up and struggle on into the real industrial age with new courage." R. W. Davenport

+ Books p24 N 22 '42 1350w

Reviewed by Francis Downing
Commonweal 37:233 D 18 '42 700w
Library J 67:795 S 15 '42 40w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Nation 155:454 O 31 '42 1000w

"With some books the single and simple idea they contain is fully expressed in the title, but with Mr. Drucker's work this simplification is deplorable. Here is a book of some 300 pages, which is so perfectly planned and so transparently written as to read with almost indecent ease. But its substance was obviously not improvised to fit a title. Each page is the fruit of much learning and long reflection. It should accordingly be studied, pondered over, analyzed word by word, with the care that our scholars reserve for authors who have been dead a thousand years." Jacques Barzun

+ New Repub 107:551 O 26 '42 1450w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster
N Y Times p12 O 4 '42 950w

"Anyone who doesn't mind some hard work among abstractions and a certain amount of historical and economic analysis is advised to have a fling at Peter F. Drucker's 'The Future of Industrial Man', a book which is much less dismal than its title suggests. I am quite incompetent to assay the soundness of its brilliant, fertile, and often paradoxical ideas, but I should guess it to contain rather more sense per page than James Burnham's 'The Managerial Revolution'. [Book Review Digest, 1941] whose subject matter it rediscusses and whose conclusions it rejects. It contains more sense; it also holds out more hope." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:77 S 26 '42 360w

"Nobody has a monopoly on wisdom. It is the rarest of qualities and what little we have is thinly spread. Whether Mr. Drucker has more or less than most the future will show. But he has a tolerant, inquiring spirit that is rare and valuable, a spirit that our liberals and radicals can well afford to acquire. They may spurn the letter of Mr. Drucker's book, but what better have they to show, over the years?" Quincy Howe

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 S 26 '42 1400w

"Stimulating contribution from the pen of the author of 'The End of Economic Man', at present economist and sociologist at Bennington College. In clear and simple language he displays keen insight concerning the nature of the fundamental changes taking place in the social climate during these days of crisis, war, and revolution. He beats no drum for any sugar-coated panacea; neither does he draft a blueprint of tomorrow's better world. On the contrary, he frankly confesses that 'this study will not try to develop concrete solutions for concrete situations, if only because this author has no idea what the concrete situations of the future will be.' . . . The men who are to make the future well do well to read this book and give careful thought to its many words of wisdom. It is crammed with intellectual dynamite."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:4 N '42 300w

Reviewed by Marshall Bragdon
Springf'd Republican p6 O 10 '42 1050w
Time 40:107 N 16 '42 600w

"Reviewers of Mr. Drucker's work habitually use the word 'brilliant.' Let us admit it: Mr. Drucker is 'brilliant.' He tosses off epigrams and aphorisms with fluency and ease. His volume is full of penetrating insights. But they simply do not add up. His epigrams contradict each other. His aphorisms cancel out. There is a curious combination in his style of a German mysticism and a popular-magazine looseness that is fatal to any precision of thought. Reading Mr. Drucker is like driving with bright headlights through an intermittent fog. For a moment, the road ahead seems clear. One strikes the fog; the headlights are still on: there is, certainly, illumination. But it is merely a brilliant blur." Henry Hazlitt
+ Yale R n s 32:386 winter '43 1000w

DRUMMOND, ALEXANDER MAGNUS, and GARD, ROBERT E., eds. Lake guns of Seneca and Cayuga. 273p $3 Cornell Univ. press 812.08 American drama—Collections 42-25414

Nine plays about upstate New York. They range "in date from 1790 to 1941, in locale from a manor house in the Hudson Valley to the vineyards of Chautauqua county, in form from the ballad play to melodrama and farce, and in subject matter from Indian lore and frontier folksay to today's farmer struggle over the price of milk." (Theatre Arts) Contents: The lake guns of Seneca and Cayuga, by A. M. Drummond; Let's get on with the marryin', by Robert Gard; Donalds O'Rourke, by Louise O'Connell; A day in the vineyard, by E. I. Baker and A. M. Drummond; Chenango crone, by Edward Kamarcok; Raisin' the devil, by

DRUMMOND, A. M.—Continued
Robert Gard; Family cooperative, by E. L. Thurston; Over fourteen: and single, by Lauren Williams; Mixing up the rent, by Robert Gard. Plays may be produced free of charge until July 1, 1945, by any bona fide amateur group.

Library J 67:630 J1 '42 90w

"The title play is a rich and redolent stage piece, a poetic Baedeker to the Finger Lakes district, its lore and its deep vein of fantasy. Not every one of the remaining eight scripts comes out well on the printed page, and it will take the imaginative and ingenious director to see them all as stage vehicles. But the challenge is there and worthy of being taken up by other theatres even outside the Upstate region."

+ Theatre Arts 27:66 Ja '43 350w

DRURY, SAMUEL SMITH. The upward way. 104p $1.50 Little

,170 Conduct of life 42-21865

Short excerpts from the inspirational writings, letters, journals, or chapel talks, of Dr Drury, who was headmaster of St Paul's School at Concord, New Hampshire, from 1910 until his death in 1938.

"Dr. Drury's written words . . . are clear and alive and honest. They are free from the least trace of cheap sentimentality, but they burn with the deep fires of devotion to all that is brave and true, and of good report. To the many boys of St. Paul's who knew Dr. Drury, this book will have a glowing personal interest; but it belongs also to a far larger group. It offers what numberless people may well prize: an introduction to the spirit of a man who lived gladly and abundantly in body, mind and soul." W. R. Bowie

+ Books p20 Ja 17 '43 430w

"The only fair review of this rich little volume would be to quote it in its entirety. It is delightful—and profound. There is joy in living combined with a deep sense of God's presence that makes its homely wisdom, exquisitely expressed, as tonic as music." J. H. Titus

+ Churchman 156:17 D 1 '42 120w

DRYER, SHERMAN HARVARD. Radio in wartime. 384p $3 Greenberg

621.384 Radio broadcasting—War use 42-50524

"Although the point of departure of the book is the open forum, a somewhat rare form of radio program, the truth about any form of radio is true about all forms. [The author] discusses the important problem of how abstractions are most clearly and quickly explained, the oft-forgotten necessity of providing distinct definitions to the audience early in the program, and how differences of opinion can be led around the morass of confusion to present a clear pattern of pro and con. . . This book, the considered proposals of men who have proved themselves radio experts as well as literary men of stature, is one of the first books ever to appear which lays constructive, irrefutable, and, above all, logical ground rules for solving those multiple problems. The writer, contemplating a radio debut, should beware of radio style as technique and regard it, as this book does, as a method of thinking." Sat R of Lit

Books p9 Ja 3 '43 220w

Christian Century 60:19 Ja 6 '43 170w

N Y Times p6 D 13 '42 500w

"For the writer who is leaning toward radio, the editor attempting to broaden his knowledge of media, the scholar or educator surveying methods for increasing the impact of his ideas, and especially for the reader who wants to widen his acquaintance with the methods by which this war is being fought, this collection of essays on radio's possibilities in wartime will be a useful and long-awaited addition." A. W. Williams

+ Sat R of Lit 25:18 N 28 '42 400w

Theatre Arts 27:131 F '43 500w

DU BOIS, JOHN HARRY. Plastics. 295p il $3 Am. tech. soc.

668 Plastic materials (W) 42-17062

Handbook on the "manufacture and use of the important plastics materials," intended for manufacturers and designers but simply enough written so that it may be used by the layman. Contents: An introduction to plastics; The phenolic plastics; The urea or amino plastics; The cellulose plastics; The acrylic, vinyl and styrene plastics; The cast phenolic and protein plastics; Other plastics materials; Cold molded plastics and shellac; The laminated plastics; Compression and transfer molding; Injection molding and continuous extrusion; Finishing and decorating plastics products; Selecting materials for molded products; Design of molded products. Index.

Booklist 39:4 S '42

"This would form an excellent text in a technical school, but it can be recommended to any one who wants a general background as to what plastics are, how they are made, their properties and uses." James Stokley

+ Books p20 Ja 24 '43 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:43 J1 '42

Pratt p10 D '42

DUBOIS, MRS THEODORA (MCCORMICK). Body goes round and round. 233p $2 Houghton

Detective story. 42-9575

Booklist 38:347 My 15 '42

Bookmark 3:18 My '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p22 Ap 5 '42 150w

"The McNeills are at it again, and that should be enough to cause any detective story fan to sit up and take notice. . . Read it by all means. You can't go wrong with a Dr. McNeill mystery." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 12 '42 200w

"Good puzzle."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:30 Ap 11 '42 40w

DUCASSE, CURT JOHN. Philosophy as a science; its matter and its method. 242p $3 Stechert

101 Philosophy. Methodology 41-12342

"The structure of the book consists of a first part devoted to various 'hypotheses as to the nature and method of philosophy.' These 'hypotheses,' ('definitions' would be more accurate), are that (1) philosophy is a scientia scientiarum, (2) it is 'logically articulated faith,' (3) it is 'poetic literature about the cosmos,' (4) it is 'philosophy of life,' (5) it is identical with logic, (6) it is a systematic study of meanings, (7) it is logical syntax of the language of science. This is followed by a second part which states the author's own position, that philosophy is the science of norms." J Philos

"Regardless of whether one agrees or disagrees with the author—the clarity of the author's style makes it easy to point out precisely where one is in agreement and where one is in disagreement—there can be no question about the importance of such a book. Philosophers have often criticized scientists for failure to study the philosophy of their subjects. But, strangely enough, philosophers have been reluctant to study the philosophy of philosophy. This book is a significant and worth-while contribution to that study." A. C. Benjamin

+ Ethics 52:379 Ap '42 1300w

"It is rare that a reviewer finds a book on his desk which he can both understand and praise. Professor Ducasse has written one and for that, if for nothing else, has given the philosophical public cause for rejoicing. Free from rhetorical flights and edifying passages, as simple in its phraseology as Descartes, Philosophy as a Science could on the whole serve as a model of philosophical writing." George Boas

+ J Philos 38:549 S 25 '41 1900w

DUCKWORTH, GEORGE ECKEL, ed. See Complete Roman drama

DUFFETT, W. E.; HICKS, A. R.; and PARKIN, G. R., comps. India today; the background of Indian nationalism. rev and enl ed 173p $1.75 Day

954 India—Politics and government. World war, 1939—India (W) 42-18393

"Short factual introduction to the problems of Indian nationalism, in which these three Canadian authors are careful to state the several points of view involved. Contains a résumé of the Cripps mission earlier this year." (New Yorker) Bibliography.

Booklist 39:7 S '42

Reviewed by K. C. Mahindra

Books p14 S 20 '42 800w

"India Today" is a reasonably good and largely accurate book and, therefore, a welcome addition to our scant information about a country whose destiny is inevitably linked up with the destiny of the United States." Krishnalal Shridharani

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 2 '42 1000w

"A valuable and, in general, detached summary. Map."

+ New Yorker 18:56 Ag 1 '42 40w

"The authors of India Today present their volume as an 'elementary introduction to only one of India's many problems' and to help 'anyone who wishes to take the first step in familiarizing himself with the political situation in India today.' The book succeeds in accomplishing these aims and more. It provides a readable and carefully done introduction to the many in Canada and the United States who are first beginning to realize the importance of India. To those who, though more conversant with the subject, have been unable in these pressing times to keep abreast of recent development, India Today will come as a welcome review and summary of recent events." I. S. Friedman

+ Pacific Affairs 15:375 S '42 500w

Wis Lib Bul 38:136 O '42

DUFFUS, ROBERT LUTHER. Victory on West hill. 264p $2.50 Macmillan

(W) 42-17356

A Vermont doctor tells the story of his oldest patient and the various members of his family as they gather for the old man's ninety-fifth birthday. Washington Hendricks had lived on his Vermont farm ever since his return from the Civil war, but because he remembered the stories of his grandfather, a Revolutionary soldier, his memories spanned a century and a half. The plot of the old man to instill in his descendants a faith worth living and dying for is abetted by the doctor, who gives the old man glandular treatments to help him thru the rigors of Old Home Week.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett

Atlantic 170:142 S '42 230w

Booklist 39:33 O 1 '42

"'Victory on West Hill' has more than verity to recommend it. The book is a continually interesting, often eerily thrilling tale—and still something more. Through the voice of a revived, momentarily clairvoyant old man, forces are evoked that sweep away the doubts of selfish minds in a bewildering time. . . [The book] is a novel, not only of Vermont but for America. It is a summons and a reassurance." F. F. Van de Water

+ Books p5 J1 19 '42 950w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 22 '42 600w

"Well integrated, entertaining, absorbing. Highly recommended." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 67:629 J1 '42 70w

Nation 155:57 J1 18 '42 130w

"'Victory on West Hill' is a thoroughly entertaining story. It moves along at a fast clip. It crackles with dry, homespun wit and abounds in nuggets of native Vermont drollery. There is a love story of honest and unexpected quality. There is even a dash of the supernatural for readers interested in such matters." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p4 J1 19 '42 700w

"Smoothly told, interesting, and pleasantly homiletic."

+ New Yorker 18:58 J1 18 '42 140w

"'Victory on West Hill' is a wise and salty book. . . As a novel it is loose-jointed, but as a series of utterly fascinating character studies it is entertaining and provocative." Rebecca Lowrie

+ Sat R of Lit 25:13 Ag 22 '42 390w

Wis Lib Bul 38:138 O '42

DUGGINS, GEORGE HERBERT, and EASTWOOD, FLOYD REED. Planning industrial recreation; sponsored by Division of physical educ. for men. 82p il $1 Purdue univ.

331.84 Amusements. Labor and laboring classes 42-4951

"A practical guide for plant recreation directors by the authors of 'Industrial Recreation: Its Development and Present Status.' Compiled through a study of the methods of companies which have conducted programs successfully for several years, this monograph contains detailed information on organization, administration and costs of programs, etc., supported by statistical tables. A model constitution for an employees' recreation association is included as an appendix." Management R

Management R 31:71 F '42 70w

Reviewed by H. D. Meyer

Social Forces 20:509 My '42 100w

DULEY, MARGARET. Novelty on earth. 300p $2.50 Macmillan

42-12602

In this triangular love story the third person is not the man's wife, but his young son. John Murray Blair and Sara Colville had once met casually when Sara was quite young, but the story really opens twelve years later with their second meeting and the beginning of their love. In the meantime both had married and Sara had lost two husbands, but the fact that Blair had a son whom he idolized and could not injure, kept them apart.

Booklist 38:384 Je 15 '42

"Besides her ease of movement in the world of adult emotions, Miss Duley is equally unhampered in the world in which children live. There are two excellent portraits of a pair of thoroughly lovable little girls. But best of all in this highly readable book is the fine flow of good, unsentimental, grown-up talk." Rose Feld

+ Books p2 My 10 '42 700w

"It is a book that, first to last, carries you along by its brilliance, its delicate, uncorrosive satire, its wisdom, its laughter and its originality. It delights you with its pen portraits." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 My 10 '42 650w

DU MAURIER, ANGELA. Treveryan. 304p $2.50 Doubleday [9s 6d Joseph, M]

(W) 42-23594

A stately house in Cornwall, property of generations of the Treveryan family, is the scene. It is the story of the three Treveryans who were young in the 1870's, and the taint of madness which wrecked all their lives.

Reviewed by Page Cooper

Books p12 O 25 '42 600w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 10 '42 50w

"Many people, including this reviewer, have long believed firmly, that Angela du Maurier would, one day, produce a major romantic novel. Here it is; a story that more than fulfills the most sanguine of expectations; a romantic tragedy based on a fundamental, tragic conception, deriving nothing from coincidence or temporal circumstances and attributable, in no way, to the sins or faults of those involved in the drama... To say that it is handled here with supreme competence is no more than the simple truth." J. S. Southron

DU MAURIER, ANGELA—Continued

+ N Y Times p18 O 25 '42 800w

"A not very adult novel... [It has] all the ingredients of a thriller. In this case, however, they don't add up to much."

New Yorker 18:83 O 24 '42 50w

Reviewed by John Hampson
Spec 169:70 JI 17 '42 170w

"A sure blend of romance, tragedy and macabre emotion. Written to the hilt in the best of the Wuthering Heights school, 'Treveryan' carries the familiar theme of a great family suffering under the doom of a secret curse which blights all lives that touch the unhappy family." L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p7e N 1 '42 550w
Time 40:107 O 19 '42 400w

"The plot is not very new but it is well handled, and the book is essentially readable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p345 JI 11 '42 180w

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 32:xii winter '43 30w

DU MAURIER, DAPHNE (MRS. F. A. M. BROWNING), Frenchman's creek. 310p $2.50
Doubleday [8s Gollancz] (W) 42-207

England in Restoration days is the scene of this romance, in which the chief characters are the lovely Dona, Lady St Columb; her slow-witted husband; and a dashing French pirate, who captured the lady's love, but not the lady.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (16)
N Y Times (1) PW (7) RB (1) W (1)

"This is all in the great tradition of make-believe and yet two things are lacking: the inner spark and the complete illusion. I feel a drag in the dialogue, I feel a flatness in the characters—in short, I feel that Miss du Maurier has not created anything like the overpowering illusion in Rebecca." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic Ap '42 150w

Booklist 38:209 F 15 '42

"'Frenchman's Creek' is told with neither the brooding intensity of 'Rebecca' nor the tenderness of 'The Loving Spirit,' but combines something of the quality of each in a brief but well nigh perfect romantic adventure." Page Cooper

+ Books p2 F 1 '42 700w

"'Frenchman's Creek' may thrill idle dowers and romantic adolescents... And, after all, that is quite a public! The book is attractively planned and the story well conducted, though the conclusion seems obvious from the beginning." C. H. Bishop

Commonweal 35:626 Ap 10 '42 350w

"A beautifully written tale of captivating enchantment. Recommended." S. E. Sherman

+ Library J 67:131 F 1 '42 80w

"Restoration or Regency, one does not know. 'Frenchman's Creek' is a romantic entertainment of day-dream imagining... This novel has a silken surface, it has the air of being inwardly convinced that it is silk; it believes in itself, and a reader believes in it as, for the play's while and no longer, he believed in Anthony Hope's Lady Ursula." Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 S 19 '41 90w

"The story of the titled lady and the naughty, daring pirate has the consistency of skimmed milk and the kick of a poached egg."

— New Repub 106:278 F 23 '42 50w

"Highly personalized adventure, ultra-romantic mood, skillful story-telling make this du Maurier story a most enjoyable diversion." B. S.

+ N Y Times p7 F 1 '42 650w

"This lushly nonsensical story of a bored English noblewoman who fell in love with an Errol Flynn French pirate is written by a female Sabatini." Clifton Fadiman

— New Yorker 17:61 F 7 '42 110w
Pratt p16 My '42

"It is difficult not to suppose that this book was written with an eye to the movies. It has about it an atmosphere of contrivance and concoction. It will not stand comparison with 'Jamaica Inn' and 'Rebecca,' which—whatever their literary worth may have been—were first class thrillers. 'Frenchman's Creek' is not first class and it is only just a thriller." George Dangerfield

Sat R of Lit 25:14 F 14 '42 360w

"Eighteenth century, flashy, wordy, and full of 'sunset and dark water' effects. It happens to be the kind of thing that this reviewer would not like even if it were good, and this specimen strikes me as just plumb bad." Kate O'Brien

— Spec 167:290 S 19 '41 100w

"The story takes place in a short space of time, but somehow it lacks a proper tempo of excitement. Its plot seems artificial, and while adolescent minds may get a thrill at the picturesque captain, his mold is rather that of the romantic lover than the hero of bold deeds. We see Lady Dona only as she is influenced by this strange adventurous love affair. It may shape her life so that she will never again be the butterfly of social life, but we are given no real inkling of that. One who likes an exceedingly romantic love affair will read this story—it is hardly a novel—with pleasure, but it has not the sort of stuff that made readers of 'Rebecca' cling to that book until they had read the last page." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42 300w

Time 39:74 F 2 '42 600w

"An almost preposterously innocent but very smooth, very skilful, very bright-eyed fairy tale... The tale has ease, charm, a certain finish, and yet none of these things seems to matter very much by comparison of her tone of voice. It is this ring of innocent assurance in matters of pure ordinary conviction with the extra-romantic make-believe that does the trick... Like 'Rebecca,' its predecessor, 'Frenchman's Creek' is dope, though of an inferior sort. But an element of dope enters into all fiction, the best included."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p457 S 13 '41 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 38:68 Ap '42

DU MONT, JULIUS. 200 miniature games of chess; combinations in the openings. 287p il $3 McKay [8s 6d Routledge]

794.1 Chess 42-9909

Anthology of two hundred miniature games of chess, annotated, and going back in time to the eighteenth century. Index to players. Register of stratagems and combinations.

Booklist 39:29 O 1 '42

Reviewed by Julian Hammersley

Spec 168:210 F 27 '42 500w

"Mr. du Mont only partially carries out his expressed intention of avoiding examples that involve gross blunders by the loser; many of the older games are marred, to a modern player, by what seems an elementary disregard of opening strategy, especially by the defence. But there is a fine collection of dashing assaults from the palmy days of gambit play, some very familiar, others less known."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p35 Ja 17 '42 200w

DUN, ANGUS. Not by bread alone. 148p $1.50
Harper

264 Worship 42-3776

"The dean of the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge, Mass., has written 'the presiding bishop's book for Lent' for the present year. Less specifically or narrowly a book for a single season than most Lenten books, it is an illuminating analysis of the whole subject of worship, which the author succinctly defines as 'something called out of men by their meetings with God.' The fact of the reality and presence of God, the fact of Christ, and the fact of the social context in which men find God are dominant ideas." Christian Century

Booklist 38:245 Mr 15 '42

+ Christian Century 59:187 F 11 '42 60w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 156:16 F 15 '42 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

DUNCAN, DOROTHY (MRS HUGH MACLENNAN). Bluenose; a portrait of Nova Scotia. 273p il $3 Harper

917.16 Nova Scotia—Description and travel (W) 42-19820

An American woman, married to a Nova Scotian, describes the history, customs, and people of the land into which she married, which she has come to understand and to cherish. Thruout the book she mingles her personal experiences with the account of Nova Scotia. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:47 O 15 '42

"Throughout this tapestry of present, past and future run two strands of what might be called local color. One is the presence, everywhere in the record, of people of today, native types who speak for themselves and to whom any one is glad to listen. The other is the author's personal relation to Nova Scotia, appearing and reappearing in scenes from her family life. All this results in a book with the characteristics it ascribes to Nova Scotian character, a book that is 'vivid, positive and virtuous.'" M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 Ag 16 '42 550w

"This is rather more than an ordinary travel book. Insofar as it conveys a revelation of character it will be helpful to Nova Scotians in realizing some of their qualities, both good and bad. But it has predominantly, I think, the air of the literary worker who has discovered unusual material so that its greatest value may be as a stimulus to the interest of writers in the Nova Scotian locale." Alan Creighton

+ Canadian Forum 22:186 S '42 550w

"So warmly welcomed will this be by all Nova Scotia enthusiasts that most will wish to own it and, consequently, demand on the library will not be as great as for general run of books. However, because of accuracy and variety of information given, libraries will need at least one copy, and, if the happy day comes when motorists again can plan vacations, Bluenose will serve as a guide as truly as it will now serve the stay-at-home traveller." A. M. Colt

+ Library J 67:680 Ag '42 70w

"The urge behind the writing of this book was an imperative and a timely one. The new-found necessity of again making military use of Halifax has drawn attention to Nova Scotia's unique position, its unique tradition and its unique facilities for becoming on a much larger scale what it once was in a smaller world. . . The writer's method of telling her factual story ramblingly is surprisingly effective." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 16 '42 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 38:185 D '42

DUNCAN, JOHN CHARLES. Essentials of astronomy. 181p il $1.85 Harper

523 Astronomy 42-15656

"A nontechnical introduction to astronomy suitable for a short college course. Eight star maps and many illustrations." Booklist

Booklist 39:44 O 15 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:37 JI '42

"Author of a standard college text which has run through several editions, Professor Duncan has prepared here a shorter work which should meet the need in many of the smaller libraries."

+ Wis Lib Bul 38:116 JI '42

DUNLAP, ORRIN ELMER. Future of television. 194p il $2.50 Harper

621.388 Television (W) 42-22707

"Through informative interviews with scientists and industrial leaders, the former radio editor of The New York Times and well-known writer on radio describes present status of television as an industry and envisions unlimited possibilities in advertising, broadcasting, stage and screen, for cartoonists, educators, and others." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 39:179 Ja 1 '43

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 67:843 O 1 '42 90w

Springf'd Republican p8 N 24 '42 550w

DUNNING, JOHN RAY, and PAXTON, HUGH CAMPBELL. Matter, energy and radiation. 668p il $3.50 McGraw

530 Physics 42-1060

"This volume is the first of a series of four texts prepared for a two-year science course at Columbia University, designed for those students who do not intend to enter the sciences professionally, but who do desire a general acquaintance with the chief fields of scientific investigation, a discussion of the major problems, concepts and theories in these fields and an introduction to experimental techniques. In this text, the authors focus attention on three major concepts—matter, energy and radiation—emphasizing important subtopics and introducing the more vital questions in the various fields, without going into minor details more than is necessary to give a reasonably well-rounded picture of the science of physics." (School & Society) Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 27:42 JI '42

Reviewed by L. W. Taylor

R of Scientific Instruments 13:162 Ap '42 650w

School & Society 55:56 Ja 10 '42 70w

DUNNING, LOYD, ed. See Lincoln, A. Mr Lincoln's funnybone

DUPLAIX, GEORGES. Merry shipwreck; pictures by Tibor Gergely. [36p] $1.50 Harper 42-36186

Picture-story book about a kindly old sea captain who spent his years of retirement in a barge tied up at an East River dock in New York. His crew were all animals, and were a source of great amusement. But one day the captain went ashore and the barge got loose and got wrecked in a storm, and then the fun began.

Booklist 38:334 My 1 '42

"The little pre-reader will listen to all this because he has so much to look at and it is all so gay and happy. Each animal is small and brightly, softly colored; they are all doing absurd things for animals to do." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 24 '42 250w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 27 '42 60w

"Thoroughly amusing picture storybook." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 67:477 My 15 '42 60w

"Poor story. Not worth shelfroom in library." Marguerite Nahigian

— Library J 67:477 My 15 '42 40w

"A book that 4 to 7 year olds will enjoy and one that falls readily into the much-loved group of 'funny books.'" A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 My 17 '42 220w

"A cheerful book whose decorative, brightly-colored pictures, full of amusing detail, are the best substitute this season for a new Babar volume."

+ New Yorker 17:138 D 6 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 38:139 O '42

DUPUY, RICHARD ERNEST, and CARTER, HODDING. Civilian defense of the United States. 296p $2.50 Farrar
355.23 Civilian defense (W) 42-36088

"This book is neither a technical manual for the civilian defender nor a criticism of the civilian defense effort to date. Rather, it attempts to emphasize the scope of the diverse activities which are included in a broad definition of civilian defense, to survey the demands which war makes upon the civilian and to define the extent of his participation, to look upon the American civilian defense scene as it existed at the outbreak of the war, and to provide certain comparisons with the English structure which may be of benefit here." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:246 Mr 15 '42

"The early chapters contain much information of practical value on organization, the air-raid warning network, shelters, bombs and fire fighting. In this field the authors have drawn on England's experience and the official pamphlets issued in this country, and the result is concise and useful information. In the latter portions of the book, dealing with 'Labor's Part,' 'Women in Defense' and other academic phases of civilian defense, the reader gets the distinct impression that the authors are just filling in the space with whatever happens to be handy." Emmet Crozier
+ — Books p19 Ap 5 '42 300w

"For the average reader this is an excellent book on the subject. It is written in popular, readable style by two Army officers, and leaves no topic uncovered which can possibly be construed as contributing to our civilian defense. It is less a technical book than Civil Air Defense by Lieutenant Colonel A. M. Prentiss, and is particularly valuable for its material on the part the volunteer can play. Highly recommended." M. E. Clark
+ Library J 67:181 F 15 '42 50w

Reviewed by D. W. Mitchell

Nation 155:244 S 19 '42 240w

"Some of the things these authors have to tell us are the reverse of cheerful. But it is precisely in meeting what is the reverse of cheerful that we prove our real morale. And this is a useful book with which to forearm our minds and our preparations."

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 15 '42 440w

New Yorker 18:80 Mr 28 '42 40w
Pratt p8 O '42

"No book that I have encountered really tackles our problems, but if you can afford to own only one book as daily guide and mentor, buy 'Civilian Defense of the United States' by Dupuy and Carter. You will consult it many times. It has a brisk, orderly, military tone that does the heart good." Elizabeth Renard
+ Survey G 31:269 My '42 230w

DUTTON, WILLIAM SHERMAN. Du Pont: one hundred and forty years. 396p $3 Scribner 662.2 Du Pont family. Chemistry, Technical 42-11897

A history of the manufacturing firm of Du Pont, beginning with an account of the origins of the family in France, their emigration to America in 1800, and the progress of the business—in gunpowder, explosives, and chemicals—from 1802 to the present. Index.

"The book is written in impeccable style, though it sometimes inspires incredulity. The account even of the earliest years of an impoverished Burgundian family is embellished with long conversations (in quotation marks) and with stories that tell of each nod of the head or other gesture of the participants. How can the writer be so sure of all this?.. Such a book will undoubtedly have a wide and favorable publicity and an extensive sale." F. A. Shannon
— + Am Hist R 48:370 Ja '43 420w

"This is undoubtedly a partisan book, which hardly ever gives the du Ponts the worst of it. But it is an important and highly interesting history of a dynasty that has been associated with almost all of our wars and with much of our peace, and is equally adept at producing swords and ploughshares." Joseph Driscoll

+ — Books p2 Jl 19 '42 1350w
Boston Globe p17 Je 10 '42 180w

"A critical study of the Du Pont company's financial history, including the matter of war profits, will have to be a less ex parte work. But leaving that aside, this is an enlightening and fascinating story of a remarkable industrial dynasty, the intricate ramifications of a great chain of enterprises which have promoted research to produce 'better things for better living through chemistry,' and the relation of all this to the changing patterns of American life and the crucial events of American history."

+ Christian Century 59:1258 O 14 '42 280w

E

EAKIN, MRS MILDRED OLIVIA (MOODY).
See Moody, M. O.

EASTMAN, AUSTIN VITRUVIUS. Fundamentals of vacuum tubes. 2d ed 583p il $4.50 McGraw

537.53 Vacuum tubes 41-20953

New edition of a work first published in 1937 (Book Review Digest, 1937). "The present edition has been completely revised, rearranged and brought up to date. Divided into two parts: the first part covers basic concepts and underlying fundamentals; the second part is devoted to the presentation and analysis of fundamental applications." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

Booklist 38:98 N 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 27:30 Ap '42

EASTMAN, MAX. Heroes I have known. 326p il $3 Simon & Schuster
920 (W) 42-13050

Sketches of twelve people whom the author has known and admired. Contents: Hero worship benign and diabolic; My most unforgettable character [Annis Ford Eastman]; A life portrait of Carlo Tresca; The trial of Eugene Debs; Difficulties in worshipping Isadora Duncan; The constitutional perfection of Art Young; Mark Twain's Elmira; The influence of a great preacher [Thomas K. Beecher] and his parish; An enthusiasm involving Anatole France; A character study of Charlie Chaplin; John Reed and the Russian revolution; The character and fate of Leon Trotsky; The crochety greatness of Sigmund Freud; The life story of John Dewey.

"Because he knows how to write, Mr. Eastman has written a readable book about human beings whom he has debunked as heroes. Maybe that's what he intended to do." Mary Gault
Atlantic J1 '42 250w

Booklist 38:367 Je 1 '42

"'Heroes I Have Known' may do radicals no good, but conservatives ought to read it. It will irritate them, and that is precisely why they ought to read it. But if they have any appreciation of good writing, it will also entertain them." G. W. Johnson
+ Books p2 Ap 26 '42 1350w

Reviewed by J. K. Paulding

Commonweal 36:354 J1 31 '42 700w

"'Heroes I Have Known' consists of twelve biographical sketches. They vary greatly in quality—from triviality in the bit of fluff on Anatole France to bright effectiveness in the pieces on Trotsky and John Dewey. But all of them are well written; they have that casual gusto that Eastman seems to be able to turn on at will, as well as a fine wealth of anecdote and gossip revelation that makes the pages turn themselves." Max Gissen
+ New Repub 106:677 My 18 '42 360w

"Let it be said at the outset that the dozen sketches provided here by Max Eastman of 'twelve who lived great lives' make instructive and delightful reading. But there is such a thing as letting well enough alone. . . We have all heard that no man is great to his valet, and that familiarity breeds contempt. Well, except for Freud and Anatole France, whom Mr. Eastman has met to speak to, he has known his 'heroes' intimately. That is to say, he knows their faults as thoroughly as their virtues. And it is not always the virtues that win. What sort of 'heroine' is it that you want to avoid the sight of, as Mr. Eastman did when for the last time he saw Isadora Duncan?" John Cournos

+ — N Y Times p13 My 3 '42 900w

"Mr. Eastman is remote from the obscene hero worship of . . . Thomas Carlyle. On the other hand, he is sensible of the far-reaching effects individual characters may exert, and he limns his heroes with love and irony." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 18:77 Ap 25 '42 90w

Pratt p5 D '42

"In introducing these twelve sketches of the great, Mr. Eastman himself invites comparison with Carlyle's 'Heroes and Hero-Worship,' and offers a distinction between a complete and a critical devotion to the heroic in human beings. The distinction is doubtless worth making, but its demonstration by the examples contained in this volume entirely fails. It is not because Mr. Eastman is critical but rather because his point of view is wobbly. He is by turns an intimate essayist, a reporter, an autobiographer, a sentimental feature writer, and a humorist. It is as a humorist that I like him best. The laughter he provokes is at once loud and subtle, like that of Mark Twain whom he smuggles into his gallery of twelve greatly to our advantage." Jacques Barzun
— + Sat R of Lit 25:5 My 23 '42 360w

EASTMAN, MAX. Lot's wife. 43p $2 Harper
811 42-22653

A retelling in verse of the Biblical story of Lot, with the poet's own modern interpolations and interpretations.

"The Eastman retelling of Holy Writ is scarcely in the New England Sunday-school tradition. To situations and terms as lusty and plain-spoken as Genesis itself he adds a good deal of psychological interpretation in a contemporary idiom. The resulting combine of vivid imagery, Biblical and Broadway, pungent humor, and Byronic metrics with a juke-box flourish is a far leap from the orthodox pulpit." Ruth Lechlitrer
Books p26 N 22 '42 900w

"Mr. Eastman's new version of the old, unhappy tale of Lot and his family, first told in Genesis, is loud and vulgar. It is also clever, often amusing, always glibly readable, coarsely effective in many passages, and poetically affecting in a few. Mr. Eastman must have had great fun writing it, and only the squeamish will have no fun reading it." B. R. Redman
+ — Sat R of Lit 26:18 Ja 16 '43 800w

"With vividness of phraseology that is more than just plain rugged, Mr. Eastman hammers into marching iambs and contemporary vernacular one of the famous tales of the Old Testament. Whether one prefers the language of the ancients or of the moderns is a matter of choice." A. M. Jakeman
Springf'd Republican p8 N 12 '42 360w

EBERHART, MRS MIGNON (GOOD). Wolf in man's clothing. 294p $2 Random house
(W) 42-36399

Detective story.

Booklist 39:139 D 15 '42

"If you wonder why Mignon G. Eberhart ever dropped such a natural as Sarah, one can only repeat a rumor to the effect that certain movie and magazine people considered the old girl not quite glamorous enough for real art.

Perhaps her triumphal return in a sure best-seller will change this somewhat ghastly state of affairs." Will Cuppy

+ Books p46 N 15 '42 400w

"There is a romance here too, but instead of interfering with the mystery element, it serves to increase and accentuate the suspense. The story is so absorbing that one can easily forgive Mrs. Eberhart for her curiously involved manner of telling it, a manner which makes for slow reading." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 N 15 '42 200w

"Slightly erratic plot, but all right on the whole."

+ — New Yorker 18:80 N 14 '42 70w

"High grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 N 21 '42 40w
Time 40:116 D 7 '42 40w

EBERHART, RICHARD. Song and idea. 55p
$1.50 Oxford [6s Chatto]

811

[41-19491]

A third volume by an American poet who has previously published A Bravery of Earth, and Reading the Spirit (Book Review Digest, 1930, 1938).

"Eberhart's work is a joy to read, fresh, alive, luminous. For he has discovered, as few poets of the younger generation have, that the composition and the reading of poetry are primarily emotional processes. . . His utterance is that of a mind which reacts to and controls what the blood reports. . . It is pleasant to find a poet who is susceptible equally to tradition and experiment and employs neither for its own sake. Not all the forty poems are good. One can point to some in which the poet borders on poseur, to some in which decoration is too lavishly applied, to some which are perilously thin in subject matter." Kerker Quinn
+ — Books p28 N 29 '42 450w

"The tone of the whole book is, in Mr. Eberhart's own words, 'forceful, solemn, pure purposive.' It is also, and as a consequence, poetically exciting, and deeply moving." Lewis Gannett
+ Boston Transcript p9 Ja 13 '41 350w

"In Mr. Eberhart one finds that goodness and natural simplicity of feeling that characterises Whitman and the author of Moby Dick. Mr. Eberhart rings true, but often one feels that the poem falls short of the vision. . . Sophistication suits him less well." Kathleen Raine
+ — New Statesman & Nation 20:686 D 28 '40 300w

"Mr. Eberhart is innocent and humorless, imitative, fiercely individual, uneven to the fault of chaos. His finest poems, I Walked Out to the Graveyard to See the Dead, The Full of Joy Do Not Know; They Need Not, Two Loves, express with economy and intellectual beauty the sovereign individual. . . Such exaltation, however, illuminates but the barest handful of his poems." J. M. Brinnin
+ — Poetry 61:508 D '42 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p653 D 28 '40 480w

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE (PHYLLIS ANN CARTER, pseud). Bands play on; the story of bands and orchestras; il. by William Sharp. 140p $2 McBride

785 Bands (music). Orchestras

(W) 42-24381

Brief survey of the history of bands and orchestras from the primitive musical instruments of the East to modern American swing bands. Index. For children from ten to fourteen.

Booklist 39:123 D 1 '42

"Small book; good type; pleasing make-up; ten full-page line drawings by William Sharp. Well indexed. Approved but not necessary at this price for most libraries." Maude Adams
Library J 67:955 N 1 '42 70w

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE. (PHYLLIS ANN CARTER, pseud). Radium treasure and the Curies. 105p il $2 Crowell

B or 92 Curie, Pierre—Juvenile literature.
Curie, Marie (Sklodowska) (Mme Pierre Curie)—Juvenile literature. Radium—Juvenile literature (W) 42-36131

In a book designed for young readers the author tells the story of Pierre and Marie Curie, of their discovery of radium and of what radium is, how it is extracted and how it is used.

Booklist 38:279 Ap 1 '42

"For younger readers than those who in high school years find fascination in Eve Curie's life of her mother, this introduction to the lives of two great scientists and their work that changed the world for us has its own fascination." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Mr 8 '42 240w

Christian Century 59:257 F 25 '42 30w

"Most of the books about the discoverers of radium are for older readers. This sympathetic and human account of Pierre and Marie Curie is as simply written as others of Miss Eberle's books, but it can be enjoyed by any age." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:113 Mr '42 130w

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson

Library J 67:269 Mr 15 '42 60w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p8 My 24 '42 260w

"A good, compact book which tells one of the most dramatic and moving stories of modern times."

+ New Yorker 18:79 My 23 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:191 D '42

ECKENRODE, HAMILTON JAMES, and CONRAD, BRYAN. George B. McClellan, the man who saved the Union. 296p maps $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 McClellan, George Brinton. U.S.—History—Civil war 42-808

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Reviewed by G. F. Milton

Am Hist R 48:137 O '42 950w

"The book is well written and has the advantage of a number of excellent battle maps." R. F. Nichols

+ Ann Am Acad 221:242 My '42 360w

"I can only admire the way the authors present the case for McClellan as an ill-used and misunderstood man. Ill-used he was, but I doubt if he was really misunderstood. His treatment was shocking, but his character had definite and vital flaws. . . I recommend this book for its historical picture and its presentation of the case for McClellan." R. E. Danielson

Atlantic Mr '42 600w

Booklist 38:208 F 15 '42

"It is improbable that the verdict which history has pronounced upon McClellan will be reversed, or even modified. Certainly this biography will do little to bring about such a reversal. For it fails to carry conviction at any point. Quite lacking in necessary documentation, it makes no effort to analyze critically and objectively the problems which it discusses; it indulges in unsupported generalizations, takes refuge in wishful thinking, substitutes speculation for facts. Pedestrian in style, labored in argument, inadequate in substance, it does nothing to enhance the bad reputation of its subject or the otherwise distinguished reputation of its authors." H. S. Commager

Books p16 F 1 '42 2050w

"History has not been kind to George B. McClellan, and the authors have set out to correct what they regard as injustice. Since they write with enthusiasm and also with intimate knowledge of the battles in which McClellan was engaged, they have fashioned an interesting book, but they have not proved their thesis that he was 'the man who saved the Union.'"

+ — Nation 154:441 Ap 11 '42 180w

ECKHART, Meister. Meister Eckhart; a modern tr. by Raymond Bernard Blakney. 333p $2 Harper

149.3 Mysticism

41-25506

"Meister Eckhart was born in the Rhone valley in 1260; trained in the school of a Dominican monastery, and at Cologne and taught in the then famous college of Paris. His interest for us today lies in the fact that there he was a medieval mystic of the first order. . . The selections here printed include Eckhart's 'Talks of Instruction', twenty-eight sermons of rare worth, and a few pages of gem-like 'Fragments.' . . These selections are prefaced by an illuminating introduction by the translator, and followed by twenty-two pages of notes. A brief bibliography, but no index." Churchman

Booklist 38:245 Mr 15 '42

"One need not agree with Mr. Blakney's approach to Eckhart's mysticism or his reference to his followers in 'wild mystical societies,' among whose members, it should be noted, were Dominican monks as well schooled as their 'Master.' A mountain peak, or such a religious genius as Eckhart, can be approached from many valleys and appreciated by differing seekers for truth. There remains only the obligation to express wholehearted appreciation of this presentation to American readers of Meister Eckhart." Anne Seesholtz

+ — Christian Century 59:286 Mr 4 '42 900w

Reviewed by E. C. Chorley

Churchman 156:16 Mr 1 '42 240w

Reviewed by A. C. Pegis

Commonweal 35:301 Ja 9 '42 600w

"While the positions of Meister Eckhart will find little hospitality in certain quarters, and while many of them will seem extreme even to those possessing a sympathy for practical, religious mysticism, they deserve careful consideration by all who want to understand the views to which speculative mysticism leads." G. W. Davis

Crozer Q 19:156 Ap '42 600w

EDDY, GEORGE SHERWOOD. Maker of men; the secret of character building. 141p $1.50 Harper

248 Christian life. Jesus Christ—Character. Suffering 41-26025

In the first World war the author wrote and published (but only for soldiers) two small books: Maker of Men, and Suffering and the War. This new volume is based on the materials and ideas of those books, rewritten and adapted to present needs.

"Dr. Eddy's book, consisting of material first gathered for the last war, is noble counsel for this as well." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p12 Ja 18 '42 200w

"With his accustomed clarity of thought and directness of statement, Mr. Eddy exhibits those aspects of the teaching and practice of Jesus which express the basic principles of character building. These principles are not left vague and general but are developed into rules or techniques for the growth of character."

+ Christian Century 58:1546 D 10 '41 70w
Christian Science Monitor p12 F 14 '42 180w

Churchman 156:31 Mr 15 '42 70w

"The book closes with the question, 'What Shall I Do?' It is the kind of book needed today, when we are coming to put more trust in our simplicities and more dependence upon the recently somewhat neglected spiritual resources." R. E. Keighton

+ Crozer Q 19:167 Ap '42 200w

"This new volume has the intimately personal quality which belongs to all of Mr. Eddy's writing and speaking. It is the man himself speaking, and speaking what he intensely believes. The chapters which deal most directly with religious living are particularly helpful." John Knox

+ J Religion 22:333 Jl '42 60w

EDDY, GEORGE SHERWOOD. Man discovers God. 270p $2.50 Harper

231 God. Theism (W) 42-22597

"It would not be at all disparaging to call this book 'Dr. Eddy Discovers God', for he frankly admits choosing the thirty or more spiritual leaders of the race who have found God in a way that is most helpful to him and pertinent to present-day thought. Ten chapters trace the life and teaching of these men from the Greeks through the prophets of Israel, the New Testament writers, Augustine, the mystics, the Protestant reformers, the scientists and modern writers. Among these last groups are to be found such names as Pasteur, Pupin, Compton, Niebuhr, Gandhi, Schweitzer." (Churchman) Index.

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 59:1529 D 9 '42 800w

"Dr. Eddy writes easily, almost colloquially, and his book should prove of great interest, especially to the lay mind. If this be 'popularizing' let us have more of it." J. H. Titus
+ Churchman 156:14 N 15 '42 180w

"It is a book that should strengthen religious faith, and clarify the average man's vague, muddy thinking about God." Mitchell Bronk

+ Crozer Q 20:72 Ja '43 600w

EDDY, WALTER HOLLIS, and HAWLEY, GESSNER GOODRICH. We need vitamins: what are they? what do they do? 102p $1.50 Reinhold

612.39 Vitamins 41-20865

"The authors tell what each vitamin is, give its chemical and physical properties, tell how its potency is determined and expressed, what it does and how, the amount needed daily, where and how it is to be obtained." J Home Econ

"The reviewer highly recommends this little book. It is literally packed with vitamins." C. R. Fellers

+ Am J Pub Health 32:327 Mr '42 180w

"Too technical for the layman or for students in the first two years of college, this condensed presentation of vitamin knowledge would have value as refresher material for persons with a good background of organic chemistry and human nutrition."

J Home Econ 34:53 Ja '42 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:13 Ja '42

Pratt p16 O '42

EDMONDS, WALTER DUMAUX. Tom Whipple; il. by Paul Lantz. 70p $2 Dodd

(W) 42-23438

In his Foreword the author says: "Tom Whipple is the story of a Yankee lad who decided to see something of the world, and did so, which is considerable of a Yankee trait in itself. It is a true story. You can find it briefly told in an old book called Letters from New York, by Lydia Maria Child. But I thought it was worth retelling, for it is good in these times to remember someone like Tom Whipple and to realize how little it takes to do a thing if you've a mind to do it and believe in yourself."

Booklist 39:107 N 15 '42

"The adventures of Tom Whipple are more than meets the eye—a brilliant color-picture book. This is a Yankee blend of tall tale and moral story—two elements of romance seldom combined—retold from one of the works of edification of Lydia Maria Child, with the dry humor and direct speech that belonged to Yankees in the days of Barnum." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 N 15 '42 380w

"Mr. Edmonds' fine story is splendidly printed and has double page pictures in color."

+ Cath World 156:379 D '42 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:431 N '42 110w

"Slight story, but told with directness and verve and fills need for stories about the United States for readers from ten to twelve." Evelyn Turpin

+ Library J 67:1068 D 1 '42 110w

"This is a very different story from the Newbery prize-winner, The Matchlock Gun, not so dramatic but unified in its viewpoint as that was not. The humor which is implicit in Mr. Edmonds's matter-of-fact statement of Tom's viewpoint is delightful, but chiefly it is a story to be cherished because it illustrates the resourcefulness and the single-minded courage which are the heritage of the free-born, of the sons of a democracy which breeds all men to be equal." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p26 N 15 '42 340w

"An outstanding book." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 18:108 D 12 '42 60w

EDMONDS, WALTER DUMAUX. Young Ames. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 350p $2.50 Little

(W) 41-28075

Episodes in the career of an upstate New York boy, who came to New York city in 1833 to make a fortune. On the first day John Ames got a job with a big mercantile firm. By keeping his ears and eyes open the boy made himself an asset, and in two years time became a member of the firm, and married his chief's niece. The wedding and the great fire of 1835, which destroyed so much property in lower Manhattan, are the closing events. Part of the book has appeared as short stories in the Saturday Evening Post.

Booklist 38:177 Ja 15 '42

Bookmark 3:16 Mr '42

"All of the stories are good even if occasionally, such as the one, for example, where young Ames has a talk with President Jackson, they are a little on the incredible side. They make excellent entertainment and give an exciting picture of New York of the 1830's." Rose Feld

+ Books p3 Ja 18 '42 950w

"Here is a collection of pleasant, entertaining stories about New York business, love, ships and men. But the claim of the publishers that Mr. Edmonds has written a novel here is less than accurate." Francis Downing
+ Commonweal 35:372 Ja 30 '42 750w

"A grand description of travel in those days, card sharks, rivalry between volunteer fire departments, and labor troubles of that part of the century—and a most engrossing and entertaining plot. It will be very popular with most of your readers." Lena Ruppert

+ Library J 66:1094 D 15 '41 100w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 S 18 '42 100w

"One of the most delightfully nostalgic success stories to make its appearance in a long time. . . Probably, taken in any solemn sense, 'Young Ames' is not so important or memorable as 'Drums Along the Mohawk.' It is, however, the kind of first-rate entertainment of which—in these times or in any—we are certain never to have enough." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 18 '42 800w

"'Young Ames' (episodes of which have been Saturday Evening Post) is at once rather good fun and quite absurd. Perhaps I should say that it is good fun because it is quite absurd. What Mr. Edmonds has done, with admirable cheekiness, is to take the old Horatio Alger story of the Industrious Apprentice who starts as an errand boy and winds up with the Boss's Daughter (it's a niece in this case) and galvanize it almost into life." Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 17:66 Ja 24 '42 250w

"Altogether, this is an amusing book for an idle half-hour, and a still better book for youth of high-school age." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 Ja 31 '42 400w

Reviewed by John Hampson

Spec 169:346 O 9 '42 70w

Time 39:82 Ja 26 '42 800w

"It is a smooth and engaging piece of work, a shade more subdued than the author's previous novel, 'Chad Hanna,' but no worse for that. Many of the incidents appear to be founded on authentic or semi-authentic record, and the general atmosphere of New York commerce of the period, with its bidding for cargoes and warehouse accommodation, is evidently the result of wide reading. Such reading, however, seems also to account for the generally untidy shape of the novel, which offers diverse scraps of New York history and politics, a glimpse of Edwin Forrest and other notabilities, and several episodes... which have little to do with the thread of the story."

EDMONDS, W. D.—Continued

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p489 O 3 '42 480w

Wis Lib Bul 38:46 Mr '42

"It's formula fiction, and lacks the affectionate intimacy with odd corners of the American scene that Walter D. Edmonds's other novels have taught us to expect." Robert Littell
Yale R ns 31:xii spring '42 210w

EDMONSON, JAMES BARTLETT, and DON-DINEAU, ARTHUR. Civics in American life. 702p il $2 Macmillan

300 Citizenship. U.S.—Politics and government. Social sciences 41-19553

"The viewpoint of the authors of this particular text is that Civics was once a study concerned with merely the memorizing of a few facts about government. The new civics is primarily concerned with the meaning of American democracy, the major problems and services of our government, and the obligations of the citizens. This new viewpoint requires a kind of instruction in which learning by doing has a part along with the mastery of essential facts as a basis for an enlightened citizenship." Social Studies

School & Society 54:256 S 27 '41 20w

"Certain features of the arrangement of materials might be questioned. . . There are slight errors of fact. . . These shortcomings, however, will not prevent this book from effectively stimulating both teachers and pupils. It has excellent possibilities either as a basic textbook or as a source of supplementary reading." K. J. Rehage

+ — School R 50:236 Mr '42 900w

"The seven units are carefully organized and are well presented. . . The style of writing in the book and its manner of presentation are for the most part good. Some of the conversational material used in the discussion seems rather stilted and might well be classed as extraneous material. . . This text for citizenship training should stimulate interest in and an appreciation of American democracy. The fact that it applies the subject matter to the life of the pupil makes it particularly attractive for an introductory course in the social studies." H. M. Watters

+ — Social Educ 6:190 Ap '42 500w

"An excellent book." Harold Gluck
+ Social Studies 33:44 Ja '42 340w

EDWARDS, JAMES G., pseud. See MacQueen, J. W.EDWARDS, NEWTON, ed. Education in a democracy. 160p $1.25 Univ. of Chicago press 370.973 Education—U.S. 41-23886

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Booklist 38:246 Mr 15 '42

"One welcomes a book of this kind; for many years leaders in education have sensed that students who are not in education and many citizens in all walks of life possess only a limited knowledge and understanding of the part which education must play in a democracy. It is of vital importance that competent authority appraise for these groups the functions of education in a democratic society. . . It is the reviewer's hope that professional educators will give more of their time to preparation of literature on education in the United States which will interest and challenge the general public as well as students in all walks of life. May this volume be a forerunner of such efforts." Fred Engelhardt

+ School R 50:387 My '42 1000w

"The volume entitled Education in a Democracy is made up of eight lectures given at the University of Chicago on the Walgreen Foundation. While each lecture was delivered by a different individual, there is a splendid coherence in the series. It furnishes one with thought-provoking material for creative thinking." H. W. A. Hanson

+ Social Studies 33:142 Mr '42 180w

EFRON, DAVID. Gesture and environment. (King's crown press bk) 184p pa $2.25 Columbia univ. press

157.224 Gesture. Ethnopsychology 41-21442

"A tentative study of some of the spatio-temporal and linguistic aspects of the gestural behavior of eastern Jews and southern Italians in New York city, living under similar as well as different environmental conditions." Subtitle

"Columbia University Press should be commended and congratulated for establishing under its aegis the King's Crown Press 'for the purpose of making certain scholarly material available at minimum cost.' Complete success has marked this venture. The text is very clear and the illustrations, especially the line drawings, are excellent." A. M. Tozzer

+ Am Anthropol 44:715 O '42 800w

"Not the least interesting portion of this volume are the nineteen pages of sketches by Stuyvesant Van Veen. They render the verbal descriptions more understandable, and suggest the possibility of diversifying the techniques of present-day sociological research. The methods and results of this study, as the author suggests in passing, should have important consequences in the field of social psychology." E. V. Stonequist

+ Am Soc R 7:279 Ap '42 650w

Reviewed by Gardner Murphy

Ann Am Acad 220:268 Mr '42 600w

EGLOFF, GUSTAV; HULLA, GEORGE, and KOMAREWSKY, VASILY ILYICH. Isomerization of pure hydrocarbons. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser) 499p $9 Reinhold

541.7 Hydrocarbons. Isomerism 42-19811

"Study 'confined to pure hydrocarbons of the aliphatic, alicyclic, and aromatic series.' Includes also a compilation of available experimental data considered of value for the purpose of comparing catalyst concentration, time, temperature, pressure and yield of products." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Met Eng 49:186 N '42 250w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:40 Jl '42

EGRI, LAJOS. How to write a play; with an introd. by Gilbert Miller. 303p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

803.2 Drama—Technique (W) 42-9683

"The principles of play construction applied to creative writing and to the understanding of human motives." (Subtitle) Index.

Booklist 38:422 Jl 1 '42

"Mr. Egri's principles of play construction are clearly set forth, and they are correct and valuable; they could be read with profit not only by all student playwrights, but by all seeking success in any form of fiction." W. P. Eaton

+ Books p15 Je 21 '42 150w

Boston Globe p19 Jl 8 '42 90w

"The book will undoubtedly be stimulating to anyone trying to write a play."

+ Current Hist 2:468 Ag '42 500w

"The usual jargon ('premise,' 'character,' 'conflict'), but presented with more insight, clarity, and concreteness than the conventional manual offers. Won't teach you how to write a play but will help you to determine why the ones you see are so dismal."

New Yorker 18:80 Mr 28 '42 40w

"The claim embodied in the title of this meaty and serviceable book is, of course, unjustified. Playwriting is a craft that has to be worked out anew by each aspirant, in sweat and blood. But he can be pulled out of mistakes—once he has fallen into them—and pushed towards what he really intended to do. This book has a way of doing both jobs with more than usual penetration, largely because of the author's grasp of what makes a play come alive and propel its own growth."

+ Theatre Arts 26:347 My '42 310w

EHRET, WILLIAM FREDERICK, ed. Physical science, 639p il $3.90 Macmillan

500 Science

42-17897

"In this volume are brought together important contributions made by the several branches of science to our knowledge of the physical world. Emphasis has been placed on general concepts and fundamental principles, and upon methods of reasoning and the scientific method of working. This is in an endeavor to supply the reader with the background necessary for an appreciation of the work of the scientist and an understanding of the workings of the universe around him. Matter is here viewed through the eyes of the astronomer, chemist, geologist, mathematician, and physicist; and their impressions are fused into a composite picture which represents broadly the present state of our knowledge of the physical universe. In the six years that have elapsed since the first appearance of this work, many others of a similar stamp but somewhat different content have been published. . . . Our experience has demonstrated the value of the more rigorous approach, with the frequent application of mathematics as a tool, and continuous emphasis on the inculcation of the scientific method of studying a problem." (Pref) Index.

"There is much valuable information, generally well arranged. . . . Mechanical work is excellent, and the care, which might be expected, has eliminated almost all mistakes. Very, very rarely one creeps in as '1938' for the centennial year of organic chemistry, which is obviously a typographical error. There should be a word of warning. This excellent book should not be used by students of inferior ability, or by those who do not intend to work and to work hard." Harrison Hale

+ Chem & Eng N 20:1594 D 10 '42 330w
N Y New Tech Bks 27:44 Jl '42

EINSTEIN, ALFRED. Greatness in music; tr. by César Saerchinger. 288p $3 Oxford 780.1 Music—Philosophy and esthetics.

Genius, Musicians

41-23395

"Dr. Einstein's four long chapters on questionable and unquestionable greatness, the esoteric and historical conditions for greatness, contain no neat pigeonholes for genuine and bogus giants, no rigid hierarchy of masters, journeymen and apprentices. They serve rather as frames for informal but intensely illuminating conversations (observations distilled from the ripe experience of a wise and witty man) on the general subject of those composers who have been acclaimed at one time or another, by this group or that nation, as 'great.'" Books

"Far too much writing on the arts and history in general, in music and musical history in particular, clings to the extreme poles of didacticism—the far north of technical scholarship and the deep south of popularized 'appreciation.' It's a refreshing pleasure to come across a book on music that has no lesson or message, and no special axe to grind, one that can be relished by scholar and layman alike, a book concerned less with music itself than with eternal mysteries of the human spirit and artistic creation. . . . The true worth of this book lies in its fascinating exploration of the factors that affect our evaluations of greatness." R. D. Darrell

+ Books p16 Ja 25 '42 650w

"The great figures emerge as men and as creators in portraits that are complete, full bodied, and real. It is a book for those who have made some progress in musical thought and feeling, and who have more than a beginner's acquaintance with the masterpieces. For, them it will be illuminating and rewarding."

R. S. Angell

+ Library J 66:999 N 15 '41 100w

New Repub 106:550 Ap 20 '42 120w

Pratt p18 D '42

EINZIG, PAUL. Appeasement: before, during and after the war. 215p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

940.531 Peace. Europe—Politics. Germany—Foreign relations. Europe—Economic conditions. World war, 1939—Economic aspects

A 42-444

"In order to make good the one-sidedness of literature on appeasement this book is devoted mainly, though by no means exclusively, to describing and criticising the policy of economic appeasement. I shall try to make readers realise the consistency of purpose that ran through apparently isolated individual acts of economic appeasement. While any one act of economic appeasement may appear insignificant in comparison with any of the major acts of political appeasement, it will be seen that the combined weight of acts of economic appeasement was very considerable. . . . The main reason for my decision to publish [this book] is the necessity to dispel the widespread illusion that appeasement is dead and buried." Pref.

"This far from cheerful prospect for the post-war era merits careful consideration. Although the book primarily concerns British appeasement, the implications are much broader. It provides the reader with a wealth of detail on less known methods of appeasement, adds to the complex picture of the growth of imperialistic military Germany and, more important, it is a vital contribution to the grand debate on war aims and post-war organization. It remains to be seen whether Einzig's approach is correct." Carol Thompson

+ Current Hist 3:74 S '42 800w

Reviewed by J. L. Hammond

Manchester Guardian p3 D 30 '41 130w

"Dr. Einzig has many harsh things to say in this book, but in his advocacy of a clear-cut victory he will carry conviction."

Times [London] Lit Sup p562 N 15 '41 800w

EISENBERG, FRANCES. My Uncle Newt; drawings by Pete Boyle. (Story press bk) 320p $2.50 Lippincott

42-24442

"Primarily about Aunt Pearl Wimpler and her cantankerous, profane old Uncle Newt, the skeleton in her family closet who wouldn't stay put. Some very funny situations arise when Aunt Pearl struggles to save the soul of unregenerate Uncle Newt, who came, uninvited, to stay with her and thereafter kept her respectable boarding house in a turmoil of exuberant eccentricity." Library J

Booklist 39:184 Ja 1 '43

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p22 N 1 '42 350w

"Amusing, folksy sort of book." S. E. Sherman

+ Library J 67:909 O 15 '42 70w

"The homespun illustrations by Pete Boyle patly portray the Uncle Newt adventures, and round out a volume which is more fun than its predecessor, 'There's One in Every Family.'" Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p49 N 15 '42 600w

EISENSCHIML, OTTO. Without fame; the romance of a profession. 368p $3.50 Alliance bk.

B or 92 Chemists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 42-24841

Autobiography of a chemist, born and educated in Vienna, who took his father's advice and came to the United States. The father was a naturalized American citizen and part of the author's childhood and was spent in this country. His career began in a Pittsburgh blast furnace laboratory, and from there he went to Chicago. His life story gives a picture of chemistry in industry during the last forty years.

EISENSCHIML, OTTO—Continued

Booklist 39:119 D 1 '42

"Otto Eischenschiml would agree that science is the best use of the human intelligence to improve the conditions under which we live. But he would insist that the best use of science is to make life rich and interesting and that being wise is the essence of being human. Because of that wisdom the scientist must be better understood, must advance in public esteem, especially in these days of cataclysm. To say all that in an informal book that reads like a detective story is a signal achievement." Gerald Wendt
+ Books p4 N 8 '42 550w

"The account is in a style so readable that even those who know nothing of chemical technology and little, if anything, of its terminology will have difficulty in laying the book aside until the last page is read. . . 'Without Fame' is unique in both organization and presentation, providing the reader with a great deal of informative material which interferes in no way with the fascinating story. But it scarcely warrants the modest title which the author has chosen." H. E. Howe

+ Chem & Eng N 20:1542 N 25 '42 400w
Reviewed by J. K. Paulding
Commonweal 37:258 D 25 '42 550w

EISENSTEIN, SERGEI MIKHAILOVICH. See Eizenshtein. S. M.

EIZENSCHTEIN, SERGEI MIKHAILOVICH.
Film sense; tr. and ed. by Jay Leyda. 288p il $3 Harcourt

791.4 Moving pictures, Talking 42-19660

"The first book by the internationally known creator of Potemkin, Ten Days That Shook the World and Alexander Nevsky, is a discussion of the modern film as a richer, more expressive and profound medium than has hitherto been thought possible. One conclusion of the author is that the film can and will be a fusion of all other arts. Eisenstein would have the modern moviemaker explore and develop 'the film sense,'—a calculated, simultaneous appeal to all the senses, as well as the emotions and intellect. His discussion ends with the most stimulating analysis of a sound-film sequence yet to appear in print—the twelve film shots and the seventeen bars of Prokofiev's music that introduce the 'Battle on the Ice' in Alexander Nevsky." (Adapted from publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:45 O 15 '42

"With the exception of Virgil Thomson's brilliant writings about movies and music, I know of nothing one-tenth as arresting as Eisenstein upon his own films or more likely to make the viewing of movies an occasion for critical enjoyment rather than mere passivity. And, as regards the book as a whole, I recommend it particularly to all who consider that there is nothing much in movies anyhow, that they are made by morons and have nothing to do with either intellect or heart. Inevitably it will be read by all film-makers: but for the non-converts it ought to be a revelation, even if they turn purple at the novel spectacle of Milton as a brilliant if unconscious writer of movie scripts." Iris Barry

+ Books p2 Ag 16 '42 1300w

"Despite the large place occupied by the motion picture in this country, scant material has been published for lay consumption on the theory of the film as an art or as a science. This translation of a series of essays by the director of the Soviet Union's Institute of Cinematography, world-renowned for his exploration of the unlimited possibilities of the film art, is therefore a welcome addition to such literature as does exist on the subject. . .

The publication of the book at this time is also a contribution to the theory that certain efforts of art and intellect must continue despite the world conflict." Margaret Frakes
+ Christian Century 59:1056 S 2 '42 700w

Reviewed by Richard Griffith
Nation 156:29 Ja 2 '43 1450w

Reviewed by Dudley Nichols
New Repub 107:290 S 7 '42 950w

"There is no question that Eisenstein is a perfectionist in his field and that his theories of cinema construction are most applicable to a particular type of panoramic, mass-movement film. In Hollywood they would call him 'deep-dish,' far above the dictates of a popular mold. But the fact remains that he has written a most adult, analytical codex on a still very loosely defined art form. And it should stimulate intelligent film makers." Bosley Crowther

+ N Y Times p34 S 27 '42 800w

"All too few books are written that treat this most popular and unique phenomenon, the film, as seriously as it deserves. The lack of informative books on the esthetic, sociological, and philosophical aspects is deplorable, while we have plenty on the financial, sociological, and statistical angles. As a document of the unique position and qualities of the Russian film, Eisenstein's work is to be welcomed today more than ever." R. R. Plant

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 Ag 8 '42 1150w

"Only those who know the motion pictures well—the art, the science and the techniques that have gone into the making of the finished product—will appreciate, or even fully understand, the whole of Eisenstein's analysis of the 'film sense'. But anyone who is at all interested in the way an artist works will find The Film Sense, in Jay Leyda's able translation, distinctly rewarding."

+ Theatre Arts 26:728 N '42 600w

ELBERFELD, JOHN. Strength and properties of materials. 150p $1.75 Harper

620.1 Building materials. Metals. Strength of materials. Strains and stresses

42-18277

"The book is made up of a miscellaneous collection of short chapters about ferrous and non-ferrous metals and their manufacture, about alloys and plastics, with added chapters of a few pages each on riveted and welded joints, on beam and column design and on reinforced-concrete design." (Eng N) Index.

"This is a condensed treatment of the essential practical information that should be known by those engaged in industrial work. It is to the point and should be easily understood. It should be an excellent text for short courses, for trade schools, and for those preparing for unfamiliar work in war industries." E. J. Fettig

+ Chem & Eng N 20:1602 D 10 '42 200w

Eng N 129:112 Ag 13 '42 180w

Library J 67:1063 D 1 '42 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:45 Jl '42

ELBOGEN, PAUL, ed. Dearest mother; letters from famous sons to their mothers; introd. by Hendrik Willem Van Loon. 356p il $3.50
L. B. Fischer pub. corp, 381 4th av, N.Y.

808.86 Letters 42-14964

Collection of letters written by famous people of the past to their mothers. Arrangement is chronological, and the letters date from ca. 200 A.D. to 1928. Some of those included are: Saint Catherine of Siena; Martin Luther; Louis XIV; John Wesley; Benjamin Franklin; George Washington; Johann Wolfgang Von Goethe; John Quincy Adams; Napoleon; Michael Faraday; Thomas Carlyle; Margaret Fleming; Ralph Waldo Emerson; Nathaniel Hawthorne; Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy; William Makepeace Thackeray; Richard Wagner; John Ruskin; Walt Whitman; Florence Nightingale; Susan B. Anthony; Stephen Foster; Louisa May Alcott; James McNeill Whistler; Mark Twain; Anton Chekhov; Dwight Morrow; T. E. Lawrence; Amelia Earhart. Index.

"'Dearest Mother' is not a book that any one is under compulsion to read in order to keep abreast of the time; but it is one of those rare volumes that can be examined again and again because it may be approached from a dozen different angles. A more nearly ideal book for a bedside table will hardly appear this year." G. W. Johnson

Books p4 Je 14 '42 1000w

N Y Times p3 My 10 '42 600w

"I found this a rather dull book: I cannot blame Mr. Elbogen. Possibly there is no material for a more entertaining volume. I suspect indeed that the idea of this collection was one of those 'happy thoughts' which a little longer consideration would have shown to be a mistake. Most of these letters, which range from some unknown Romans in Africa of 200 A. D. to Amelia Earhart were just not worth reprinting. The exceptions are all the more welcome." R. E. Roberts

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:14 Je 13 '42 700w

"It's a moderately interesting volume and seems to prove that, at least in their relations with their mothers, famous personages differ very little from ordinary individuals. . . . There are, of course, many well-known figures who are not represented here (mothers died and letters were lost) but Mr. Elbogen has managed to collect examples of the letters of a goodly number. The selections vary considerably in general interest, but the curious reader will enjoy discovering what such diverse characters as St. Catherine of Siena, and Rutherford B. Hayes found to say to their mothers."

+ Springfield Republican p8 My 19 '42 390w

ELDRIDGE, EDWARD FRANKLIN. Industrial waste treatment practice. 401p il $5 McGraw 628.54 Factory and trade waste 42-8217

"A guidebook for chemical and sanitary engineers and industrial executives, bringing together technical data on industrial wastes, their sources, strength, and character, and describing modern methods of utilization, treatment, and disposal. Chemical, food-processing, textile, tannery, canning, and other industries are covered specifically, and information is given regarding structure capacities and unit loadings to aid the engineer in the construction of suitable treatment plants." (Publisher's note) Index.

"A valuable contribution to the sanitary engineering field." L. W. Van Kleeck + Am J Pub Health 32:762 Jl '42 550w

Booklist 38:342 My 15 '42

"Information regarding the treatment of some types of wastes and processes is very meager, while over-emphasis has been given to some in which the author was most actively interested. This is understandable considering the fact that the author had to rely on available published data for information on wastes other than those he encountered in the Michigan area. . . . Cost data are entirely lacking. It is hoped that this omission will be remedied in future revisions as such information would be of prime importance to plant officials contemplating waste treatment."

Chem & Met Eng 49:209 My '42 380w

Eng N 129:111 Ag 13 '42 280w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:30 Ap '42

Pratt p10 D '42

ELFORD, OWEN, pseud. Men in black. 245p $2.50 Unger

"A novel about the European underground movement and its courageous struggle behind the backs of Hitler's Gestapo men. . . . 'Men in Black' tells about a Viennese policeman, Anton Redtenbacher, who became a member of the Gestapo so he could fight most effectively for the underground movement in Austria and Czechoslovakia." N Y Times

"The author has a skilled hand for writing this kind of adventure story. The turning points are always melodramatic, and Mr. Elford makes no pretence that they are anything else. Perhaps he would say that if he is not too subtle, neither is there anything subtle about the Nazi crimes he deals with." Milton Hindus

Books p18 N 22 '42 800w

"Owen Elford follows the usual black and white and good man vs. bad man scheme. However, it's a sincerely written book, and the main character comes off convincingly." Marianne Hauser

N Y Times p48 N 29 '42 600w

"Touching, if rather naively written."

New Yorker 18:98 N 28 '42 30w

ELLARD, GERALD. The dialog mass; a book for priests and teachers of religion; with a pref. by Michael J. Curley. 223p il $2.75 Longmans

264.025 Roman Catholic church—Eucharist 42-16633

"In the dialog Mass the entire congregation, along with its official representative, the server, answers the priest in running dialog, and along with its hierarchical officiant, the priest, recites some of the parts sung at a High Mass, such as the Gloria and Credo. Interesting chapters deal with the rise and spread of the dialog Mass, its approval by the Holy See, its practical adaptation for children, its popularity evidenced by statistics in the Diocese of La Crosse and the Archdiocese of Chicago." (Cath World) Index.

"We feel confident with the author 'that this book will prove helpful to priests and educators in bridging the wide gap between our present status and that active, conscious co-worship of the laity with the priest in the joint sharing in the priestly activity of the great High Priest, Jesus Christ.'" B. L. Conway

+ Cath World 155:764 S '42 230w

"It is a fervent, optimistic and thorough appeal to the clergy, considerate and tactful, yet frank. Father Ellard's charity and diplomacy pervade the whole book. These qualities, together with a well-stocked arsenal of reasons, statistics and practical suggestions, make us hope that this is the final push which will be followed by a break through on the whole front." H. A. Reinhold

+ Commonweal 36:259 Jl 3 '42 850w

ELLENWOOD, JAMES LEE. It runs in the family; il. by Dorothea Warren. 236p $2 Scribner

173 Family. Children—Management

(W) 42-14019

The author of There's No Place Like Home (Book Review Digest, 1938) continues his study of home life and the management of a family, bringing the data on his own family up to date after a four-year period. Grandma at seventy-five is just as "sot" as ever; Jud, now a senior at college is wondering about the draft; the girls are constantly sprouting new ideas; and his wife is still the woman he is glad to have married. The suggestions are all common sense, and the telling full of humor.

Booklist 38:361 Je 1 '42

"The safest way to deal with this is to read the book for fun, find out what funny things run in the best regulated families, and realize, in most cases, that parent troubles are not so exclusive nor so serious as some parents think."

+ Books p17 My 31 '42 380w

"As good clean fun, to read for sheer amusement and without a thought of self-improvement, this is worth more than its price. Try reading it silently while the other members of the family are in the room and occupied with their own concerns, and see how far you can get (it won't be more than a page or two at any point) before you are shouting: 'Turn off that radio and listen to this.'"

+ Christian Century 59:664 My 20 '42 200w

Churchman 156:31 O 1 '42 60w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '42

ELLENWOOD, J. L.—Continued

"Underneath a breezy, humorous style this book presents many sound observations on family life and workable suggestions for living together during those tempestuous years of adolescence which some families dread."

Esther McGinnis

+ J Home Econ 34:552 O '42 250w

Wis Lib Bul 38:93 Je '42

ELLINGER, WERNER BRUNO, and ROSINSKI, HERBERT. Sea power in the Pacific, 1936-1941; with an introd. by Edward Mead Earle. 80p pa $1 Princeton univ. press

016.359 Sea power—Bibliography 42-20312

"A selected bibliography of books, periodical articles, and maps covering the period from the London Naval Conference to the beginning of the war in the Pacific. . . In the process of selection, emphasis was laid on factual information rather than political controversy, on naval strategy rather than political and economic problems, and on materials having particular relevance to the present war.' Where sufficient reason appeared, however, these criteria have not been adhered to rigidly; nor have the time limits of the period covered."

Am Pol Sci R

"Within the scope of the plan, the bibliography—containing six hundred titles, and accompanied by an authors' index—leaves little to be desired." F. A. O.

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:1000 O '42 150w

"Compiled jointly by an expert librarian and an expert in naval strategy, this work is a model of what bibliographies should be."

Bernard Brodie

+ Pacific Affairs 25:490 D '42 300w

ELLIOTT, CHARLES, ed. Fading trails. See United States. National park service

ELLIOTT, MABEL AGNES, and MERRILL, FRANCIS ELLSWORTH. Social disorganization. rev ed 1087p $3.75 Harper

301 Social problems. Sociology. Social psychology 41-3856

Revised edition of a textbook first published in 1934 (Book Review Digest, 1934). "Those who are familiar with the earlier edition will find some noteworthy changes: the material has been brought down to date and considerably expanded, there has been some rearrangement of data, and the Appendix on 'Social Disorganization in Contemporary French Thought' has been omitted. The most notable change is the expansion of various sections to take into account the dynamic changes associated with the outbreak of World War II. An entire section on 'World Disorganization' has been developed to deal with materials on 'Fascism and War.'" (Am J Soc) Indexes.

"The volume is on the whole highly readable, stimulating, and is a sociologically sound treatment of some of the most baffling and resistant social pathologies to which modern life is subject. Students will welcome it as a scholarly, well-documented, readable treatment of data into which the authors have profound insight." P. V. Young

+ Am J Soc 47:644 Ja '42 300w

"To the reviewer it appears that the treatment of Fascism and other political 'isms' is sketchy, probably because a fuller treatment would have required more words than could be allotted to this topic. The subject of war is superbly handled." C. M. Rosenquist

+ Am Soc R 7:155 F '42 220w

"Although the chapter on 'Fascism and War' reveals a very definite bias, the authors display remarkable objectivity in their handling of all other topics. This book will serve as an excellent, authoritative reference work for secondary school teachers while its use as a textbook will probably be confined to college courses." Clarence Schettler

+ Social Educ 5:471 O '41 600w

"All who value a democratic way of life should become aware of the forces within a peaceful society that make for its disorganization. As a source of information and a statement of principle, this book is a contribution."

Harold Gluck

+ Social Studies 32:236 My '41 300w

ELLIS, EDITH. We knew these men, by Wilfred Brandon; transcribed by Edith Ellis. 241p $2.50 Knopf

133.9 Future life. Spiritualism 42-2991

This tale, supposedly dictated from the etheric plane, by a Revolutionary soldier who died in 1781, describes what happened to "one of a band of Master spirits who volunteered to go to France to receive the souls of our own dead in 1918."

Books p13 F '1 42 140w

Christian Century 59:84 Ja 21 '42 110w

ELLIS, ELMER. Henry Moore Teller, defender of the West. 409p il $5 Caxton printers B or 92 Teller, Henry Moore 41-6264

"For more than thirty years, Henry Moore Teller served in Washington as senator and cabinet member. . . Born and reared in western New York, he lived in central Illinois from 1858 to 1861 and knew Lincoln as candidate for both senator and president. In 1861, he went to Colorado for a month, and he stayed the rest of his life." Am Pol Sci R

"The book is interesting, well documented, and nicely printed." P. M. Cuncannon

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1009 O '41 190w

"Mr. Ellis has performed a valuable service in rescuing from undeserved oblivion one of the few politicians of his generation who still command our respect. His biography is in every respect admirable: constructed out of a vast quantity of source material, pieced together with neatness and proportion, moderate in tone, intelligent in criticism, interesting in presentation." H. S. Commager

+ Books p8 Jl 27 '41 1050w

"This volume gives in detail this remarkable story of a remarkable man. Scholarly, and at the same time intensely interesting, the book gives an unusually readable account of the shifting tide of party politics during the last quarter of the nineteenth century and the first decade of the twentieth. The chapters dealing with life and local politics in Colorado are also distinctly valuable. It is a good book to read and to study and shows every evidence of careful research." E. E. Dale

+ Social Educ 6:333 N '42 600w

ELLSBERG, EDWARD. I have just begun to fight! the story of John Paul Jones; il, by Gerald Foster. 269p $2.50 Dodd

Jones, John Paul—Juvenile literature

(W) 42-8144

An adaptation for young readers of the author's novel Captain Paul (Book Review Digest, 1941). It is an account of the adventures of Tom Folger, a Nantucket boy, who went to school to Captain John Paul, to learn navigation. Later Tom joins Captain Paul—now John Paul Jones—in his struggle to build up the American navy, and in the battles of the Revolution which followed.

Booklist 38:334 My 1 '42

"Here is a thriller that opens a door on history; a fine story for the hero-worshipping age of boyhood." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 My 10 '42 500w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 25 '42 90w

"The story, ending with the tremendous fight of the 'Serapis' and 'Bonhomme Richard,' is full of rousing sea adventure, told with suspense and fire." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:179 My '42 90w

"Good material and worthy of purchase until something better comes. . . Recommended."
M. R. Lucas

+ Library J 67:368 Ap 15 '42 80w
Wis Lib Bul 38:99 Je '42

ELMS, FRANCIS RAYMOND. Mountains of the world; stories and pictures of the great mountain ranges of the world [il. by the author]. 80p maps $2 Whitman, A.

551.43 Mountains—Juvenile literature (W) 41-23039

Companion volume to Rivers of the World (Book Review Digest, 1941). It contains descriptions and history of twelve mountain ranges and two famous mountain peaks. A map and drawings accompany each sketch. Contents: Alps mountains; Andes mountains; Apennine mountains; Appalachian mountains; Atlas mountains; Fujiyama; Great Dividing range; Himalaya mountains; Mount Etna; Pyrenees mountains; Rocky mountains; Sierra Madre mountains; Sierra Nevada mountains; Ural mountains. Index.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Babcock
Library J 67:41 Ja 1 '42 50w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie
Library J 67:892 O 15 '42 10w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 40w
Wis Lib Bul 38:166 N '42

ELWOOD, MAREN. Characters make your story. 300p $3 Houghton

808.3 Authorship. Characters and characteristics (W) 42-15389

The author advances the theory that all successful fiction is based primarily on good characterization, and shows how the mechanics of this art can be learned.

Booklist 39:6 S '42

"Exercises, suggestions and examples in this portly manual for those who mean to write fiction are so many—and in general so interesting—that a sharp rise in the number of manuscripts submitted to magazine editors may shortly be expected. The author, who teaches professional writing, takes the stand that character comes first, plot second, and if this proposition is not startlingly new—certainly not since Pirandello—it has seldom been so thoroughly developed for the actual use of inexperienced writers."

+ Books p20 Je 14 '42 200w

ELY, STEPHEN LEE. Religious availability of Whitehead's God; a critical analysis. 58p $1.25 Univ. of Wis. press

231 Whitehead, Alfred North. God 42-37424

"The announced purpose of this little book is to describe the nature of the entity called 'God' in Whitehead's system and to inquire whether this entity 'can serve as a God for contemporary religious feeling.' In particular, the author is concerned to examine the adequacy of Whitehead's solution to the problem of evil." J Philos

"A keenly thought and crisply written essay in philosophy."

+ Christian Century 59:1089 S 9 '42 200w

Reviewed by J. B. Pratt
Crozer Q 20:69 Ja '43 420w

"As regards at least the first part of this undertaking the book is eminently successful. . . It is in its more constructive endeavor that the book is most disappointing." D. F. Bowers

+ J Philos 39:612 O 22 '42 300w

Reviewed by B. M. Loomer
J Religion 23:65 Ja '43 1700w

ELZEA, LAUREL S. Aircraft welding. 121p il spir $2 McGraw

629.13 Airplanes—Design and construction. Welding (W) 42-5526

"This book is based on many years of experience in the welding departments of several aircraft factories and on more than five years of work with students in the capacity of instructor of welding in a night school and a national defense school. The author recognizes the fact that the techniques used in making different types of welds vary considerably in the different aircraft plants. This book presents the fundamental principles that are accepted by the industry. . . This book is recommended for high-school welding courses, night-school classes, vocational schools, commercial aircraft schools, and, in fact, any place where aircraft welding is taught. It can be used also as a guide by men who wish to practice at home or in the shop." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 38:303 Ap 15 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:21 Ap '42

EMBREE, EDWIN ROGERS. American Negroes; a handbook. 79p maps $1 Day

325.26 Negroes (W) 42-14893

"This booklet gives in briefest outline the story of one of the new races that has grown up in this New World, the brown Americans. It pictures their struggles and their place to-day in various phases of American life." (page 10) Contains maps and tables, a list of books by and about Negroes, and an index.

Booklist 38:420 Jl 1 '42

"This is a small book, but one of large worth. It is valuable for its concise and authoritative statement of the Negro's position in the United States today . . . but it is even more valuable for the train of thoughts which it is designed to set in motion." Arna Bontemps

+ Books p24 S 20 '42 350w

School & Society 56:336 O 10 '42 40w

EMERSON, HAVEN. Baker memorial. 75p 50c Commonwealth fund

362.11 Massachusetts general hospital, Boston. Baker memorial unit 41-20341

"An analysis of the initial ten years' experience of the Massachusetts General Hospital and its medical staff in offering medical and hospital service to hospital patients of moderate means at costs within their resources." Survey

Reviewed by G. M. Mackenzie

Am J Pub Health 32:549 My '42 750w

"The Commonwealth Fund has performed a useful service in sponsoring the publication of this little book. . . The fund's selection of Doctor Emerson to study and evaluate this important experiment was fortunate. It has resulted in a text which is interesting, informative, and clear to the lay persons as well as to the professional. It is apparent that the author's rich background in the field of public health, and his wide knowledge of hospitalization and the economics of illness have been drawn upon to the reader's advantage. . . This book should be read by every serious student of hospitalization." C. W. Munger, M.D.

+ Survey 77:372 D '41 550w

EMERSON, RUPERT. Government and nationalism in southeast Asia; pt. 1, Introduction by Rupert Emerson; pt. 2, The governments of southeast Asia, by Lennox A. Mills; pt. 3, Nationalism and nationalist movements in southeast Asia, by Virginia Thompson. 242p $2 Inst. of Pacific relations, Am. council

950 Nationalism and nationality, East (Far East). Eastern question (Far East) 42-8182

"This study forms part of the documentation of an inquiry organized by the Institute of Pacific Relations into the problems arising from the conflict in the Far East. The three monographs which make up the present volume have been prepared by Mr. Rupert Emerson, formerly Associate Professor of Government, Harvard University and author of the standard work Malaysia; by Mr. Lennox A. Mills, Associate Professor of Political Science, University of Minnesota and author of British Rule in Eastern Asia and other works on colonial administration, and by Miss Virginia Thompson, research associate of the Institute of Pacific Relations and of the Far Eastern Survey and author of Thailand, The New Siam and French Indo-China. (Foreword) Index.

EMERSON, RUPERT—Continued

"Another of the volumes in the Inquiry Series of the Institute of Pacific Relations, this book will rank with the best. It makes no pretense to being an exhaustive treatise on the governments and nationalisms of the varied areas of Southeast Asia, but is a well-written survey of this subject by three competent authors." W. C. Johnstone, Jr.

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:568 Je '42 850w

"The three combined essays make most interesting reading and give excellent material. No attempt is made, however, to bring these three parts into line, or to describe by itself the main economic factor which appears in the discussion of each country: the native Oriental agriculture superseded by Western colonial exploitation." Franz Michael

+ Ann Am Acad 223:217 S '42 600w

Reviewed by J. Van Beusekom

Pacific Affairs 15:366 S '42 800w

EMERSON, RUPERT. Netherlands Indies and the United States. (America looks ahead) 92p 50c; pa 25c World peace

330.991 Netherlands Indies—Economic conditions. Reconstruction (1939-)—Netherlands Indies 42-18099

"While Professor Emerson, in his study, is interested primarily in the future of the East Indies, he first lays the basis for an intelligent discussion of the problem by giving an excellent summary of the history of Dutch colonial policy and administration and the economic development of the dependency. He examines the stake of the United States in the Indies and concludes that Holland, Japan, and China 'appear to be concerned more directly and vitally' than this country. The primary and direct interest of the United States in the Indies 'does not extend beyond the maintenance of a situation in which they are neither controlled nor seriously menaced by a hostile power'; but the United States also has a general interest of seeing the Indies knit into the fabric of world peace and making the largest possible contribution to world prosperity. Emerson holds that 'the one type of solution which would satisfy all the basic requirements in connection with the Indies would be one arrived at through international coöperation and operating under international guaranties'—in short, a renewal and extension of something like the mandates system." Am Pol Sci R

"It is extremely difficult to plan for post-war construction, for the world may be vastly different when the war is over. Whatever the difficulties, however, studies like this by Emerson must be made. He has set a high standard for others to follow." Amry Vandebosch

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:978 O '42 450w

"The facts are marshaled skillfully, and the writing is lucid. . . . Dr. Emerson's book is valuable for its concise and reliable factual information; and, unlike many who view large-scale post-war planning as premature theorizing, I welcome all expressions of opinion by competent authorities—and the more the better." Raymond Kennedy

+ Ann Am Acad 224:208 N '42 600w

"It is necessary to plan for the future, but only on the basis of a careful analysis of the past. Professor Emerson has succeeded in this to a considerable extent, but he has not taken into account some more recent developments. He understates the relation between the Dutch and the Indonesians, which has become much closer than he is willing to grant. Professor Emerson's booklet is a valuable contribution on the problems of the Pacific, but it is an initial study which brings out some of the problems that deserve a much more detailed investigation." Bartholomew Landheer

+ — N Y Times p4 Ag 23 '42 800w

ENDERS, GORDON BANDY. Foreign devil; an American Kim in modern Asia. 307p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

915 India—Social life and customs, Tibet 42-12936

This is the autobiography of the Iowa-born son of an American missionary to India. Mr Enders tells of his early life in India and of the teachings he received from Jowar Singh, number one servant of the family, but his guru. Later he returned to the United States for his formal education. He served in the first World war and since then has held important posts in China and Tibet.

"'Foreign Devil' is a highly readable narrative of unusual personal experience and should have special appeal now, with the renewed public interest in India, with which most of the book deals. Mr. Enders does not strike one as an especially astute political observer. However, he always makes the scene of his story intimate and real, and his ability to delineate character is really superb. Jowar Singh must surely take his place as one of the thoroughly understandable and charming Indian figures in the acquaintance of English-reading people, while Chanti and the Panchan Lama are almost equally vivid and delightfully rendered." Nym Wales

+ Books p4 J1 5 '42 1000w

"Among first-person narratives of Far Eastern experience this excellent book is unusual in its point of view and unique in its material."

+ N Y Times p18 My 31 '42 600w

Social Studies 33:287 O '42 30w

ENGLAND, JANE, pseud. See Jervis, V. M. S.

ENGLE, PAUL. West of midnight [and other poems]. 96p $2 Random house

811 (W) 42-269

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Booklist 38:207 F 15 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '42

"Engle has learned, it is true, to shorten his line, to impose a more formal discipline on his meter, to avoid exposing so barely his uncouthness of ear. But for all that, his intimacy with the Muse comes no closer than honorable intentions; he is a willing candidate only, not one of the elect, capable of expressing rather decent, if conventional emotions, in rather ordinary metrics; an awfully nice fellow, really, but not really a poet." Rolfe Humphries
New Repub 106:155 F 2 '42 270w

"This is Paul Engle's fifth collection of verse; he is now in his thirty-fourth year; he is, I suppose, the best known 'younger poet' in America. And yet, much as one would like to praise his poems for their directions and intentions, a careful reading of them discovers such a failure of conception and such a dependence in craftsmanship that one finishes the book largely unrewarded and disappointed. These faults were present in American Song and the other earlier collections, but at last it seems justifiable to insist that Engle do better—in view of the quantity of his work, in view of his age and reputation, and perhaps most of all in view of a few pages here of commendable poetry." W. T. Scott
Poetry 60:102 My '42 850w

Pratt p17 O '42

Reviewed by W. R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 25:20 Ap 25 '42 390w

ENGLISH-SPANISH comprehensive technical dictionary of aircraft, automobile, radio, television; aircraft and anti-aircraft armaments, aerial photographic mapping, agricultural implements, sporting, commercial terms, mechanics and machine tools, steam, automotive and Diesel engines, boilers, paints and dyes, office equipment, sugar mill machinery, petroleum, steel products; by Lewis L. Sell. (being published in about 30 parts of 48 pages each at $1; binders at 65c each to hold about 15 parts) $30.65 c1940 International dictionary co.

603 Technology—Dictionaries

"This English-Spanish . . . Technical Dictionary translates practically all of the terms used in the many subject fields mentioned in the title. . . . The compiler states in the preface that 'the sources of the present work would number several thousand names if separately listed. In summary, it may be stated, however, that it is the embodiment of all relevant material of about 300 library volumes, 3200 industrial catalogs, 600 industrial reviews, 6500 direct letters to and from firms and U.S. consulates in the various countries. Moreover, an untold number of "releases," newspaper articles, Government publications, private reports, encyclopedia essays, etc., along with all previous relevant dictionaries.'" Subscription Bks Bul

"It is comprehensive in scope and will be of great value to the translator and the writer of technical advertising copy and industrial trade manuals. Its use to engineers and readers of foreign trade journals is limited since no Spanish-English vocabulary is included. . . . This excellent technical dictionary is in a class by itself for the subjects it covers. It is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 13:5 Ja '42 750w

ENRIGHT, ELIZABETH (MRS ROBERT GILL-HAM). Four-Story Mistake; il. by [the author]. 177p $1.75 Farrar

(W) 42-22828

Another story of the Melendy family, introduced in the author's earlier book, The Saturdays. In this book the family has moved out of the city to a country home, a house known as The Four-Story Mistake, which was actually only a three story house with a cupola on top.

Booklist 39:107 N 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 N 15 '42 400w

"This is a well-told and amusing story of American homelife, children with individual qualities and plenty of present-day interests, the most important being their effort to raise money for War Bonds. For the middle-age group." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:425 N '42 70w

Reviewed by Marcia Dalphin
Horn Bk sup12 N '42 60w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie
Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 20w

"With the humor, good characterization, and swiftly moving incidents that marked its predecessor, this book furnishes another entertaining, modern family story for children ten to twelve." H. Y. Long

+ Library J 67:1069 D 1 '42 90w

"If the Melendys are more gifted than average children they are just as real. In everything they do and say and think there is the unmistakable note of childhood; not childhood remembered with nostalgia and sentiment, but with a quick understanding of contemporary life." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 O 18 '42 340w

New Yorker 18:111 D 12 '42 50w

"Special because of its uncontrived, carefree humor and its modern appeal to everyone."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:60 D 5 '42 40w

ERGANG, ROBERT REINHOLD. The Potsdam führer, Frederick William I, father of Prussian militarism. 290p $3 Columbia univ. press [18s Oxford]

B or 92 Frederick William I, king of Prussia 41-19534

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"This is by far the best full account of the extraordinary king who has so long been overshadowed by his brilliant son, Frederick the Great. It makes thorough use of the wealth of documents which the diligent Germans have long been turning out. With careful scholarship and abundant quotations it paints in the detail of the picture of the Royal Drill Sergeant which has long been familiar from the sketches drawn by Macaulay and Carlyle. But the detail does not very essentially alter the impression of the sketches. The treatment is topical rather than chronological." S. B. Fay
+ Am Hist R 47:938 J1 '42 250w

"Dr. Ergang's biography is as timely as it is carefully done. A good book about this extraordinarily influential king has long been needed and one is delighted to see that the pioneer effort is successful." G. N. Shuster
+ Books p12 F 1 '42 600w

"Dr. Robert Ergang's biography of Frederick William the First, the only biography in English of this remarkable Prussian, possesses the same merits as Dr. Pfeiler's work, being objective, short, and the result of an extraordinary amount of reading." Francis McCullagh
+ Cath World 154:631 F '42 360w

"A diligent though somewhat arid scholarly biography of the 'Soldier King,' Frederick William I, who ruled Prussia from 1713 to 1740." Commonweal 35:396 F 6 '42 140w

Current Hist 2:461 Ag '42 600w

"A first-rate biography, at once scholarly and readable."

+ New Repub 106:338 Je 15 '42 50w

"A well-written and competent biographical sketch based on all available printed sources and sound secondary works. It is to the great credit of the author that he has successfully resisted the temptation to make either obvious or else far-fetched comparisons with a later Führer of less noble birth—and that despite the tie-up suggested by the title." W. C. Langsam

+ Pol Sci Q 57:318 Je '42 330w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 29 '42 350w

ERSHOV, PETR PAVLOVICH. Little hunchback horse. See Wicker, I. S.

ESTES, MRS ELEANOR. Middle Moffat; il. by Louis Slobodkin. 317p $2 Harcourt

(W) 42-36272

Jane was the middle Moffat, a plain little New Englander, with a distinct personality. Only the Oldest Inhabitant who played Hawkshaw the detective with her, realized that Jane was a mysterious person. To other people she was just the middle Moffat, aged ten, who had a best friend, collected coupons, and acted generally like any ten-year-old in the days when radio was young.

Booklist 39:16 S '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p16 N 15 '42 460w

"You will enjoy following Jane through this jolly book." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 30 '42 300w

"Eleanor Estes draws New England village life with genuine sympathy and truthfulness. Her Moffats, as Louis Slobodkin convincingly presents them, take their place among the book families not soon forgotten." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 18:340 S '42 90w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 18:407 N '42 30w

"Recommended for children ten to twelve." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:685 Ag '42 90w

ESTES, ELEANOR—Continued

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 10w

"There is much that is touching about Janey, and funny and lovable too. . . Somehow, however, her escapades are not quite so mirthful, taken all in all, as they were in the first story. They are apt to fall a little flat, seeming less substantial and more studied, and since she takes the center of the stage all the time, there is lacking the complete sense of family life which gave backbone to the other book. Yet in her best moments she stands out memorably." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p9 N 1 '42 360w

"A children's book which can make a hardened adult reviewer laugh repeatedly, as this one did, is a rarity. . . The humor and the people of the story are equally natural and Louis Slobodkin's breezy pen-and-ink illustrations suit the text perfectly." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 18:111 D 12 '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 38:164 N '42

EVANS, DANIEL LUTHER. Essentials of liberal education. 200p $1.50 Ginn278.01 Education—Aims and objectives.
College education, Value of 42-20072

"Dean Evans, of Ohio State University, here aims to show the student 'why, how and what he ought to study in college,' and the relation of the liberal education which he outlines to the business of intelligent living. The principal themes discussed are: the importance of rational and responsible personality in the cultural tradition; the most effective techniques of learning; the significance of the various types of material that constitute the college curriculum; and the values of liberal education in the democratic process and in enabling the educated person to discharge his duties to the social order." (Christian Century) Index.

Christian Century 59:862 J1 8 '42 100w

School & Society 55:736 Je 27 '42 100w

EVANS, HENRY OLIVER. Iron pioneer: Henry W. Oliver, 1840-1904. 370p il maps $3.50 Dutton

B or 92 Oliver, Henry William. Steel industry and trade 42-15856

This biography of a Pittsburgh steel manufacturer and business man, combines the personal story of the man with a detailed history of the steel business in Pittsburgh during the last half of the nineteenth century. One of Mr Oliver's notable exploits was the development of the Mesabi iron range in Wisconsin and that story is told here in full. Index.

Booklist 39:69 N 1 '42

"This volume by Mr. Evans is not critical, but it is exhaustive, and it gives an excellent picture of the times."

+ Books p28 O 4 '42 280w

Wis Lib Bul 38:135 O '42

EVANS, JESSIE CAMPBELL, and SANKOWSKY, MRS SUZANNE (HARRIS). Graphic world history; il. by Dale Nichols. 546p maps $2 Heath

909 History, Universal 42-16554

"Textbook for high school students, to be used either as an introduction, or as a complete text, for those who have not time or inclination for a fuller course. It is naturally brief, written to make world history vivid and interesting and 'show how present world conditions developed.' . . . There are questions and references for further reading, and lists of historical fiction, besides many pictures and maps." Horn Bk

"Unusually attractive. . . Such a book will find an important place in homes as well as schools." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:434 N '42 70w

Social Studies 33:288 O '42 40w

EVANS, MARY. How to make historic American costumes; il. by Elizabeth Brooks. 178p $3 Barnes, A.S.

391 Costume (W) 42-13365

Practical guide to historic American costumes, with simple patterns for making them, and suggestions as to materials and accessories. Contents: Costumes of the American Indians; Costumes of the Eskimos; Costumes of the Colonists; American dress in eighteenth century; American dress, 1800-1870. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:379 Je 15 '42

"A workable manual that will be immediately put to use."

+ Books p12 Ap 26 '42 160w

"A good bibliography and a complete index are included. This book would be valuable for school plays, pageants, dramatic organizations, and little theater groups. It is a book that one would enjoy owning." D. W. Erway

+ J Home Econ 36:485 S '42 100w

Wis Lib Bul 38:133 O '42

EVENDEN, EDWARD SAMUEL. Teacher education in a democracy at war. 118p pa 75c Am. council on educ.

370.73 Teachers, Training of. Education—U.S. World war, 1939—U.S. 42-19538

"Dr. Evenden, as chairman of the Commission on Teacher Education, presents this timely contribution toward the solution of the problems of adjustment which teachers, schools, colleges, and universities must make if the democracy in which we believe is to continue and prosper and play its full part in world betterment. It is a methodical discussion of the facts and principles involved, the conclusions he has reached, and the recommendations that he proposes." School & Society

Canadian Forum 22:287 D '42 180w

"This is a book that should be read and pondered by teachers, by prospective teachers, by teachers of teachers, and by all others interested in, or concerned with, the work of the public schools." H. R. Becker

+ School & Society 56:500 N 21 '42 700w

EVENS, E. S. Rise of Daniel Cavour. 362p $2.50 Putnam

42-17384

This life story of a "modern buccaneer" follows the career of its titular hero from the death of his father while he was still a boy to his own death in middle life. Whatever Daniel Cavour wanted of wealth and power he was able to take, regardless of the cost to others.

"'The Rise of Daniel Cavour' is principally a study in character. Its author intends it also as a comment on the society in which such a character could thrive. There are occasional phrases which testify to the fact that Evens has read his Veblen with affection. It is a solid book. The details of finance, taxation and advertising that are necessary to building up the story are worked out in patient detail by Evens. If this is a first novel, and there is nothing to indicate otherwise, it is a promissory note which the author's future will doubtless fulfill." Milton Hindus

+ Books p20 Mr 1 '42 500w

"The book is not without considerable appeal. The formula has been thoughtfully worked out. Mr. Evens writes easily and well in a style reminiscent of Howells. The narrative moves along at a pleasantly rapid gait. And even though the route is by this time familiar to all, the ride remains, as almost always, an interesting one." F. T. Marsh

+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 8 '42 600w

"Mr. Evens does not try to romanticize his hero, who emerges as a rather impressive heel."

New Yorker 18:60 F 28 '42 80w

"Mr. Evens neglected to provide Cavour with any adequate foil for his talents, or powers. Why is there no one in all of Cavour's lifetime who can offer enough opposition to make a real drama of it? Cavour is just a flat extension of the quality of selfishness, and he fools all the people all the time. That makes the story one-sided, an interesting invention not quite carried through." N. L. R.

Sat R of Lit 25:18 Mr 14 '42 190w

EVERS, HELEN, and EVERS, ALF. Pokey bear [pictures by the authors]. [41p] 50c
Rand McNally

42-6280

Picture story book for children three to five, describing the adventures of a very lazy little bear, who suddenly speeded up.

"The lasting favor extended by little children to the Evers's 'Copy-Kitten' compels one to compare with it each new thing they write: they have had their ups and downs, and this is decidedly one of the ups. The style is the same: large comic animals in shades of one color and black, with large-print words, few and funny. This time the color is brown for bears." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 26 '42 200w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 27 '42
70w

"Recommended for all pre-school collections." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 67:269 Mr 15 '42 100w

"You may, if you are so minded, point a moral here but it will neither add to nor detract from the pristine pleasure of the pictures. These portray the gradations of slow-motion and speed with amazing suggestiveness and the whole Bear family is endowed with a round and friendly charm which is as irresistible as that of their predecessor, the Copy-Kitten." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p8 Je 7 '42 200w

"The creators of the now famous 'Copy-Kitten' have, in Pokey Bear, the slowest of all the slow Bear family, devised another picture-book animal likely to amuse the babies."

+ New Yorker 18:72 My 23 '42 40w

EWBANK, HENRY LEE, and AUER, JOHN JEFFERY. Discussion and debate; tools of a democracy. 524p $2.50 Crofts

808.5 Debates and debating. Forums (discussion and debate) 41-15031

"This work, by Prof. Ewbank of Wisconsin and Prof. Auer of Oberlin, is intended as a text book for students in high school and college but would serve equally well for adult groups in which discussions and debates are carried on as a systematic feature of the meetings. The authors stress the importance to democracy of such free discussion and attempt here to provide a guide to more orderly thinking and effective discussion." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Spring'd Republican p8 N 11 '41 120w
Wis Lib Bul 38:42 Mr '42

EWEN, DAVID, ed. Book of modern composers. 574p il $5 Knopf

927.8 Musicians (W) 42-22340

Studies of twenty-nine outstanding present-day composers. Each study has brief biographical sketch, personal notes, a discussion of the composer's works by an authority, and in most cases a short sketch by the composer himself. Includes selected recordings and bibliographies, with a general bibliography added. Index.

Booklist 39:70 N 1 '42

"As a work of reference this book has limitations: it is in no sense an encyclopedia of contemporary music or musicians. If accepted, however, for what it is, a generous collection of brief essays on a miscellany of contemporaries, it will prove stimulating and its usefulness will increase with time. . . . If you hold strong opinions about contemporary composers there are pages in this book which will raise your blood pressure. You will probably glance at those pages again to strengthen your prejudice one way or another. If you read them often enough you may be converted." John Erskine

+ Books p26 N 1 '42 850w

"The arrangement necessarily has popular appeal, but it also collects and makes available to more serious reader much valuable material. Prefaced by worth-while discussion of 'Modern Music: Its Style, Its Technique,' by Slonimsky. Recommended." H. E. Bush

+ Library J 67:793 S 15 '42 80w

"There can be no quarrel with the general treatment of the twenty-nine composers tapped by Mr. Ewen. . . . In most cases there was an abundance of material and Mr. Ewen's task was to winnow it. He has done his job skillfully. He has obtained critical essays from recognized authorities, men who knew well the composer and his music. The personality sketches are from the hands of capable reporters." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p3 N 15 '42 850w

"The portraits are excellent, the biographies adequate, and the critical comment often fresh and stimulating. The best feature of the book, and the one which gives it its importance, is the material written by the composers themselves." Douglas Moore

+ Sat R of Lit 26:29 Ja 30 '43 700w

EWEN, DAVID. Music comes to America. 319p il $3 Crowell

780.9 Music—U.S. (W) 42-9743

History of American music from about 1850 to the present. Partial contents: When America was musically young; America's musical pioneers; Opera in America; Music in 1901; Until the war; Music and the first World war; Music performances after the war; New horizons for music education; "I hear America singing"; Recognition for American music. Bibliography. Index.

"This book treats an aspect of music peculiar to this country, and it is one of the few books which so far attempt to deal with that aspect as a whole. It would be welcome, even if it were less well done. As a matter of fact, it is very well done, indeed. Later and more detailed works on the same theme will have a high standard to meet." John Erskine

+ Books p14 F 22 '42 950w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

"Written in a spectacular and popular style, this interesting book maintains that music life in America was slow in developing and that it did not reach maturity until after the first World War. This thesis, however, is untenable, as scholars of American music history will testify. Factual details are not always dependable, although the bibliography contains the outstanding books on the subject. Recommended if used with caution." H. E. Bush

+ — Library J 67:181 F 15 '42 80w

"This book attempts to trace the growth of musical activity and interest in this country from about 1850 to the present, chiefly describing and celebrating the phenomenal size and rapidity of this growth during the last two decades. While Mr. Ewen shows genuine enthusiasm for the progress of music and has gathered much interesting material, his book is plainly written for popular consumption and cannot be considered as an authoritative and scholarly piece of work. . . . The catchy title, 'Music Comes to America,' is characteristic of many inaccurate statements and snap judgments which follow in the text." Edward Ballantine

+ New Eng Q 15:550 S '42 850w

Reviewed by Howard Taubman

N Y Times p9 Mr 29 '42 850w

Wis Lib Bul 38:65 Ap '42

EYRE, KATHERINE WIGMORE. Susan's safe harbor; il. by Decie Merwin. 168p $1.75 Oxford

(W) 42-16055

The story of a warm friendship between two small girls: Susan whose father was an artist temporarily down on his luck, and Franchesca whose father was a fisherman. The friendship began when Susan and her father and mother had to go and live on Fisherman's Wharf in San Francisco. For grades four to six.

EYRE, K. W.—Continued

Booklist 39:16 S '42

"This sympathetic story of adjustment to a strange environment will be specially enjoyed by girls of the middle age who will love Susan and her friend Franchesca Pezzola. Delightful line drawings enliven the book." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 18:338 S '42 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Briggs

Library J 67:796 S 15 '42 100w

"A most enjoyable story with a fine San Francisco setting." R. A. Hill
+ Library J 67:886 O 15 '42 50w

"A warm-hearted, unforced story. . . The characters are well realized and the story full of interest for 9 to 12 year olds. Writing with ease and grace, the author manages quietly to suggest the importance of imagination and friendly understanding in human relationships." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p11 S 27 '42 460w

EZEKIEL, MORDECAI JOSEPH BRILL.
Methods of correlation analysis. 2d ed 531p
$5 Wiley

311.25 Correlation (statistics) 41-24787

New edition of a textbook first published in 1930. "The new edition brings no fundamental changes in the approach to the problem and the methods advocated. There is only somewhat more emphasis upon the distinction between the population and the sample. Two new chapters have been added. One deals with the reliability of an individual forecast in time-series analysis. . . The other new chapter deals with short-cut methods of determining net regression lines and curves." (J Pol Econ) Index.

Reviewed by C. E. Kellogg

Am J Soc 48:260 S '42 600w

"The second edition of Ezekiel's classic methods of correlation analysis has been awaited with impatience by many workers in the statistical field. There is hardly a book which has exerted so much influence on empirical studies by economic statisticians and in related fields using the techniques so lucidly presented in this book." Gerhard Tintner
+ J Pol Econ 50:794 O '42 450w

"The changes and additions made . . . are quite adequate to make the book again suitable for use as a text for a course in correlation, and the illustrative problems are not too far removed from the interests of sociologists." M. J. Hagood

+ Social Forces 21:119 O '42 120w

F

FAIR, A. A. Bats fly at dusk. 277p $2 Morrow 42-22577

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p25 S 27 '42 200w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p16 O 4 '42 180w

"Better than ever."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 O 10 '42 40w

"An exceptionally clever plot, much lusty humor—and Bertha Cool, saltiest of female sleuths."

+ Time 40:104 O 5 '42 40w

FAIR, A. A. Owls don't blink. 277p $2 Morrow
(W) 42-16454

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p16 J1 12 '42 180w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 Je 28 '42 260w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:26 J1 4 '42 40w

FAIRCLOUGH, HENRY RUSHTON. Warming both hands. 629p il $3.75 Stanford univ. press
B or 92 41-11566

Autobiography of one of the pioneer faculty of Stanford university, to which he came as professor of Latin and Greek in 1893, and where he remained for forty-five years. During the first World War he joined the American Red cross, and was prominent in that work in Switzerland, and as lieutenant colonel and commissioner for Montenegro. He also supervised work in Albania, Serbia, and Rumania. Illustrated with photographs. Indexes.

"Written in a charming and urbane style, Professor Fairclough's pages are marked by great charity of judgment." W. S. Wallace
+ Canadian Hist R 22:436 D '41 320w

"I am very fond," the author confesses (p. 531), 'of looking over genealogical records.' But long before the reader has arrived at this point, he is fully aware of the author's tendency to overload his pages with such personalia. We learn the names and history not only of his friends and relatives but of their friends and relatives until we cry 'Quo usque?'. . . When the author shakes off this antiquarian tendency, he writes colorfully and entertainingly, as he does in much of his account of his undergraduate days, in his description of the California earthquake and of his service with the Red Cross in World War I, and on many other pages." J. P. Cooke
+ — Class Philol 37:461 O '42 650w

FALK, HERBERT ARNOLD. Corporal punishment; a social interpretation of its theory and practice in the schools of the United States. 162p $2.10 Teachers college 371.55 Corporal punishment 42-1257

"A well-documented Ph.D. study that traces the history in the United States, of the practice of corporal punishment." School & Society

Reviewed by Ellsworth Paris

Am J Soc 48:298 S '42 100w

Reviewed by S. M. Corey

Am Soc R 7:301 Ap '42 360w

School & Society 54:368 O 25 '41 20w

FALK, ORSON. Thunder birds. 264p $2 Random house
42-17797

Romance of an English doctor who gave up his profession to become an aviator, and the daughter of an American ranch owner. The scene is Arizona; the time, the present.

"Timely and tailored for the screen." Lisle Bell

Books p13 J1 26 '42 80w

"The eulogy of American generosity abroad may sound a little bleak in the ears of some, and the inserted summary of a visionary post-war of good will is bound to appear sentimental to a few others. But the writing is clear and well defined, dialogue witty, situations clever, and characters bright and active. Action flickers on the borderline of the probable, is on that account all the more entertaining, with dream ending carried out in perfect film reel form."

+ — Boston Globe p19 Ag 10 '42 280w

"One need only ignore the sentimentality and implausibility of a fine surgeon in these days exchanging his profession with official sanction, if not blessings, for that of a military aviator to find this yarn with its theme of sportsmanship, international cooperation and conventional romance up to the average of war fiction. To be sure, the writing lacks distinction, the plot has no real surprises and the main figures are well worn magazine story types. Which probably explains why the movie rights have already been sold to one of the major companies." Drake de Kay

N Y Times p22 Je 28 '42 460w

FALSTAFF, JAKE, pseud. See Fetzer, H.

FAMOUS American athletes of today; eighth series, by Harold Kaese and other sports writers. (Famous leaders ser) 463p il $2.50 Page

927.96 Athletes. Sports (W) 42-36343

"The 8th volume in this series presents biographical sketches of: Francis C. Brimsek (hockey); Evelyn Chandler (figure skating); Craig Wood (golf); Sarah Palfrey Cooke (tennis); J. Gregory Rice (track); Alford J. Williams (aeronautics); Theodore S. Williams, Theodore A. Lyons, Robert M. Grove, William H. Walters and James Wilson (baseball); and Endicott Peabody III (football); with a closing chapter on the Cotton Bowl." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 39:120 D 1 '42

Reviewed by Eleanor Kidder

Library J 67:1070 D 1 '42 60w

Wis Lib Bul 38:160 N '42

FANG, HSIEN-T'ING. See Fong, H. D.

FARAGO, LADISLAS, ed. Axis grand strategy; blueprints for the total war [prepared] with the co-operation of William Moseley Brown [and others] for the Com. for nat. morale. 614p $3.75 Farrar

355.4 Strategy. War (W) 42-7801

A collection of excerpts from the writings and speeches of German politicians and soldiers. "This book attempts to give comprehensive answers by competent German spokesmen to the multitude of questions raised by what is predominantly a German war. . . The material was compiled from thousands of books, articles, and speeches prepared by influential leaders on Hitler's military, economic, and ideological staff, those basic elements which present a complete picture of the Nazi New Order. These men and their words speak for themselves. Independent comment [by the Editor] has been kept to a minimum, and has been interpolated only when abstruse German moralizing has called for clarification or when recent events have graphically demonstrated Total War in action." (Publisher's foreword) Selected bibliography. Indexes.

Reviewed by A. R. Ginsburgh

Ann Am Acad 222:193 J1 '42 550w

Booklist 38:379 Je 15 '42

"The basic idea behind the book was a sound one, and the availability of this material in English should contribute greatly to an understanding of the present war. The task of selecting, condensing and editing the great field of literature surveyed can only be appreciated by one having had some experience with the difficulties involved. It must have taxed the patience and in some cases overtaxed the competence of the editorial board." H. A. DeWeerd

+ Books p14 My 3 '42 1200w

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 9 '42 450w

Reviewed by J. B. Parrish

Churchman 156:17 J1 1 '42 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '42

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:775 J1 '42 30w

"It is only fair to point out that Mr. Farago and the Committee for National Morale have done a very good job in publishing this book. Some of the editorial comments, such as the introduction to the air-war chapter, are very illuminating and pointed. The collecting, translating, and editing of this material was a gigantic task, and in comparison with the usefulness of the whole undertaking a few flaws do not count." S. T. Fossony

+ Nation 154:437 Ap 11 '42 1000w

"A grimly impressive, fairly technical exposition of how the Germans worked out the theory, plans, and practice of unlimited aggression."

New Yorker 18:79 Mr 28 '42 90w

FARAGO, LADISLAS, and GITTNER, LEWIS FREDERICK, eds. German psychological warfare; ed. for the Com. for nat. morale, with the co-operation of Gordon W. Allport and Edwin G. Boring; interpretative summary by Kimball Young. definitive ed 302p $3 Putnam

355.43 Morale. Psychology, Applied. Propaganda, German 42-50175

The first three parts of this book contain a survey of Germany's psychological preparation for the second World war. The fourth part is an extensive annotated bibliography of the subject. "This is the first regular edition of a survey prepared and privately published by the Committee for National Morale [1941]. The present edition has been revised, enlarged, and brought up-to-date. The chapters on morale and the offensive in psychological warfare, including propaganda, have been considerably expanded." (page VII)

"Despite the editor's simplified question and answer technique the book is too ponderous for the general public to extract the utmost value. The subject is so exciting the greater is the pity the editor could not apply to his own writing some of the techniques for reaching the average citizen about which he is talking." R. G. Spivack

Books p10 Ja 3 '43 800w

"The one value of the book seems to lie in its excellent bibliography of German material. . . A little greater clarity on what kind of propaganda is compatible with democracy and what is not would have improved the volume. For some obscure reason all the material is presented in catechetical style. . . This is a rather boring pedagogical device, particularly in a book on propaganda." Reinhold Niebuhr

New Repub 107:766 D 7 '42 200w

"The fourth part, nearly one half of the book, is a bibliography of the German sources—a most useful research study which is indispensable to anyone who wants to be familiar with this new weapon. The first three parts resemble a textbook. . . It is extremely difficult to give a just appraisal of a survey on which so many specialists have collaborated and which has all the aspects of a Guggenheim project. It must be said that the book might be heavy reading for the layman who wants to penetrate behind the frontlines of the war of nerves." R. R. Plant

Sat R of Lit 25:18 D 19 '42 550w

FARJEON, JOSEPH JEFFERSON. Death in the inkwell [Eng title: End of an author]. 285p $2 Bobbs [7s 6d; 3s 6d Collins]

42-4606

Detective story.

Booklist 38:276 Ap 1 '42

"Mr. Farjeon is a caution for woozy, fantastic effects, and he gets a number of them into this story about Peter Hanby, a playful mystery author who acts out his own book as he writes it—apparently a dangerous procedure." Will Cuppy

Books p25 Mr 1 '42 80w

"It seems a long time since Jefferson Farjeon has given us a book, and it is a pity, for he is an original and versatile literary craftsman of outstanding ability. In 'Death in the Inkwell' he brings us a mystery which remains a mystery to the very last page and beyond. That may seem unsatisfactory, but it is not; it is fascinating." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 F 22 '42 220w

FARJEON, J. J.—Continued

"The mystery [Peter Hanby] writes and the mystery in Mr. Farjeon's book run almost parallel." Nice, sharp writing in this baffling puzzle.

+ New Yorker 18:72 F 21 '42 50w

"Amusing, satirical, and frequently hair-raising yarn of author who got dangerously mixed up with his imaginary characters. Tricky."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:18 F 28 '42 30w

FARJEON, JOSEPH JEFFERSON. Judge sums up. 294p $2 Bobbs [7s 6d Collins]

(W) 42-18492

Detective story.

"Mr. Farjeon saves a tall plot by telling most of it in courtroom dialogue as Mr. Justice Unwin sums up and the flashbacks unroll with mounting interest. This unusual method is fine for a change, cleverly preparing the way for action by Paul Bishop, private detective, and his reconstruction of the was-he-pushed crime. 'Be you a conjuror?' inquires Robert Horncastle, the man who saw the second man following the first man to Rose Cottage. Struck us as pleasant summer reading." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 Ag 9 '42 200w

Boston Globe p19 Ag 12 '42 30w

"It all adds up to another evidence of Mr. Farjeon's ingenuity in plot building. Hats off once more to Jefferson Farjeon." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 9 '42 260w

"An excellent story, skillfully handled."

+ New Yorker 18:60 Ag 22 '42 80w

"Good"

+ Sat R of Lit 25:15 Ag 29 '42 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p345 J1 11 '42 150w

FARLEY, WALTER. Larry and the undersea raider; il. by P. K. Jackson. 225p $1.75 Random house

42-11249

Two boys, one of them the son of a lieutenant commander of the United States navy, the other a Hawaiian, are the heroes. While his father is on duty, hunting the base of a mystery raider, Larry and his friend Li search for an uncharted island and come upon a clue. This story for older boys ends on December 7, 1941, as the American ship returns to Pearl Harbor after the raid.

"A regular thriller, honest in its use of Hawaiian sports and possible submarine hideaways." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 19 '42 350w

"Will appeal to boys looking for adventure, war and up-to-the-minute books." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 28 '42 140w

"Obviously this isn't a book to improve the mind, but it can certainly be recommended for a couple of hours of vicarious suspense and hair-raising adventure of contemporary flavor." E. L. Buel

+ N Y Times p10 J1 12 '42 170w

FARMER, HERBERT HENRY. Servant of the Word. 152p $1.50 Scribner [6s Nisbet]

251 Preaching

42-24527

"In these five chapters which grew out of lectures to ministers, the great English preacher-author not only maintains the high dignity and importance of the sermon but gives wise counsel about the twin arts of preaching and hearing." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 59:1322 O 28 '42 40w

"Many teachers have an adequate acquaintance with the corpus of Christian doctrine, and some with the contemporary mind: it is Dr. Farmer's considerable knowledge of both that makes this book of special value to preachers and students."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p88 F 21 '42 300w

FARNHAM, DWIGHT THOMPSON. Be it ever so humble; or, Hellions on the hearth; exteriors by the author, interiors by Sally Aulabaugh. 235p il $2.50 Harper

728 Architecture, Domestic (W) 42-17125

Describes in detail the evolution of the author's home in Connecticut from its Early Shack Period (1924 to 1926) to its present dignity as the Colonial manor. When it came to building the house, instead of hiring an architect to plan and engineer things, he drew his own plans and left the rest in the hands of an able, retired opera singer, and the plan worked like a charm. Illustrated with photographs.

"Being all about rebuilding—though bubbling with anecdotes and personal reactions—the book will be of interest chiefly to other rebuilders. . . The various changes, additions and uprootings went on in so excited a state that photographs of the finished product come as a surprise. From the dignity, the calm serenity of these interiors nobody but another amateur builder would guess the preliminary agitation that went on, for instance, over these gracious arches. Above all, everybody concerned had fun, so much one hopes a finished house will not be an anti-climax."

+ Books p10 Je 28 '42 300w

"The author supplies abundant detail on the building of a place in the country and spices it with good humor and an air of conviviality. If his suggestions be followed, one can imagine the building of a home as great sport."

+ Boston Globe p17 Je 10 '42 120w

Wis Lib Bul 38:93 Je '42

FARNOL, JEFFERY. Valley of night [Eng title: Murder by nail]. 320p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Low]

42-21965

Mystery story of Cornwall in pre-Victorian days, in which Jasper Shrig, a "limb of the Law" from London, runs to earth the perpetrator of a murder committed some seventy years earlier.

"'Valley of Night' will give you an evening of fireside shudders. . . When it comes to sinister narration, Mr. Farnol does not spare the synonyms. On a single page you will find dreadful, sickening, grim, slimy, haunting, strange, fearful, passionate, nerve-racking, ghastly, brutal, awful, abandoned, merciless, terrible, frightful, remorseless, black, fetid, rank, appalling, noisome." Lisle Bell

Books p24 S 27 '42 140w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 24 '42 50w

"On the whole, it is a satisfyingly eerie tale, told in the stately language of the period." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p24 O 11 '42 280w

New Yorker 18:68 O 3 '42 70w

"Two lovely ladies are involved in this medley of murder and smuggling and the romance as well as the mystery is unfolded with Mr. Farnol's accustomed skill."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p249 My 16 '42 90w

FARRELL, JAMES THOMAS. $1,000 a week, and other stories. 226p $2.50 Vanguard

42-10301

Contents: $1,000 a week; The sport of kings; Sorel; Monday is another day; After the sun has risen; The fate of a hero; Whoopee for the new deal; The bride of Christ; A jazz-age clerk; Getting out the vote for the working class; The fall of machine gun McGurk; Yesterday's love; Counting the waves; Accident; A short story; The only son; G.B.S. interviews the Pope.

"Although ostensibly a collection of short stories, '$1,000 a Week' seems also to have served as a catch-all for sketches, synopses and random dialogues, some written recently, but others apparently resurrected from an earlier period of the author's career. The book is, to put it briefly, ill-advised. It contains a few pieces worthy of Mr. Farrell, but many which seem hasty, fumbling or tentative." Milton Rugoff

— + Books p8 Ap 12 '42 500w

Reviewed by E. S. Forgotson

Nation 154:716 Je 20 '42 950w

"The kindest thing that may be said about the book as a whole is that the author of so valuable a work as 'Studs Lonigan' deserves not to be judged by it." Budd Schulberg

New Repub 107:29 Jl 6 '42 600w

"Outside of being interesting as laboratory material, as exercises in character portrayal, the collection as a whole will do little to advance the literary stature of Farrell. One wonders what the dates at the end of each piece mean. 'The Sport of Kings,' for example, bears the dates 1930-38; 'The Bride of Christ,' the dates 1934-38. Certainly Farrell couldn't have been devoting himself to this material during all these years." Rose Feld

N Y Times p7 Ap 19 '42 700w

FARROW, JOHN. Pageant of the popes. 420p il $3.50 Sheed

922.21 Popes (W) 42-36375

In a continuous narrative the author tells the stories of all those who have occupied the papal throne from the day Peter delivered his first sermon, seven weeks after Christ's death, to the opening of World War, II. Index.

Booklist 39:182 Ja 1 '43

"The general reader will find the individual biographies entertaining. . . We can forgive the absence of documentary evidence since this book is not meant to be a scholarly treatise. Even as popular introduction to the subject, however, the book requires a bibliography which could be used by readers who will wish to go on to more detailed study of the papacy. Then, too, for all its ease and grace, the design of the book could have been improved if the author had substituted for his symbolic lack of division, some outline of his materials." W. A. S. Dollard

+ — Books p52 D 6 '42 900w

"It is an impressive narrative, this long tale of great and good men, even though interrupted from time to time by the appearance of people weak or wicked, invaders of the sanctuary. The shadows may confuse the dull, or trouble the weak, or shock the pharisaical; yet in minds possessing a proper sense of proportion, they will serve to establish, or strengthen, the conviction that in the papacy we have a highly privileged and unending spiritual dynasty which is indeed from God." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 156:502 Ja '43 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

"There is a special timeliness in the publication of Mr. Farrow's new book, which deserves to rank with his 'Damien the Leper' [Book Review Digest 1937]. He has written, expressly, for the average reader to whom the many volumes which tell the story of the popes are not accessible or who lacks the time and training to use them. He has, as it were, given life to a biographical dictionary of the popes, and has given in readable and attractive English such a sketch of their careers as will meet the needs of the public he endeavors to reach." F. D. Cohalan

+ Commonweal 37:146 N 27 '42 1000w

"Mr. Farrow's prose is thin and moves across some kind of corrugated wrought iron which makes it singularly lumpy and unsettled. The treatment is reasonably objective, though the apologetic intent is never disguised. Sometimes one encounters an apt and sagacious phrase, for example in the discussion of Henry VIII. On the whole Mr. Farrow seems to prefer jovial Popes and to shv away from dour ones. This preference is indulged also at the expense of Savonarola. There are some whoopers in the book, as when the 'Syllabus' is attributed to Pope Pius X." G. N. Shuster

— + Sat R of Lit 25:25 N 21 '42 400w

"'The Pageant of the Popes' is presented as an encyclopedic panorama of the church, without sociological or critical commentary, and although Mr. Farrow's Catholicism is more pronounced than Von Ranke's Protestantism [in his 'History of the Popes'] the book is an excellent reference and an inducement to read further into religious history." L. S. M.

+ Spring'd Republican p12 N 6 '42 650w

FAST, HOWARD MELVIN. Goethals and the Panama canal; il. by Raffaello Busoni. 230p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Goethals, George Washington—Juvenile literature. Panama canal—Juvenile literature (W) 42-13553

"This life story of George Washington Goethals and the detailed account of his great achievement is of especial interest to boys of today. With attention focused on this strategic outpost and vital link in America's defense structure, it is important to know how the Herculean task of building this vast engineering work was conceived and completed and to realize the important role Goethals played in supervising it." (Christian Science Monitor) Maps on end papers. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:372 Je 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 Jl 12 '42 280w

"Raffaello Busoni's pictures illuminate the text and graphically present some of the wonders of this story of action, adventure and accomplishment." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 11 '42 110w

"A fine and able biography." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:260 Jl '42 100w

Reviewed by Percy MacKaye

Library J 67:583 Je 15 '42 30w

"Excellent book of timely interest. For high school age." Marguerite Nahigian

+ Library J 67:583 Je 15 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:191 D '42

FAST, HOWARD MELVIN. Lord Baden-Powell of the Boy scouts; il. by Raffaello Busoni. 214p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Baden-Powell of Gilwell, Robert Stephenson Smyth Baden-Powell. 1st baron—Juvenile literature (W) 41-25981

Biography of the founder of the Boy scout movement. It begins with Baden-Powell's boyhood in England, carries him thru his army career, with stress on the siege of Mafeking, and concludes with the founding and organizing of the Scouts. For grades seven to nine. Index.

Booklist 38:173 Ja 15 '42

"Will be of interest not only to those in the movement, but to any older boy who likes adventure. A biography of unusual value and interest." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 67:42 Ja 1 '42 80w

FAST, HOWARD MELVIN. Romance of a people; il. by Raffaello Busoni. 238p maps $2.50 Hebrew pub.

296 Jews—History—Juvenile literature (W) 41-20766

Simply written history of the Jewish people from the days of Abraham to the present. For junior and senior high schools. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 38:173 Ja 15 '42

"Written for boys and girls above elementary grade level, it is a book that is needed, especially in districts predominantly Jewish. It may be hard to reconcile Christian children to the stated part Christians have played in Jewish persecutions." S. J. Johnson

Library J 66:1049 D 1 '41 60w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 20w

FAST, HOWARD MELVIN. Tall hunter; pictures by Raffaello Busoni. 103p $1.75 Harper Chapman, John—Juvenile literature
(W) 42-21961

A legendary tale of early days in Kentucky. It tells the story of how the narrator's "grandfather's grandfather [Richard Hammond] came to know Daniel Boone, to go away with him into the wilderness, and to hand down to his son and his son's son a debt, a chore for John-n Applesed."

Booklist 39:107 N 15 '42

"It is a story beautifully told and well worth telling." M. L. Becker

+ Books p26 N 15 '42 330w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:428 N '42 110w

"A dramatic but sensitive story of pioneer days in Kentucky." P. D. Edie

+ Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 20w

"Moving but slight story (one hundred and three pages) of the period. Style vigorous and graphic but uneven. Outstanding format, with black-and-white illustrations by Raffaello Busoni. The short text and the make-up may not appeal to intermediate-age readers for whom story is suitable. For this reason, book is questioned for library use." L. E. Cathom

Library J 67:913 O 15 '42 110w

"In essence the story is one to prick the imagination, and among the more romantically minded of the 'teen age it probably will, yet it falls short of its ultimate impact. The sincerity of Mr. Fast, an accomplished historical novelist and biographer, is evident, yet there is a specious, studied quality to the air of legend with which he wreathes his narrative." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p11 Ja 24 '43 300w

New Yorker 18:108 D 12 '42 60w

FAST, HOWARD MELVIN. The unvanquished. 316p $2.50 Duell

Washington, George—Fiction (W) 42-16612

This historical novel follows the course of the American evolution from the lost battle of Brooklyn, thru the disastrous months of retreat, to the recrossing of the Delaware and the rout of the Hessians at Trenton. The story is centered in the portrait of Washington—the confused, humble, indecisive foxhunter from Virginia developing slowly into the great leader of men.

Booklist 38:441 Jl 15 '42

Bookmark 4:16 N '42

"It is difficult not to get over-lyrical in praise of Mr. Fast's accomplishment as a creative artist. 'The Unvanquished' is a memorable portrait of a great man and a great army." Rose Feld

+ Books p5 Je 14 '42 1150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '42

"If it is a far cry from the lifeless Father of His Country on which most of us were brought up to Mr. Fast's troubled and humble Virginia foxhunter, we are all the more moved by the new portrait. . . Mr. Fast's book is full of happy touches, and without implying any disparagement of a mature and well-documented novel, one finds in it something of the refreshing quality of a talented child's painting."

+ Nation 154:693 Je 13 '42 200w

"I don't mean to imply that 'The Unvanquished' is a book for the ages or even that it is among the best novels of 1942. Mr. Fast writes with a catch in his breath and sometimes brings tears to his own eyes instead of the reader's. . . And yet if this book does not belong to the history of American literature, at least it will be important in the history of the popular mind. It restores a great figure to our mythology. In the national pantheon, it reconsecrates a somewhat neglected shrine." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 107:203 Ag 17 '42 1050w

"There is very little fiction in this novel, most of it having been drawn from historical fact. But Mr. Fast does more than relate facts; he makes them live. He has sketched a whole gallery of Revolutionary figures: Hamilton, Greene, Knox, Burr and a dozen others pass before us. . . He is at his best, however, when writing of Washington, for he has accomplished more than a sketch: it is a full-blooded characterization, a magnificent job. . . In his determination to avoid any lush or fancy writing Mr. Fast has leaned over backward and here we have the only real fault of the book. He has left his background bare and his story is played out without scenery. But this is a minor flaw." T. Q. Curtiss

+ N Y Times p7 Je 14 '42 700w

"It would seem almost impossible at this late date to make of Washington a person not merely recognizable as a historical personage but alive as a human being. Mr. Fast does it. . . The odd thing is that Mr. Fast manages to portray Washington as a human being and a great hero at the same time. I do not know of any other novelist who has done this so successfully." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:69 Je 13 '42 500w

"By long odds the season's best novel about war."

+ Time 40:88 Jl 13 '42 550w

FAST, HOWARD MELVIN, and FAST, BETTE. Picture-book history of the Jews. 58p maps $1.25 Hebrew pub.

296 Jews—Juvenile literature 42-12930

In simple text and many pictures the author-artists retell the story of the Jews from the days of Abraham, down thru Biblical times, to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans. The story of the next two thousand years is put more briefly and ends with the return of some Jews to Palestine, the Zionist movement.

"It would be hard to find a better condensation of so large a subject than this. . . Its plan is to make simple statements, in clear type upon a broad page, and accompany them by little pictures in brilliant color, that in their use remind one of those in Mabel Pyne's 'Little History of the United States,' and in their technique of the illustrations of Hendrik Willem Van Loon. Picture maps come where they are needed. The effect is strangely moving for so quiet, so very young, a picture book." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 17 '42 200w

"The treatment is direct and dignified, the language suited to young children's understanding but in no way condescending." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:260 Jl '42 70w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 20w

FAULCONER, THOMAS P. Introduction to aircraft design. 273p il $2.75 McGraw

629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction

"The purpose of this book is to bridge the gap between the field of aeronautical engineering and airplane design and the other professional fields of engineering, architecture, and general design. The material originated in a course conducted by the University of California as part of its Engineering, Science, and Management Defense-Training Program which was designed to train engineers and draftsmen from civilian industries to fit into the aircraft industry during the national emergency." (Pref) Index.

Library J 67:1067 D 1 '42 20w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p35 N 22 '42 80w

FAULKNER, JOHN. Dollar cotton. 306p $2.50
Harcourt

(W) 42-21300

Realistic novel of cotton raising in the Mississippi delta lands, with a spare, ruthless farmer, Otis Town, as central character. Town loved the land and made immense crops of cotton; his hill-born school-teacher wife, and her three worthless children, wasted the money he made. Even though his wife bought a large house in Memphis, added an e to the name, and took trips abroad, the family never made a success of anything but raising cotton. And in the end they were ruined.

Reviewed by R. M. Gay
Atlantic 170:144 O '42 200w

Reviewed by Milton Rugoff
Books p6 Ag 30 '42 850w

"As a case study in the 'poor white' this book by William Faulkner's younger brother has more power than one would expect. As a novel it leaves something to be desired."

Christian Century 59:1425 N 18 '42 240w

"After his fine first novel, 'Men Working,' the best done about WPA, it is disappointing to find Mr. Faulkner resorting to coincidence and melodrama to attempt to achieve results which accurate delineation of character and a more complete understanding of the situation would have accomplished more truly. Mr. Faulkner tells us, once more, that the South is sick or worse, but he doesn't succeed in telling us why." Harry Sylvester

Commonweal 36:475 S 4 '42 490w

Library J 67:683 Ag '42 30w

"In a novel about a self-made cotton king, Otis Town, John Faulkner runs his brother William a close second for unpleasantness."

— Nation 155:278 S 26 '42 150w

"Mr. Faulkner succeeds so admirably in his portrait of Otis Town, writing with a sureness of character that rarely fails him, that his story takes on new interest if not new meaning. . . . [The] plot finally becomes so entangled that it takes one case of madness, one death by accident, one conviction of murder, one paralytic stroke and one lynching to bring to its resolution: the circuit of horror and calamity is so overloaded that, instead of electrifying the reader, it electrocutes itself. All that remains is the portrait of Otis Town—which, as we have said, is in itself enough to give Mr. Faulkner's book value and distinction." Hamilton Basso

+ — New Repub 107:261 Ag 31 '42 700w

"As a novel the book leaves much to be desired; as the portrayal of a unique and extravagant character it is an achievement." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Times p6 Ag 30 '42 900w

"Readers of Mr. Faulkner's first novel, 'Men Working,' will miss its wry humor and sharp veracity."

New Yorker 18:58 Ag 29 '42 110w

"This second novel by William Faulkner's younger brother has the merit of telling a story directly and well and creating two characters magnificently. . . . John Faulkner is a 'robust.' He could not have made old man Town come alive in this book if he were not, if he did not have a taste for sturdiness, deep health, and the deathless, successful business of man with nature." J. T. Graves

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 S 19 '42 430w

Time 40:100 Ag 31 '42 1250w

FAULKNER, WILLIAM. Go down, Moses, and other stories. 383p $2.50; ltd autog ed $5 Random house

(W) 42-16049

A volume of short stories all dealing directly or indirectly with one family living in Jefferson, Mississippi. Contents: Was; The fire and the hearth; Pantaloons in black; The old people; The bear; Delta autumn; Go down, Moses.

"This is Faulkner at his best and worst—perhaps not quite his worst, for no loonies, degenerates, or gentlemen who fall in love with cows figure as major characters in these stories. The same people, black and white, appear in all of them. The chronology is obscure, the characters are vague, the interrelationships demand closer study than the casual reader can afford, and there is a great deal of what—to all but Faulkner addicts—must seem to be mere maundering and verbiage. But there is enough magic, here and there, to justify this or any other book."

R. M. Gay

+ — Atlantic 170:136 S '42 230w

"When Mr. Faulkner is at his best there is scarcely a novelist who can surpass him in exploring the submarine depths of consciousness, but when he rests his narrative on the stream-of-thought of unidentified characters and runs his sentences into hopelessly tangled skeins, the reader can only shake his head and sigh. These tendencies are fortunately not insistent enough to obscure his gifts." Milton Rugoff

+ — Books p2 My 17 '42 1000w

"Here are seven stories that should be read by anyone who cares about the progress of American fiction. They represent William Faulkner at his best. Which is equivalent to saying the best we have." William Abrahams

+ Boston Globe p19 My 6 '42 320w

Reviewed by G. C. Andrew

Canadian Forum 22:155 Ag '42 420w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p3 O 9 '42 100w

Reviewed by Lionel Trilling

Nation 154:632 My 30 '42 1150w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 106:900 Je 29 '42 850w

"There is nothing lucid about Faulkner, and his lack of lucidity is evidently deliberate. His earlier novels were certainly no models of clarity, but their sleepy strength was compelling and their horrors were very horrifying indeed. In Go Down, Moses, there are many echoes of the robust author of Sanctuary, but the echoes are depressing. They are a sad contrast to the general mud. The mud always threatened, but now it has risen like a tide and covered all but a few small islands." Philip Toynbee

— New Statesman & Nation 24:293 O 31 '42 220w

"The entire book—and it should be read as a book and not as a mere selection of stories which have been reprinted from current magazines—is proof that William Faulkner's early promise has matured and that he is one of the few writers of our day who deserve increasing respect and admiration." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Times p4 My 10 '42 1300w

New Yorker 18:74 My 16 '42 70w

Pratt p12 O '42

"It isn't the customary miscegenation, rot, murder, and ruin that make Mr. Faulkner so irritating in this book, for his public is accustomed to these. . . . It is the intensive exercise required for flashing back with his flashbacks, running up and down his family trees. . . . The Faulkner genius is just great enough to make you wish his stories unwound without giving you the energy to unwind them." J. T. Graves, II

Sat R of Lit 25:16 My 2 '42 500w

"Blame the times or blame me, but I find myself hopelessly out of sympathy with the thickening self-consciousness and sentimentality in which Mr. Faulkner continues to bury and further bury his original great talent. Go Down, Moses, is a mighty wedge of ponderous writing, of Mississippi, of negroes and half-Indians, and great dogs and bears and all kinds of odd 'Deep South'-ers. Atmospherically it is sometimes magnificent; but the characters are immense exaggerations—and that would be fine if they were not so curiously tedious, so literary." Kate O'Brien

+ — Spec 169:418 O 30 '42 150w

Time 39:95 My 11 '42 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p497 O 10 '42 1000w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 31:viii summer '42 140w

FAUSSET, HUGH I'ANSON. Walt Whitman: poet of democracy. 320p il $3 Yale univ. press [12s 6d Cape, J]

B or 92 Whitman, Walt

A42-4290

New interpretative biography of Walt Whitman, written by an English critic and author. "In studying Whitman, equally as a man of a curious temperament, a mystic, and a democratic pioneer, I have tried to reveal the truth which lies between the eulogies of the early 'good grey poet' school and the strictures of some recent critics, the severest of whom have dismissed him contemptuously as a vociferous fraud. . . . Although I have concentrated throughout on the 'simple separate person' whose effusions were so wide and manifold, I have viewed him in the light of mankind's abiding problem, the problem of achieving that integrated humanity which is the condition of personal fruitfulness, of true brotherhood, and of religious serenity." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

FAUSSET, H. I.—Continued

Booklist 39:31 O 1 '42

"This study of Whitman's life and writings by an English critic of proved competence adds no fresh material to the great bulk of information about the poet already in print. Nor has it any special discovery to contribute in the way of interpretation. Rather its justification must be sought, if any justification is needed for writing a book on a still vital literary figure, in such qualities as perspective, clarity and balance, which Mr. Fausset is well equipped to bring to the subject. He has, in fact, produced a work as conspicuously free from controversial features as it is from any form of sensationalism. To readers who have come to expect a sounding of trumpets when Whitman is mentioned it may seem a trifle colorless." G. F. Whicher

+ — Books p13 Ag 23 '42 700w

Christian Century 59:1321 O 28 '42 280w

"Mr. Fausset tells the whole life-story with a more generous understanding than might seem compatible with his somewhat depressing insistence on its easy inwardness, and really the great facts of that life as he himself presents them, not to speak of the greatness of the poetry, to the power and achievement of which he is partly blind, seem at last to reduce his critical theory to a succession of all but irrelevant pinpricks. Who, one cries out, was ever integrated if this man was not? Admittedly, he left many social and political problems unsolved, but did he not indicate in a new way the vital attitude, the vital technique, which is a condition for the solution of them?" B. S.

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 10 '42 300w

"This refreshingly new study of Whitman is to be commended as a readable biography combined with adequate literary and social criticism. It is an ideal approach for the general reader, at the same time comprehensive and reasonably reliable. Its usefulness for specialist or scholar, however, is limited by paucity of 'apparatus,' and by frequent minor inaccuracies." C. J. Furness

+ — New Eng Q 15:557 S '42 1100w

Reviewed by Newton Arvin

New Repub 107:205 Ag 17 '42 500w

"Mr. Fausset gives what seems to me a very true and balanced picture; if he has a fault it is that he underrates Whitman as a rogue, and sometimes judges by the standards of Christian idealism when psychological exactness would be fitter. There is still a good deal to be disentangled in the fantasy-life of this poet whose genuineness, like the medium's, is reinforced by the fact that he has so often to 'put it on.'" G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:163 Mr 7 '42 1550w

"Mr. Fausset's biography should be read for its excellent critical passages on 'Leaves of Grass' and for its literate style. But Whitman is open to many interpretations." Frances Winwar

+ — N Y Times p5 Je 14 '42 1150w

Reviewed by C. J. Furness

Sat R of Lit 25:6 Jl 18 '42 1100w

"This useful biographical and critical study does not add a great deal to our knowledge of the familiar landmarks of Whitman's career. . . . It is impossible to carp at some of Mr. Fausset's psychological terminology, one might wish that he had made more of the comparison of Whitman and Blake, and one might jib at his trick of beginning paragraphs with conjunctions, but his Whitman nevertheless is one of the best of his books, and one that was well worth writing." Michael Roberts

+ — Spec 168:380 Ap 17 '42 850w

"This compact, brilliant critical biography is 1) an excellent life of Walt Whitman, 2) a just, if merciless, evaluation of him as poet, mystic and prophet of democracy, 3) an arduous, provocative sermon on the nature and responsibility of democracy and of art. Unlike most Whitman critics, Author Fausset avoids the extremes of most books about Whitman. He neither damns nor admires Whitman for being a homosexual. He does not claim that Whitman's poetry is as great as Homer's or merely a free verse Sears, Roebuck catalogue. He simply tries to explain what Whitman achieved in poetry and mysticism, what he failed to achieve—and why."

+ Time 39:84 Je 15 '42 1350w

"Mr. Fausset's book [is] one of the most enlightened and balanced statements ever made about Whitman, and, in its skilful weaving of biography and criticism, one of the most continuously interesting."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p126 Mr 14 '42 3100w

"It is unsensational and unrheterical throughout. To these negative virtues, the author adds the positive assets of a scholar who is never a pedant, a keenly reappraising mind, and an understanding of Whitman's failures as well as his force." Louis Untermeyer

+ Yale R n s 32:172 autumn '42 950w

FAUST, JACOB FRANK, ed. Girl's place in life and how to find it. 214p il pa $1.30 Mc-Donnell & co, 119 W. Park av, Champaign-Urbana, Ill.

371.425 Young women. Occupations. Profession, Choice of 42-11265

"Intended as a book of guidance to the young woman interested in securing information relative to certain occupational opportunities." School & Society

J Home Econ 34:387 Je '42 50w

"Makes good introduction to various fields, but, on any definite occupation, considerable supplementary data on schools and courses will be needed." Elizabeth Beal

Library J 67:416 My 1 '42 80w

School & Society 55:308 Mr 14 '42 20w

FAY, CHARLES EDEY. Mary Celeste; the odyssey of an abandoned ship. 261p il maps $5; ltd ed $7.50; abr ed 80p $2.50 Peabody museum

910.4 Mary Celeste (brig) 42-17468

"One of the famous mysteries of the sea is that of the Mary Celeste and the disappearance of her entire crew, with the captain's wife and little daughter. . . . Mr. Fay has first recited the main course of events from the launching of the vessel in 1861, down to the strange occurrences of November, 1872. He has followed this with a report of the text of testimony given at the salvage trial and the various theories that have been advanced as to the reason for the abandonment. And, finally, he has listed the voluminous bibliographical material, year by year, and given copies of statistical records relating to the case." Christian Science Monitor

"This book belongs in every library of sea literature, and especially should reach all Mary Celeste fans. The present reviewer grew up on the sea with a common-sense view of the case, realizing that it must have some reasonable and practical explanation. Such an explanation is ably furnished by Mr. Fay, one that fits the seamanlike requirements and answers every objection. It is a book to please both the eye and the mind." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p4 Ag 16 '42 1450w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 22 '42 600w

"A notable and definitive work." H. C. Kittredge

+ New Eng Q 15:729 D '42 650w

FEARING, KENNETH. Clark Gifford's body.
286p $2.50 Random house

42-17798

This novel, which covers a period of thirty years, skips back and forth thru those years describing events in a "mythical country, of no particular time." It is the tale of an abortive revolution in which the seizing of the radio stations plays an important part.

"As an experiment in discontinuity, the novel is of considerable interest, but most readers will keep hoping that Mr. Fearing will stop hopping. . . 'Clark Gifford's Body' is a poet's transcript of plot into symbolism. The content of that symbolism is doubtless crystal clear to him, however inaccessible it may be to the cursorial eye." George Conrad

Books p8 J1 5 '42 300w

"The story is told through the eyes of a dozen or more characters and skips back and forth in time over a period of thirty years before and after the 'attack'; it's a confusing technique which befuddles the reader, creates a sterile objectivity, and spares Mr. Fearing the necessity of committing himself on his own political viewpoint, if any."

— Nation 154:743 Je 27 '42 170w

"This is an oddly disturbing novel, and it is difficult to say whether the general effect of it is or is not heightened by the curiously episodic manner in which it is told—a manner which begins by being annoying and ends by having a fascination all its own." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Je 28 '42 500w

FEDOROVA, NINA, pseud. See Riasanovsky, A. F. P.

FEIBELMAN, JULIAN BECK. Social and economic study of the New Orleans Jewish community. 157p priv ptd Univ. of Pa.

296 Jews in New Orleans. Jews—Political and social conditions A41-4295

"This study is an analysis of information derived by a house to house canvass of Jewish residents of New Orleans. The first part is primarily a statistical presentation of the demographic and economic characteristics. . . The second part deals with the history and growth of the community—religious, social, and philanthropic development." Social Forces

Reviewed by E. C. Hughes

Am J Soc 48:156 J1 '42 120w

Reviewed by V. J. Parenton

Social Forces 20:521 My '42 280w

FEIBLEMAN, JAMES. Christianity, communism and the ideal society; a philosophical approach to modern politics. 419p $4 Norton [12s 6d Allen, G]

320.15 Sociology. Christianity—Philosophy. Communism. Science—Philosophy [37-24516]

"In this work Christianity and Communism are examined at length; Christianity as the declining world-system, and Communism as the rapidly rising one. But are found to contain valid elements, worth saving for an ideal, but neither proves to be sufficiently wide. Christianity neglects actuality; Communism neglects the logical order. After demonstrating that any system wishing to survive must save science, the work closes with a summary of the conditions requisite for an ideal society." (Publisher's note) Index.

"There is, needless to say, little or nothing in the book about the actual realities of politics and economics. There is no understanding of the desperately difficult task of achieving any conformity of wills or concurrence of interest in human society. This has, in other words, little to do with the real problems of human existence, though the author's analysis of the truths and errors of idealism and naturalism are plausible enough and sometimes profound. But he has not discovered the most obvious fact about the 'order of actuality' in history; that people can arrive at very wrong or at least very selfish conclusions in the realm of social matters with the aid of the most perfect philosophical theory." Reinhold Niebuhr

— + Books p13 J1 15 '42 600w

"In many ways this is the most stimulating and profitable book of my whole reading life. And while I think some of his judgments, conclusions and proffered solutions are dubious in the extreme, being delivered too exclusively from the standpoint of a stringent logic, his awareness of modern man's problems and his ability to describe them are truly remarkable. The wealth of criticism thrown out in the development of the thesis is always incisive and to a very large extent, I believe, sound. The book should be greeted as a brave, bold and original excursion into a territory that must be re-explored by modern man. That some of the author's presuppositions call for more critical attention than he has given them goes without saying. And the fact that some of his opinions trip each other up and can be shown to be ridiculous in a practical sense is, I feel, irrelevant in view of the task he has undertaken." H. S. Tigner

+ Christian Century 59:1087 S 9 '42 1000w

"This book confirms our suspicion that the chief value of metaphysics is gratification of the ego of the metaphysicians. Deeply philosophical, it will in no way contribute to the clarity of mass thought. Even the philosophy is not as catholic as the title. For Dr. Feibleman confuses Christianity with philosophy, ignoring the fact that there is no Christianity saving where it serves mankind. . . And the author's Ideal Society is as weird as Berkeley's denial of matter. In his prognostication, society is no longer material, neither is it spiritual; it is a mess." A. L. Byron-Curtiss

— Churchman 156:16 Ag 1 '42 180w

FEILD, ROBERT DURANT. Art of Walt Disney. 290p il $3.50 Macmillan

791.4 Disney, Walt. Moving pictures—Cartoons (W) 42-36248

"While not in any way technical, this book describes how things happen in the Disney Studio—how Walt Disney himself acts as inspiration and co-ordinating spirit for all the several hundred artists and production men and women who work with him. An inside picture is given of the conditions under which these people work, the problems they face, and the many different stages through which idea and drawing must pass before taking its part in the final production." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 38:422 J1 1 '42

Bookmark 4:8 N '42

"The information in the book is valuable; but the tone seems to me actually promotional; maybe because it is so big, and has so many color plates, it reminds me of elaborate souvenir programs at Aphrodite or the Russian Ballet. The author's purpose is 'to present the art of Walt Disney as a growing force in our midst'; actually he presents the technical devices, the commercial conditions, the physical arrangements; but the art seems to escape." Gilbert Seldes

+ — Books p5 Je 7 '42 1650w

Boston Globe p17 Ag 5 '42 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

"Mr. Feild has done a worthy and intelligent job. One sighs a little over it, but only because it takes Mickey out of the realm of folk art and puts him into that which a certain former Mayor of New York City would have described as 'Art art.' If we read Mr. Feild's really fascinating pages our innocence may vanish forever. We can never think again that Mickey and his friends merely happened. They were planned. They are deliberate." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p1 Je 7 '42 1150w

"Mr. Feild's book is the first sincere attempt to evaluate the art of Walt Disney, to understand its significance and to develop standards of appreciation and criticism. . . The animated cartoon has derived much nourishment from the book illustration of the past and it has more than influenced contemporary illustration. The Disney books and their char-

FEILD, R. D.—Continued
 actors loom large in the minds of our youngsters and they are playing an important part in the opening of new and sometimes unexpected outlets for books. For all these reasons Robert Feild's 'Art of Walt Disney' should be made welcome on our shelves, not as a specialist's report on a specialty, but as an [important] interpretation of American graphic art today." Hellmut Lehmann-Haupt + Publishers' Weekly 142:865 S 5 '42 450w

"This is the most brilliant and satisfying analysis that any branch of the modern American film industry has enjoyed at the hands of its countrymen. . . The book has the deceptive outward appearance of a picture book—of one of the dozens of pretty Disney Enterprises' publications—but for once the abundant pictorial matter furnishes valuable illustrations, inseparable from the text. It has obviously been conceived as a serious book about an essentially visual art." Jay Leyda
 + Sat R of Lit 25:5 Je 6 '42 950w

Reviewed by H. R. Isaacs
 Theatre Arts 26:728 N '42 1050w
 Wis Lib Bul 38:117 J1 '42

FEINER, RUTH. Young woman of Europe.
 354p $2.50 Lippincott [9s 6d Dakers]

(W) 42-51782

In autobiographical form this novel tells the story of a young half-Jewish, half-Aryan girl, born in Hamburg a few years before the beginning of the first war. The study of Renate's character development is followed thru the first World war, and the years following, thru the period of Hitler's rise, and her own exile in England, and closes with her part in the London bombings.

"'Young Woman of Europe' is a brisk story, packed with events and with concrete pictures of life in the old Germany, existence under Hitler and the isolation of a 'friendly alien' in war-time England. . . If the record of the last war is a guide, most of the three-dimensional novels of the upheaval will be written ten years or more hence, when there is more perspective than the crowded present permits. I hope that Miss Feiner will tell this story again when time has washed out some of the detail and has deepened and clarified what remains." Mary Ross

+ — Books p8 Ja 3 '43 650w

Reviewed by E. H. Crowell
 Library J 68:35 Ja 1 '43 50w

"Miss Ruth Feiner's command of English is still uncertain; nevertheless in Young Woman of Europe she has produced a remarkably eloquent and moving novel. . . This story is one of immediate topical interest and something of a tract for the times; but Miss Feiner is too good a novelist to allow the political issues to dominate exclusively her narrative, and it is the intensely human interest of 'Young Woman of Europe' that gives it its compelling attraction." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p3 J1 3 '42 250w

"'Young Woman of Europe' is written with indignation and with bitterness. The essential characteristics of the Prussian mind come vividly to life under Miss Feiner's pen." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p7 D 27 '42 750w

"The author writes with angry vehemence of a world finding comfortable refuge in delusion. However much one may share in such righteous indignation, in the end it becomes tiresome. The book is one more proof, if proof were needed, that it takes a Tolstoy rather than a run-of-the-mine novelist to fictionalize world catastrophe."

New Yorker 18:52 Ja 2 '43 130w

"There is not a great deal to be said by way of criticism. The emotions of the tale are very much on the surface. But on its own level this is a smooth and competent piece of story-telling."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p329 J1 4 '42 360w

FELKER, CHARLES AURAND, and PAINE, HARRY W. Milling-machine indexing. 88p il $1.50 Bruce pub.

621.75 Indexing (machine shop practice). Milling machinery 42-36089

"A textbook for machine shop classes, which, in addition to the mathematical procedure, gives some trade information about indexing attachments in common use. 'We have presented the five accepted types of indexing—direct, simple, differential, block, and compound, with explanations and sample problems showing the best fields of application of each type of procedure.'" Booklist

Booklist 38:247 Mr 15 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 J1 '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:78 My '42

FELSEN, GREGOR. He's in submarines now; pictures courtesy U.S. navy and Martin Sheridan. 175p $2.50 McBride

359.32 Submarine boats. Submarine warfare (W) 42-50556

Explanation in non-technical language of the workings of the submarine, and how American sailors are trained for submarine warfare. Illustrated with photographs. For boys of fourteen and over.

Booklist 39:205 Ja 15 '43

"Boys of fourteen and older will be sure to like this book. Recommended." Alice Vielehr
 + Library J 68:39 Ja 1 '43 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 10 '43 170w

FELSEN, GREGOR. Jungle highway. 219p $2 Dutton

42-6004

This adventure story for boys tells of the work and the hazards met by two young North Americans and a Colombian friend on a civil engineering project in Panama.

"The book is one that boys will find exciting as well as informative." F. B. Sloan
 + Christian Science Monitor p11 My 14 '42 120w

"Timely and probably authentic information, but story interest is not well sustained. From vocational angle, however, book has value, and prospective engineers may find it interesting. Inferior, in reviewer's opinion, to many other career books in this series. For junior high school age and above." A. L. Shea

+ — Library J 67:632 J1 '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 38:71 Ap '42

FELSEN, GREGOR. Navy diver. 223p il $2 Dutton

42-19934

A picture of the life of a navy diver given in the form of a story of a young Iowan who joined the navy in 1939.

Booklist 39:74 N 1 '42

"Valuable because of the authentic account that it gives [of] the training and experience of the divers." F. B. Sloan
 + Christian Science Monitor p12 N 19 '42 50w

"Timeliness is chief recommendation for purchase of this title. . . Style lacks distinction." Gertrude Andrus

Library J 67:798 S 15 '42 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 10w

"Although this is an authentic picture of navy diving it is also a good action story, and for anyone who may be thinking of a naval career it is enlightening as well as entertaining." J. F. R.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 20 '42 180w

FENISONG, RUTH. Murder needs a face. 280p
$2 Doubleday

42-50422

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p48 D 6 '42 150w

"The author's manner of telling the story is more than a match for the strange characters who appear in it. Here is a sample: She lay limply against his chest, her hair falling like a comet down a blue serge sky. If you can stomach that you will probably like the book." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 D 6 '42 120w

"Nice background and some good characters."

+ New Yorker 18:100 N 28 '42 60w

"Shrewd portrait of life among the lowly—sharp tongued, colorful, and occasionally shifty. An oddly motivated crime and thorough-going detection. Average."

Sat R of Lit 25:58 D 5 '42 40w

FENISONG, RUTH. Murder needs a name. 272p $2 Doubleday

42-16056

Detective story.

Booklist 38:427 J1 1 '42

"Another admirable first mystery. Miss Fenisong writes and builds with much cleverness, as you'll find out in the first few pages of this swift, stylish and uninhibited yarn." Will Cuppy

+ Books p26 My 10 '42 150w

"A murder mystery that involves several persons, most of whom are associated in one way or another with the radio industry. Three interlocking plots make the going difficult for Nelson as well as for the reader who prefers his murder straight." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 My 17 '42 160w

FENNER, PHYLLIS REID. Our library. 174p $1.75; educ ed $1.40 Day

027.82 School libraries. Libraries, Children's (W) 42-6552

"A personal account of methods used by an elementary school librarian in making her library a vital part of the school and in getting books and children together. Activities and techniques such as storytelling, dramatics, clubs, parent groups, book reviews, and cataloging are discussed. Enlivened by anecdotes and case histories, the whole tone of the book is characterized by an informal 'swapping of ideas' and the author's enthusiasm." Booklist

Booklist 38:267 Ap 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 Ag 9 '42 250w

"This book is the most practical, comprehensive, integrated help on the library that has come from the press. Truly, the library literally comes alive through its pages, due to Miss Fenner's unusual ability to inject her honest, spontaneous, whole-souled personality into it." D. K. Cadwallader

+ Library J 67:266 Mr 15 '42 250w

"Our Library' is full of practical suggestions for both teachers and librarians and sheds a cheerful light of promise on the future of the elementary school library." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 My 24 '42 370w

Pratt p7 O '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:82 My '42

FENNER, PHYLLIS REID, ed. Time to laugh; funny tales from here and there; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 240p $2 Knopf

(W) 42-19684

Twenty humorous children's stories, old and new, selected from folklore or modern works of many countries. Among the authors are: Charles J. Finger; Margery Bianco; Howard Pyle; Hans Christian Andersen; Richard Hughes; Ruth Sawyer; and Seumas MacManus. For grades four to seven.

Booklist 39:74 N 1 '42

"The best anthologies for young folks are those children themselves have helped to choose. In selecting 'funny tales from here and there,' Phyllis Fenner, an inspired librarian and author of a delightful book about a school library, has had expert advice from listeners like those who will be its readers. There are twenty [stories], old and new, and not a dud among them." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 22 '42 250w

"Most are unusually good story-telling material. . . Highly recommended." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 67:955 N 1 '42 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 27 '42 100w

FENTON, CARROLL LANE, and FENTON, MRS MILDRED (ADAMS), Mountains; il. with phot. and drawings by the authors. 160p $2.50 Doubleday

551.43 Mountains. Rocky mountains. Natural history—Rocky mountains

(W) 42-36311

"Beyond the prairies and the plains lie the ranges which form the main subject of this fascinating study of the earth-making processes. These are the newer mountains of our country, much younger than the worn-down heights of the Appalachians. Following the course of imaginary trips, the Fentons show their readers characteristic peaks and ridges in the Rockies and Sierras, or carry them far back in geologic eras. In a clear, non-technical style they tell of batholiths and blister mountains, of the origin of volcanoes and glaciers." (Horn Bk) Index.

Booklist 39:53 O 15 '42

"The Explanatory diagrams are excellent and original, as are the photographs. I confess I approached the book with high enthusiasm. The book is informational—not about mountains in general but about the Rockies. I find no fault with theory or fact. But its miscellany of information is as partial and tantalizing as a note book. It is not what the book says that is at fault; quite the contrary, it is what is not said." Roderick Peattie

+ Books p30 N 1 '42 400w

"The text misses the happy medium between the use of technical terms and the supposed necessity of writing 'down' for the interested amateur. Nevertheless it is informative and unusually well illustrated. Careful reading will repay anyone interested in the many phases of nature revealed to the eye of every observant mountain climber."

+ — Commonweal 37:187 D 4 '42 80w

"Not only does this excellent guide book introduce the beginner to mountain structure, but it also throws a clear light on the formation and composition of many minerals. Graphic and beautiful illustrations give their vigorous aid to the young student." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:345 S '42 110w

"A fine guide to America's mountains." P. D. Edie

+ Library J 67:892 O 15 '42 30w

Reviewed by A. E. Brown

Library J 67:957 N 1 '42 100w

"Excellent clear diagrams and drawings are provided and beautiful photographs, some in color. Here is something for every type of mountain lover, for whether the reader is interested in the geological story of our continent, whether his hobby is climbing and hiking, wild life, fossils or photography, he will find 'Mountains' a rewarding and stimulating book." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 31 '43 240w

Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 N '42 120w

Wis Lib Bul 38:166 N '42

FENTON, FRANK. A place in the sun. 314p $2.50 Random house

42-21302

This is the story of Rob Andrews, a cripple, who after his mother's death, leaves his Ohio home and goes to California to seek for himself "a place in the sun." He succeeds in finding friendship, a brief love, some strengthening of body and mind, but in the end his brother Sam has to come to his rescue and bring him back to Ohio.

FENTON, FRANK—Continued

"There is a great deal of sordid human details in 'A Place in the Sun' . . . but to compensate there is a free, infectious feeling for natural beauty and life out of doors—the woods, the hills, the inland waters, the sea, the sun. And all is well and smoothly written." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p8 Ag 9 '42 400w

"One of those inside-the-mind novels that hasn't enough mind."

— Nation 155:178 Ag 29 '42 60w

"Fenton's 'A Place in the Sun' is notable for its sensitive portrayal of a young man who lived with the inferiority of a physical handicap. . . Fenton does a masterly job of balancing the forces which molded the character of Rob Andrews. The sight of his crutches under his handsome head and powerful shoulders never failed to bring a look of pity into the eyes of people who first beheld him, and that he resented bitterly. Yet in the fact of his handicap lay the core of his growth, of his difference from his brother Sam." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p13 Ag 2 '42 600w

"The novel is memorable and often distinguished not because it contains an 'important' idea but by virtue of many sharply observed details about common objects and the elliptical rhythms of common speech. Very good talk, in fact, salty, witty, wise, and not a bit like Hemingway."

+ New Yorker 18:55 Ag 1 '42 100w

FERBER, EDNA, and KAUFMAN, GEORGE
S. The land is bright. 177p $2 Doubleday
812 (W) 42-140

Play depicting three generations of an American family—the Kincaids. Beginning in 1896 with the family enormously wealthy on stolen money, it traces their utter degradation in the early twenties; and the promise of their reform in the present.

Booklist 38:207 F 15 '42

"'The Land is Bright,' adds little to the stature of either author. . . Many of the incidents are little more plausible than the melodramatics of the old time 'sensation' drama, and the play has scant claim to serious attention. It is the kind of play of which people say, 'It will make a good movie.'" W. P. Eaton

Books p29 Mr 1 '42 90w

"Flavorsome, nostalgic, sentimental, truthful, realistic, and humorous play. Recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 66:1046 D 1 '41 70w

FERGUSON, JOHN ALEXANDER. Terror on the island. 301p $2 Vanguard [7s 6d Collins] 42-9119

A pretty young German woman, daughter of a pacifist professor who had invented a new bombsight, was living on the island of Guernsey when it was invaded by Germany. Because of her part in the theft of the famous bombsight, Erika was in danger of her life. This is the thrilling story of her rescue by the young Englishman who was responsible for her plight.

Booklist 38:369 Je 1 '42

"This is a superior British espionage tale, all the more readable for its quiet method of distributing chills by land and sea." Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 Mr 22 '42 100w

"A story that flows at accelerating speed to a climax as dramatic as it is unexpected. Despite the fact that Allan himself narrates his adventures—and one inevitably surmises that somehow he will contrive to circumvent the Gestapo and rescue the girl—this double-barreled romantic thriller is so cleverly plotted and well written that it keeps the reader keyed up to a high pitch to the last page." D. de K.

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 29 '42 320w

"Pre-war section of book about theft of bombsight drawings in Freiburg first class; second part slight let down. Average."

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:15 Mr 21 '42 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p129 Mr 14 '42 80w

FERGUSON, ERNA. Our Hawaii. 311p 11 maps $3.50 Knopf 919.69 Hawaiian Islands (W) 42-4868

This book, written before Pearl Harbor, describes the life and customs in Hawaii before the war. It describes from the point of view of the tourist, the several islands, a visit to Pearl Harbor, folklore, native dances, economics, etc. Illustrated with photographs. Maps Glossary. Index.

Booklist 38:250 Mr 15 '42

Bookmark 3:13 Mr '42

"Some authors can spill ink for pages and only produce a dummy. Others 'discover' or 'reveal' this or that country from the very best club or largest bar. Even more produce their opus from hearsay or from a library. Miss Fergusson's outstanding attributes are her knack of getting to know individuals and groups, inside and out, and her craftsmanship in limning them on paper. Her characters come to life because she writes of them as they really exist. This skill, combined with genuine literary artistry, make 'Our Hawaii' scintillating and worthwhile reading." P. J. Searles

+ Books p5 Mr 15 '42 1800w

"It would have taken a good deal more meditation and perhaps a shorter book to draw the complex pattern of Hawaiian life, and, since Miss Fergusson misses the mark so closely, yet so completely, one can only regret that her book falls into another category altogether. She had the material for an impressive and valuable study. She has written another one of those travel books by a person who went to the Islands to write a travel book. As such, it is spicy, gay and readable—a good picture of the surface of things as they were 'before Pearl Harbor.'" J. L. Duff

+ — Commonweal 36:43 My 1 '42 250w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:781 Jl '42 10w

"This book is timely, but, of course, written before the attack on Pearl Harbor." H. A. von Urff

+ Library J 67:129 F 1 '42 80w

Nation 154:525 My 2 '42 50w

"The events that have given a 'news interest' to 'Our Hawaii' have, of course, underscored the book's general appeal and pointed up certain specific features. They have also reduced the value of two of Miss Fergusson's chapters—on the Army and the Navy in Hawaii—to something less than zero; that is the book would have been better if these chapters had been taken out. But the work, as a whole, offers a pleasant, sympathetic, and sometimes lively introduction to the Hawaiian islands and their people, from a traveler who looks about her and who always writes well."

+ — N Y Times p4 Mr 15 '42 750w

"Colorful, lavish, expertly written."

+ New Yorker 18:64 Mr 7 '42 40w

"Her chapters on magic and medicine are the most interesting of the book. As 'Our Hawaii,' besides skimming the history of the eight islands, names hotels and their management, evaluates the few handicrafts, and has photographs of old churches, plantations and the like, it should be a pleasant guide when traveling to Hawaii is again a possible civilian project." S. C. Gross

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 My 30 '42 230w

"Here is a woman who traveled the lovely islands before the December Sunday that changed in some respects for everyone the picture she has given. Certainly until the war is over, the life so pleasantly depicted will be in suspension, if not actually a thing of the past. And yet there is perhaps a heightened value and a sharpness of perception because of the violent change in circumstances."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:4 My '42 300w
Wis Lib Bul 38:161 N '42

FERNALD, JOHN. Destroyer from America; il. by John Worsley. 155p $1.75 Macmillan [7s 6d Cape]

(W) 43-160

"[A story of] the day-to-day life on one of the fifty ships [England] acquired from the United States for Atlantic patrol. She begins, after twenty years disuse, by breaking down in mid-Atlantic on her first crossing under new ownership. She ends by sinking a submarine, towing a crippled merchantman to port, and bringing down a bomber in one operation." Manchester Guardian

Booklist 39:224 F 1 '43

"Tone is restrained, conveys feeling of expectancy, as crew enjoy sea life, but await enemy and hope for home shore leave that never comes. The few characters stressed are well drawn. Recommended for both adult and high school collections." R. T. Manlove
+ Library J 67:949 N 1 '42 110w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 12 '42 70w

Reviewed by R. G. Doyle

N Y Times p4 Ja 24 '42 1050w

"Told with an economical directness that is rare and with taste that is rarer still. Just about perfect in a quiet way."

+ New Yorker 18:58 Ja 23 '43 70w

"For narrative power, directed unerringly to a climax, it has no superior in sea literature blown out of the gale of World War II." G. W. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 24 '43 900w

"Mr. Fernald has cast his account of seven months in the career of an ex-American destroyer and her company in the form of fiction, but it is a thin disguise. . . Mr. Fernald—who incidentally is a lieutenant of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve—himself navigated for many months one of the famous fifty destroyers transferred from the United States Navy to the British and Allied Navies in the dark days of 1940 . . . and though his preface contains the usual disclaimer that 'All the characters in this book are entirely fictitious,' one cannot help realizing that he has drawn upon an experience which has had a deep effect on his outlook for the materials out of which he has created them."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p338 Jl 11 '42 700w

FERNANDEZ ARTUCIO, HUGO. The Nazi underground in South America. 311p maps $3 Farrar

980 Fascism—South America. Propaganda, German. Germans in South America (W) 42-7468

A native Uruguayan, who is a member of the faculty of the University of Montevideo, describes the Nazi infiltration and diabolical workings throughout South America, especially in his own country and Colombia. The author has made many radio addresses attempting to call attention to the Nazi organization in South America, and has even been in jail because of his temerity. Index.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Atlantic My '42 200w

Booklist 38:272 Ap 1 '42

"The merits of this book are obvious, also the faults. It is a war book, written by a fighter in hot pursuit. War books, as we must unhappily note each week for too many weeks, are seldom good books. They are too filled with wrath. They furnish no shading between black and white. Professor Hugo Fernández Artucio's book is no exception. He stirs this reviewer to recall a lot of simple Germans in Chile and Argentina who ask only to be let alone. Mr. Fernández is a chronicler of Armageddon, where there is no place for people who ask to be let alone." Hubert Herring

+ — Books p5 Mr 22 '42 1300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '42

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:786 Jl '42 100w

"The book is ably written, the facts are presented precisely and calmly, although they are not such as to leave the reader calm. Nazi activity is analyzed for each country of South America, with specific information and enough historical background for intelligent understanding. Highly recommended both for library purchase and for personal reading."

Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 67:223 Mr 1 '42 110w

Reviewed by W. L. Shirer

Nation 154:463 Ap 18 '42 1000w

"Professor Fernández Artucio undertakes to analyze and expose these Axis plans. He comes to his task admirably qualified by his own fight in his native Uruguay. . . Yet his book is disappointing. Like many another quickie, it is carelessly organized and filled with undocumented assertion. It attempts to embrace lands of which the author knows little or nothing, and fails to work out a concrete and realistic program along the lines for which shrewd hints are scattered throughout the work. Moreover, it lumps Chinese and Japanese together in one place as 'Asiatics' and does grave injustice to anti-fascist refugees. . . I still think, judging from the incomplete but interesting Uruguayan material and some of the obiter dicta on Latin American problems scattered through these pages, that the author has the makings of a book that would be timely and important. But he will have to limit his field, give more detailed documentation and proof, and work out in earnest a practical program of action." B. D. Wolfe

+ New Repub 106:580 Ap 27 '42 650w

"The accelerated pace of the war in the Pacific has given this book a plausibility that not even its author could have dreamed of at the time of writing it only a few months ago. In a normal world these hastily concocted pages would sound like a cheap spy story, in the very words used by the author. We may be temperamentally opposed to rhetorical flourishes, we may smile at the story of a cache of fifty thousand rifles for the Nazi legions in Uruguay's Rio Negro, and scoff at the punctured prediction of a totalitarian uprising in Chile following the defeat of General Ibañez; yet the most complacent of readers will by this time be forced to admit that anything and everything is possible after Pearl Harbor and its nightmarish sequel of events." Ernesto Montenegro

+ — N Y Times p1 Mr 22 '42 1700w

Pratt p14 O '42

"The book gives a good picture of the present political situation and the conflicts between the leftist and rightist parties. It points out those native politicians, whose advent to power would endanger our war efforts. Its charts, maps, and index make it an excellent reference book." Stephen Naft

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 Ap 4 '42 650w

FERNANDEZ DE LIZARDI, JOSE JOAQUIN. Itching parrot, El periquillo sarniento; tr. from the Spanish, with an introd. by Katherine Anne Porter. 290p $2.50 Doubleday

42-11448

This picaresque novel, now for the first time translated into English, has been a "best-seller" in Mexico for over one hundred years. The story tells of the life and adventures of one Poll, barber, quack-doctor, cleric, thief, soldier and merchant of Mexico City in colonial days.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett
Atlantic My '42 250w

"In one sense the Itching Parrot is not so much hero or villain as victim. He is the vehicle of lax home training, bad educators,

FERNANDEZ DE LIZARDI, J. J.—Continued
dishonest governors, corrupt clergymen, people who tolerate quacks, courts that are harsh and prisons that are hideous. If he had been an unwilling or helpless victim of these abuses (perhaps he once seemed so), he would merit our sympathy, and the abuses might anger us. As it is, he is so calmly and consistently wicked that he usually seems ludicrous or monstrous. As often as not he provokes the abuses, and more often than not he deserves what he gets. 'El Periquillo Sarniento' is, in Miss Porter's adaptation, at least the rash and racy chronicles of a knave—with a footnote aimed at the social conscience." Milton Rugoff

+ — Books p12 Mr 22 '42 850w

Reviewed by Edwin Ryan
Commonweal 36:331 J1 24 '42 450w

Reviewed by Emily Garnett
Library J 67:225 Mr 1 '42 80w

"It is disquieting to be unable to respond to a book that has meant so much to so many people—so much, too, to such judges as Ford Madox Ford and Miss Porter. Perhaps I feel as I do because I have not read the same book they read. Miss Porter's translation is a model of firm, simple prose in the manner of the eighteenth-century masters of realism; but she tells us that the allusive and obscene language of the original will not submit to translation. Perhaps in the verbal play of that incommunicable Spanish lies the power of mind which I feel so sadly absent from the translated book." Lionel Trilling

+ — Nation 154:373 Mr 28 '42 1400w

"I am inclined to doubt that 'The Itching Parrot' will be to the taste of the present novel-reading public of this country, but anyone who could enjoy rereading, not the gallicized 'Gil Blas' or the still more markedly anglicized 'Tom Jones,' but the true Spanish rogue tale such as 'Lazarillo de Tormes,' should be attracted to this well translated, well edited, streamlined but still ample version of the first and most popular of all Latin American novels." B. D. Wolfe

+ New Repub 106:868 Je 22 '42 1200w

Reviewed by E. H. Walton
N Y Times p22 My 10 '42 850w

"Miss Porter tells you more about the unfortunate life of Lizardi than most people would insist on knowing but fails to make out much of a case for the book itself, which, in truth, is rather dull."

New Yorker 18:70 Mr 21 '42 90w

"The difficulty about the picaresque novel is repetition of pattern, so that one section is very much like another section; and inasmuch as the immediacy of appeal which interests the Mexican reader does not exist for the American reader, much life goes out of the work. One finds himself skipping paragraphs, and then pages, and then chapters. The introductory matter is, however, so absorbing that one wishes the novel were about Lizárdi rather than about Pedro Sarniento." H. M. Jones

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:14 Ap 4 '42 250w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 19 '42 280w
Time 39:79 Mr 23 '42 600w

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 31:viii summer '42 60w

FERRARS, ELIZABETH. Shape of a stain.
275p $2 Doubleday

42-16839

Detective story.

"The author gradually guides you along darker paths to a more than satisfactory finish. Among the pick of recent crime tales." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 J1 26 '42 200w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p16 J1 19 '42 260w

"Well thought out plot, considerable humor, good characterizations, and two very satisfactory sleuths with widely different methods."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 J1 11 '42 40w

FERRE, NELS FREDERICK SOLOMON.
Christian faith; an inquiry into its adequacy as man's ultimate religion. 216p $2 Harper

230 Christianity—Philosophy 42-5025

Study of Christianity as man's ultimate religion, written for the layman. "The book begins with man and inquiries into his experience and personality to discover the human ultimate. Then the religious ultimate is discussed and the book culminates in 'The Christian Ultimate', which is understood and realized by faith and reason and applies to the life that now is and is to come, and permeates individual and social living. The key to the understanding of Christianity is therefore the Incarnation, wherein God and man meet. Dr. Ferre's emphasis on the finality of Christ as the ultimate of all religion comes like morning light upon the world in these dark days." (Churchman) Index.

Booklist 38:301 Ap 15 '42

"For all its strength, the book left this reviewer with a feeling of some dissatisfaction. Rereading it, I believe the difficulty may be that so many themes and issues not essential to the purpose of the book continually distract the reader from the author's main concern." D. D. Williams

+ — Christian Century 59:1058 S 2 '42 1000w

"Nels Ferre has originality and sensitiveness, is a good thinker and has an unusual aptness in an approach and technic of statement and illustration that will bring theology to laymen." A. L. Murray

+ Churchman 156:19 My 1 '42 390w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '42

"While the volume will cause the liberal's 'fur to fly,' he should not avoid the book. Its pages are crowded with stimulating insights which will keep the mind awake throughout and bring definitely valuable concepts to every faithful reader." G. W. Davis

+ — Crozer Q 19:236 J1 '42 1100w

"The book will be very suggestive to readers because of its author's wide range of thought. It will be very confusing to those for whom it is primarily designed because the sharpness of many issues is blurred by a symbolic interpretation of the moot doctrines. It will be misleading for beginners in theological study because, while it surveys other positions sympathetically, its alternatives are frequently not exhaustive." E. E. Aubrey

+ — J Religion 22:444 O '42 1050w

FERRERO, GUGLIELMO. The principles of power; the great political crises of history; tr. by Theodore R. Jaeckel. 333p $3.50 Putnam

940 Europe—History. Revolutions 42-19725

"Last book of a trilogy by the late Italian historian. This volume supplements the theme of the preceding one, 'The Reconstruction of Europe' [Book Review Digest, 1941] by examining the pattern of 'illegitimate' government or government by fear (Bonapartism, Fascism) in contrast to 'legitimate' government or government in good faith (democracy and hereditary monarchy)." New Yorker

Reviewed by T. C. Cochran

Ann Am Acad 225:238 Ja '43 600w

Reviewed by R. D. De Sales
Atlantic 170:136 N '42 700w

Booklist 39:135 D 15 '42

"One cannot help doubting whether Ferrero's theory will prove to be either so profound or so pregnant as he supposed. Yet as he expounds it, with mature historical knowledge, with a considerable literary grace and at moments an almost poetic touch, it is undeniably both interesting and suggestive." Walter Millis

+ — Books p4 S 20 '42 1300w

"Prof. Ferrero is one of those rare composites—an erudite scholar of major proportions yet a man of letters who has both imagination and a positive flare for what in journalism is called 'the human interest touch.'"

+ Boston Globe p19 S 9 '42 200w

"Although few would accept all the ramifications of the author's thought, this is an intensely stimulating and provocative volume. His demonstration that parliamentarianism is not an absolute, and his outline of conditions necessary for its operation, merit very close attention. . . . Into this final volume of an esteemed historiographer was poured all his accumulated wisdom; his wide knowledge of Roman institutions; his interest in the French Revolution and its aftermath; his intimate acquaintance with modern Italian politics." J. N. Moody

+ Commonweal 37:76 N 6 '42 800w

Reviewed by Walter Hausdorfer

Library J 67:737 S 1 '42 110w

"Ferrero's analysis of this problem is rich in valuable insights which we could accept more gratefully if he made a wider sweep into history to substantiate his conclusions and if he were a little more modest in assessing the importance of his thesis. He seems to think that he is the first to have penetrated into the mysteries of government and found the secret of what makes it 'click.'" Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Nation 155:240 S 19 '42 1150w

Reviewed by Sidney Hook

New Repub 107:508 O 19 '42 2450w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 108:152 F 1 '43 1400w

"Guglielmo Ferrero's 'The Reconstruction of Europe' was published in this country just a year ago. Although it is probably the greatest single contribution to clarity in political thinking that our generation has seen, its effect has been negligible so far as one is able to ascertain. . . . Just before his death, which occurred this year, Ferrero had completed a sequel to 'The Reconstruction of Europe.' Called 'The Principles of Power,' it draws all the conclusions that were implicit in the earlier book. If this new book is not read by all the individuals and groups which are in a position to affect the coming peace, then we shall deserve nothing better than a repetition of fatal error." John Chamberlain

+ N Y Times p1 S 20 '42 1600w

"Despite some remarkable insights, the author never quite gets to the heart of the problem, though at his best he writes with something like the generous breadth of the great Renaissance Humanists. The translation is occasionally ragged."

+ New Yorker 18:70 S 12 '42 130w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton

Sat R of Lit 25:6 O 5 '42 1100w

Social Studies 33:380 D '42 30w

FERRIS, ELMER ELLSWORTH. Jerry Foster, salesman. 266p $2 Doubleday

(W) 42-11042

The hero of Jerry of Seven Mile Creek (Book Review Digest, 1938) spends a year as a coffee salesman, in which he learns the ropes of selling and studies the problem of a business career or a college course. For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 38:372 Je 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 Je 14 '42 450w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 13 '42 90w

"Should appeal to older boys who may be facing the same problem. Useful supplementary reading in career units." E. A. Groves

+ Library J 67:535 Je 1 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:99 Je '42

FETZER, HERMAN (JAKE FALSTAFF, pseud). Come back to Wayne county. 244p il $2 Houghton

(W) 42-23559

Episodes in the life of a young boy during one long summer when he worked as "hired man" on a Wayne County (Ohio) farm.

Booklist 39:121 D 1 '42

Reviewed by George Conrad

Books p14 O 25 '42 380w

Reviewed by E. P. Nichols

Library J 67:1071 D 1 '42 80w

"This new book is a small and almost plotless idyll: a tapestry of sights and smells, hard work and rustic frolic, young love and minor tragedy; but no reader can come away from it without the feeling that Jake Falstaff's untimely death cost us a real writer."

+ New Repub 107:585 N 2 '42 120w

"Come Back to Wayne County" makes a strangely patternless novel, assembled by its editors from Jake Falstaff's recollections of the adolescent Lemuel Hayden. But one does not know that it would be better for having a neater pattern. Who, for instance, would part with the chapter 'Take Cows' just because it has no particular reason for being where it is? Or who would want to be without the essay on the simple country life—which must be called that, Jake Falstaff thought, because the farmer gets up at 4 and goes to bed at 8." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p24 N 1 '42 700w

"Jake Falstaff"—Herman Fetzer—wrote a little like Mark Twain and a little like Walt Whitman; that is about as close as you can come to him without saying that he wrote like Jake Falstaff. His affection for God's creation, including people, back in the Ohio farmlands, is so profound and perceptive, that any suggestion of sentimentality or any other phoney-ness is completely out of the question. He saw the high points and places of human behavior and interpreted them kindly." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 N 14 '42 550w

FEUCHTWANGER, LION. Josephus and the emperor; tr. by Caroline Oram. 446p $2.75 Viking

Josephus, Flavius—Fiction (W) 42-7500

The third volume in a trilogy about the Jewish historian, Josephus, of which the earlier volumes were Josephus and The Jew of Rome (Book Review Digest, 1932, 1936). The historian, after finishing his Universal History of the Jews is no longer in favor with the Roman emperor, Domitian. His attempts to be both a Jewish teacher and a Roman knight are unsuccessful. He is killed by Roman troops in Judea, as he is trying to reach a band of Jewish rebels.

"To one who has felt at times that Mr. Lion Feuchtwanger was somewhat heavy in hand, this latest volume of his Josephus trilogy is an agreeable surprise. The author's prose remains ponderous, yet to this reviewer Josephus and the Emperor is a more vital and important book than its two predecessors." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic Je '42 130w

Booklist 38:275 Ap 1 '42

"His subject is spiritual and tragic, but Feuchtwanger is too adroit at shoveling history into the costume piece, too easy an entertainer and historical guide, to make a real tragedy out of it. And it is for this reason that his Romans are so correct and so vivid, yet always a little absurd; and it is always because Feuchtwanger, flawless as he is, full of a light and thrusting mastery as he is, has so facile a sense of history that he cannot help portraying Domitian and his Empress as demi-gods out of the plush temples and arbors of Cecil B. DeMille." Alfred Kazin

+ Books p5 Mr 1 '42 1000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '42

Reviewed by Cuthbert Wright

Commonweal 35:539 Mr 20 '42 350w

Reviewed by E. F. Kelly

Library J 67:131 F 1 '42 50w

New Repub 106:406 Mr 23 '42 60w

"If this novel has a thesis, it is one by no means didactically expressed. Most of it is pure drama, played out to the end by the actors concerned. More than that: it is an extraordinary piece of reconstruction. As a picture of life in Domitian's Rome it conveys a mood of reality vibrant with life." John Cour-nos

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 1 '42 1150w

FEUCHTWANGER, LION—Continued

"A slow-moving, but powerful narrative, a little opaque at times but incremental in its effect. It is hereby recommended to readers who will willingly digest solid fare." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:57 F 28 '42 320w

"This powerful and intensely interesting book has at least three specially striking aspects. It is an exciting yarn, it presents a remarkable analysis of that moral mare's-nest, the so-called Jewish problem, and it is a first-rate study of an ancient dictator with suggestive sideswipes at the modern variety. On all three counts it is so good that it is likely to get less attention than it deserves. . . . Mr. Feuchtwanger is clearly one of those writers who suffers especially, even in a good translation. Something is always lost. His German I suspect of being marble. The English version is some novel plastic, certainly not lucite." Leonard Bacon

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:5 Mr 14 '42 1100w

Time 39:99 Mr 16 '42 600w

"Mr. Feuchtwanger moves about in those distant times as if he were completely at home. No doubt his knowledge of them is profound. Few of us are in a position to question the closeness of his narrative to history. But a novelist, even a historical one, shouldn't be quite so omniscient, particularly as to what was going on inside his characters' heads. What at first seems mastery of bygone events becomes after a while a glibness that destroys belief." Robert Littell

Yale R n s 31:xii spring '42 100w

FICHTER, JOSEPH HENRY. Saint Cecil Cyprian, early defender of the faith. 282p $2.50 Herder

B or H2 Cyprian, Saint, bp. of Carthage 42-16429

Biography of a third-century martyred saint. "Father Fichter in his Preface modestly disclaims writing a biography of St. Cyprian. He gives us 'nothing more than a personal appreciation of the martyred Bishop of North Africa, and claims for it neither completeness nor erudition.'" (Cath World)

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 155:764 S '42 230w

"Father Fichter has done an admirable piece of historical research and interpretation." Richard Flower

+ Commonweal 36:402 Ag 14 '42 650w

FICKE, ARTHUR DAVISON. Tumultuous shore, and other poems. 110p $2 Knopf 811 42-9490

Collection of sonnets and shorter poems by an established American poet. "It is dignified comment on the world by one who has withdrawn to have a look at it." (Christian Science Monitor)

Booklist 38:365 Je 1 '42

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitrner
Books p2 Jl 5 '42 400w

"The writing is cultivated and well-shaped." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 18 '42 60w

New Yorker 18:80 My 9 '42 20w

"'Tumultuous Shore' will afford certain kinds of pleasure to a poetry-lover willing to read thoughtlessly. Of craftsmanship, at least in the sonnets, there is a good deal. The melancholy fourteen-folded music is pleasantly sedative at times; an admiration for natural beauty stands out positive in this largely negative book. But Mr. Ficke is hardly a man to explain to us the meaning of the world." J. F. Nims

+ — Poetry 60:155 Je '42 1100w

"I do not always agree with Mr. Ficke's conclusions, nor do I always think his phraseology as fresh as it might be. But his poetry is instinct with beauty." W. R. Benét

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:20 Ap 25 '42 150w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer

Yale R n s 32:369 winter '43 210w

FIELD, BRADDA. Bride of glory [Eng title: Miledi]. 963p $3 Doubleday [18s Constable]

Hamilton, Emma, lady—Fiction (W) 42-36110

This lengthy historical novel is "the strange story of Emy Lyon, a blacksmith's daughter, who married his Britannic majesty's envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to the court of Naples and became Emma, Lady Hamilton, companion of royalty and the true friend of vice-admiral Lord Nelson, K.B., Duke of Bronte." (Subtitle)

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (10) PW (3) RB (1) W (1)

"Nelson was an unsatisfactory hero except when he was in battle, and Miss Field has been unable to make him live. In fact, he talks like a book and acts like a stick. And he has a regrettable effect upon Emy, for after he appears she grows steadily less fascinating. Nevertheless, the first 700 pages or so are really delightful." R. M. Gay

+ — Atlantic Ap '42 250w

Booklist 38:275 Ap 1 '42

"'Bride of Glory' is not a novel to be undertaken lightly. It is long and closely written, and it requires, and only at times compels, the reader's collaboration. But to those who are willing to give this it offers a rich tapestry of living at the turn of the eighteenth century and the portrait of a woman who now, as then, is as lovable as she is amazing." Mary Ross

+ — Books p2 Mr 1 '42 1300w

"'Miledi' is the product of much careful and picturesque research, and will please those who like their biographies two pence colored." Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 2 '42 110w

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 35:568 Mr 27 '42 650w

"Too long, too packed with historical and political detail, this fictionized account of the rather lurid life of Lady Hamilton nevertheless makes interesting reading. True to period, seemingly accurate as to history, this story of Emy Lyon from charmaid to political power at the court of the King of Sicily will probably attain popularity despite its length." Esther Potter

+ — Library J 67:182 F 15 '42 40w

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 27 '42 180w

"This thousand-page whopper about Lady Hamilton is the historical novel to end all historical novels. . . . Miss Field has gone in for staggering research about costumes and settings, but there ought to be more to the novel than meets the eye."

New Repub 106:278 F 23 '42 70w

"'Bride of Glory' is not to be regarded as a novelized biography. It is a novel and nothing else. That it contains, in all probability, more truth than the most industrious biographer could come by is due to a happy combination of circumstances. Miss Field took a vast canvas for her work and all the time necessary to detail it lovingly." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 1 '42 800w

New Yorker 18:59 F 28 '42 80w

"The elaborate tale is told with great assurance and the opulent and multi-coloured spectacle of Neapolitan society that we are given would seem to be the result of particularly diligent study. Sir William Hamilton, worldly, cultivated, almost a man of sentiment, is extremely well done; Nelson, at any rate so far, remains a sentimental presence—but, then, few novelists or biographers have caught Nelson. Miss Field would have left a more satisfying impression at a quarter of the length of this first instalment, but has certainly provided the library-friend with what the library-friend calls a nice long read."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p137 Mr 21 '42 1050w

W's Lib Bul 38:68 Ap '42

FIELD, MRS HOPE. Stormy present. 253p $2.50 Dutton

42-17989

Story of a young West Virginia mountain girl, told in the form of a diary. Sherrill Poague, made rebellious thru witnessing her mother's hard life, refuses to marry the middle-aged preacher and makes a run-away marriage instead with the son of a wealthy Cincinnati lumberman. In spite of her own inhibitions and the differences in social station, Sherrill's marriage finally proves a happy one.

"The virtues of [Mrs] Field's writing are in her use of the old recipes, the old medicines, the old ways of domestic life in the mountains before the visiting nurse, models T and A, and the battery radio came to change the colors of life and conversation back in the hills. 'Stormy Present' is a good record and remembrance of things past, worth reading for that reason rather than for any power and persuasions as a work of fiction." F. H. Bullock
+ — Books p8 Ag 23 '42 450w

"Labored and quaint in style—high-sounding words from Zell's Encyclopedia—resembling Young Visitors but never even unconsciously humorous. . . . Fine descriptions of mountains and mountaineers. Longings and suppressions make Sherrill improbable. Limited appeal." H. R. Burdett

+ — Library J 67:682 Ag '42 100w

"What lifts this book above the level of its plot is the feeling the girl has for her mountains and the robust, rural humor and expression with which she tells her tale." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Times p14 Ag 9 '42 320w

"In Sherrill Poague, Mrs. Field, in her first novel, has created a Cinderella of the West Virginia mountains strangely out of keeping with the squalor into which she was born. Sherrill is a mixture of prose and poetry, of romantic longings and hard-headed realism, of childlike innocence and precocious sophistication, of ignorance and half-digested learning. Her style in her diary is a fascinating but improbable combination of mountain dialect and of words she has garnered from her reading, which she manages to use with reasonable accuracy." S. L. McGee

Sat R of Lit 25:13 Ag 22 '42 270w

Wis Lib Bul 38:138 O '42

FIELD, MEDORA (MRS ANGUS PERKERSON). Blood on her shoe. 256p $2 Macmillan

42-15422

Detective story.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (13)

"Another thriller which may well share the pleasant fate of this author's 'Who Killed Aunt Maggie?'—it made the movies. . . . Easy to read, with ingenious puzzle and all else you need for chills and bafflement." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 My 24 '42 250w

"This novel is a worthy successor to the author's earlier book, 'Who Killed Aunt Maggie?'" Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p21 My 24 '42 240w

"Exciting and well constructed."

+ New Yorker 18:68 My 30 '42 30w

"Constant action, intricate plot and much lively chatter."

+ Time 39:84 Je 1 '42 50w

FIELD, PETER, pseud. Fight for Powder Valley! 248p $2 Morrow

42-11449

Western story.

"Active, readable Western." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 Je 21 '42 80w

"The yarn is fast and clever—and utterly farcical." G. W. Harris

N Y Times p21 My 24 '42 160w

FIELD, PETER, pseud. Law man of Powder valley. 247p $2 Morrow

42-22689

Western story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p26 O 25 '42 80w

N Y Times p36 N 22 '42 200w

FIELD, PETER, pseud. Powder Valley pay-off. 250p $2 Morrow

41-19304

Western story.

Booklist 38:235 Mr 1 '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p32 N 30 '41 100w

FIELD, PETER, pseud. Trail south from Powder Valley. 251p $2 Morrow

42-208

Western story.

Booklist 38:235 Mr 1 '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p11 Ja 4 '41 70w

FIELD, RACHEL LYMAN (MRS ARTHUR PEDERSON). And now tomorrow. 350p $2.75 Macmillan

(W) 42-36215

Character study of Emily Blair, whose family owned the Blair mills in a New England town. After a severe illness Emily was left absolutely deaf. Her long struggle to regain her hearing was successful in the end, but her love affair was not. It was the doctor who restored her hearing who taught Emily the philosophy of "and now tomorrow."

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (26)
B & T (1) N Y Times (17) PW (8) RB (4)
W (1)

"It will be a very fine novel indeed which takes the Pulitzer Prize for 1942 away from Rachel Field's And Now Tomorrow. . . . It has been years since I have read any story of New England so true, so touching, and with such integrity as this." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic Je '42 280w

Booklist 38:346 My 15 '42

Bookmark 4:16 N '42

"There was always a tomorrow in Rachel Field's work, but before she set out upon it she always finished the work of today. It is not by inchoate and tantalizing fragments that she will be remembered. Now comes the last of her too-brief list of novels. She might herself be glad to be remembered by it—the most thoughtful and rewarding, and in its quiet vitality the most beautiful of all she wrote." Mary Ross

+ Books p1 My 31 '42 1050w

Reviewed by Dorothy Hillier

Boston Globe p19 My 27 '42 500w

"A story that is well told, with ably sketched characters, and a cleverly planned plot."

+ Cath World 155:380 Je '42 200w

Christian Century 59:959 Ag 5 '42 390w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '42

"The plot is as obvious as Little Red Riding Hood, but one listens to it because Miss Field has told it so well." E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 36:232 Je 26 '42 420w

"Not great originality of plot, but smooth style and effective characterization make it an absorbing story. Recommended; suitable for young adults." Emily Garnett

+ Library J 67:414 My 1 '42 80w

"Rachel Field's last novel ran in McCall's. It is as good an example as you'll find of the talent it takes to write bad fiction for a wide public—the right blend of sentimentality and sincerity, the proper veneer of educated prose over stock situations and hollow characters."

Nation 155:18 J1 4 '42 180w

New Repub 106:838 Je 15 '42 80w

FIELD, R. L.—Continued

"To say that Rachel Field's last novel has its greatest depth and power in this communication is not to say that it is wanting in a story's interest or charm. The story of Emily Blair is interesting, and it is told with the deft charm of both warmth and restraint as well as suavity. . . . There is—to this reviewer's mind at least—some question of the justifiability of the use of 'purely fictional' medical theory and detail. 'And Now Tomorrow' is, moreover, quite different from the glowingly dramatic 'All This, and Heaven Too,' and different, also, from the earlier 'Time Out of Mind.' But it has its own sound claim to popularity, especially as a modern love-story with a sympathetic heroine and well-handled suspense." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 My 31 '42 1050w

"Not much lift to this, but it's capably done."

+ New Yorker 18:66 My 30 '42 60w

Pratt p12 D '42

"Rachel Field has written some fine books, and remembering them, one feels sad that 'And Now Tomorrow' which is interesting and sometimes poignant, is so much less finished, both in writing and in construction, than some of her earlier work. If she were living now, and other novels were likely to come, one would say the level has dropped a bit, this time—and what author has a constant level?—but her talent can be counted on to reassert itself. . . . I wish that 'And Now Tomorrow' were just a breathing space before Rachel Field's next novel." Rebecca Lowrie

Sat R of Lit 25:6 My 23 '42 380w

"And Now Tomorrow will probably be one of the best-loved novels of the summer. . . . Miss Field's book has enough carpentry to chair an idle haunch through many hours, enough sincere sentimentality to bring moisture to idle eyes and unguentine to idle hearts. In recognition of changed times, it is tinged with 'class-consciousness,' but not of a sort to disturb the tenderest digestion. . . . Some readers may feel that suffering, if it is to pay dividends, requires a sufferer. They may also feel that Emily's perceptions of Blairstown's social anguish are less Sophoclean than benevolently cross-eyed. But her sincerity and her delusions of self-knowledge, which the author appears wholeheartedly to share with her, will make Emily seem real and dear to thousands."

Time 39:88 Je 15 '42 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p17 Ja 9 '43 950w

Wis Lib Bul 38:97 Je '42

FILIPIAK, ANTHONY S. 100 puzzles. 120p $1 Barnes, A.S.

793.73 Puzzles 42-50816

"How to make and solve" shifting block puzzles, straight line peg puzzles, circle peg puzzles, checker board puzzles, checker board string puzzles, Chinese chess board, string puzzles, glass topped box puzzles, six piece burr puzzle, wood design puzzles, geometric design puzzles, miscellaneous puzzles.

Booklist 39:203 Ja 15 '43

Books p10 D 20 '42 50w

"If you have time to be interested in puzzles, and especially if you have both the time and the skill to do the rather fine woodwork that is required for making many of them, this is the book for you. It contains descriptions and illustrations of a great variety, including many of an advanced nature which would qualify the maker and solver for the degree of Pu.D."

Christian Century 59:1595 D 23 '42 70w

"Anthony S. Filipiak has produced an unusual and ingenious book of puzzles that challenge the wit and patience of folks who like that kind of thing."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 3 '43 160w

FINK, ARTHUR EMIL. Field of social work. 518p $3 Holt

361 Social work 42-14886

"Dr. Fink first presents a brief history of social work, and follows this by nine chapters dealing with the working divisions of the field. Seven of these deal with the case work services, one with social group work and one with community organization." Social Forces

"While the reviewer regards this as easily the best published introduction to social work, he is disappointed in several features of the book. Whether intentionally or not, Fink gives the impression that public and private social work are quite different in persons served and in skills employed. . . . The chapter on group work is quite inadequate, due partly, no doubt, to the undeveloped state of the field. The term 'community organization,' concerning which the author is a bit apologetic, is a catchall for program planning and promotion, interagency relations, financing, and administrative procedures. Again the author is probably reflecting the confusion that exists among social workers themselves." S. A. Queen

+ Ann Am Acad 223:251 S '42 360w

"The case illustrations are for the most part more than adequate. It is very difficult to select case material for the lay person. One is usually tempted to overemphasize human appeal, and of course to tell a successful story. Most of these cases are warmly human, yet dignified, and convincingly show a skill that many lay persons can respect and enjoy. Dr. Fink has made a genuine contribution to our interpretative literature. He has presented a tremendous amount of factual material without sacrificing simplicity and a definiteness of viewpoint." Muriel McLauchlin

+ Social Forces 21:120 O '42 440w

FINLAND. Ministeriet for utrikesarendena. Finland reveals her secret documents on Soviet policy, March 1940-June 1941; the attitude of the USSR to Finland after the peace of Moscow; with a pref. by Hjalmar J. Procopé. 109p pa $1 Funk, W.

947.1 World war, 1939—Diplomatic history. World war, 1939—Finland. Finland—Foreign relations—Russia. Russia—Foreign relations—Finland. Russo-Finnish war, 1939-1940 41-24134

"Forty pages of introduction and history state Finland's case against Soviet Russia for violation of the terms of the treaty of March 12, 1940. Sixty pages of documents follow, showing in detail the claims and grievances on both sides, leading to the resumption of hostilities in June 1941." Christian Century

"If no interests were involved except those of Finland and Russia, Americans would not be slow in choosing the side to which their sympathies should go."

Christian Century 59:1359 N 4 '42 70w

"As presented, the case for Finland is quite convincing. It would, in fact, be alright, if Finland and the Soviet Union existed in a vacuum, unrelated to a complex world situation. . . . Save for a passing reference to Soviet concern over German troop movements through Finland, the documents offer no clue to the question, 'What were the Nazis doing in Finland meanwhile?'" E. S.

Christian Science Monitor p22 O 8 '41 360w

FINLEY, JOHN HUSTON. Poems. 154p $2 Scribner

811 41-10642

"The writing of poetry was neither the vocation nor the avocation of the late John Finley. . . . Gentle and humane to a degree only those who knew him can understand; self-effacing, ever concerned more with the needs of others than with his own, his was a constant giving of his spiritual best. Hence, as with Emily Dickinson, it became repeatedly necessary for him to seek expression through poetry as the best means of expressing himself. John Finley's poems, even his whimsical poems, are emanations of his finely reverent, animating spirit." N Y Times

"John Finley's verses are easy to read and can be as readily understood by the illiterate as by the cultured. Many are occasional verses and personal tributes. Others reflect, in always obvious phrases, worthy reactions to usual and unusual experiences. The rightness of their sentiments may well gain for all these verses a wide and surely sympathetic audience." G. S. Hellman

+ — Books p20 Ag 24 '41 200w

"John Finley's faith in the fundamental virtues and in the aspirations that are born of them, so evident to us who knew him, lives on in his poems whose dignity, grace, and courage reflect the spiritual qualities of this great American." J. J. Reilly

+ Cath World 155:116 Ap '42 650w

"These poems from 'stops of various quills' [are] the reflection of a Christian spirit, an American culture, and the sensitive touch of a fine soul upon the world of our common humanity." L. L. Riley

+ Churchman 155:18 D 1 '41 110w

Reviewed by Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p7 J1 6 '41 400w

FINNIE, RICHARD. Canada moves north. 227p il $3.50 Macmillan

917.12 Northwest territories, Canada (W) 42-10801

Study of the geography, exploration, resources, administration, and cultural aspects of the Canadian Northwest Territories. The author is a lecturer and authority on the Canadian arctic. He was born in Dawson, and for the past twenty years he has been connected in governmental and private enterprises in the North. Short bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Carl Wittke

Ann Am Acad 222:216 J1 '42 450w

Booklist 38:345 My 15 '42

"It is not written to debunk anything for the sake of the debunking, or to entertain a lot of intellectuals with abstract ideas. It is a simple statement of a multitude of facts that need stating at present, from the point of view of a man who long ago won his right to state them authoritatively. . . . One more well written and sincere human document has been added to that very small list of books that we can depend on to give us a true, and bright, and hopeful picture of the Arctic." E. P. Hanson

+ Books p2 Ap 19 '42 1700w

"Mr. Finnie has done a valuable, because realistic, work. He doesn't want to turn the clock back. He merely would like the government to take a look at the clock and act accordingly." Kathleen Coburn

+ Canadian Forum 22:221 O '42 800w

"This is an informing and fascinating book, with beautiful pictures."

+ Christian Century 59:563 Ap 29 '42

100w

Christian Science Monitor p12 O 17 '42

700w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:784 J1 '42 20w

Geog R 32:506 J1 '42 800w

Wis Lib Bul 38:85 My '42

FISCHER, LOUIS. Dawn of victory. 270p $2.75 Duell

940.531 World war, 1939-. World politics (W) 42-4748

This new book by the author of Men and Politics (Book Review Digest, 1941) deals with Great Britain in the war; Russia's part; and finally America's part in the war and in the peace to come. Index.

Booklist 38:306 Ap 15 '42

"Louis Fischer is a sensitive, knowledgeable and practiced reporter. He can create an atmosphere, or turn a philosophical reflection on the state of the world, or sketch a political figure with the best of them. And most of what he says makes good sense." Walter Millis

+ Books p5 Mr 8 '42 480w

Canadian Forum 22:124 J1 '42 240w

"If the kind of world we construct tomorrow is implicit in what we think about it today, here is a book to ponder, a book providing another dynamic motive for victory." M. C. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 Mr 19 '42 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:777 J1 '42 30w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

Nation 154:287 Mr 7 '42 1250w

"Mr. Fischer's new book is something of a lightweight, with a title more thunderous than the occasion deserves. . . . The British chapter brings out the author's shortcomings sharply: one appreciates the general coverage, but regrets that it should be spread so thin. Mr. Fischer's England is virtually a record of conversations; conversations which often seem to be included less for their importance than because they came with the lunch. . . . Mr. Fischer is, I think, far better away from people and conversation. When he discusses England's antiquated industrial methods, war taxes, production problems and armament—then he is informative and gathers strength from his material." Nigel Dennis

+ New Repub 106:466 Ap 6 '42 600w

"This thoughtful, briskly written book should stimulate the reader's thought."

+ N Y Times p4 Je 28 '42 850w

FISCHER, LOUIS. A week with Gandhi. 122p il $2 Duell

B or 92 Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand (W)

"Recent informal talks with Gandhi, set down almost verbatim, plus a chapter of comment by the author." New Yorker

Booklist 39:183 Ja 1 '43

"Many readers will regret that Mr. Fischer does not give even a brief sketch of the general Indian political situation, in order that Gandhi's remarks might be studied in their wider setting. Mr. Fischer also appears at times to have been more interested in exploring the phenomenon of Gandhi's method of thinking than in pinning Gandhi down to a specific discussion of concrete and immediate issues. But his report nevertheless provides an extremely valuable and illuminating insight into the mind and personality of one of the most complex political figures of our time." K. L. Mitchell

+ — Books p3 D 13 '42 900w

"More significant than the hero who appears somewhat starkly in these less-than-pleasant pages is the hero worshiper. What Mr. Gandhi said to Mr. Fischer is, after all, old stuff, now wearing threadbare. But Mr. Fischer, representing a cult, is self-revealed and proves to be a personality deserving of a long overdue analysis. To begin with, he survived the week." P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p6 D 27 '42 950w

New Yorker 18:60 D 26 '42 50w

FISHER, MRS HELEN STEVENS. Good time at your picnic; picnic plans and games. 144p $1.50 Mill

793 Games. Amusements. Picnics (W) 42-21124

Plans and entertainments for picnics. Partial contents: Bean pole picnic; Beautiful day picnic; Dive jive; Family picnic; Forward march picnic; Humpty Dumpty picnic; Liberty bell picnic; Picfair; Picnic fun—garden variety; Relax picnic; Tree tea; Wild goose chase. Classified and general indexes.

"The best book for planning a picnic, outdoor party, or any type of outdoor entertainment. . . . Recommended." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 67:847 O 1 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:134 O '42

FISHER, IRVING, and FISHER, HERBERT WESCOTT. Constructive income taxation; a proposal for reform. 277p $3 Harper
336.24 Income tax—U.S. 42-22073

A proposal for reform of income tax laws so that the tax would be levied on income spent and not on income saved. "This book was begun in 1938. . . [It] was intended, and still is intended, to present a fundamental solution of the whole income tax problem, and not merely to propose a stop-gap for an emergency." (Pref) Bibliography. Indexes.

Reviewed by H. H. A. Bernt
Library J 67:843 O 1 '42 80w

"'Constructive Income Taxation' is a book well worth while. But not recommended for light reading on a Sunday afternoon." W. W. Johnston
Springf'd Republican p7e N 15 '42 1600w

FISHER, M. F. K., pseud. See Parrish, M. F. K.

FITE, KATHERINE, and PAINE, MRS GARLAND CLAWSON. The Cokesbury shower book. 179p il $1.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury
793 Entertaining. Amusements (W) 41-25315

Practical suggestions for decorations, entertainment, and menus for several kinds of showers—wedding showers, bon voyage showers, stork showers, wedding anniversary showers, etc. Includes recipes, simple diagrams, and three indexes.

Booklist 38:174 Ja 15 '42
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '42
Wis Lib Bul 38:12 Ja '42

FITT, MARY, pseud. Death finds a target [Eng title: Death on Herons' mere]. 270p $2 Doubleday [8s Joseph, M] 42-10302

Detective story.

"Nice going by the author of 'Aftermath of Murder.'" Will Cuppy
+ Books p18 Ap 19 '42 170w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon
Manchester Guardian p3 D 30 '41 90w
"Miss Mary Fitt is rather a sprightly writer but very feminine. She enjoys drawing characters, fancies herself at dialogue, and scamps the dreary business of trying to puzzle readers with alibis, clues, time-tables, and all the rest of the detective paraphernalia." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:511 D 20 '41 140w

"An overlong explanation of what has happened mars the good impression which this story leaves upon the reader up to that point." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 19 '42 120w
Sat R of Lit 25:39 My 16 '42 20w

Reviewed by John Fairfield
Spec 167:538 D 5 '41 90w

"There is a good mystery about the body that is found in a clumsy semblance of suicide, but the plan is strictly according to type." Times [London] Lit Sup p533 O 25 '41 150w

FITTS, DUDLEY, tr. More poems from the Palatine anthology. See Anthologia graeca

FITZPATRICK, BRIAN. British empire in Australia; an economic history, 1834-1939. 529p $5.25 Stechert [21s Melbourne univ. press; Oxford]

330.994 Australia—Economic conditions. Great Britain—Colonies—Australia [41-8854]

"A scholarly history of Australia's economic development from 1834 to 1939 by a research fellow in the University of Melbourne." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by R. L. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:784 J1 '42 20w

"Mr. Fitzpatrick has dug diligently in the primary source material. There is much very useful detailed information, especially in some of the twenty appendices attached to different chapters. . . It is no dispraise of Mr. Fitzpatrick's work to doubt whether he has been quite successful in arranging all his material. No other book in this field, as far as the reviewer's knowledge goes, has such a wealth of data or such promise of interpretative insight." J. B. Condliffe

+ J Pol Econ 50:472 Je '42 460w

"It is difficult to criticize this work in that comparable studies do not exist against which it can be measured. It is the first and only comprehensive work in its field and likely to be the basic work for a whole new school of Australian historical research. However, the book has been criticized, inter alia, on the ground that it really covers material which could be more adequately treated in separate works. This reviewer feels that Brian Fitzpatrick has handled a huge task more than satisfactorily." Howard Daniel

+ Pacific Affairs 14:497 D '41 550w

"While the book is hardly comparable with Shann's brilliant Economic History of Australia (1930) either in style or in treatment of subject matter, it has the advantage of recency and includes considerable unused material. No bibliography is included, but the volume contains evidence of extensive research." M. P. Laughlin

Pol Sci Q 57:308 Je '42 400w

"The book is thorough and complete, dealing effectively with the main features of Australian economic life and with its special problems, like immigration. The fullness of the treatment makes it of special value to experts and students; and the general reader is assisted by relegation to appendices of detail or technical problems. The author has made a valuable contribution to Imperial economic history."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p527 O 25 '41 800w

FITZSIMMONS, CORTLAND. Death rings a bell. 315p $2 Lippincott 42-16057

Detective story.

"Mr. Fitzsimmons dumps a generous quality of mystery ingredients into his brew, carries on with some amusing land-'o-Goshen dialogue and winds up with a melodramatic climax and quick turnover for the customers. As ever, he doesn't bother so much about art. Example of prose style: 'Above it was a floor set aside for bazaars, socials, etc.' Want to make something of it?" Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 Je 28 '42 230w

"It's an exciting story and well told." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p24 Je 28 '42 200w

"People and setting O.K., plot develops satisfactorily but ending seems tottery. Gory."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:26 J1 4 '42 20w

FIVE young American poets; second series, 1941. 218p $2.50 New directions

811.08 American poetry—Collections

(40-29688)

An annual anthology which publishes works by poets under thirty who have not previously published a book of verse. This volume contains: Cain and Abel, by Paul Goodman; The white box, by Jeanne McGahey; Speech after darkness, by Clark Mills; The simple scale, by David Schubert; Noun, by Karl Shapiro.

"When the success of 'Five Young American Poets' in 1940 encouraged the publisher to announce an annual competition for poets under thirty, even well wishers tended to doubt America's ability to furnish young poets of any distinction at so fast a rate. There might be many young writers with a good poem or two to show, but New Directions was proposing to give each of the five poets forty pages—a book in itself! It is reassuring, then, to discover in the second volume no indication that the publisher was hard-pressed to unearth deserving contributors." Kerker Quinn

+ Books p20 Mr 8 '42 1000w

"One reads with interest, if not much pleasure, the second volume of 'Five Young American Poets.' There seems little in the collection to go back to after the first reading, though a certain amount of skilled work is included." Pearl Strachan

Christian Science Monitor p10 F 21 '42 500w

"It is a good idea to publish these collections of poems. The reader can make no absolute judgment on the basis of a few poems, but he will know the writer again when he sees him in his own book jacket." P. M. Jack

N Y Times p14 F 8 '42 1150w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

New Yorker 18:61 Mr 7 '42 500w

Reviewed by Stanley Kunitz

Poetry 60:215 Jl '42 1250w

Reviewed by Alfred Kreyborg

Sat R of Lit 25:9 Ap 25 '42 500w

FLANNER, HILDEGARDE (MRS FREDERICK MONHOFF). If there is time. 29p pa 50c; $1 New Directions

811

42-18032

Poems of the American scene. Many of them hint that "the warm security of pride is lost," but others promise a new victory. Some of the poems have been previously published in magazines.

"The jacket of this volume calls Miss Flanner 'an accomplished poet,' and the epithet is a very just one. There is not a poem in the volume which is careless or slovenly in presentation. All is skillfully ordered, happily phrased and deftly handled. Indeed, the only adverse criticism which can be brought against Miss Flanner is that there are times when the reader feels the poems are too 'worked,' that the language, polished, chiseled and carved so painstakingly, the images, fitted so dexterously into their frame of metre, smother the somewhat slender theme on which the poet is writing." Elizabeth Drew

+ Books p22 O 25 '42 400w

"Skillfully constructed verse, finished in style." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 O 3 '42 90w

"An excellent selection. It is a small verse that one takes great pleasure in. Fastidious rather than formidable, it carries its weight in quiet, beautifully articulated statements of private experience. What is important for her, she writes finally, is the flesh of life, the earthiness of America. The brain may be aimless, the soul 'an exile without rest,' the heart untrustworthy; but the flesh is constant. This comes from a poet who is probably more intellectual than emotional, probably more urban than regional, probably more imitative than original. Yet it sounds right and honest." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 23 '42 400w

"The weakness in the poems (I hardly know what to call them; they are not weak exactly, but they hardly come into being) I would locate at the point of necessity. It is the absence of it that makes these poems droop, drape, and lie about supine and ineffectual. They do nothing. It is a special problem, for the poems themselves are not poor or inferior. The lines are made by a fair enough craftsman who is not unthinking or without feeling. But the cocoon is over them." Harvey Breit

+ Poetry 60:341 S '42 550w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer

Yale R n s 32:370 winter '43 70w

FLANNER, JANET. See Alajalov, C. Conversation pieces

FLANNERY, HARRY WILLIAM. Assignment to Berlin. 440p $3 Knopf

940.5343 World war, 1939—Germany

(W) 42-15307

In October 1940 the author was assigned by the Columbia broadcasting company to take William Shirer's place at their Berlin station. He was a semi-isolationist when he went, but after almost a year in Nazi Germany he returned in September 1941, determined to do his part to stamp out nazism. His account of his experiences is colored by his anxiety about his wife and young daughter in America. There is a chapter on his meeting with P. G. Wodehouse.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: ALA (1) Books (11) B & T (1) N Y Times (10) PW (3) RB (1) W (1)

Booklist 38:423 Jl 1 '42

"Assignment to Berlin" has both the virtues and the defects of the freshness with which Flannery approached his first foreign experience and of the short time it lasted. Among the defects are a good many errors which more meticulous editing could have eliminated." W. R. Deuel

+ Books p18 Jl 12 '42 750w

"After the seemingly endless series of books by foreign correspondents . . . I hesitate to recommend a volume like 'Assignment to Berlin.' And yet I honestly enjoyed the book more than any other of the sort. For one thing, Mr. Flannery is a modest man. This at once distinguishes him above the Gunthers, Shirers, et al. He tells us how his wife back home in the Middle West would listen to his broadcasts for Columbia and then wire him suggestions as to how he could improve his style and delivery—and he admits that her suggestions helped. That alone should be enough to give you an idea of how greatly this book differs from its kind. . . . There is not much in 'Assignment to Berlin' which is startling. The whole book is simply and straightforwardly written, and holds one's interest. It exudes a certain simple and direct honesty which one could wish were more frequent. Perhaps the most amusing section is that devoted to P. G. Wodehouse." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 36:260 Jl 3 '42 700w

"Well written, with a light touch and refreshing sense of humor. . . . Makes no new points but recommended for libraries circulating experiences of war correspondents." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 67:531 Je 1 '42 70w

"One may agree that if the correspondent has an alert mind and a terse biting style he should be encouraged to write a book. Mr. Shirer, for instance. But not Mr. Flannery. Mr. Flannery was good for a Town Hall luncheon or one article in some genteel magazine, the Atlantic Monthly, say. But there he is, an honest, rather sentimental man, 'well-informed,' diligent, soft-spoken, and slightly confused, clapped down by Mr. Knopf beside the ejaculator of exact and brilliant paragraphs." Ralph Bates

Nation 155:78 Jl 25 '42 800w

Reviewed by Nigel Dennis

New Repub 107:27 Jl 6 '42 200w

"Mr. Flannery is an excellent mass-observer. He travelled about Europe more than any of his fellow-correspondents; visited Paris, the Rhineland, the Balkans, Greece, Crete in the trail of the German armies; took the train, whenever possible, out of Berlin for a day. His scoops included bringing Mr. Wodehouse to the microphone." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 24:242 O 10 '42 1200w

"Relatively few scribes have enjoyed a greater thrill than came to Mr. Flannery, who awoke to find himself catapulted suddenly out of a Middle Western radio station into a warring Europe he had never previously seen, and charged with the task of telling a vast radio audience as much of what was going on in Berlin as circumstances and censorship would permit. He made the most of his good fortune. The Old World was so novel to him that, when he sat down with his memories, every detail of his experience therein was clear and cherished. As a result his writing is characterized by freshness and quite disarming candor." G. N. Shuster

FLANNERY, H. W.—Continued

+ N Y Times p3 Je 28 '42 1250w

"It is useless to pretend that 'Assignment to Berlin,' a sequel to 'Berlin Diary,' measures up to Mr. Shirer's book in any important particular. It is shrewd, observant, and offers a limited amount of real news, but it lacks Shirer's warmth of personality, his scope, his power of generalization and characterization. It is a sound, uninspired job by a capable, honest, newsman, no more and no less." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 18:53 Jl 4 '42 550w

Pratt p23 D '42

"Perhaps the most illuminating feature of this book is the picture it presents, of the feelings experienced by an average American suddenly thrown from a peaceful existence in the American Mid-West into the maelstrom of Nazi Germany. Many of Mr. Flannery's colleagues may find their own initial experiences in Berlin duplicated in this story; to them it brings memories of a time which now seems far away and almost unreal. To Americans, the book furnishes not only a reportorially excellent sequel to Shirer's 'Berlin Diary,' but something which they may heretofore have unconsciously missed—an account of how they, the readers, might have felt had they suddenly been given an 'Assignment to Berlin.'" P. R. Knauth

+ Sat R of Lit 25:12 Je 27 '42 550w

"A worthy companion to 'Berlin Diary' and its indispensable sequel."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:2 Jl '42 480w

Times [London] Lit Sup p458 S 19 '42 750w

FLEISHER, WILFRID. Our enemy Japan. 236p $2 Doubleday

327.73 Japan—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.
—Foreign relations—Japan. World war.
1939—Japan (W) 42-36153

"This is the story of the relations of the United States and Japan from the time Commodore Perry opened up the island empire to foreign intercourse down to the Japanese attack on Hawaii—the background of our war with Japan. . . It is also the story of our final diplomatic negotiations with Japan." Foreword

Reviewed by P. H. Clyde

Am Pol Sci R 36:974 O '42 450w

Booklist 38:306 Ap 15 '42

Reviewed by Rodney Gilbert

Books p5 Ap 12 '42 1600w

Reviewed by Francis McCullagh

Cath World 155:249 My '42 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:785 Jl '42 20w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:895 O 15 '42 20w

Reviewed by M. S. Stewart

Nation 154:548 My 9 '42 80w

"There are a few slips in the book. . . In the main, however, it is a sober, factual, informative book about the Army and Navy, the institutions and psychology of our enemy in the Pacific." W. H. Chamberlin

+ — N Y Times p8 Ap 5 '42 1100w

"Unfortunately, the book includes—with scarcely a word altered—entire sections from Fleisher's earlier 'Volcanic Isle.' This reviewer found the latter extremely interesting when it appeared last year, but the task of looking for a few fresh plums in what essentially is an old pudding is not happy. The publishers would have done much better had they reissued the admirable 'Volcanic Isle,' with the addition of the little fresh material of 'Our Enemy Japan.'" Mark Gayn

Sat R of Lit 25:18 Ap 18 '42 150w

Reviewed by E. O. Hauser

Survey G 31:255 My '42 200w

Reviewed by H. S. Quigley

Yale R n s 31:858 summer '42 210w

FLEISHER, WILFRID. Volcanic isle. 345p $3 Doubleday [10s 6d Cape, J.]

952 Japan—Politics and government. Japan
—Foreign relations (W) 41-51936

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Bookmark 3:9 Ja '42

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 22 '42 140w

"Since Mr. Fleisher hews rather sharply to the reportorial line, concentrating on the event rather than on the complex of forces that made the event possible, he fails to clarify either Japan's internal predicament or the international balance of power tug-of-war in the Far East. In his personal experience material there is much that is interesting, and if the milieu which he describes is, for the most part, the restricted one of the foreign office and ambassadorial drawing room, he gives nonetheless many revealing glimpses of life in Japan."

+ — Survey G 31:91 F '42 210w

"A note states that the publishers considered the advisability of modifying or revising the text of this book in view of the rapid change of events in the Far East during the time that it was in the press. They decided to issue it in its original form. This decision was certainly the right one, for the value of the book does not lie mainly in its disclosure of the war strategy of Japan though even in this Mr. Fleisher shows more perspicacity than most of his fellow writers. The chief interest of the book comes from the details of the inner workings of the Japanese governmental machine, which Mr. Fleisher knew intimately, and exposes here."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p206 Ap 25 '42 660w

Wis Lib Bul 38:13 Ja '42

FLEMING, DANIEL JOHNSON, ed. World at one in prayer. (Ecumenical ser. v4) 204p il $2 Harper

264.1 Prayers

42-13947

"This volume, the fourth in Harper's 'ecumenical series,' is a compilation of the prayers of Christians of many peoples and lands. To be exact, there are two hundred and fifteen prayers representative of fifty peoples. Here are long prayers and short prayers, prayers in prose and prayers in poetry—prayers of great variety in form." (Crozer Q) Indexes.

Booklist 39:43 O 15 '42

Christian Century 59:634 My 13 '42 70w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie

Churchman 156:18 O 1 '42 150w

"This book is a Christian document of wide significance, true devotion, and rich beauty." W. R. McNutt

+ Crozer Q 19:257 Jl '42 100w

Reviewed by John Knox

J Religion 22:333 Jl '42 50w

FLEMING, PETER. A story to tell, and other tales. 223p $2 Scribner [7s 6d Cape, J.]

(W) 42-10018

Collection of short, dramatic stories, written for the most part between 1930 and 1933. The backgrounds are varied, ranging from an unpleasant holiday on one of the islands in the Hebrides, to an episode of an oil salesman captured by Chinese bandits.

"Mr. Fleming has a deft and smiling style. he will draw you a character in a flash, but what I really like about him is his capacity for action and the unexpected. If you want to see what I mean, read his 'A Story to Tell,' 'Under the Bandstand,' and 'Ace High.'" Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic Je '42 200w

"These are as suave, deft and entertaining examples of story-telling as one will find and, occasionally, when Mr. Fleming lets his attention wander a moment from the plot and center on character, they have haunting power." Page Cooper

+ Books p4 Ap 12 '42 550w

"Captain Fleming's short stories are all well considered and admirably written and range over a large variety of settings. In some of the items the clue becomes evident too early and in one or two the resort to tragedy provides a too easy denouement. But a few of them may rank as among the best of their particular kind." J. D. Beresford

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 F 27 '42 60w
New Repub 106:550 Ap 20 '42 30w

Reviewed by Henry Sturgess
New Statesman & Nation 23:374 Je 6 '42 140w

"Peter Fleming is at home everywhere. His plots, however, are not concerned with the changing backgrounds. They follow their own strict and violent pattern. They all have, as the author remarks so disarmingly in his foreword, the 'coup de theatre' towards the end. They are written to keep the reader in suspense, to surprise, to startle and shock him. The usual modern short story confines itself mostly to atmospheric sketches and runs the risk of being a bit anemic. Fleming never runs that risk. On the contrary: he has too much blood to shed." R. R. Plant

Sat R of Lit 25:13 Je 13 '42 330w

"Either way of going about the writing of a short story needs more art and less dash than Mr. Fleming has brought to these attempts, which appear to have been written some years ago mostly. They have too much bounce, and the 'surprises' are too easy to see—if surprise is the curious aim? Also, their repetitive stress on abnormalities of human vanity dulls their cumulative effect. The best of them is Under the Bandstand, which is touching, vivid and odd in an unforced manner—until, at the very last minute, Mr. Fleming the theorist cannot leave truth alone, and has to put in an unnecessary flick, to tidy things up. A great pity, I thought." Kate O'Brien

Spec 168:240 Mr 6 '42 200w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 19 '42 330w

"The characteristic thing about most of these stories is the author's preoccupation with the coup de theatre, the dramatic or the would-be dramatic twist. For this he puts forward a modest but spirited defence. The short story that is a study of character or atmosphere is all very well . . . but the common falling of such short stories is that they do not in fact tell a story. For Mr. Fleming a plot, however old-fashioned the taste for a plot may seem, is desirable; he likes working up to a climax, even to an unexpected climax. . . Most of the thirteen are very neatly done."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p77 F 14 '42 480w

FLEMING, ROBERT. Night freight murders. 246p $2 Smith & Durrell

42-12028

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p12 Mr 29 '42 120w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hull

Boston Globe p17 Je 10 '42 60w

"In telling the story the author has unfortunately employed the hop-skip-and-jump method, and has thus succeeded in confusing the reader in a manner that is most annoying. There is material enough here for a sensational tale of graft, murder and espionage, but it could have been presented far more effectively had there been fewer digressions." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p22 Ap 5 '42 160w

"Sharp, lively tale put together with great cleverness."

+ New Yorker 18:88 Ap 11 '42 40w

"Entertaining."

Sat R of Lit 25:20 Ap 4 '42 40w

FLETCHER, MRS INGLIS (CLARK). Men of Albemarle. 566p $2.75 Bobbs

(W) 42-22996

Historical novel based on the early years (1710-1712) in North Carolina. The mysterious Lady Mary Tower, with her worn Stuart tartan; her ward, the lovely Marita; and Roger Mainwaring, lord of the estate called Queen's Gift, are among the chief characters.

Booklist 39:184 Ja 1 '43

"This long, able novel is, in fact, an historically documented story of the importance of that heritage to the growth and development of those principles of justice and freedom that have come to be the soul of America. The colonists of the nation in its awkward youth fumbled around impetuously for them, but once they lit upon them, they became their most precious discovery and our most precious heritage. Thus, the significance of this novel is today more valid than the message of most contemporary fiction, and it is an eloquent demonstration that a history worth constructing at the price of sweat and blood is worth defending at the same price." A. B. Tourtelot

+ Books p6 O 18 '42 850w

"An unusually fascinating study of morals and manners in early Colonial America. Its author has woven a rich tapestry of historical material with the same expertness which made 'Raleigh's Eden' notable among novels two years ago. This book, however, lacks the vivacity and speed of its predecessor. Not until the reader reaches the last third of the tale does the story accelerate."

+ — Boston Globe p21 N 18 '42 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '42

Reviewed by E. P. Potter

Library J 67:909 O 15 '42 50w

"A novel sound in craftsmanship and majestic in size. . . Inglis Fletcher has called upon a good deal of antiquarian lore to give us a full and colorful picture of the daily lives of her Albemarle planters, their manners and morals, their business methods, their dress and amusements, and their ways of dealing with witchcraft." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p14 O 18 '42 850w

"Mrs. Fletcher draws what appears to be an authentic picture of how the men who were on the spot felt about all these disturbances. The love-story part of the novel is rather overcolored and less engrossing."

+ — New Yorker 18:82 O 31 '42 120w

"There is a confusion of plot which is rather bewildering and which Mrs. Fletcher's incapacity for distinctive character portrayal does not ameliorate. As a novel the book is an unorganized medley of romantic dramas, no one of which is warmed into life." C. D. Abbott

Sat R of Lit 25:36 O 24 '42 380w

FLETCHER, RUSSELL HOLMES, ed. See Who's who in California

FLEURY, BARBARA FRANCES. Faith the root. 251p $2.50 Dutton

(W) 42-10423

This novel is a character study of a French Catholic priest serving in a small parish in Michigan.

Booklist 38:384 Je 15 '42

"Miss Fleury knows what she wants to write and she knows how to write it. She has not called her book 'Father Jerry.' She has called it 'Faith the Root.' That is what she is writing about. . . This is the story of a faith, strong, tough and enduring. . . Miss Fleury has taken us inside a soul, and with delicacy and subtle understanding made us the richer for what we found there." Clare Godfrey

+ Books p22 My 10 '42 650w

"Though somewhat lacking in sustained interest, the story builds up a rich tradition of small town life, interesting because this kind of picture is all too rare in American literature. It is surprising, too, to find a good characterization of a priest in fiction."

+ Cath World 155:380 Je '42 230w

"Father Jerry is the friend of everybody, Catholic or Protestant. His simplicity and devotion make his story a parable for preachers. Miss Fleury's clear writing carries conviction."

+ Christian Century 59:698 My 27 '42 40w

FLEURY, B. F.—Continued

"It is a wholesome and interesting fiction and the characters are well-drawn throughout. A novel, at once absorbing and pitched on a high plane, as to artistic writing and ideal living." T. F. O.

+ Churchman 156:31 Je 1 '42 60w

"It is a difficult task to review a book of which only pleasant things may be said. It's a little undramatic, there is no struggle. But this is an interesting book even if everything is as it should be!" Johanna Doniat

+ Commonweal 36:208 Je 19 '42 490w

"Well-sustained interest and simple writing make it enjoyable reading." G. E. Cartmell

+ Library J 67:319 Ap 1 '42 70w

New Repub 106:902 Je 29 '42 50w

"Miss Fleury paints a moving, sympathetic and charming picture of the people of the village and of the personality of Father Germain, in its spiritual qualities and the many small characteristics and foibles that give reality and save it from sentimentality. 'Faith the Root' carries an unspoken message—that those whose diverse races and creeds have known a history of bitter conflict may come to live as neighbors in mutual respect and unity." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p7 My 17 '42 750w

New Yorker 18:74 My 16 '42 30w

Wis Lib Bul 38:97 Je '42

FLEXNER, HORTENSE (MRS WYNCE KING). Wishing window; drawings by Wynce King. [63p] $1.50 Stokes

(W) 42-21519

Story of two little French children who in times of peace often played a game of pretend outside the village bakery, with its fascinating buns and cakes displayed in the window. When the Germans came to their village the children left with their parents, but in a strange way part of their game of pretend came true.

Booklist 39:74 N 1 '42

"The pictures are charming, the effect sympathetic. I hope the story is widely read aloud to little folks between five and ten, the age that loves Hansel and Gretel." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 O 25 '42 370w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn BK 18:421 N '42 90w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:885 O 15 '42 30w

Reviewed by M. B. Snow

Library J 67:910 O 15 '42 80w

"Miss Flexner has told with a lovely simplicity and a complete absence of melodrama a childlike little story of two children in a French village in wartime. Without harrowing their feelings and in terms which they can understand, it will give to boys and girls in this country some comprehension of what is happening to other less fortunate children today." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p9 N 15 '42 500w

"An affecting story of French children under invasion in this war, realistic enough, as Dorothy Canfield Fisher says in her foreword, to 'set the door . . . to reality at least ajar,' but so tenderly told that it ought not to frighten most six- to ten-year-old readers. It is a book many parents will welcome." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 18:110 D 12 '42 50w

Sat R of Lit 25:26 N 14 '42 50w

School & Society 56:224 S 12 '42 10w

FLEXNER, MRS MARION K. (WEIL). Dixie dishes; il. by C. Robert Perrin. 161p $2 Hale 641.5 Cookery 41-25846

"Another special cookbook for the housewife looking for unusual dishes. The author states that for some years she has been collecting traditional Southern recipes, testing them in her own kitchen and reducing the often sketchy directions to workable form. This book is the result." Wis Lib Bul

Pratt p16 O '42

Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 18 '42 130w

Wis Lib Bul 38:27 F '42

FLINT, MARGARET (MRS LESTER WARNER JACOBS). Enduring riches. 281p $2.50 Dodd 42-22578

The story of a fine woman's love for her Maine home, for her brutal but charming husband, and their two children. The steadfastness and courage of Judith as a girl, wife, and mother, pervade the book.

"It is a novel to be read for the virtues which are those of its heroine—character and steadfastness." Lisle Bell

+ Books p10 N 1 '42 330w

"To make up for the scarcity of plot there is the rich detail of country life, the smell of hay lofts, fields in the sun and the quiet of a farmhouse kitchen on a Winter night. Good, plain fare for a leisurely evening."

+ Boston Globe p19 O 29 '42 140w

Reviewed by L. M. Field

N Y Times p33 O 4 '42 500w

FLINT, WINSTON ALLEN. Progressive movement in Vermont; introd. [by] Paul F. Douglass. 110p $2; pa $1.50 Am. council on public affairs

974.3 Vermont—Politics and government

41-20684

"This work traces the influence of the progressive movement on Vermont, showing how that conservative state reacted to the social forces of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. It effectively correlates the Vermont movement with the national, and Professor Flint says in his preface 'No attempt has been made to include all the progressive tendencies that developed in Vermont, but rather only those which seemed to correspond to the nation-wide movement.' . . . The subjects discussed are: the historical and national settings, the caucus reform, the supervision of public service corporations, the rise of the Progressive party, the struggle for a direct primary, labor regulation, factory inspection, the Workmen's Compensation Act, and the reorganization of the state government." Ann Am Acad

"As a study in political dynamics, too little attention is given to the rôle of organized business and of agricultural interests. The part played by labor groups, however, is considered adequately. Besides being well documented, the work is improved by a sizeable bibliography classified according to primary and secondary sources." H. A. Bone

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1196 D '41 280w

Reviewed by T. V. Kaljarvi

Ann Am Acad 219:194 Ja '42 260w

"The book is packed with facts and a trifle dry in spots. More orientation with the general movement would perhaps increase its value as would more detail on the State itself as to how and where the progressive ideas filtered in. It is, nevertheless, a valuable addition to the history of Vermont and of the progressive era. It is certainly good enough to have an index, unfortunately omitted." H. U. Faulkner

+ New Eng Q 15:175 Mr '42 380w

FLOHERTY, JOHN JOSEPH. Courage and the glory [il. with drawings by the author and photographs]. 190p $2.25 Lippincott 940.5373 World war, 1939—U.S.

(W) 42-21776

Thrilling stories of the bravery of American officers and men during the present World war. It includes the stories of Bulkeley's raid in Subic Bay; the one-man army on Bataan (Wermuth); Captain Colin P. Kelly; Billy de Rosa of the Pollux; Sergeant Olsen, army photographer; Sergeant Russell Brown and his B-17; Captain Mathieson of the Lahiana; General MacArthur. For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 39:74 N 1 '42

"Even readers who are disposed to be critical and captious as a rule, can turn these pages with a considerable amount of justifiable pride."

+ Cath World 156:250 N '42 70w

"Men like MacArthur, Bulkeley, Colin Kelly and many others whose identities are concealed as a wartime expediency—men of sublime courage who have brought glory to our flag, are vitally portrayed in this fine piece of reporting, illustrated with drawings by their author, and photographs." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 19 '42 160w

"It is inspiring to read of these noble lives and see these splendid photographs. Others than boys will hold this book in pride and thanksgiving." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:435 N '42 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:895 O 15 '42 10w

Reviewed by Emily Hutson

Library J 67:957 N 1 '42 70w

"Each chapter has a real story to tell, ending with General MacArthur's escape to Australia. This is serious war journalism of a brand especially satisfying to older boys." L. S.

+ N Y Times p34 N 15 '42 140w

School & Society 56:280 S 26 '42 70w

FLOHERTY, JOHN JOSEPH. Sentries of the sea [phot. and drawings by the author]. 220p $2 Lippincott

627.9 Lighthouses. Lightships (W) 42-15756

Informal account of the lighthouses and the lighthouse service of the United States.

Booklist 38:430 J1 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 Je 7 '42 250w

"The author spent months among these men scattered over the length of our coasts and carrying on the work so indispensable to the nation's welfare, and he writes about them and their activities with understanding and warm appreciation of their great service. His fine photographs and pen-and-ink drawings enliven the account and convey further details of interest." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 13 '42 110w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:261 J1 '42 90w

"Readable style, pleasant open page, and many photographs by author make this useful for boys and men of all ages." M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 67:633 J1 '42 50w

"Mr. Floherty gives a deeper understanding of the service as a whole by his account of its origins, its development and its organization today, as well as some of the technical aspects and problems. And, as we have a right to expect from this author-photographer, there are many excellent pictures to supplement his information." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 23 '42 320w

Wis Lib Bul 38:116 J1 '42

FLOHERTY, JOHN JOSEPH. Youth and the sea; our merchant marine calls American youth [il. with phot. and drawings by the author]. 238p $2 Lippincott

387.5 Merchant marine—U.S. (W) 42-1444

Following a short record of American commercial sea history, the author gives an account of the training received by cadets in the maritime service schools of the American merchant marine, outlining all branches of the work studied. Mr. Floherty spent some time investigating cadet training, even living with the training crews.

Booklist 38:253 Mr 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 Je 7 '42 130w

"A book fascinating to boys of all ages. . . Especially timely now." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:113 Mr '42 60w

"Recent events may have dated some of the material, but like Aviation From Shop to Sky and other books by the same author, it fills a need." Dorothea Dawson

Library J 67:132 F 1 '42 120w

FLORES, ANGEL, and POORE, DUDLEY. eds. Fiesta in November; and stories from Latin America; with an introd. by Katherine Anne Porter. 608p $3 Houghton

Spanish American fiction—Translations into English (W) 42-18723

Eighteen novelettes and short stories from eleven Latin American countries translated by various people. Contents: Fiesta in November, by Eduardo Mallea; Don Goyo, by D. A. Malta; Gaviota, by José Díez-Canseco; Country girl, by Luis Tablanca; The sloop 'Isabel' arrived this evening. . . by Guillermo Meneses; The futile life of Pito Pérez, by J. R. Romero; Dangerous men, by H. I. Eandi; Sea of the dead, by Jorge Amado; The fugitives, by Horacio Quiroga; They came to a river, by Rogelio Sinán; The white wind, by J. C. Dávalos; Rain, by A. U. Pietri; The good knight Carmelo, by Abraham Valdelomar; La Misqui-Simi, by Adolfo Costa du Rels; Vagabonds' Christmas Eve, by Salvador Reyes; Escape, by R. M. Labarca; Pilgrimage, by Armando Arriaza; Brother Ass, by Eduardo Barrios.

Booklist 39:11 S '42

"Let no lover of good story-telling overlook 'Fiesta in November' or regard it as a mere duty venture in neighborliness to explore its abundant treasure. . . Though the selections are as various in quality as in size and theme, the reader will not find a completely dull or a cheap and trivial page among them. . . One lack in the editing of this excellently selected and translated anthology [is that] one looks in vain, whether in the introduction by Katherine Anne Porter or elsewhere, for some bits of information concerning the authors of these tales." B. D. Wolfe

+ — Books p6 Ag 2 '42 1400w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 155:196 S 5 '42 950w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker

N Y Times p16 Ja 10 '43 480w

"The editing is of a somewhat unobtrusive nature; no dates of composition are given, nor is any information provided about the authors. The stories, however, are there for us all to read, a few of them imitative of bad French psychological novels but most of them violent, brooding, non-intellectual tales of simple people—Indians, fishermen, and pioneers. Here, one feels, are the beginnings of what may someday come to be a great literature." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 18:54 Ag 1 '42 180w

Pratt p12 D '42

"Let us say at once . . . that the writing is good, that these are, in varying degrees, talented artists. . . Miss Porter's introduction is of great interest, perhaps because she has herself considerable subtlety and imagination. Although her evaluation of the novelette 'Brother Ass' seems to us somewhat unjustified, the whole of her remarks is nonetheless altogether stimulating, and should be read with care." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 Ag 15 '42 800w

Wis Lib Bul 38:138 O '42

FLORY, WILLIAM EVANS SHERLOCK. Prisoners of war. 179p $3.25; pa $2.75 Am. council on public affairs

341.3 Prisoners of war. International law and relations 42-11417

"A study in the development of international law." (Subtitle) "A capable review, especially with reference to British and American policy and practice." (Social Studies)

"Though perhaps inevitably bound to disagree with some of Mr. Flory's conclusions as to existing rules, particularly customary law, the expert will nevertheless find his monograph a handy reference for information and material on many matters of detail not usually covered in the general treatises on international law. The layman, too, should find the book of both interest and value in times like the present when treatment of prisoners of war is frequently a matter of discussion—sometimes very uninformed discussion—in the press, on the air, and elsewhere." Valentine Jobst III

FLORY, W. E. S.—Continued

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:591 Je '42 380w

"A thoroughly scholarly study, both historical and legal, with the utmost fullness of documentation and an extensive bibliography. It not only evidences profound research in the field but will be an invaluable guide for those who may wish to pursue further researches."

+ Christian Century 59:466 Ap 8 '42 40w

Reviewed by M. B. Travis, Jr.

Pol Sci Q 57:633 D '42 470w

Social Studies 33:240 My '42 10w

FLOYD, OLIVER REED, and KINNEY, LUCIEN BLAIR. Using dollars and sense; consumer economics. 314p il $1.40 Newson

339.4 Consumption (economics). Cost and standard of living 42-9922

Textbook on consumer economics for junior and senior high schools. Study questions at ends of chapters. Glossary. Index.

School & Society 55:251 F 28 '42 30w

"This book is suitable for sophomores but it can be easily and profitably used by the other high school grades by expanding or condensing the material depending upon the needs of the particular classes. Using Dollars and Sense will be found useful for its purpose and does represent a contribution to the ultimate solution of the problem of distribution." F. J. Carbon

+ Social Studies 33:238 My '42 320w

FOCILLON, HENRI. Life of forms in art; tr. by Charles Beecher Hogan and George Kubler. 76p il $2.50 Yale univ. press

701 Art

A42-3779

"M. Focillon formerly of the Collège de France and now professor of the history of art at Yale, is a deeply original thinker and an erudite scholar. . . . The term 'form' has a rich but illusive meaning scarcely to be compassed by any simple definition. It is more than shape, pattern or structure. Art has both content and form. A work of art considered as an image may represent an object; as a sign it may signify an object or an idea; its 'form' signifies only itself. Therefore one can never translate a picture or statue into words and 'tell what it means.' Art illustrates man, history, the world; but it also creates unique values. Its creativity inheres in 'form,' to which it is therefore appropriate to ascribe the qualities of life. The discussion of this theme involves the consideration of styles and transitions from one style to another." (Christian Century) Vie des Formes was originally published in Paris in 1934. It has been translated into Czech and Danish, tho the Danish version is still in manuscript.

"The author's rich resources find expression in many wise observations touching specific works and problems of art, all of which, though integrally related to the main theme, have independent value even for those readers who find difficulty in following a somewhat involved argument couched in a specialized vocabulary. The work is already a classic."

+ Christian Century 59:1006 Ag 19 '42 230w

"Professor Focillon here reveals himself not alone as a gifted preceptor engaged in defining and analyzing prime ingredients of art but preponderantly as a metaphysician searching the inward substance of creative effort and the distinguishing quality of true perceptive vision." E. A. Jewell

+ Yale R n s 32:165 autumn '42 850w

FOLEY, MARTHA (MRS WHIT BURNETT), ed. Best American short stories, 1942 and the Yearbook of the American short story. 428p $2.75 Houghton

Short stories—Collections

This collection of short stories formerly edited by Edward J. O'Brien, is now edited by Martha Foley. Contents: Biceps, by Nelson Algren; The valet of the Splendide, by Ludwig Bemelmans; 5135 Kensington: August, 1903, by Sally Benson; Nothing ever breaks except the heart, by Kay Boyle; For each of us, by J. Y. Bryan; The portable phonograph, by W. V. Clark; That frozen hour, by D. C. DeJong; Prairies, by Boyce Eakin; Tell him I waited, by Morton Fineman; A loaf of bread, by Robert Gibbons; Those are as brothers, by Nancy Hale; That Greek dog, by MacKinlay Kantor; Sam Small's better half, by Eric Knight; Death of a country doctor, by Mary Medearis; Caput Mortuum, by Edita Morris; My friend Flicka, by Mary O'Hara; The green village, by M. R. Peattie; The hummingbird that lived through winter, by William Saroyan; Sacrifice of Isaac, by Michael Seide; The real Viennese Schmalz, by B. W. Schulberg; Search through the streets of the city, by Irwin Shaw; In the twilight, by Wallace Stegner; How Edith McGillcuddy met R. L. Stevenson, by John Steinbeck; The storm, by Jesse Stuart; The fancy woman, by Peter Taylor; My pigeon pair, by Dorothy Thomas; You could look it up, by James Thurber; The bees, by Joan Vatek; At Sallygap, by Mary Lavin; Hunger, by Marjorie Worthington. Biographical notices.

Booklist 39:33 O 1 '42

"Miss Foley has done a capable job in this latest collection of short stories and has undoubtedly selected a broad cross-section of present-day fiction. Yet, somehow, as a product of 1942 America, it is unsatisfying. Many of the best stories seem somewhat dated and old. Have we no fiction in the spirit of our time?" Barbara Woolcott

Books p10 S 27 '42 450w

Nation 155:457 O 31 '42 180w

"The light stories are the usual coy snapshots, silly and maldenish, and very gloomy around the edges. Thurber is represented with a baseball story so overburdened with 'the light touch' it can barely drag itself on to the end. And Sally Benson, and Bemelmans, and Budd Schulberg, and Saroyan—they all have that light touch, light because they are merely out grazing and it is not good form, or good taste, or good commercial policy to betray a hunger for reality. But among the subjective stories, the stories dealing with emotional relationships, you find some genuine expression. Clearly the best story in the book is 'Prairies,' by Boyce Eakin. For once you have a complete story, not a hangnail sketch, complete because the writer does not write for the eye or the ear alone, but also makes an effort to understand the material he is presenting." Isaac Rosenfeld

New Repub 107:420 O 5 '42 850w

"Miss Foley's first year's gleanings will reward all those who believe in the short-story's future." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p6 S 27 '42 750w

"An unusually interesting collection. Some of the stories are tragic, some are funny, and some are just neat and competent. A few don't amount to much, but none are trash."

+ New Yorker 18:79 S 26 '42 40w
Wis Lib Bul 38:187 D '42

FOLK, GEORGE ERNEST. Patents and industrial progress; a summary, analysis, and evaluation of the record on patents of the Temporary national economic committee; with a foreword by Robert L. Lund. 393p $3 Harper

603 Patents. U.S. Temporary national economic committee 42-19953

"This . . . defense of the present patent system is written by the Special Patent Advisor of the National Association of Manufacturers and is sanctioned in a foreword by the Chairman of the Committee on Patents and Research of that organization. Designed to provide arguments to refute the efforts of the Department of Justice to revise the patent laws, it presents an ex parte summary, analysis, and evaluation of the record on patents of the TNEC." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

Reviewed by Fritz Machlup
— Am Econ R 32:907 D '42 490w

Reviewed by B. J. Stern
— Ann Am Acad 224:226 N '42 400w

Reviewed by W. R. Woodward
Harvard Law R 56:672 Ja '43 2300w

FOLLETT, MRS HELEN (THOMAS). Ocean outposts; II, with maps by Armstrong Sperry and photographs. 133p $2 Scribner

919 Islands of the Pacific. Oceania (W) 42-13778

The author of Stars to Steer By (Book Review Digest, 1934) an account of a leisurely, unconventional tour of Polynesia, describes these Pacific islands more fully in a book suitable for both older children and adults. It is a combination of fact and legend about such islands as the Hawaiian Islands, the stepping-stone islands to the Philippines, the Philippines, the islands on the route from Hawaii to Australia and New Zealand, and the Samoans. Maps on end papers. Photographs.

Booklist 38:372 Je 1 '42

"The book comes pat to the moment, but whatever the moment brings will not put the book out of date."

+ Books p20 My 10 '42 250w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 25 '42 120w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 18:176 My '42 90w

"Most timely and helpful book on islands of the Pacific. Style is easy and colloquial, and photographic illustrations are clear and vigorous." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 67:534 Je 1 '42 60w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie
Library J 67:889 O 15 '42 30w

"Helen Follett has provided an eminently satisfactory book. . . Her style, direct, lively, and touched with humor, is well suited to the purpose of the book. Young readers feel at once that the author respects their intelligence and is sharing her knowledge with them in frank and dignified fashion. . . Armstrong Sperry, who has spent many months in the islands of the Pacific, has made maps so clear and striking that they have a dramatic quality, and the book contains a magnificent collection of photographs illustrating the natural beauties, industries and products and the life of the people of the Pacific Islands. 'Ocean Outposts' will be an indispensable volume for schools and libraries and one that readers young and old who follow world events will be glad to have at hand." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 My 3 '42 550w

Wis Lib Bul 38:166 N '42

FOLLETT, MARY PARKER. Dynamic administration; the collected papers; ed. by Henry C. Metcalf and L. Urwick. 320p $3.50 Harper [10s 6d Management journals, ltd, Yew Tree farm, Sheffield English, Romsey, Hampshire, England]

658.01 Industry—Organization, control, etc. Business management. Leadership

[42-25133]

Collection of papers on industrial organization and administration by an American writer, who was as well known in England as in this country. Partial contents: Constructive conflict; The giving of orders; How must business management develop in order to possess the essentials of a profession; The meaning of responsibility in business management; The influence of employee representation in a remodeling of the accepted type of business manager; The psychology of control; The psychology of conciliation and arbitration; Leader and expert; Some discrepancies in leadership theory and practice. Bibliography.

"Miss Follett's experiences with industrial and business management and her awareness of the most significant work by scholars in many fields are brought into effective relationship in addresses that are never arrogant or condescending, and are always provocative and rewarding." J. M. Gaus

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:550 Je '42 550w

"This book has the refreshing quality of a truly great contribution. Although Miss Follett died in 1933, a fresh illumination shines from the papers." M. C. H. Niles

+ Management R 31:326 S '42 800w

"If these papers can be warmly commended to the practical administrator, they are equally valuable as a contribution to the creative and constructive thought which must precede as well as inspire the making and execution of plans and policy in reconstruction." R. Brightman

+ Nature 148:640 N 29 '41 1100w

"Major Urwick and Dr. Metcalf have done a fine thing in collecting and editing significant papers by the late Mary Parker Follett. . . The introduction by the editors presents in a vivid yet restrained manner the essential facts of Miss Follett's rich and creative life and furnishes the best possible preparation for understanding and enjoying the material which follows." L. M. Gilbreth

+ Survey G 31:366 Ag '42 300w

"Most industrialists in this country [England] will find here a new teaching, simple and direct, and yet startling in its complete development. The elements of the teaching are not a fresh discovery; the originality is in the synthesis and the relation to industrial life of principles applicable wherever association of human interests is charged with possibilities of conflict or of a higher combination."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p34 Ja 17 '42 1200w

FOLMSBEE, BEULAH. Little history of the horn-book. 57p il $1.50 Horn bk, inc, 264 Boylston st, Boston

372.4 Hornbooks. Children's literature (books about) 42-36336

"Miss Folmsbee has assembled the most significant and interesting facts showing the historical importance of this early English lesson book and has put them together with discrimination. In [it] we find not only a clear description of how this famous primer was made, but we learn also how generally it was to be found in the homes of the first American colonists where it was imported from England. A full bibliography gives the sources." Horn Bk

Booklist 39:74 N 1 '42

"This is a veritable little treasure for the general book lover, as well as for librarians, teachers and students, no less for its charming format than for the information it contains. . . Even were Tuer's comprehensive History of the Horn-book not completely out of print, there are still to be found here new references worthy of attention. The book is of appropriate size, is finely made and full of delightful old woodcuts and reproductions of horn-books." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:347 S '42 140w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 18:408 N '42 50w

"Miss Folmsbee writes with grace and wit; and children as well as their elders, and the general reader as well as the specialist in the history of books, will enjoy this unique and charming little volume." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p30 N 22 '42 300w

FONG, HSIEN DING. Post-war industrialization of China. 92p pa 50c Nat. planning assn, 800 21st st, N.W., Washington, D.C.

330.951 China—Economic conditions. Reconstruction (1939-)—China 42-23154

"This monograph is especially important because it represents a concrete contribution to the debate on postwar reconstruction of the Pacific area. The author, a specialist on industrial problems, has made a serious attempt to define the basic elements of postwar industrialization, delimit its field of expansion, in-indicate the need for foreign capital and management and investigate China's capacity to develop an industrial economy." Pacific Affairs

FONG, H. D.—Continued

"Dr. Fong is a professor at the Nankai Institute of Economics, and has written numerous monographs on Chinese economics; he seems to have the subject well in hand, and the present work is convincing and well-documented." J. F. Davidson

+ Canadian Forum 22:222 O '42 350w

"The very condensed form of the monograph did not permit Dr. Fong to go into the political, economic, and social implications of China's postwar industrialization. Too much seems to be taken for granted in the political sphere, and the underlying assumptions and principles are not always stated. The extent to which real capital will be made available to China from the various foreign sources and the inflationary pressure that credit expansion at home will exercise on the standard of living of the Chinese masses should be given at least some consideration. . . . Dr. Fong's little book is valuable less for the solutions it offers than for the problems it raises and the factual information it presents." F. M. Tamagna

+ — Pacific Affairs 25:497 D '42 1000w

FOOTNER, HULBERT. House with the blue door. 280p $2 Harper

42-22142

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuyby

Books p23 S 20 '42 200w

"The story is up to the average in plot interest, but it is the wry humor of the philanthropist's misadventures that gives it real tang." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p25 O 11 '42 180w

FOOTNER, HULBERT. Maryland main and the Eastern shore; il. by Louis Ruyl. 331p $5 Appleton-Century

917.52 Maryland—Description and travel
 42-11488

An informal guidebook to the state of Maryland. After a section devoted to Baltimore (including a chapter on H. L. Mencken) the greater part of the book is concerned with description and anecdotes of rural Maryland and its small towns, grouped by counties. Index.

Booklist 38:345 My 15 '42

"Mr. Ruyl's twenty-eight drawings are the perfect accompaniment of the text—delicate, unobtrusive, indeed, pale at first glance, they nevertheless fit so well into the narrative as not only to illustrate but to illuminate it. Together the producers of the book have done well by Maryland." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p16 Ap 5 '42 1700w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 3 '42 800w

"This is an unusual book, always interesting, and to a lover of the Eastern Shore, frequently exasperating. Possibly the two authors are not entirely successful in their collaboration. . . . While the writing itself is not uneven, the change in viewpoint is so complete as to make one wonder whether originally a series of short articles was planned rather than a book." Constance Skillin

+ — Commonweal 36:160 Je 5 '42 410w

"This delightful book is a love letter for Maryland, from a man who found his home there thirty years ago. And that the tribute may lack no possible expressiveness it is richly and beautifully illustrated by a gifted artist."

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 19 '42 500w

FORBES, ESTHER. Paul Revere and the world he lived in. 510p il $3.75 Houghton B or 92 Revere, Paul

(W) 42-36229

Biography of the Boston silversmith, etcher, bell caster, powder maker and Revolutionary hero whose famous ride has been his best-known claim to fame. Maps on end papers. Bibliography. Index.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (21) BM (1) B & T (1) N Y Times (15) PW (3) RB (1) W (1)

"Esther Forbes has done well by Paul Revere—the actual Revere, a Boston workman of French descent, cool, canny, successful. . . . The legendary Revere, he of the upraised arm and the rearing horse at the farmhouse door, succumbs with surprising ease. Miss Forbes does no debunking. She simply tells the truth, and the truth is more real in her telling of it than any legend could be." Burke Boyce

+ Atlantic JI '42 450w

Booklist 38:367 Je 1 '42

Bookmark 3:15 My '42

"Not every historical novelist can write a good biography, but the right kind of historical novelist has some of the qualities most needed in a good biographer. Esther Forbes is that kind of novelist, and her biography of Paul Revere takes at once a high and lasting place in American literature." Carl Van Doren

+ Books p1 Je 28 '42 1250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '42

"This history book may safely be recommended to those who dislike history. Such people will read it, or at least a good deal of it. Probably the book is longer than necessary. Admittedly, it incorporates some colloquial expressions, with the thought no doubt of imparting zest to the material. . . . Many pages of very pertinent notes testify to the patient and thorough research upon which the volume is based. An ample bibliography and an exhaustive index increase the value of the book. It deserves wide popularity." Paul Kiriery

+ — Commonweal 36:308 Jl 17 '42 350w

"An authoritative biography, delightfully written. . . . Presented in fine format, with full notes, adequate index and unusual illustrations from source material. Book-of-Month club election for July. Heartily recommended both for adults and young people." Jacqueline Overton

+ Library J 67:531 Je 1 '42 70w

Reviewed by Allen French

New Eng Q 15:521 S '42 700w

"It may be sheer male snobbery that is surprised that a woman should write one of the best books of this or any generation about the period of the American Revolution. Esther Forbes has nevertheless done this. . . . Esther Forbes writes not so much like a historian who has done creditable research as a woman, home-loving but of wide interests, who actually lived in Boston between—say—1757 and 1818." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p1 Je 28 '42 1200w

"When Miss Forbes diverts her eye from her amiable hero and gives us Boston, she becomes a historian rather than a patient researcher. I do not know of any book of the last decade or so that offers so detailed and intimate a picture of the birthplace of American liberty during its career from 1760 to about 1800. . . . She is fair to both sides, patient in reconstruction, witty on occasion, though the fabric of her prose is on the gray side." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 18:60 Je 27 '42 600w

Pratt p5 D '42

"We get a very satisfactory picture of the man, his character, career, and his family and social relations, with no overdone hero worship. In her other theme, the life of his times, Miss Forbes has been equally successful." J. T. Adams

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:7 Jl 11 '42 1000w

Time 39:76 Je 29 '42 850w

Wis Lib Bul 38:95 Je '42

"Miss Forbes has written of Paul Revere with love and learning, and her portrait is as revealing as Copley's. Her carefully garnered details make vivid the career of a substantial artisan and industrialist of the Revolutionary and early republican period." Margaret Leech

+ Yale R n s 32:161 autumn '42 1050w

FORD, CHARLES HENRI. Overturned lake [poems]. ltd de luxe ed 76p $2; autog $3-$7.50 Little man

811

41-24041

"Everything about his verse is inverted, down to the title-page, which is written backward. There are many amusing lines and the poems employ surrealist conventions: free association, animation of the inanimate, mélange of imagery. They include an alphabet that would be out of place in a conservative nursery. Many of Ford's conceits are echoes of Dali and Cocteau." New Repub

Reviewed by Lloyd Frankenberg
New Repub 106:371 Mr 16 '42 120w

Reviewed by P. M. Jack
N Y Times p5 D 14 '41 70w

"Occasional verse is telling only if the occasion be known: Mr. Ford's memorials must please his friends, testify to anyone that here is a bright boy, but really they remain a little cocky, mostly arbitrary, certainly useful as an instance of what, after all, has, for so long, been meant by the word 'fancy.'" Howard Blake

Poetry 60:48 Ap '42 900w

FORD, CLELLAN STEARNS. Smoke from their fires. See Nowell, C. J.

FORD, JAMES, and FORD, MRS KATHERINE (MORROW). Design of modern interiors. 132p 324 il $5 Architectural bk.

747 Architecture, Domestic—Designs and plans. House decoration 42-19765

"This book stresses the relationship between contemporary furniture design and modern architecture, and shows how to achieve comfort, convenience, and economy of space by the use of modern functional furniture. Suggestions are adapted to the limited income group. The main part of the book consists of photographs of interiors, with brief descriptions." Booklist

Booklist 39:5 S '42

Pratt p3 D '42

Special Libraries 33:262 S '42

FORD, LESLIE, pseud. See Brown, Z.

FORD, LOUIS RANDOLPH. Practical marine Diesel engineering. 3d ed 590p il $5 Simmons-Boardman

621.436 Diesel engines, Marine. Marine engineering (W) 41-28031

New edition of a text first published in 1925 (Book Review Digest, 1926). "The second edition was published in 1931 and developments since have made some changes necessary in the character of this edition. The engines most widely used in the more common types of vessel are described. With a view toward raising the professional standards for marine engineers a number of specimen examinations are included." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 38:237 Mr 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:9 Ja '42

FOREMAN, GRANT. History of Oklahoma. 384p il maps $3.50 Univ. of Okla. press

976.6 Oklahoma—History 42-6790

"Mr. Foreman traces the Choctaw, Creek and Cherokee removals, the early efforts to settle, the war, Mexican, Indian and Civil, Reconstruction, the boomer movement, opening to settlement, statehood and development of Oklahoma to its present status. Through the pages of this history—incidentally the first comprehensive story of the state within the limits of a single volume—pulse the cross-currents, the competitive interests, the hard work, the blood and the bones that made up Oklahoma." Books

"This volume offers a distinct contribution both in the field of American state-making and in the story of the American Indian. It is well to note that the fine maps and illustrations with a complete bibliography and index combine to make this a 'must' book for teachers of American History, especially since the trend to unravel America's social consciousness is so popular today." J. J. Flynn

+ Ann Am Acad 222:223 Jl '42 400w

"Few states have a historian to tell their story of the caliber of Mr. Foreman. His fourteen books are unimpeachable in the field of Southwestern history. He has had the personal good fortune to live in Oklahoma throughout its period of statehood. He has made a special study of the Indian record, which goes back far beyond the white settlement of the territory, and his volume, therefore, becomes a final word on Oklahoma state history." P. I. Wellman

+ Books p12 My 17 '42 450w

"It would be difficult to find another researcher so competent to bring out the full richness of the background of this State." T. N.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 22 '42 380w

Reviewed by E. G. Eastman
N Y Times p53 N 29 '42 750w

FOREMAN, LEONARD LONDON. Renegade. 285p $2 Dutton

42-7958

A story of the West in the days of Indian wars. The hero, captured by the Sioux, is adopted into the tribe and when the Indian troubles approach a climax in Custer's last stand, he finds himself torn by conflicting loyalties.

Booklist 38:384 Je 15 '42

"L. L. Foreman's story is exciting and has an authentic ring." Lisle Bell

+ Books p17 Ap 12 '42 130w

FORESTER, CECIL SCOTT. Payment deferred. 266p $2.50 Little

(W) 41-28076

Mr William Marble, a mild little English bank clerk with a genius for finance, commits a crime in order to put his family on easy street. The outcome of it all is rather astonishing. The book, which came out in England in 1920, now appears in this country for the first time, altho stage and motion picture versions have been seen here.

Booklist 38:189 F 1 '42

"It is no less an exciting, swiftly-paced story as narrative and plot for its deeper qualities—with which, indeed, they are bound up. The tale is all of a piece and one not easy to lay down once you start it, nor so soon forgotten after you've finished." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p4 Ja 25 '42 550w

"For all its deeper qualities, 'Payment Deferred' is a first-rate story—one you don't easily lay down in mid-stream." J. W. Riley

+ Boston Globe p17 Mr 25 '42 220w

Reviewed by P. T. Hartung

Commonweal 36:64 My 8 '42 220w

"A story of crime, it is packed with incident and suspense; the reader will have no desire to put it down until he has finished it." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 25 '42 550w

"An exceptional story, recommended for those who like their crimes without mystery." + New Yorker 17:68 Ja 24 '42 60w

FORESTER, CECIL SCOTT. Poo-Poo and the dragons; il. by Robert Lawson. 143p $1.75 Little

(W) 42-17225

Nonsense story about Harold Heavyside Brown, called Poo-Poo, and the excitement which came into his life with the discovery of a dragon in a vacant lot. Poo-Poo's mother was not in favor of dragons, but Horatio was very useful at mowing lawns, and polishing floors, so he became a member of the family. Life became one excitement after the other for the Browns, and presently there were three dragons, instead of one, and life became three times as exciting.

FORESTER, C. S.—Continued

"It is to be read aloud and by no means all at once, even by the adult who looks it over before taking it home. The best way is for him to read one episode in the book shop and defer the rest so as to share with the child the fun of the first time. This is enjoyed to the utmost by Mr. Lawson, whose dragons are thus in his best vein. I have never seen one of these creatures in real life, but I now know what they look like when seasick, or making the most of a beauty-parlor treatment, which can do a great deal for a dragon." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 23 '42 500w
Cath World 156:373 D '42 90w

"Mr. Forester's hilarious story will read aloud well and tickle the fancy of many boys besides the one for whom it was first told. They will like Robert Lawson's pictures, too, for he surely enjoyed making them." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:332 S '42 120w

"Charming nonsense by author of Captain Horatio Hornblower. Recommended for purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 67:682 Ag '42 70w

"There are many dragons in literature but none, save that incomparable reluctant one of Kenneth Grahame's, more ingratiating than these, nor more hilarious in action. The sheer looniness of the fantasy is set off by the calm acceptance of the situations by the Browns, and somehow it all seems plausible, except for Poo-Poo's uncomfortable habit of sliding down Horatio's spiky back. And if any one could make it look plausible Robert Lawson could—and did, in illustrations which combine comedy and invention in his usual decorative style." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 S 20 '42 480w

"The nonsense will amuse children from five to eight years old. Slightly more sophisticated readers will giggle at first but are likely to find the whimsy and the cute narrative style monotonous. Robert Lawson's dragon pictures are fearful and funny." K. S. W.

+ — New Yorker 18:112 D 12 '42 70w

"A dragon who lives with the Browns might so easily be appallingly arch and tiresome—but Mr. Forester has a fertile invention . . . an agreeable wit in the Just-so tradition and tells the episodes with great ease, good humour, and a proper sense of formality; an excellent book for reading aloud." J. A. Smith

+ Spec 169:512 N 27 '42 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p573 N 21 '42 50w

FORSTER, EDWARD MORGAN. Virginia Woolf. 40p $1 Harcourt [1s 6d Cambridge] B or 92 Woolf, Virginia (Stephen)

42-22253

"This new tribute to Virginia Woolf, with a few additions, is the text of the Rede Lecture given in Cambridge by E. M. Forster last year. He attempts again, not judgment, but justification. During her lifetime legends grew round the name of Virginia Woolf: Forster has torn away the stupid and pernicious ones. He presents, not the Invalid Lady of Bloomsbury, but a poet-novelist, a critic, a biographer, a short story-writer, an experimentalist, an essayist, a scholar, a feminist, a gourmet, a practical-joker, a woman, a lady, a snob; a civilised being, respecting knowledge and believing in wisdom." Spec

Reviewed by M. M. Colum
Books p3 O 4 '42 950w

Reviewed by Dorothy Karr
Churchman 156:17 D 1 '42 120w

Reviewed by David Burnham
Commonweal 36:567 O 2 '42 400w

Reviewed by Louis Kronenberger
Nation 155:382 O 17 '42 500w

Reviewed by O. H. Dunbar
New Repub 107:471 O 12 '42 150w

"A summing up exemplary in its shrewdness and delicacy." Raymond Mortimer
+ New Statesman & Nation 23:390 Je 13 '42 850w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory
N Y Times p2 S 27 '42 1300w
New Yorker 18:80 S 26 '42 20w

Reviewed by R. E. Roberts
Sat R of Lit 25:9 O 5 '42 550w
Spec 168:540 Je 5 '42 250w

"This is a talk rather than an oration, by one who knew Virginia Woolf extremely well, besides admiring her work and not admiring all her idiosyncrasies. It is surely unnecessary to say how well, and with what an individual attitude and selectiveness, Mr. Forster talks: it must have been a delightful lecture to hear, and it is very pleasant to read."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p260 My 23 '42 650w

Reviewed by Mark Schorer
Yale R n s 32:377 winter '43 1050w

FORSTER, KENT. Failures of peace; the search for a negotiated peace during the first World war. 159p $2.50 Am. council on public affairs

940.312 European war, 1914-1918—Peace 42-10893

"Up to this date the story of the various peace efforts made during the first World War has had to be reconstructed from many volumes of parliamentary debates, collections of diplomatic notes, and memoirs of participants. To Dr. Forster goes the credit for having made an attempt to present in one short volume a survey of all the moves to bring about a negotiated peace during the years 1914-18. Naturally he could not give the whole story in the 150-odd pages of The Failures of Peace. This well-annotated work discusses one peace move after another, chronologically and by countries. Painstaking work has been put into determining the extent of each offer, who sponsored it, and what factors contributed to its ultimate failure." Ann Am Acad

"Dr. Forster's book may be considered from three points of view. As a chronicle it has considerable value, despite certain too evident prejudices against the leading wartime statesmen of Britain and France. As a reference manual it is almost indispensable. It is not easy to get hold elsewhere of a compact and convenient narrative of the Czernin-Sixtus or the less familiar Von der Lancken negotiations. But as an argument for peace by compromise rather than peace by victory—an argument which the author does not hesitate to apply to World War II as well as to World War I (p. 152)—the book constantly falls into doubtful assertions or logical contradictions." Preston Slosson

+ — Am Hist R 48:69 O '42 420w

"This study impresses one with its skillful integration of a superabundance of material drawn from very numerous and diverse sources, as well as with the cogency of the conclusions deduced therefrom." Vernon O'Rourke

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:369 Ap '42 600w

"Dr. Forster's conclusion is that a handful of individuals who held the key positions in the various governments are primarily to blame for having 'sabotaged' a settlement by compromise. It seems to me that circumstances and public opinion played a far more important role than this short study reveals. The domestic policies as well as the military situation in Germany ought to be weighed much more carefully before passing judgment on the responsibility for the failures of peace." Alma Luckau

Ann Am Acad 220:204 Mr '42 410w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:772 Jl '42 10w

"A highly pertinent account. . . There is clear and detailed analysis of the shifting currents of opinion within each of the belligerent countries and there is lucid exposition of all the complicated official and unofficial peace soundings from 1916 to 1918. . . It is scarcely indulging in war hysteria to suggest that Bethmann's frank reference to the Belgian guarantee as a 'scrap of paper' created a very natural suspicion concerning the value of pledges offered by the Imperial German government. Dr. Forster has emphasized too strongly Bethmann-Hollweg's disposition to seek a compromise peace. . . . He condemns Grey's moralistic intransigence in refusing to consider any such proposition, without ever describing—from official documents—Bethmann's extraordinary bid for British neutrality on July 29, 1914. . . . In the same way Dr. Forster's account of Bethmann's peace note of December 12, 1916, omits all reference to his prior correspondence with the military chiefs of Germany which formulated the peace aims to be achieved." Paul Birdsall

— + Social Studies 33:136 Mr '42 500w

FORSTER-KNIGHT, M. Return of Sandypaws; il. by [the author]. 151p $1.75 Lippincott

42-17224

Mr Nouggygum, the benevolent mole who appeared in Mr Tittlewit's Holiday (Book Review Digest, 1940) is now upset by the kidnapping of the rabbit, Mr Sandypaws. The idea of an insect zoo, with nuts for admission price, is conceived by an elderly beetle, and thus the ransom for Mr Sandypaws is accumulated.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p9 S 20 '42 230w

"Here is another fantasy perfectly scaled to the life of the little creatures of the grasses, its humor evidenced not only in dialogue and character but in inventive use of detail. There is, too, a fairy-tale kind of poetry which finds its best expression in the moods and songs of the bohemian grasshopper." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 10 '43 220w

FOSTER, BENNETT. Maverick. 268p $2 Doubleday

42-10303

Western story.

Booklist 38:369 Je 1 '42

"Active all the way." Will Cuppy

Books p18 Ap 26 '42 100w

FOSTER, BENNETT. Winter quarters. 278p $2 Doubleday

42-24962

Western story.

Booklist 39:225 F 1 '43

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p32 N 22 '42 60w

"A cleverly devised and excellently written story." G. W. Harris

N Y Times p30 N 29 '42 240w

FOSTER, ELIZABETH. Days between. 301p $2.50 Harper

42-12029

Romantic story of six people attempting to get from Paris to Bordeaux, after the German occupation of Paris. The days between were spent in an abandoned chateau, while these gently reared people, having lost their car and all their luggage, tried to keep themselves alive and procure other means of reaching Bordeaux.

Booklist 38:368 Je 1 '42

"The book, shot through with pointed observation, bears up under inspection. The refugees, too, bear up in this first challenge of their lives. But somehow none of it matters enough. Among all the millions of hunted people in Europe, Miss Foster has managed to select a handful about which you feel, as about fellow passengers on a journey, that it was pleasant enough to meet them, but easy enough, too, to bid them farewell." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Books p24 My 10 '42 600w

"The story is well told; Willy and Marthe, the outstanding characters in the novel, though not the principals of its plot, are real people, in whose doings we soon take a genuine interest. The book has atmosphere, some discerning comments, and a number of charming and tender sketches of rural France as it was in those unforgettable days of June, 1940." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 My 10 '42 700w

"Elizabeth Foster is a victim of her own facility in this book. It would be hard to find writing that combines such a natural instinct for utterance with such uncritical perception of lapses from taste, from mood. This defect in taste must be pointed out because it seems to be basic in the failure of this bright novel to be impressive. . . . In style, Miss Foster is frequently effective, despite her careless grammar and her amazing preference for unrelieved simple sentences, in the grammatical sense. But all of this adds up merely to a novel sold to Hollywood in advance of publication." Don Lincoln

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 My 30 '42 500w

FOSTER, JOHN. Then and now; the historic church and the younger churches. 182p $1.75 Harper [6s Student]

280 Church unity. Church history 42-25859

"These chapters are founded on two sets of lectures given to professors and ministers of the Church of Scotland. They are set out in no obvious sequence, and Mr. Foster hints that readers 'must feel free to skip a bit'; but they reflect the life and thought of the lecturer as historian, missionary, and teacher. . . . As a historian, the author looks back, making comparisons and issuing warnings and encouragements, as he 'canters down the centuries' of the Church's history." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

"This is a very sensible and timely book that ought to be read and inwardly digested by many of our present-day ecclesiastical theorists." S. J. Case

+ Books p25 D 13 '42 550w

"Rarely do we find so controversial a subject as Christian churchmanship so fairly appraised in its historic and modern meaning as in this book." W. F. Thompson

+ Churchman 157:16 Ja 15 '43 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p88 F 21 '42 390w

FOSTER, JOSEPH O'KANE. In the night did I sing. 324p $2.50 Scribner

42-4607

Episodic novel dealing with the lives—the loves and the tragedies—of the Mexican inhabitants of a little village in Taos valley, New Mexico.

"One fault I find with the book is that the interest centers chiefly in characters of young people—in love story after love story. A few older characters whose tragedy is implicit do enter the story, but the author plays upon sex as a theme. Descriptive passages about the country's beauty are appreciative but a little lush. Humor and pathos are played up with gusto. Certainly something of a panorama is presented. But the book remains, I believe, a fairly good piece of racy reading not oversimplified." E. L. Walton

+ Books p10 F 15 '42 400w

Nation 154:405 Ap 4 '42 150w

"Both the strength and weakness of Mr. Foster's work are in his handling of all this human material: strength, in memorable measure, because he gives vibrant life to all the details of gayety, cruelty, lust, idealism, despair which make up this essentially fatalistic existence; weakness because as a writer he is intoxicated by words. . . . Perhaps this delirium of words will have run its course, and the temperature of Mr. Foster's style will be down to normal, by the time we get the next of his four folk novels. They will be well worth watching for in any case." K. W.

+ N Y Times p7 F 15 '42 950w

FOSTER, J. O.—Continued

"Mr. Foster is no Willa Cather, though he writes of New Mexico and there is a priest and a church in his novel. Nor is he an Erskine Caldwell or a John Steinbeck pointing to a need for reform in the economic lot of a regional minority. He is nevertheless sensitive, honest, and able to stir both curiosity and pity. 'In the Night Did I Sing' promises well for the series of which it is the first." S. C. Gross

+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 F 28 '42 290w

"Like most Americans transplanted in the Southwest Mr Foster finds the land and people so colorful, the sensations so sharp, that he is inclined to exaggerate impressions, to over-write. But this tendency is probably New Mexico's and not the writer's, and Mr Foster is proving to be a very sensitive and able painter of one of the world's most enchanted valleys."

+ — Spring'd Republican pte F 15 '42 460w

FOSTER, O'KANE. See Foster, J. O.

FOSTER, ROBERT GEIB, and WILSON, PAULINE PARK. Women after college; a study of the effectiveness of their education; pub. for the Merrill-Palmer school [foreword by Edna N. White]. 305p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

376.64 Education of women. Education—Aims and objectives. Education, Higher 42-18989

"This work is essentially a study of the kind of education average women obtain in women's colleges and coeducational institutions of higher learning and the way that education seems to serve the needs of these women in meeting the problems of life. It is based on an examination of the college and post-college experiences of single, married, and divorced women and is offered, not as an answer to the problem of what should be included in a program of education for women, but rather to provoke discussion and stimulate analysis of present offerings in the hope that more effective plans may be evolved." School & Society

Christian Century 59:1030 Ag 26 '42 90w
School & Society 56:136 Ag 15 '42 120w

FOURTH mystery book. 438p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 42-51185

Six detective stories with American backgrounds, by Mary Roberts Rinehart, Mignon G. Eberhart, Philip Wylie, Hugh Pentecost, Dana Lyon, and Q. Patrick.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p46 N 15 '42 330w

"Unfortunately, Dana Lyon's ingenuity in plot construction is not quite equaled by [her] skill as a narrator, and [her] tale suffers accordingly. The other five stories in the collection are in the best manner of their respective authors, and they more than make up for the minor deficiencies of Dana Lyon's offering." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p18 N 22 '42 120w

"Nice present for the boys at camp."

+ New Yorker 18:100 N 21 '42 40w

"An entertaining assortment. Mrs. Eberhart's yarn is best of the lot, with Dana Lyon's good second. The rest get by."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 N 21 '42 40w

Time 40:116 D 7 '42 40w

FOWLER, BERTRAM BAYNES. Food; a weapon for victory. 185p $1.50 Little 338.1 Food supply. World war, 1939—Food question. Reconstruction (1939—)

42-21609

Expansion of an article which appeared in Reader's Digest. The author holds that in order to prevent the mistakes made after the last war, the United Nations should be making plans now for feeding Europe when peace comes, and that these plans should include more than just sending relief ships with food and medical supplies.

Booklist 39:43 O 15 '42

"Because Mr. Fowler's book presents the problem of reconstruction in such concrete form and because it is unflinchingly honest, I hope it becomes a discussion text for every 4-H club, every farmer's study association, every trade union educational group, every current events circle in the land. For important issues are involved in this matter of feeding a physically and spiritually starved continent. Some of Mr. Fowler's suggestions as to methods of feeding and healing post-war Europe seem to me unwise." Hiram Motherwell

+ — Books p18 O 18 '42 420w

Christian Century 59:1186 S 30 '42 130w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.

Commonweal 36:572 O 2 '42 250w

"Intensive thinking, broad vision and a clear style of writing have enabled Mr. Fowler to present a complicated subject in a lucid and readable manner. His humanity is evident on every page and the book is permeated with idealism, but there is not a vestige of sentimentality." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p10 S 20 '42 450w

FOX, EMMET. Sparks of truth. 225p $2 Harper
248 Christian life 41-25924

Short essays on Christian life and conduct. Partial contents: Take it easy; Saluting the Christ in him; Satan gets away with it; Studying the Bible; How to meditate easily; Register joy and hold it; Casting the burden; The moron club—prominent members; Divine wisdom works in you; No depression in nature; The American spirit; The American constitution.

Christian Century 58:1474 N 26 '41 80w

Wis Lib Bul 38:10 Ja '42

FOX, FRANCES MARGARET. Legends of the Christ child; il. by Mildred Elgin. 81p $1.50 Sheed

232.99 Jesus Christ—Legends 41-19462

Legends retold from the apocryphal tales of Christ's birth—many of them dealing with animals and birds.

"It was a splendid idea to gather some of the loveliest of the apocryphal legends of Christ's birth in a slim handy volume, retelling them for children of our own day. For their beauty reflects the Christian spirit if not the historical truth." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 40w

"These legends are of a nature to appeal inevitably to young children of any period, no matter how unorthodox their training, for they are of miracles of birds and beasts and trees which succored the young Jesus. . . . The majority of these seventeen legends will make delightful additions to the story-telling hour at Christmas and during the Epiphany season." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 D 21 '41 220w

Reviewed by J. A. Smith

Spec 169:510 N 27 '42 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p574 N 21 '42 50w

FOX, GENEVIEVE MAY (MRS RAYMOND G. FULLER). Sir Wilfred Grenfell; with il. by Mary Reardon. 207p $2.50 Crowell

B or 92 Grenfell, Sir Wilfred Thomason—Juvenile literature (W) 42-23538

"Events of his boyhood and young manhood are stressed in this biography more than in some of the other books about Doctor Grenfell. His love of fun and adventure went hand in hand with his purpose in life, his zest in living. And the background of his people and his work on the Labrador coast give the measure of his great service to mankind." Horn Bk

Booklist 39:124 D 1 '42

"The author, skillful in writing for teen-age readers, has made admirable use of the material which, though familiar to many adults, can well be brought freshly to the attention of the new generation."

+ Christian Century 59:1258 O 14 '42 50w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 24 '42 110w

Churchman 156:16 N 15 '42 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:432 N '42 60w

"Well-rounded biography." M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 67:895 O 15 '42 30w

"Fuller and better written than Waldo's Grenfell. Although Mary Reardon's illustrations have definite atmosphere, they seem awkward and amateurish." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 67:1070 D 1 '42 70w

"His life is told with an excellent sense of proportion, in a tempo which matches its events and with a vividness which emphasizes the gallantry and wisdom of a man who said long before Americans learned it in tragedy and bitterness, 'No nation, or man, can live to themselves without injuring themselves as well as all the world.'" E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p30 N 15 '42 280w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 10 '43 230w

FRANCIS, WILLIAM. Kill or cure. 250p $2
Morrow

42-18953

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 Ag 30 '42 150w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p15 Ag 23 '42 180w

"Swiftly paced and capably plotted item with breezily outspoken dialogue and likable sleuth. Lively."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:15 Ag 29 '42 30w

"As a mystery story it's pretty thin."

Spring'd Republican p7e N 15 '42 60w

FRANCIS, WILLIAM. Rough on rats. 249p $2
Morrow

42-1103

Detective story.

"This thinnish toughie, for a special type of fan, contains the usual bad words, alcoholic detective, human horrors and other rubber stamps of its kind." Will Cuppy

Books p13 F 15 '42 80w

"The characters being what they are, the story is naturally rough and tough and full of action. It is not recommended to Sunday school libraries." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 F 15 '42 80w

"Plot adequately developed, altho' much like lot of other tales of this type. Action and dialog carry it through. Good tough 'un."

Sat R of Lit 25:18 F 14 '42 30w

FRANK, JEROME. If men were angels; some aspects of government in a democracy. 380p $3.75 Harper

353 Administrative law. U.S.—Politics and government. Justice, Administration of 42-13174

The author, formerly chairman of the Securities Exchange Commission, discusses the problem of the inevitable need for the administration of law by human—and fallible—men. He points out that even in "a government by law, and not by men," the judges are men—not angels. Much of his book is devoted to an explanation of the workings of administrative agencies, particularly the Securities Exchange Commission.

"This book should be read by everyone interested in making democracy work more effectively." E. A. Helms

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:1153 D '42 700w

Reviewed by R. D. Minnich

Library J 67:413 My 1 '42 80w

FRANK, KARL BOROMAU (PAUL HAGEN, pseud). Will Germany crack? 283p $2.75 Harper

943.085 Germany—Economic conditions.

World war, 1939—Germany (W) 42-36250

"Recent and fairly credible material on conditions in Germany and the occupied countries, much of it tending to show that the Germans may be getting themselves into a fine mess—transportation shaky, production down, skilled labor wearing out, etc. The author is careful not to overstate the case, though he does seem rather too sanguine about the soldiers, farmers, and younger Nazis who are, he says, turning away from Hitler and might be salvaged for democracy. Introduction by Elmer Davis." New Yorker

Reviewed by Reinhard Bendix

Am J Soc 48:426 N '42 700w

Reviewed by J. K. Pollock

Am Pol Sci R 36:1168 D '42 600w

Reviewed by R. M. W. Kempner

Ann Am Acad 224:204 N '42 500w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic 170:106 Ag '42 150w

Booklist 38:423 J1 1 '42

Bookmark 4:10 N '42

"Hagen is an Austrian who has been active in recent years in underground anti-Nazi activities in the Reich itself and, as long as that was possible, in adjoining countries. Yet his book is not that type of special pleading in which some anti-Nazis emigres naturally engage. It is dispassionate, detached, objective, factual and even statistical in style. The facts speak eloquently for themselves, and Hagen lets them do so." Wallace Deuel

+ Books p3 Je 14 '42 1250w

Christian Century 59:758 Je 10 '42 130w

"If you are looking for a prospectus of nazi weakness which is based on something more than wishful thinking or sheer romancing, by all means consult this book." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 59:980 Ag 12 '42 500w

Reviewed by Alvin Adey

Current Hist 3:73 S '42 220w

"Recommended for larger college and public libraries." M. J. Messler

+ Library J 67:531 Je 1 '42 80w

Reviewed by Karl Billinger

Nation 154:740 Je 27 '42 850w

Reviewed by Guenter Reimann

New Repub 107:182 Ag 10 '42 700w

"It is inevitable that in any such book there should be errors of fact and evidence of partisanship. . . Nevertheless, one can commend warmly Mr. Hagen's achievement and objective. He has amassed a great deal of pertinent information, has set it forth clearly and calmly, and has allowed nothing to deflect him from the hope that a better, more democratic world will emerge when the curtain shall have fallen on the last act of the bloody Hitlerian melodrama." G. N. Shuster

+ N Y Times p1 Je 14 '42 1150w

New Yorker 18:71 Je 13 '42 90w

"Mr. Hagen has chosen a very apt time to approach the question 'Will Germany Crack?' And he has done a remarkably able job of analysis." P. R. Knauth

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 Je 20 '42 850w

"The whole work is timely and thorough. Its worth has been preserved by the able translation of Anna Caples." Frank Kingdon

+ Survey G 31:364 Ag '42 390w

Wis Lib Bul 38:136 O '42

"For years an active member of the Labor movement in republican Germany, one of the founders and spokesmen of Neu Beginnen (An early underground movement against the Third Reich), and since 1940 Research Director of the American Friends of German Freedom, Hagen is especially qualified to give a realistic picture, particularly since his rare quality of dispassionate detachment never lets his ardent hopes get the better of his judgement. His study is packed with detailed information; it is cautious and well-balanced in its evaluation and most suggestive in its views." Sigmund Neumann

+ Yale R n s 32:198 autumn '42 850w

FRANK, WALDO DAVID. Virgin Spain; the drama of a great people [introd. by Alfonso Reyes]. Rev and enl ed 323p $3.50 Duell 914.6 Spain 42-12935
There is some revision and a chapter on recent Spanish history has been added. For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1926. No index.

Booklist 38:371 Je 1 '42

"Sober restraint becomes impossible for the critic who is sympathetic to 'Virgin Spain.' For enthusiastic response is inevitable once the key to the book is discovered, and any annoying quirks of style or composition are forgotten in the contemplation of the author's unerring grasp of a whole civilization as willed unity. One is forced to share the balanced judgment of Spanish and Hispano-American critics who, knowing their Spain, say that Frank's book is an arresting achievement in the art of understanding a complex and baffling culture like that of Spain." M. J. Benardete

+ Nation 154:577 My 16 '42 1200w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker
N Y Times p18 S 13 '42 750w

Reviewed by Selden Rose
Yale R ns 22:195 autumn '42 650w

FRANKAU, GILBERT. Air ministry, room 28 [Eng title: Winter of discontent]. 383p $2.50 Dutton [9s 6d Hutchinson] (W) 41-26740

When Air vice-marshal Marcus Ashdown was killed in his office during an air raid, his death might have gone uninvestigated if William Wordsworth, sometime chief of police at Cape Remittance had not been on the staff. Wordsworth investigated, and altho he was too late to prevent another sudden death, his training made it possible to thwart a third. The book is a combination of war, murder mystery and love story.

"Mr. Frankau's novel, apart from its interest as a narrative of London in war time, has all the ingredients of a murder mystery." George Conrad

+ Books p11 Ja 11 '42 260w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 2 '42 60w

"Considered only from the angle of entertainment, it's a highly seasoned appetizing dish which no doubt will be appreciated by our public." Drake de Kay

N Y Times p24 F 1 '42 600w

Reviewed by John Hampson
Spec 168:68 Ja 16 '42 200w

"It is the love story, woven in the midst of violence and intrigue, which lightens the dramatic passages of a story well knit, and not without a strong seasoning of brightly bitter irony. In a foreword, Frankau explains that he was invalided from the RAF late in 1940—and so has returned to his story-teller's craft. He emphasizes that this story has been written purely for his own and the reader's entertainment—and that it is purely fictitious. In any case it is an absorbing light novel."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 4 '42 250w

"As a background to a most entertaining mystery Mr. Frankau gives us a vivid picture of London during the 'Blitz'—the sirens, guns, bombs, blackout, damage, difficulties and discomforts—and though the characters and events are, of course, fiction, nobody acquainted with King Charles Street will doubt that the author has drawn on his own experience as an R.A.F. officer in describing war-time conditions there."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 3 '42 360w

FRANKLIN, BENJAMIN. Poor Richard comes to life, by Bessie W. Johns; il. by Richard E. Bailey. 94p $1.50 Day

818 Maxims 42-5205

Several hundred maxims selected from Poor Richard's Almanac and arranged under such subjects as: knowledge, wisdom, wealth, love, marriage, time, religion, thrift, reading, vices, etc.

Booklist 38:327 My 1 '42
Wis Lib Bul 38:84 My '42

FRANKLIN, JAY, pseud. See Carter, J. F.

FRAZER, RUSSELL H., and BERTHIAUME, ORRIN. Practical aircraft sheet-metal work; incl. riveting, assembly, blueprint reading and template developing; with a foreword by C. T. Reid. 193p il spir $3 McGraw

629.134 Airplanes—Design and construction. Sheet metal work 42-36132

"A course, presented in work sheets and blueprints, prepared by men experienced in industry and the training of students in vocational and technical schools." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 38:269 Ap 1 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '42
N Y New Tech Bks 27:21 Ap '42

FREDERICK, JOHN HUTCHINSON. Commercial air transportation. 493p il $4 Irwin
387.7 Aeronautics, Commercial 42-3586

"Discusses the Federal regulation, problems and services of the air transportation system of the United States. Includes also a bibliography, a digest of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1918, a summary of the main provisions in the contract between the airlines and the Railway Express Agency in force in 1941, and other pertinent information." N Y New Tech Bks

"While this book should prove helpful to those desiring a treatment of almost every phase of commercial air transportation within the covers of a single book, it is unfortunate that it is not more uniform in its degree of originality and economic analysis." F. A. Spencer

+ — Am Econ R 32:915 D '42 1050w
N Y New Tech Bks 27:20 Ap '42

FREDRIKSON, CLARK L. Picnic book. 128p il $1.25 Barnes, A. S.; Assn. press
796 Picnics. Amusements. Cookery, Outdoor (W) 42-12661

"This book has been prepared for those who like picnics and for those who must plan them, whether it be a community chairman or the mother of a family. The material here can be adapted for large or small groups of any and all ages. It includes information on planning and preparation, program suggestions, special occasions for the out of doors, fires and fireplaces." (Introd) Index.

Booklist 38:438 Jl 15 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '42
J Home Econ 34:387 Je '42 60w
Wis Lib Bul 38:117 Jl '42

FREEHOF, SOLOMON BENNETT. Modern Jewish preaching; based upon the Alumni lectures given at Hebrew union college, Mar. 1941. 171p $1.50 Bloch

296 Preaching 42-596

"An instructive discussion of preaching in the synagogue, where obviously essentially the same homiletical problems are faced as in the church. After interesting chapters on 'The Classic Jewish Sermon,' 'The Modern Scriptural Sermon,' and the 'Non-scriptural Sermon,' the author presents abstracts of approximately fifty sermons of both the biblical and the topical types." J Religion

"A highly intelligent and liberal book. It will be useful not only to young rabbis but to Christians who wish to know about Jewish preaching."

+ Christian Century 59:115 Ja 28 '42 40w

Reviewed by John Knox
J Religion 22:333 Jl '42 50w

FREEMAN, DOUGLAS SOUTHALL. Lee's lieutenants; a study in command; v 1, Manassas to Malvern Hill. 773p il maps $5 Scribner

973.7 U.S.—History—Civil war. Confederate states of America—Biography

(W) (42-24582)

This is the first volume of a projected three-volume work, in which the author proposes to give a "multiple biography" of the higher officers who served under Lee in the Army of Northern Virginia. Index.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (11) N Y Times (12) PW (1)

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson
Atlantic 170:140 D '42 850w
Booklist 39:135 D 15 '42

"This is no mere Confederate 'Portraits' brought up to date. Mr. Freeman is interested in the lieutenants who played their part in the campaigns of northern Virginia, but he is interested in them as military men and his study is a study in command. He is concerned here, as in his 'R. E. Lee,' in re-creating, with scrupulous care and in meticulous detail, the conditions of war, the tactics and strategy of battle, the problems of terrain, of supply, of transportation, of weather, of a hundred and one matters too easily ignored or forgotten. . . . This is a rich and rewarding volume. In it Mr. Freeman has fully achieved his purpose of recapturing the sense of things past and re-creating figures all but forgotten." H. S. Commager

+ Books p3 O 18 '42 2600w

"In this new work the author of R. E. Lee displays all the characteristics which made that work memorable. They include, as then, immense study, command of detail, tireless search into particulars, talent for assembly, with the total of an unchallengeable verdict. Or nearly unchallengeable; the best of us is human, and the perfection of the Lee was somewhat chipped by a manifest predisposition against General Longstreet which made that general a little less than real." C. W. Thompson

+ Cath World 156:504 Ja '43 600w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson
Christian Century 59:1491 D 2 '42 250w
Christian Science Monitor p18 N 16 '42 400w

"All in all, this is history writing at its best, since it is factual, complete, objective, readable. It deserves and will be accorded a large circle of serious readers." Paul Kienery

+ Commonweal 37:148 N 27 '42 350w

"Dr. Freeman, whose great life of Robert E. Lee is so worthily succeeded by this new work, is a scholar, a newspaperman, and a Virginia aristocrat. His scholarship shines from every page, while the controlling hand of the skilled journalist steers the book out of academic paths. The Virginia aristocrat shows himself chiefly by an amusing tendency to explain military virtue in terms of blue blood." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 155:687 D 19 '42 950w

"I have no doubt that some of Dr. Freeman's individual judgments may be criticized or disputed by those to whom every Southern officer of general rank is ipso facto a hero. He has not pulled his punches. But where he criticizes, the criticism is a reasoned one. And in 'Lee's Lieutenants' he has given us not only a military classic but a book so valuable and timely for the general reader that I hope its general audience may be very wide." S. V. Benét

+ N Y Times p5 O 25 '42 1250w

"Certainly, it's too early yet to judge the whole course of the trilogy. But the first volume, I think, shows a depth and thoroughness of understanding, a command of organization, and a brilliant terseness of statement that promise to raise the completed work to the level of the author's life of Lee. I confess I bridled here and there at the toplofty patrician note. . . . Again, I found a good deal of the close, tactical narrative hard to follow, in part because so many of the battle maps are relatively unkeyed." Vincent McHugh

+ New Yorker 18:80 O 24 '42 700w

"Mr. Freeman is the most objective as well as the most distinguished of contemporary Southern students of the Civil War but vestiges of the tradition he has broken through cling to him, and one of them is a willingness to trace small movements in battle of regiments which are remembered more personally in Southern emotion than they are in military history. . . . The Civil War, that is, remains for Mr. Freeman primarily a process of Southern development, Southern management or mismanagement, Southern achievement or failure, and only in the second remove a contest." Bernard De Voto

+ Sat R of Lit 25:15 O 24 '42 1200w

"For this work Dr. Freeman sought out a wealth of unpublished source material in the form of family records, diaries and letters. He has given these, as well as all available publications on this period, the careful study and interpretation of the expert historian and military student. The index and the annotations are complete and facilitate reference to related subjects, but it is to be regretted that the maps are not equally satisfying. Since one of the most urgent problems facing us today is that of developing competent leadership, Dr. Freeman's fine study is most timely and well worth reading by soldier and layman." Leon Kromer

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 1 '42 1150w

Time 40:106 O 26 '42 1750w

"The standard of scholarship and literary craftsmanship attained in this volume will not disappoint the many admirers of Dr. Freeman's justly famed 'R. E. Lee.' As a writer of military biography Freeman has few equals." H. A. DeWeerd

+ Yale R n s 32:390 winter '43 1050w

FREEMAN, MARTIN JOSEPH. Bitter honey. 297p $2.50 Macmillan

(W) 42-36002

"Describes the every-day life of a small boy living in a midwestern town some 30 years ago." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 38:189 F 1 '42

Bookmark 3:16 Mr '42

"While the book is not completely successful as a novel, it has much to recommend it in its portrayal of a child and an era." Rose Feld

+ Books p2 Ja 11 '42 600w

Christian Century 59:49 Ja 14 '42 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '42

Reviewed by S. E. Sherman

Library J 67:40 Ja 1 '42 80w

"Troubles, always troubles; and some of them serious—inside. But there are some victories among the many defeats. 'Bitter Honey' is really neither bitter nor sweet, it's merely sound, it's recommended." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 18 '42 850w

"A friendly, readable account of the difficulties of growing up."

+ New Yorker 17:59 Ja 10 '42 30w

"The novelist succeeds far less in interesting us in David's interpretation of life than in entertaining us with an exhumation of an era. The author is determined that we shall not forget the date of his story. . . . The slight and forgettable story is of little consequence." R. A. Cordell

Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ja 3 '42 450w

"Mr Freeman has written with a sympathy and humor that counteracts his occasional lack of subtlety in the presentation of his material."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42 330w

Wis Lib Bul 38:47 Mr '42

FREEMAN, OTIS WILLARD, and MARTIN, HOWARD HANNA, eds. Pacific Northwest; a regional, human, and economic survey of resources and development. 542p il maps $4 Wiley

330.9795 Northwest, Pacific 42-10345

"This book is the first comprehensive study of the resources of the region which concerns itself with the geographic bases involved. It represents the co-operative efforts of thirty authors, all specialists in their respective fields. They are mainly drawn from universities, colleges, and technical departments of various federal services in the Northwest. The organization of the book is based on the assumption that a knowledge of the physical characteristics and natural resources is fundamental to an accurate understanding of the economic pattern and of the problems confronting the Region. Throughout the book, regional relationships are stressed and economic, social, human, and physical factors are carefully integrated." (Pref) Index.

FREEMAN, O. W.—Continued

Booklist 38:366 Je 1 '42

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 19 '42
70w

Reviewed by J. B. Appleton
Geog R 32:507 J1 '42 650w

FREEMAN, RICHARD AUSTIN. Unconscious witness. 303p $2 Dodd 42-6283
Detective story.

Booklist 38:331 My 1 '42

"Speaking of mystery events, here's the biggest one in quite some time—a brand new Dr. Thorndyke book by the veteran who has long been rightly called the foremost living writer of the scientific detective story. Eightyish now, R. Austin Freeman wrote most of it in a bomb shelter he built himself in his garden at Gravesend, and the results appear to prove that you can't keep a good man down." Will Cuppy
+ Books p25 Mr 1 '42 490w

"This leisurely, logical type of mystery novel makes its appeal to taste and reason; in Austin Freeman's hands it is always—as it must be—well done." K. I.

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 29 '42 240w

"Triumphant deduction; vast amount of interesting data about disguises and their penetration; bang-up puzzle. For connoisseurs."
+ Sat R of Lit 25:22 Mr 7 '42 30w

FREEMAN, MRS RUTH (SUNDERLIN), and FREEMAN, GRAYDON LAVERNE. Cavalcade of toys. 400p il $5 Century house, Watkins Glen, N.Y.

649.55 Toys 42-36312

"A collectors' handbook. . . It is a history of playthings and a guide to their collection and use as educational material, historical evidence or simply as a charming hobby. . . For collectors' convenience it comes in chapters: dolls, toy furniture, soldiers, toys that move, sound-play equipment, mechanical toys, banks, scientific and construction toys, toy-books, theaters, educational toys and their scaling, and outdoor activities. A chapter on the history of manufacturing and marketing and a round-up on the lure of collecting complete the book." Books

Booklist 39:45 O 15 '42

+ Books p24 N 8 '42 150w

FRENCH, HERBERT ELIOT. My Yankee mother; with il. by Peggy Bacon. 275p $2.50 Vanguard

818

(W) 42-12268

Character sketch of the author's mother, who was rightly called a Yankee altho she was born in Prince Edward Island. She came to Boston in the 1890's, trained to be a professional nurse, and thru two marriages kept her individuality upright and intact.

Booklist 38:345 My 15 '42

Bookmark 4:14 N '42

"She is so exactly what she would be as a Yankee who grew up in the nineties, that to an outsider these twenty-one spicy sketches may become monotonous. To an insider, however, she will be a breath of home. The more inconsistent her actions may seem, especially as she grows older, the more striking becomes her inner consistency. The more Mother changes, the more she remains immutably the same. Massachusetts, there she stands." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 Ap 19 '42 450w

"Mr. French's style is straightforward, unvarnished and uninspired. On the whole, 'My Yankee Mother' carries on nobly the thesis that parents are interesting, but fails to set a new high. Most non-New Englanders will feel that it is pleasanter to read about her than it would be to live with her. Peggy Bacon's characteristic illustrations catch the New England atmosphere very well." Beatrice Sherman
+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 19 '42 700w

FREUND, MRS GLADYS (LYNWALL) PRATT. Wonders of the sea; il. by Rudolf Freund. 36p $1 Random house

574.92 Marine fauna—Juvenile literature.
Marine flora—Juvenile literature

(W) 42-36003

Pictures in color and in black and white, with short descriptive text, describing some of the exotic inhabitants of the sea. For grades five to seven.

Booklist 38:194 F 1 '42

"This is a book which will create an interest in the sea and will arouse a desire to become better acquainted with its marvels. Recommended for all children's collections." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 67:182 F 15 '42 70w

FRIED, HANS ERNEST. The guilt of the German army. 426p $3.50 Macmillan

943.085 Germany—Army. World war, 1939—Causes. Militarism 42-21180

"The author pins a good part of Nazism on the tradition of German militarism, and backs up his thesis with exhaustive quotes and documentation. His post-war solution is the creation of a democratic German army rather than Allied occupation." (New Repub) Index.

"There are many explanations of National Socialism, most of which contain elements of truth. The present book, written by a Viennese scholar now associated with the Graduate Faculty of the New School for Social Research, focuses its attention on the responsibility of the professional army officers for Hitlerism. The thesis is not original, but it is here convincingly presented, with much new evidence. . . A reading of the book suggests several comments. While Adolf Hitler's name appears on various pages, it may be asked whether the author has done full justice to Hitler's evil genius. . . Secondly, the responsibility of the Allied Powers, particularly in the crucial years from the Armistice through the occupation of the Ruhr, should not be overlooked. It was then that the foundations of resurgent militarism were laid. Finally, while agreeing that the military occupation of all Germany is undesirable, the reviewer does not see how a military occupation of the eastern and western frontier areas can be avoided, at least during the transition period. In spite of these criticisms, Dr. Fried is to be commended for his interesting, scholarly, and timely study." R. H. Wells

+ — Am Pol Sci R 36:1169 D '42 650w

Reviewed by A. R. Ginsburgh

Ann Am Acad 225:229 Ja '43 550w

"In the flood of books on National Socialism, this study of the relation between the old and the new German militarism stands out by its qualities of seriousness, thoroughness, and good documentation." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Atlantic 170:148 N '42 230w

Booklist 39:46 O 15 '42

"The author will probably carry most of his readers with him on most of the points he makes. There is at least one fundamental argument in 'The Guilt of the German Army,' though, with which many will find it difficult to agree. That is the argument that while the majority of the German people were gullible and weak-willed in the face of the army-Nazi conspiracy, they did not realize that the purpose of the conspiracy was a new war. The people would have opposed the conspirators much more effectively—perhaps even successfully—if they had realized what was afoot, Fried seems to think. This view is as flattering to the Germans' national morality as it is insulting to their intelligence." W. R. Deuel

+ — Books p3 S 6 '42 1300w

Reviewed by Alvin Adev
Current Hist 3:161 O '42 1600w

Reviewed by Glenn Negley
Ethics 53:76 O '42 140w

Reviewed by Rice Estes
Library J 67:627 JI '42 70w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
Nation 155:421 O 24 '42 1150w
New Repub 107:294 S 7 '42 80w

"This is a scholarly book, which sometimes permits itself to digress into the analysis of intricate little side issues. But on the whole it is soundly constructed and engrossing. It is not far from being the best study of the German situation to have been offered in a long time." G. N. Shuster
+ N Y Times p4 S 20 '42 1300w

"The author's argument is both ingenious and thoroughly documented."

New Yorker 18:59 Ag 29 '42 90w

Pratt p17 D '42

"The Guilt of the German Army' presents startling new material about a problem in everybody's mind. It is an extraordinary book. It will not fail to arouse eagerness, admiration, and applause." H. B. Kranz
+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 S 12 '42 700w

FRIEDRICH, CARL JOACHIM. New belief in the common man. 345p $3 Little 321.8 Democracy. Political science, Public opinion (W) 42-17544

"What warrant is there for the notion that the common man can and will succeed in running his own collective affairs? What is the basis for our confidence that ordinary folks can govern themselves? It is to the answering of these questions that this book is addressed. The aim is to validate 'the belief that the mass of common men are, in the long run, less likely to be wrong than the individual judgment of any superman, or the limited judgment of any self-appointed élite.'" (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Reviewed by Joseph Dorfman
Am Econ R 32:863 D '42 1700w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith
Am J Soc 48:522 Ja '43 750w

Reviewed by T. I. Cook
Am Pol Sci R 36:1154 D '42 1100w

"This analysis and defense of democracy, the product of ten years' studious reflection, is an uncommonly fruitful book. At least, it is that for anyone who can command the mental toughness to stop echoing the more or less sacrosanct clichés and to re-examine fundamentals without assuming anything that wants proof. You get a simple pragmatic measure of its fruitfulness when you insert slips at the passages that excite, jolt, alarm, or specially hearten you. On this system you get the volume so bristling with slips that to retrace the noteworthy passages virtually means to reread it entire, probably inserting as many more slips as you go. The book, in short, grows on you, and it makes you grow." Wilson Follett
+ Atlantic 170:140 S '42 250w

"One may cavil over some of Professor Friedrich's specific analyses. One cannot help responding sympathetically, nevertheless, to his forthright rejection of all elite theories ('whether of the right or of the left'); his unreserved faith in the political judgment and character of the common man; his confidence in his educability, and his vision of a world society in which democracy is both realizable and workable. For these reasons, Mr. Friedrich has written a very good book, indeed." L. M. Hacker
+ — Books p5 JI 26 '42 1400w

Boston Globe p19 Ag 12 '42 200w

Reviewed by P. H. Boynton
Ethics 53:142 Ja '43 1500w

"This book is interesting and impressive because behind it there is an experience and the growth of a conviction." G. H. Sabine
+ Harvard Law R 56:318 O '42 1850w

"Excellent book for those groping for better concept of democracy and for those who wonder what is happening to our democratic ideals." J. A. Schon

+ Library J 67:581 Je 15 '42 70w

"Dr. Friedrich believes that the 'building of world citizenship has to begin right here in America.' In this book he has contributed splendidly toward that objective. His adopted countrymen, who will not all agree with him in detail, must recognize a warm and hopeful human spirit, to which they are greatly in debt." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 JI 12 '42 1300w

"The book seems to need a bit more qualifying here and there, but on the whole it is a valuable clarification of democratic theory. Simply handled."

+ — New Yorker 18:56 JI 11 '42 110w

"There is much here that needs to be shouted from the house-tops. Its total spirit and atmosphere are admirable and prophetic. Its stress upon the extension of the cause of the common man to universal, world-wide scope is timely. Its proposal for a 'world convention of men and women of thought rather than action' is highly suggestive. The common man fares well with this author—without any taint of sentimentality, yet without pessimism. . . . It is, however, my personal reservation that the new belief in the common man can be rooted in convictions which are more than pragmatic, which relate man to his place in nature and in the cosmos in ways which are organic and inescapably absolute." Ordway Tead

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:19 JI 4 '42 900w

"Dr. Friedrich has written a much-needed book, based on his Lowell Institute lectures in Boston last year. It was time that a fully equipped political scholar should grapple boldly with a subject that is too often shied away from—the qualities of the common man on which our whole structure of democracy rests. . . . The machinery of academicism obtrudes too frequently in Dr. Friedrich's argument to appeal to many of the 'common men.' It relies more heavily on reference to 'authorities' than upon inductive data. Yet he has sounded a heartening note in the world of scholarship—a note deeply in harmony with the urgent social needs of this 'People's War.'" K. M. Gould

+ — Social Educ 6:331 N '42 1200w

FRIERSON, WILLIAM COLEMAN. The English novel in transition, 1885-1940. 334p $3 Univ. of Okla. press

823.09 English fiction 42-16403

"Mr. Frierson traces the main currents of the English novel since 1900. . . . Instead of studying a few key figures, he analyses the work of practically every serious English writer of the twentieth century." Current Hist

Booklist 39:45 O 15 '42

Books p40 N 15 '42 220w

"One of the most valuable features of Mr. Frierson's book is the careful delineation of the social and philosophical background which is reflected in fiction. . . . Because of the immense number of novelists passed in review, this study should be of much value as a guide to individuals, clubs, or study groups. Its value for this purpose would, however, have been increased had a bibliography been appended indicating the most important biographical and critical works on each author and also the most noteworthy of the critical and historical studies of the English novel which have appeared in great profusion during the last few years." S. C. C.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 22 '42 800w

"It is only fair to say that if Mr. Frierson's critical faculties are weak, this book is not primarily one of criticism. It is a textbook of the recent history of the English novel and as such it is competently done." Adam Margoshes

FRIERSON, W. C.—Continued

Current Hist 2:380 J1 '42 450w

"Professor Frierson has done a piece of work for which not only the student but also the lay reader will be grateful. . . . It cannot but be admitted that the task has been as difficult as it has been worthy. To say that he has established any sense of unity would not be true, because there was no unity in English fiction during the past half century or so. But he has defined all the numerous trends, analyzing their beginnings and showing how far they went, revealing, too, where some of them met to make a product different from anything that came before. His judgments are fair, and he has a sense of balance almost beyond reproach." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 16 '42 650w

Pratt p15 D '42

"The chief faults of Mr. Frierson's study are an insufficient acquaintance with his material, and a refusal or inability to distinguish between novelty of presentation and novelty of content in fiction." R. E. Roberts

— Sat R of Lit 25:5 J1 11 '42 1500w

FRISKEY, MARGARET. Annie and the wooden skates; a story of Arlington in the 1840's; pictures by Lucia Patton. 63p $1.50 Oxford

42-7638

Story of family life in Arlington, Virginia, with little Annie Lee, the "in-between" of the seven Lee children as heroine. Annie's father was Robert E. Lee, and her grandfather Custis, whose own grandmother was Martha Washington, told Annie stories of Mt Vernon, and of the building of Arlington House. For young readers from six to ten.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 My 3 '42 300w

"Unpretentious as a historical story, it is all the more appealing because of that quality, and out of the pranks and festivities of the Lee children emerges a clear picture of that affectionate and happy family life two decades before the Civil War darkened Arlington. Annie, eager, determined, passionately absorbed in her innumerable pets is a lively figure to capture the interest of modern little girls." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p8 My 24 '42 260w

FRISKEY, MARGARET. Goat afloat; a read-it-yourself story; pictured by Lucia Patton. 32p $1 Whitman, A.

42-15597

Pictures and story describe the experiences of Patsy and Peter, whose Uncle Joe helped them build a boat so they could float on the creek. One day the goat got aboard with disastrous results. Written "in the vocabulary of a preschool child."

Reviewed by Miriam Snow

Library J 67:631 J1 '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 38:139 O '42

FRISKEY, MARGARET. Three smart squirrels and Squee; pictures by Lucia Patton. [40p] $1 McKay

42-15820

Picture-story book for children four to six. It describes the three clever little squirrels and their not-so-clever brother Squee, who could never remember. The three brothers invented a game to teach Squee to remember where he hid his winter's supply of nuts, and it worked.

Reviewed by E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 67:685 Ag '42 80w

"This is a just-right story for children; not too simple, not too clever."

+ Wis Lib Bul 38:139 O '42

FRISKEY, MARGARET. Today we fly; pictured by Lucia Patton. 32p $1 Whitman, A.

How air-minded Peter and his sister and their little brother had a ride in a real plane and visited a model airplane show.

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:118 N 20 '42 20w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

Library J 68:83 Ja 15 '43 50w

FRITZ, PERCY STANLEY. Colorado, the centennial state. 518p 1 map $5; to schools $3.75 Prentice-Hall

978.8 Colorado—History 41-1853

"The first half of the volume is devoted to the 'Background of Colorado History' (geography, Indians, explorers, and fur traders), 'The Pioneer Period, 1858-1861', and 'The Territorial Period, 1861-1876'. The second half treats of 'The State of Colorado, 1876—'. There is a good discussion of recent problems and tendencies in the state. Social history is given appropriate emphasis. The chapter on 'Aesthetic and Cultural Attainments' is an excellent summary. Numerous topics are given comprehensive discussion." (Am Hist R) Index.

"The proportions of the book as expressed in the space given to various subjects, are not above criticism. . . . Errors of fact are rather numerous. . . . Ambiguous and ungrammatical sentences occur rather frequently. . . . [However] much new material is presented in the volume, and the writing is enlivened by numerous anecdotes. The bibliographies at the end of the chapters are generally excellent. Many illustrations and a good index are provided, but there is no list of illustrations. The format of the book is entirely satisfactory." L. R. Hafen

+ — Am Hist R 47:370 Ja '42 550w

"Dr. Fritz's book is accurate and well organized." T. H. Ferri

+ Books p19 Mr 23 '41 250w

FROCHT, MAX MARK. Photoelasticity. v 1. 344p 1 col pl $6 Wiley

620.1123 Photoelasticity (41-15664)

"The present volume is a culmination of ten years of research carried on by the author and his assistants at the Photoelastic Laboratory of the Carnegie Institute of Technology. Although intended as a textbook it should have additional use as a reference work to those having an engineering background. The author concerns himself here only with the basic methods for plane stress analysis. Some sixty odd figures beautifully illustrate the principles advanced." N Y New Tech Bks

"Considerable work has been done in the last few years in advancing the technique of photoelasticity. This new volume will prove to be an important handbook and guide for all investigators in the field."

+ Chem & Met Eng 40:166 Ja '42 80w

"The book is written from the point of view of an engineer and as such should appeal to the designer who would like to know and use the power of photoelasticity for solving certain difficult problems by a quick simple process. Both the author and the publishers are to be congratulated on the many beautiful illustrations and splendid presentation of a fine text and reference book." W. M. Murray

+ Eng N 128:79 Mr 26 '42 280w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:60 O '41

FROME, DAVID, pseud. See Brown, Z.

FROMM, MRS BELLA. Flood and banquets; a Berlin social diary [with an introd. by Frederick T. Birchall]. 332p 1l $3.50 Harper; Cooperation pub. co, inc, 30 Rockefeller plaza, N.Y.

943.086 Germany—Politics and government. Germany—Social life and customs

(W) 42-25964

The author, "Frau Bella," as she was called by the elite of Berlin, was the daughter of a wealthy Bavarian Jewish family. The family fortune was lost after the last war, and Bella became social correspondent for the Ullstein newspaper chain. Her book is made up of her diary covering the years 1930 to 1938, and is a detailed account of German social life during that time. The last chapter recounts her experiences with Nazi agents in this country, when she first came to America. Includes a descriptive list of people mentioned, and an index.

Booklist 39:198 Ja 15 '43

Reviewed by John Elliott

Books p5 D 13 '42 1450w

"The author has a keen eye for both color and character, a lively sense of both the hilarious and the somber, a scalpel wit, a flashing insight into the pomps and other peccadilloes of her unlovely subjects and a handsome magnanimity for those relatively few who are worthy of it. She affords unforgettable glimpses of the persons of the drama she records." W. R. Deuel

+ N Y Times p4 D 6 '42 1200w

"If there was one thing missing in the American public's bill of fare about the Nazis, it was this. With this book we finally should know all—there cannot be another 'angle' on the Reich until the revolution comes." P. R. Knauth

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 D 19 '42 1000w

FROMM, ERICH. Escape from freedom. 305p $2.50 Farrar

323.44 Liberty. Democracy. Totalitarianism. Social psychology (W) 41-14128

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"This impresses the reviewer as a noteworthy book in two different respects. It presents an interpretation of the contemporary crisis of civilization and of its historical background from the Middle Ages through the Renaissance and Reformation and modern history, in terms of what may be called a quasi-psychoanalytic point of view. In contrast with most of the interpretations of the crisis which one picks up these days, this account shows real penetration and knowledge of history and culture history. And it is perhaps equally significant as a reinterpretation of psychoanalysis itself, which moves very far away from the original Freudian conceptions in the direction of good sense. The literary embodiment, amplification, and application of the thesis are perhaps more significant than the thesis itself, which rather lies open to common observation." F. H. Knight

+ Am J Soc 48:299 S '42 260w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:568 Ap '42 20w

Manchester Guardian p3 S 30 '42 230w

"It is too bad that the subjective element so thoroughly pervades this book; it is too bad that it is written in such a heavy, tedious style; it is too bad that it contains so many flatly incorrect statements, especially of Freudian theories. In spite of these faults it is a thoughtful contribution to the problem of loneliness in its modern political implications." Karl Menninger

+ Nation 154:317 Mr 14 '42 850w

Reviewed by George Soule

New Repub 107:800 D 14 '42 1500w

"Once in a blue moon there appears a thinker like Dr Erich Fromm who knows and says not only how and why what we have now is superior to what the axis would thrust upon us, but also how and why our dreams are better than our actualities, and what we had better begin to do about it. Dr Fromm brings to the diagnosis of our present world the background of a training in psychoanalysis pointed into full significance and sound meaning by an un-Freudian relation of psychoanalytic data to the social context and their reinterpretation in terms of 'social character.'" R. K. Washburn

+ Spring'd Republican p10 F 6 '42 1350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p500 O 10 '42 1050w

FROST, ELIZABETH (HOLLISTER) (MRS W. D. BLAIR). This side of land; an island epic; decorations by Pierre Daura. 464p $2.75 Coward-McCann

(W) 42-36319

An epic story of life and love on Nantucket in the early 1800's. Deborah Macy, with her capability and strength, is the most important person on Our Isle. She nurses the sick, helps the poor, gives judgment on community problems, rides to the help of wrecked ships, and manages her house and her children during the many absences of her husband. The Macys had been dismissed from meeting by the Quakers because they were too lively, but the Quakers and all respected Deborah. The whole life of the island ebbs and flows thru the book, which is written in a kind of prose poetry.

"The book is written in an original idiom based on the speech of the island, at least as this is recorded in old letters, journals, and poems, enriched by imagination and a poet's love of the specific word and thing. Whether the people ever talked like this is hardly important, for the idiom is a distilled essence, something like that of Elizabeth Madox Roberts's in The Time of Man. It is earthy, racy, at times beautiful, and always very expressive. One would say that the effect is that of idyl rather than of epic, though there are episodes of powerful drama. The very originality of matter and manner may repel some readers, as it did me at first. . . . A story more completely feminine in a good sense would be hard to imagine. Even apart from the plot and characters, I found myself increasingly fascinated by the revelation of what a sensitive and imaginative woman sees, thinks, feels, and knows, that a man would never notice at all." R. M. Gay

+ Atlantic 170:140 O '42 250w

Booklist 39:48 O 15 '42

"In a prefaced note Mrs. Frost thanks the Nantucket neighbors and friends and the writers of old papers for giving the starting points from which she could learn 'to see things which are not there more plainly than things that are.' Among them she thanks Kezia Fanning for writing a diary—from 1775 to 1820. . . . The old diaries and records may have provided the way of speech and names and episodes with the quality of a ballad. But only a poet in her own right could have caught and sustained the quality which is inherent in this book, both in the swing of the sentences, in its imagery in detail, and in the pattern of the whole, at once as live and as formal as an old dance." Mary Ross

+ Books p4 S 27 '42 850w

"A poet has written a prose book about Nantucket. . . . 'This Side of Land' is more concerned with the innerness of her people than with sand, moor, and houses, though the relationship between place and persons is ever made momentous. The language is chosen for quaintness and beauty, and often, being quaint, it sometimes dims the meaning—or claims the reader's attention for its beauty. It is fascinating, nevertheless, and it is old Nantucket." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 7 '42 650w

"Mrs. Frost's novel is subtitled 'An Island Epic,' and epic it is, if to write an epic is to lard your prose with eccentricities that pass for poetry and make a heavy-handed to-do about the primal forces. There is no question that Mrs. Frost has mastered her historical material: when what she knows about life in Nantucket, as opposed to what she feels, manages to come through her overlaid narrative it is fascinating stuff—which is, of course, all the more reason to regret that she didn't pass it on less self-consciously."

+ Nation 155:457 O 31 '42 110w

"An 'island epic' of Nantucket life . . . rich and painstaking in historical documentation and the minutia of daily living, but written in what is probably the most incredibly lush pseudo-poetic style ever put down on paper. Mrs. Frost attempts poetry by repeating everything in the sentence three times. Her book is a good and exciting story of a Nantucket family, their births, loves and deaths over one generation, but it could best be read in précis form."

FROST, ELIZABETH—Continued

+ — New Repub 107:554 O 26 '42 80w

"For all [the author's] diligence of research, it is not a 'historical novel' in the ordinary sense of that phrase, but a ringing work of the poetic imagination, far-sweeping, deep-searching, full-charged. 'This Side of Land' is literature, not merely because it is alive and beautifully written, but because it achieves—as only writing that is literature can achieve it—the paradox of touching the universal while remaining itself so individual as to be unique." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p8 S 27 '42 1400w

"A novel of wild originality, irritatingly mannered yet often beautiful."

+ — New Yorker 18:74 O 10 '42 60w

FROST, FRANCES M. Christmas in the woods [poem] with drawings by Aldren A. Watson. 29p $1 Harper

811

42-24936

A short poem about the animals in the winter woods at Christmas time, illustrated with ten wash drawings in blue and white.

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 10 '42 50w

"Exquisite text in poetry with two-color wash drawings—for keeps."

+ Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 10w

"Here is a rarely beautiful Christmas book."

A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 18:423 N '42 60w

Reviewed by Marcia Dalphin

Horn Bk 18:sup6 N '42 20w

"Would be charming gift for anyone over twelve, but price will not allow libraries to buy it freely." Evelyn Turpin

+ Library J 67:1069 D 1 '42 40w

"A lovely and unusual Christmas book. . . Both poem and drawings have real feeling for the Winter scene and for the timid wild creatures who, on Christmas Eve in the starlit woods, 'dream of gentleness and a Child.' For children from 5 on and their elders." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 D 6 '42 120w

FROST, FRANCES M. Village of glass. 273p $2.50 Farrar

42-15550

A story of what happens in a New England village when an enemy invades the country and bombs homes and churches. Miss Frost explains in her foreword that this novel was first thought out in 1937 and has no relationship to the events of the present.

Booklist 39:11 S '42

"'Village of Glass' would have been a weak war novel, even as far back as 1917. . . I confess myself baffled in an effort to decide why Miss Frost, who handles the quiet rural scene so ably, felt that in this present novel it was her job to face up to a war." F. H. Bullock

+ — Books p8 Je 28 '42 480w

"An inept and ridiculous novel! It's a toss-up whether Miss Frost is at her worst being all poetic about nature, or all bloody about war, or just too hearty with those Vermont neighbors of hers."

— Nation 155:57 J1 18 '42 150w

New Repub 107:30 J1 6 '42 90w

"The weakest part of her story lies in the introduction of the fifth columnist who brings the army of enemy bombers to the village. . . Admirers of Miss Frost will probably ignore this fault in the book and enjoy the good things which they have come to expect from her—a lyric quality of writing, a homely and, at times, robust sense of humor, and again, her unique characterization of people past their prime of life." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Times p6 Je 28 '42 700w

"Miss Frost may not be properly accused of a lack of unity in either conception or purpose. She has written a beautifully planned study in balance—of horror with beauty, evil with good, pain with peace, death with birth." Bess Jones

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:12 J1 11 '42 380w

FROST, ROBERT. Witness tree. 91p $2 ltd autog ed $7.50 Holt

811

(W) 42-36207

The seventh book of verse by this American poet, and his first in six years. "In his sixties a poet's lyrical days are supposed to be over; that is, his verse is no longer the thing on wings that lyric poetry is. But here in 'A Witness Tree' by Robert Frost is the lyric in all its intensity, indeed, with a greater intensity than the lyrics the poet wrote when he was young." (N Y Times)

"A Witness Tree represents Robert Frost at his best. He has taken a yet further range in his stride. His work develops in his own way, which has been his way from the beginning. He is the experimentalist within the great tradition. He cuts his way through the underbrush of familiar truth, a territory so much more arduous than the imaginary jungles of pure fantasy. He is a master of the unforeseen. Sometimes when he seems to be aiming at us, we hear the explosion in another county. A Witness Tree is a wonderful book, for this age—for any age." Robert Hillyer

+ Atlantic Je '42 700w

Booklist 38:344 My 15 '42

Bookmark 3:9 My '42

"'A Witness Tree' contains a half dozen poems which have a right to stand with the best things he has written. Of these half dozen, 'Come In' is probably destined to be the general favorite. Without departing from the conversational tone which is Frost's especial hall mark, this lyric has color, music, and a triumphant sense of life bubbling through it. 'The Silken Tent,' a love sonnet, carries through an unusual figure with a sureness of touch which only a master could achieve. 'Carpe Diem' is a wise criticism of those who tell us to snatch the present hour. . . Some of the poems here are little more than rhymed fancies; others lack the bullet-like unity of structure to be found in those I have singled out for special praise. The narrative in the book is not equal to the great dramatic narratives to be found in 'North of Boston.' But he has given us enough first-rate poems here to satisfy the most exacting critic, keep us all in his debt, and leave him secure in his enviable place as the dean of American poetry." Wilbert Snow

+ Books p5 My 10 '42 1150w

Reviewed by Katherine Brègy

Cath World 155:626 Ag '42 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '42

"Robert Frost is one of the leading contemporary American poets. In his latest book, the first in seven years, he has produced some of his best verse. His writing is clearer, more pointed, simpler, and richer than it ever has been. 'Come In' is probably the best thing he has done; there is a note of poignancy and true lyricism here that he has not captured before. . . Perhaps the entire message and significance as well as the tone of this little book can be summed up in the presumably proud line: I advocate a semi-revolution. Frost himself is certainly nothing better than a semi-good poet—or a semi-poet. If he is among the best we have in America today then what American poetry needs is a complete revolution." Adam Margashes

+ — Current Hist 2:302 Je '42 500w

Reviewed by Kenneth Porter

New Eng Q 15:548 S '42 200w

"There are many poems in his earlier volumes that are as fine as the poems in 'A Witness Tree,' but few of them bear so strong an impress of the poet. Through the work of a lifetime Robert Frost has been molding himself into what is himself, with all the accidents chiseled away." M. M. Colum

+ N Y Times p5 My 3 '42 1500w

"When another of Robert Frost's books of poems, 'North of Boston,' appeared in the last war, there must have been many readers who felt, as they read that 'book of people' with its tight New England riddles and sly answers, that it was not a timely book. But that is a sort of timeliness that Frost does not pretend to; he has said before and he says again here that he is concerned with the world primarily as a proving ground for the human soul, a focus which does not make for excitability at the latest turns of history. What he has to say about the human soul, however, is timely enough to last for fine poetry and for many years." William Meredith

+ New Repub 106:772 Je 1 '42 750w

"Two memorable poems—'Come In' and 'A Considerable Speck'—in his best manner, together with the gnomic epigrams and rather arch philosophizing characteristic of his later phase."

New Yorker 18:79 My 9 '42 40w

"It is that 'old way of being new' in poetry that Frost preaches. And in this new book in his sixty-seventh year, Mr. Frost adds several occasions to those many on which he has said what we already knew in such way the words become our own as though we had known them, too, all the time." W. T. Scott

+ Poetry 60:146 Je '42 900w

Pratt p16 D '42

"This is a beautiful book, serene, observing, and passionate. It has the characteristic music made out of common speech which is one of Mr. Frost's great gifts—no matter where you met a poem like 'Come In' you would know it was by Mr. Frost—it has the Yankee taste for philosophic laconics which makes him one of our most indigenous products—but, most of all, it has a lyric force and intensity that shows how a mind may know age without losing youth. Mr. Frost has never written any better poems than some of those in this book." S. V. Benet

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 Ap 25 '42 700w

Time 39:91 My 18 '42 450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:95 Je '42

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

Yale R n s 31:808 summer '42 1000w

FROST, ROSAMUND. Contemporary art; the march of art from Cézanne until now; photo research and biographies by Aimée Crane. 240p 130pl 24 col pl $4 Crown

759.915 Painting. Painters. Paintings

42-36393

More than 200 reproductions of modern paintings, with brief text on the course of modern painting and some of its exponents. Biographical notes and bibliography.

Booklist 39:134 D 15 '42

"A spotty, loosely arranged, yet well-grounded survey. . . Its chief value is its really copious illustrations—a hundred and fifty in halftone and twenty-four in color, all full pages."

+ New Yorker 18:104 D 5 '42 50w

FRY, CLEMENTS COLLARD, and ROSTOW, EDNA G. Mental health in college. 365p $2 Commonwealth fund

371.71 Mental hygiene. Students. Personality, Disorders of 43-107

"Data collected during ten years at Yale in the mental hygiene division of the university's student health department furnish the factual materials on which the authors base their scientific study of the mental health of students. With relatively few exceptions, the symptoms and disorders discussed are not those of extreme psychoses but of such milder abnormalities and maladjustments as even 'normal' people may experience." (Christian Century) Index.

Christian Century 60:19 Ja 6 '43 200w

School & Society 56:616 D 19 '42 90w

FULLER, JOHN FREDERICK CHARLES. Decisive battles of the U.S.A. 416p maps $4 Harper [18s Hutchinson]

973 U.S.—History, Military

42-50000

"Detailed descriptions of great battles of American history from Trenton to Meuse-Argonne. Each battle chapter is linked skillfully to next by synopsis covering the intervening period, thus leading to an understanding of political and economic events as well as of military actions. Well documented with numerous references to contemporary records. Maps and plans." (Library J) Index.

"Recommended." H. A. Von Urff

Library J 67:950 N 1 '42 70w

"Here is a book to be enjoyed and proclaimed by any armchair critic or amateur historian, especially if such a reader holds conservative views and a fair world background. It has a permanent, and not a flash-in-the-pan journalistic value. In short, it pleases by not seeking to please." Roger Shaw

+ Sat R of Lit 26:16 Ja 2 '43 550w

Time 40:102 N 30 '42 1550w

FURBUSH, LYDIA. Circus parade [il. by the author]. $2 Macmillan

42-11048

"The number of pages of this brilliant picture-book are not given, because they all open out into one long one, some twelve or more feet long. This is the familiar arrangement of the panorama-book, of which the latest example was 'Animals All,' by the D'Aulaires, and like that, the opposite side of this stretch of color is taken up by successive scenes in black and white showing the other side of things." Books

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 My 31 '42 230w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 28 '42

90w

"The colors are bright and clear, the animals, clowns and riders seem convincingly alive and the big gorilla who brings up the end of the procession appears to be none other than the mighty Gargantua himself. A book that 4 to 7 year olds and some of their elders whose affection for the circus is still warm, will find appealing." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 My 3 '42 220w

FUSSLER, HERMAN HOWE. Photographic reproduction for libraries; a study of administrative problems. (Studies in lib. science) 218p il $3 Univ. of Chicago press

025.129 Microphotography. Microfilms

42-36291

"This text is an attempt to assemble some of the material relative to microphotography, which . . . may be of value to administrative librarians, especially those in university libraries, and others who are interested in the problems of documentary reproduction. Particular stress has been given to those matters which might affect library policy and to those fundamental problems which a library administrator must face when considering the use or the production of photographic reproductions." (Pref) Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:1 S '42

Special Libraries 33:264 S '42

G

GABLE, MARY MARGARET. See Mariella, Sister

GADE, JOHN ALLYNE. All my born days; experiences of a naval intelligence officer in Europe. 408p pl $3.50 Scribner

B or 92 Diplomatic memoirs

42-3936

Autobiography of an American naval intelligence officer. Born in Norway the book tells of his early life there, his coming to America and his education. At the outbreak of the first World war he joined Herbert Hoover's Commission for Relief in Belgium, and when the second World war struck at Belgium he was again there as Naval Attaché. Several chapters are devoted to an account of the second war in Belgium and to a defense of King Leopold. Index.

GADE, J. A.—Continued

Booklist 38:273 Ap 1 '42

"The versatility of 'Jack' Gade has long been recognized on two continents. Few Americans can boast of a successful career in as widely separate fields as architecture, naval intelligence and banking. To these Captain Gade has had added a fourth triumph, for his volume of memoirs is excellent reading. It is true that he is no novice in the writing world." Nicholas Roosevelt

+ Books p5 Mr 22 '42 1150w

"These intimate sketches of democratic life in Norway, of Harvard and New York, and of European capitals during the generation now closing have real charm. Mr. Gade tells a story well, has a kindly generous spirit, even when speaking of Germans, and presents the glamorous rather than the seamy side of diplomatic life." S. B. Fay

+ New Eng Q 15:542 S '42 700wN Y Times p20 J1 12 '42 700w

"Teachers who believe that history is best learned through biography will put Captain Gade's memoirs on their modern history lists. His 'part of which I was' helps illuminate the background of two world wars." H. C. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 F 28 '42 360wSpringf'd Republican p10 Ap 28 '42 440w*Wis Lib Bul 38:46 Mr '42

GAINES, AUDREY. The voodoo goat. 255p $2 Crowell

42-3170

Detective story.

"Once again Detective Chauncey O'Day and Carrie Storm, his red-haired fiancée, serve up a shuddery and amusing case. All-out Virginia romance, that's what it is, with voodoo, honey-suckles, crime in the swamp and an ending that isn't so happy for the one who slew mean old Aunt Abby." Will Cuppy

Books p13 F 15 '42 110w

"With so many possible psychopathic cases in the cast, the crime problem appears utterly hopeless, but O'Day, who is a private detective, eventually comes up with a solution that is logical enough, although how it might stand up in a court of law is another question." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 F 1 '42 230w

GAISBERG, FREDERICK WILLIAM. Music goes round. 273p il $3 Macmillan

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Phonograph (W) 42-25270

"Informal, nontechnical history of fifty years in gramophone industry, from its first trials with discs and cylinders, its troubles with sibilants and stringed instruments, to its present excellent recordings of whole symphonies and operas. Author helped perfect first disc record and was chief recorder of British His Master's Voice Company." (Library J) Index.

"His autobiography is a gold mine of musical history and anecdotal illumination of musicians' foibles. Inevitably, however—considering the nature of the man himself and of the job that fitted him so perfectly—it is a gold mine worked with uncritical abandon and no pretense of scientific exploration. And, needless to say, his critical deficiency extends no less to his own writing, which is loose, unchronological and obvious to an extreme." R. D. Darrell

+ Books p19 Ja 17 '43 490w

"The Music Goes Round' describes the rise of the phonograph recording industry, and the author's interesting and useful rôle therein.

There are revealing anecdotes about such recording artists as Caruso, Patti, Chaliapin; but the tale is dull and poorly organized."

+ Commonweal 37:332 Ja 15 '43 70w

"His extensive travels in Far East and Europe and his many anecdotes of the great in music make fascinating reading for the lovers of records. Recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 67:737 S 1 '42 80w

"It would be a pleasure to report that out of his background Mr. Gaisberg has woven a fascinating memoir. But the truth is that it is absorbing only in part. The principal difficulty is that Mr. Gaisberg is not a writer, and if any one helped him in the preparation of these reminiscences, the assistance was not thoroughgoing or professional. For much of the writing is awkward and anticlimatic, and the organization of the material is loose and disjointed. However, if you are interested in recording history or in the figures who have made records, it might be wise to make allowances for the writing in order to get the information and the color of the subject." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p20 N 29 '42 750w

"This book, while neither original nor a work of real scholarship, has several contributions to make. The cumbersome distinction between folk song and art song is abolished, thus bringing such worthies as Stephen Foster down from an uncomfortable perch between the two. The music has been grouped in a number of easy categories. . . . A nice touch is a page-long humorous dialogue printed as the traditional accompaniment of the well-known Arkansas Traveler. The editor's emphasis on humor seems unnecessary, for humor, as well as tragedy, comes as a matter of course in American life as reflected in this music. The musical accompaniments are very simple and in good taste." E. T. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 26:30 Ja 30 '43 270w

"Mr. Gaisberg could easily have fallen into a stuffy attitude in telling intimate details about the prima donnas and temperamental tenors but his is a familiarity that breeds good-natured tolerance rather than an overly worshipful attitude. The anecdotes pour forth from him in an apparently inexhaustible flow. He was a guest at Patti's home when she made her first recordings at the age of 63. There is scarcely a musical great of the past half century that he did not know well. The atmosphere of the concert hall, the opera and the recording room is all there in 'The Music Goes Round' and a glamorous, glittering atmosphere it is." Milton Berliner

+ Springf'd Republican p6e D 13 '42 470w

GALE, ELIZABETH. Winged boat; il. by Harve Stein. 190p $2 Putnam

(W) 42-18495

The winged boat is Henry Hudson's Half Moon. The story describes the tribal life in the Indian villages along the Hudson, and the rivalry among the young boys of the tribe when Hudson promised to take two boys back to Holland with him. For boys aged eleven to fourteen.

Booklist 39:35 O 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 Ja 17 '43 260w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:336 S '42 100w

"Plot, based on historical fact, contains many thrilling episodes. Good picture of Indian daily life, their customs and beliefs. Attractive illustrations by Harve Stein." M. N. Miller

+ Library J 67:741 S 1 '42 90w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 30w

"Writing in a pleasant, unforced style, [Miss Gale] contrives to make her Indian characters alive and interesting. It is difficult for any of us today to know exactly what the Indian boy of some 300 years ago was like, but at least the behavior of Miss Gale's young hero rings true to human nature in the situations in which she has placed him, and boy readers will recognize his kinship to themselves. Well written and fresh in plot and incident, this is a worthwhile addition to the stories of American Indian life."

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 30 '42 440w

GALE, LEAH. Hurdy-gurdy holiday; lithographs by Barbara Latham. [48p] $1.50 Harper

42-25680

Picture-story book charting the adventurous course of a lively little monkey on a rampage in East Side New York. For one hour Frisco escaped from the hurdy gurdy man, to spread excitement and destruction over a wide area. Children six to ten.

"This chase is followed along its course by strikingly successful large lithographs in color, of street scenes and characters in the section of this city richest in color and customs. These are not soft, mellow pictures: their outlines are decided, their colors sharp, as in strong sunshine. Their humor is vigorous, their fidelity to the actual scene remarkable, considering how 'modern' they are in treatment. It is, indeed, a picture-book of lower New York in crowded action—just before the East Side's 'El' stopped running, for one of Pietro's adventures takes place on the track." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 22 '42 250w

"Large picture-story book, well worth the price." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 67:1106 D 15 '42 50w

GALLAGHER, LOUIS JOSEPH, tr. See Tri-gault, N. The China that was

GALLAGHER, O'DOWD. Action in the East. [Eng title: Retreat in the East]. 300p $3 Doubleday [8s 6d Harrap]

940.542 World war, 1939—East (Far East). World war, 1939—Personal narratives, South African (W) 42-35293

The author, a South African newspaperman, was the only reporter other than Cecil Brown who was permitted to go on the last tragic journey of the Prince of Wales and the Repulse. He spent two hours in the oil-covered ocean when the Repulse sank; he rode a jeep from Rangoon to Mandalay, was in Singapore when it fell, and has here reported all these scenes.

"In his political judgment, as in his strategic hindsight, I suspect that emotion overbalances knowledge; but Mr. Gallagher writes as he feels, and his book is valuable for its honest and scathing pages of action." Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic 170:132 O '42 190w

Booklist 39:7 S '42

"Gallagher is no man of letters, and admits as much at the opening of his book, but he is a craftsman of proved merit at news reporting from adventurous fields. When he has something boiling within him, that he wants to say, he knows how to say it." Allen Raymond

+ Books p5 Ag 23 '42 1350w

"In this writer's opinion, [this] is the first comprehensive treatment of the Malaya and Burma campaigns which makes sense out of those tragic defeats." J. C. Harsch

+ Christian Science Monitor p22 O 22 '42 700w

"This honest, exciting account of the events preceding and following the fall of Malaya is one of the best pieces of war reporting to be produced in the present conflict. Its value as propaganda does not suffer from omission of the emotional special-pleading, obvious sensation-mongering and plain 'glory-writing' that have disfigured and rendered invalid most of the front-line narratives of World War II. In full realization that this is the day of the publicists, one must be excused for calling many of the war-books mere excuses for exhibitionism on the part of their authors. Mr. Gallagher's 'I' on the contrary, is humble, informed and discreet." J. G. E. Hopkins

+ Commonweal 36:523 S 18 '42 550w

"The questions Mr. Gallagher raises will have to be answered some time; his book will help to keep them alive. There are many things we must not be allowed to forget or to pardon."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 18 '42 350w
New Repub 107:294 S 7 '42 60w

"As in all good books of this kind—and this is why there can be so many good ones—the comment springs naturally from the straightforward reporting; and O. D. Gallagher's straightforward reporting is always stirring and high-spirited as it is effortless and clear. Here is what happened, among soldiers and civilians, on land, in the air, at sea, as this reporter saw it. And his conclusions not only pay homage to bravery and point to the tragedy of selfishness and complacency, but leave us with thoughts, also, about the Japanese."

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 30 '42 800w

"A minimum of speculation, the author's eye for accurate human detail, and his unwillingness to slant the facts in any direction but true north make this a very readable, though perhaps not out-and-out distinguished, war book."

+ New Yorker 18:58 Ag 22 '42 90w

"Every one interested in the Empire should read this book, soldiers, sailors, airmen and civilians. The three forces will be able to read it with easy consciences. It is to be feared that some of the civilians will not be able to do so; they certainly should not be able to do so."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p471 S 26 '42 1000w

GALLAGHER, PATRICK (PADDY the COPE, pseud). Paddy the Cope; an autobiography; introd. by Dorothy Canfield Fisher [Eng title: My story, by Paddy the Cope]. 288p maps $2.50 Devin-Adair [7s 6d Cape, J.]

B or 92 Cooperation (W) 42-8331

Autobiography of an Irishman from Donegal, from his early youth to his successful founding of a cooperative, or cope, which brought him success and relief to his friends and neighbors. Besides being a story of the author's life, the book contains many sidelights on life among the very poor, and an account of the growth of the cooperative movement in England, Ireland and Scotland.

Booklist 38:308 Ap 15 '42

Bookmark 4:14 N '42

"'Paddy the Cope' is a charming book. As Dorothy Canfield Fisher explains in an introduction, the book is interesting because it is honest and human, and it is charming because it is written with exquisite simplicity in the most colorful, most attractive, literary language there is—good, native, rural, Irish-English." Joseph Driscoll

+ Books p4 Ap 5 '42 900w

Cath World 156:125 O '42 200w

"The whole story is aglow with the wit and warmth of the Irish temperament. Cut the narrative at any point and it will bleed, so deeply human is it."

+ Christian Century 59:434 Ap 1 '42 130w

"This is a fascinating autobiography of a genial but 'fighting' Irishman and the story of how he transformed his community by instituting the Cooperative Movement and carrying it to successful functioning. It is the most 'naive' book I have ever read! It is written with the simplicity of a child—but with the flair of witty maturity." T. F. Opie

+ Churchman 156:17 Jl 1 '42 210w

"Very few modern books can stand re-reading. This book is one of the few. It is worth reading if only for the Irish-English of it. Its wee old words like the rutty roads of the townland of Templecrone bring you from one homespun thought to another until at the end you feel you have been living with them all a long time. But more than the telling, what is told is good." John Monaghan

+ Commonweal 35:538 Mr 20 '420w

Pratt p9 D '42

Reviewed by Horace Kallen

Sat R of Lit 25:4 My 23 '42 650w

GALLAGHER, PATRICK—Continued

"Here is something new in the field of cooperative literature. Written without pretension or affectation, the story of 'Paddy the Cope' grips and sways one as does no other cooperative book that this reviewer has ever read. . . . It is a grand book; a moving and inspiring book. It should be required reading for every American, certainly for the two million who are organized in the American cooperative movement." B. B. Fowler

+ Survey 78:253 S '42 400w

Wis Lib Bul 38:119 J1 '42

GALLICO, PAUL WILLIAM. Golf is a friendly game; il. by Herbert F. Roesse. 274p $2.50 Knopf

42-20811

Eight short stories about golf, all but one previously published in the Saturday Evening Post. Contents: Golf's a big business; Wives can be useful; The tomboy and the lady; The witch of Woonsapucket; The great charity open; William Fowler and the fifth column; Golf is a nice friendly game; The monster and the infant.

"This is a good and an amusing book and any golfer who reads it will have a lot of fun doing so. . . . Of the eight stories, my favorites are The Tomboy and the Lady, a solid little number about a Woman's National Championship which was won by the loser and lost by the winner, and The Witch of Woonsapucket, in which a P. G. A. championship gets all tangled up with pixies and little brown folk." Jack Goodman

+ Books p12 S 20 '42 550w

"It's all escape fiction marked by heavy-handed humor. Golf addicts, experts and duffers who take the game very seriously may find Mr. Gallico's clowning highly amusing. Non-golfers and readers who prefer their humor light and keen will not go beyond the first hole in a twosome with Mr. Gallico." Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p28 S 27 '42 500w

Pratt p12 D '42

GALLOWAY, GEORGE BARNES, ed. Planning for America, by George B. Galloway and associates. 713p maps $4 Holt

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. U.S.—Social conditions. Natural resources 41-12176

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"One can easily point to unevenness and omission which seem to be inevitable in a joint work of this kind. By and large, however, the undertaking has been planned carefully and executed faithfully. It covers a very broad field of endeavor and, as a whole, forms a first-rate contribution toward a clearer understanding of the potentialities of our dynamic order." S. M. Rosen

+ — Am J Soc 48:278 S '42 340w

"On the whole, the volume is not only a reporting job, but a salesman's product. . . . While useful as a partial substitute for a single catholic mind reviewing the total scene, it has yet left ample room for considerable variation in the degree of agreement and conviction. . . . Undoubtedly the job performed by Mr. Galloway and his associates has been useful. Yet it is an introductory effort which merits repeated attempts by other students of social travail in America." Charles McKinley

Am Pol Sci R 36:134 F '42 1100w

Bookmark 3:4 Ja '42

"This is undoubtedly the most nearly complete symposium of authoritative opinions and statements of fact on the subject of planning in and for the United States yet to be housed between the covers of one book. The list of contributing associates would be well-nigh a roll call of the leading professional consultants and staff members of the National Resources Planning Board and of the principal administrators and planners employed by other regular and independent agencies of the federal government. . . . One may describe the general value of this book by saying that it shows the place which geographic studies have or might have in the broader phases of planning and implementing plans of social and economic scope. It shows further, by a list of 13 assumptions given in Mr. Galloway's prefatory statements, the basic social and economic problems and conditions requisite for the operation of our democratic institutions—assumptions, for the most part, too frequently ignored by geographers who interest themselves in the field of planning. Finally, the importance of regional analysis to other disciplines of thought is forcefully shown, and the value of such analyses made by geographers and other field workers is thereby reasserted." M. J. Proudfoot

Geog R 32:348 Ap '42 430w

Pratt p10 O '42

Reviewed by J. E. Ivey, Jr.

Social Forces 21:242 D '42 300w

GALLOWAY, GEORGE BARNES. Postwar planning in the United States. 158p pa 60c Twentieth century fund

309.173 Reconstruction (1939-)—U.S.

42-10678

"In this directory Dr. Galloway analyzes the plans and publications of the 100 or more agencies in this country which are planning for the period after the war. He describes the work of 35 governmental agencies which are engaged in dealing with some part of the problem, giving their principal personnel and addresses at which further information may be secured. Similar information is provided concerning 33 private agencies, 11 industrial and financial organizations, 16 trade associations and 7 transportation agencies now actively engaged in postwar planning research." Christian Century

Reviewed by Belle Zeller

Am Pol Sci R 36:781 Ag '42 260w

Reviewed by Melchior Palyi

Am Soc R 7:878 D '42 400w

Chem & Met Eng 49:168 Je '42 190w

Christian Century 59:664 My 20 '42 170w

New Repub 106:582 Ap 27 '42 50w

'A convenient handbook for all students of problems of postwar reconstruction.' H. E. Jensen

+ Social Forces 21:243 D '42 220w

GANDHI, MOHANDAS KARAMCHAND. My appeal to the British; ed. by Anand T. Hingorani. Am ed 79p $1 Day

954 India—Politics and government. World war, 1939—India (W)

"A compilation of about twenty statements made by the mahatma between April 26 and July 26, 1942. Nehru forwarded it to the American publisher just before his own arrest. It is a complete collection of Gandhi's authorized utterances during those three crucial months ending a few days before the decisive meeting of the Indian National Congress. The argument is that the British should get out and stay out." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:1626 D 30 '42 160w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p14 D 13 '42 1100w

GANN, ERNEST KELLOGG. Getting them into the blue. 154p il $2 Crowell

629.13 Airplanes—Design and construction. Airplane industry and trade (W) 42-17187

Describes the making and testing of American airplanes, for the non-professional reader. Illustrated with photographs and diagrams.

Booklist 38:436 J1 15 '42

"'Getting Them Into the Blue' is an account of how an airplane is planned, built, powered and tested. It is written for boys; but this would be a particularly good book also for the intelligent adult who feels he ought to know something about the machine that is revolutionizing our world. It would certainly be good reading for school teachers and for fathers who want to be able to answer questions." Wolfgang Langewiesche

+ Books p22 S 27 '42 130w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 25 '42 180w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 10w

Wis Lib Bul 38:116 J1 '42

GARD, HORATIO V. Infinite man. 291p $2.50
Humphries

110 Man

42-4529

"The author is a lawyer who has for many years been meditating on the nature of man. Being unencumbered by technical training in this field of research, he is under no temptation to follow any traditional groove. The result is not orthodox anthropology, either scientific or theological, but it contains many passages that will be provocative of thought." (Christian Century) This book is based on an earlier work, Man (Book Review Digest, 1927).

Christian Century 58:141 N 12 '41 60w

"While Mr. Gard has evidently read extensively and reflected much, he cannot have consorted much with scientists, certainly not with trained theologians; for there are glaring scientific errors and an unawareness of systematized religious thought. . . Yet this is not to say but what the author's discoveries are very real to him; his limitations impel him to regard them as original." A. L. B.-C.

Churchman 156:31 F 15 '42 90w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Case of the careless kitten. 281p $2 Morrow

(W) 42-19939

Detective story.

Booklist 39:122 D 1 '42

"Yes, it's a brand new Perry Mason tale, fully up to snuff." Will Cuppy

+ Books p20 S 13 '42 250w

"The Case of the Careless Kitten' which is one of the best of the Perry Mason tales, varies just a little from Mr. Gardner's usual pattern. The action is as swift, the plot as complicated, the lawyer's activities as preposterous and astute; but Helen Kendal, Franklin Shore's niece, is given an uncommonly important part in the book's beginning; Perry Mason is introduced with some real description; the action is carried out with less dependence on rapid-fire talk." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p10 S 13 '42 250w

"As good as ever."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 S 12 '42 40w

Time 40:104 O 5 '42 50w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Case of the drowning duck. 284p $2 Morrow

(W) 42-14085

Detective story.

Booklist 38:369 Je 1 '42

"The major premises may be hard to swallow, but wait until Perry gets going in the big courtroom scene, pitting his legal wits against a battery of Grade B brains and remarking at times: 'Objected to. Incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.' Early in the game he remarks to his secretary, Della Street, 'It's a situation that's loaded with emotional dynamite.' It becomes more so as the plot rolls along." Will Cuppy

Books p13 My 31 '42 230w

"Besides displaying some new examples of Mason's forensic strategy, this story explains how a duck can be drowned—and it is not done with mirrors." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p17 My 31 '42 240w

"Hard to beat."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:18 Je 6 '42 40w

"Enough plot and action for two novels."

+ Time 39:84 Je 1 '42 30w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. D.A. cooks a goose. 249p $2 Morrow

(W) 41-27717

Detective story.

Booklist 38:190 F 1 '42

"Though the scene and personae might strike you as a trifle depressing at first, trust Mr. Gardner to spruce up the story with enigmatic developments aiming straight at customer satisfaction." Will Cuppy

+ Books p11 Ja 4 '42 260w

"After reading this book we are more than ever convinced that Douglas Selby will never replace Perry Mason in the affections of the Erle Stanley Gardner fans." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p12 Ja 4 '42 200w

GARDNER, MARY SEWALL. So build we.
223p $2.25 Macmillan

42-2242

"So Build We presents in fictional form a series of episodes in the life of a public health nurse executive. [The heroine] is just one of any number of nurses who come face to face with professional and human problems in their everyday work." Am J Pub Health

"This book is a real contribution to public health nursing literature. It will serve a purpose which no other book on the subject meets. It should be read by student nurses, public health nurses, physicians, health officers and lay persons interested in community service, and if one has no specialized interest in social programs it is, at any rate, a delightful novel." A. H. Grant

+ Am J Pub Health 32:1291 N '42 270w

"So Build We is well-written, with delightful touches of humor. It would make an excellent addition to the vocational guidance shelf of high school and college libraries." D. V. Whipple, M. D.

+ J Home Econ 35:114 F '43 150w

"While the actual incidents and characters may be fictional, one cannot but feel that [the heroine] reveals the author herself, who thus lets us into the life of one of the women who has led and molded public health nursing for a quarter of a century, not only here but also in Europe." A. R. Winslow

+ Survey 78:207 J1 '42 430w

GARLAND, JASPER VANDERBILT, comp.
Federal regulation of labor unions. (Reference shelf) 286p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

331.88 Trade unions—U.S. Labor laws and legislation—U.S. (W) 42-966

Arguments for and against federal regulation of labor unions and discussion of the responsibility of unions, methods of regulation, internal problems of unions, etc. Bibliography.

"While the volume has been compiled as an aid to debaters, it serves the further purpose of making available a handy source of references upon this ever-lively subject. . . The volume makes no pretense to being anything more than a handbook for consultation and an introduction to the 'significant differences' and 'dominant positions' held on the question. As such, it keeps well abreast of the standard set by other issues in the Reference Shelf series." H. P. Goss

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:787 Ag '42 150w

Booklist 38:191 F 1 '42

Christian Century 59:22 Ja 7 '42 30w

Pratt p10 O '42

GARNETT, ARTHUR CAMPBELL. A realistic philosophy of religion. 331p $3 Willett

201 Religion—Philosophy (W) 42-23106

"Professor Garnett finds the essence of religion in the disinterested moral will, and with this as his basic thesis he traces the development of religion in the individual and in the race in an interesting and at times convincing fashion. The conflict between the self-centeredness of the natural man and his altruistic will leads to the conviction that the demands of the altruistic will are those of a divine, superhuman agency. God as the immanent will points beyond to a transcendent realm. Christianity at least means this: 'the religious ideal, the goodness of the divine as found within, the historic leadership of Jesus, and the cultivation and implementation of the ideal in and through the society formed around him.' It is through faith in these things that men find salvation." (Churchman) Bibliography. Index.

GARNETT, A. C.—Continued

Booklist 39:131 D 15 '42

"American religious philosophy has found in Professor Garnett a highly competent and sensitive interpreter. In this major work he gives mature and persuasive expression to the mind and spirit of liberal religion. He has achieved a tightly woven view of what religion is, of the grounds for religious belief, of what Christianity is and might become, and of the hope man may still hold for man. His work will produce real excitement in contemporary discussion as he affirms some basic tenets of the liberal faith in the face of the trend away from them. His liberal optimism about human nature and his emphasis on the moral element in religion are the more contagious because he is himself a realistic critic of moral complacency." D. D. Williams

+ Christian Century 60:80 Ja 20 '43 1700w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller

Churchman 157:16 Ja 1 '43 180w

"This admirable book should help to remedy a sad situation, which is that our young are likely to be educated in regard to many matters of secondary importance but in regard to religion and frequently without knowledge of even the most elementary facts known to scholars in the field. Professor Garnett builds upon the solid ground of what religion is most certainly known to be and proceeds cautiously, with candor and good logic, to clarify the more difficult and controversial aspects." Charles Harts-horne

+ J Religion 23:70 Ja '43 600w

GARNETT, CHRISTOPHER BROWNE. Quest for wisdom; an introd. to philosophy. 322p $2 Crofts

100 Philosophy

42-6937

"The purpose of this volume is to make available to the student in the introductory course in philosophy, as well as the average lay reader, a readable survey of the major issues and problems of philosophy as component, integral parts of a single, unified, and vital quest—the quest for wisdom." (Pref) Reading lists. Index.

"By customary standards the author has done an excellent job. The book is readable without being offensively written down. It has an integrating thesis which aids in tying together the many theories dealing with the problems it canvasses. And it exhibits creditable discrimination in the choice and organization of the representative material included. In reading the text one also gets the impression that the author has seriously wrestled with the problem the instructor faces in trying to convey to the beginner some sense of the what and the why of philosophy. But, like most of the other recent introductions to philosophy the writer has examined, The Quest for Wisdom is really old wine in old bottles with a new trade-mark and label." George Gentry

+ Ethics 53:75 O '42 450w

"Unfortunately, Mr. Garnett's vision of the philosophic enterprise is neither clear nor accurate. . . . In addition to being deficient in providing information, the book is conspicuously unsuccessful in performing the other major function of an introductory text—that of stimulating the student to further critical thought about philosophical problems. The tendency to represent many problems, notably in epistemology and in connection with the metaphysical categories, as painlessly solvable by taking a broad enough (and superficial enough) view, is not designed to arouse genuine interest in these questions. Even more discouraging is the author's attitude toward the two metaphysical problems which he regards as still unsolved, those of human immortality and the existence of God." M. C. & E. L. Beardsley

— J Philos 39:446 J1 30 '42 420w

GARRETT, HELEN. Jobie; drawings by Connie Moran. 206p $2 Messner

(W) 42-18954

Jobie lived on a hilltop dairy farm, probably in upstate New York. His pleasant life there, his interest in foxes, beavers, raccoons, and other little animals, wild and tame, all are described in this story. For children eight and nine.

Booklist 39:16 S '42

"Reduced to bare facts, nothing much happens, but none of these facts are bare; they are clothed in the emotions country children feel—and so seldom have the power or even the desire to express—about the life that is their world, the country life whose love they keep warm in their hearts through many prosperous city years." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 8 '42 300w

"Can be read by eight- and nine-year olds and to younger children. A Junior Literary Guild selection." E. W. Turpin

+ Library J 67:685 Ag '42 100w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:886 O 15 '42 20w

"In this day good stories of contemporary farm life are all too rare in the reading diet of younger children, those of 6 to 8 or 9 who have graduated to more substantial fare than picture books. For them this story of Jobie seems emphatically right."

+ N Y Times p9 S 20 '42 320w

Wis Lib Bul 38:140 O '42

GARST, DORIS SHANNON. Kit Carson, trail blazer and scout; il. by Harry Daugherty. 241p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Carson, Christopher—Juvenile literature (W) 42-8092

As a boy Kit Carson was so small in the crowd of his tall brothers that his father called him "the runt of the litter." At fifteen he ran away from his Missouri home and joined a freighter caravan bound for Sante Fe. From that time until his death at the age of fifty-nine Kit Carson's was a well-known name in the chronicles of the American west. This story of his life is suitable for junior and senior high schools. Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:334 My 1 '42

"An older boy who follows Kit Carson's adventures gets the makings of a historical Western, soberly but emphatically told. . . . It is a sympathetic presentation of a character dear to boy nature and the American heart." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 5 '42 430w

"A stirring experience, and boys may benefit through living vicariously the hair-raising adventures of this hero of other difficult days in America." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 11 '42 90w

"Interesting story; index, bibliography, and glossary add to reference value." Alice Martin

+ Library J 67:369 Ap 15 '42 100w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 20w

Wis Lib Bul 38:99 Je '42

GARTH, DAVID. Manila masquerade, and other stories. 304p $2 Kinsey

42-14360

A collection of novelettes and short stories by the author of Tiger Milk (Book Review Digest, 1941). Contents: Manila masquerade; Stuart rides again; Bermuda thrash; Told by the villain; Snow maiden; Even the ocean laughed; Write your own ticket.

"David Garth has a gift for writing romantic tales as few popular magazine writers do. He never misses a spot."

Books p10 My 24 '42 350w

"There is nothing in 'Manila Masquerade' to strain the intellect unduly, though there is nothing, on the other hand, to actually offend it. The best, and worst, is that one can say for Mr. Garth's short stories is that they are mildly amusing tripe of a rather dated order—synthetic, somewhat silly, but certainly innocuous." E. H. Walton

N Y Times p7 Je 7 '42 450w

GARTH, DAVID. Thunderbird. 275p $2 Kinsey 42-10936

A Nazi aviator, escaped from a Canadian prison; a girl who had inherited a Vermont country store and a desire for revenge on the man who had defrauded her father; and a young American naval designer find themselves on separate missions on a small West Indies island. There follow fights on land, sea and air and victory, of sorts, for all three.

Booklist 38:369 Je 1 '42

"If your interest flags or your attention drags on this one, it must be that you flag and drag easily. David Garth has done his share, drawing many threads of plot into a stout strand of story, developed ingeniously and at a lively pace. We are inclined to rate it about the best he has written." Lisle Bell

+ Books p14 My 17 '42 200w

"Whether you read Mr. Garth's novels for the adventure, the mystery or the love story, they may be trusted to carry interest along all three lines. In this one the Nazi plot is the most exciting." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p18 My 3 '42 200w

GAUNT, WILLIAM. Pre-Raphaelite tragedy. 256p 11 $3 Harcourt [10s 6d Cape, J]

759.9 Preraphaelitism. English poetry—History and criticism 42-22487

A narrative account of the group of artists and writers known as the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood, who flourished during the fifties of the nineteenth century. Index.

Booklist 39:45 O 15 '42

"Mr. Gaunt has revived a fascinating story with a keen relish for its humors and absurdities as well as its tragedy. His book may pleasantly remind us of a world less troubled than ours, but it does not invite us to evade the human problem of modern civilization. Rather it indicates how sensitively, like a cultural barometer, the arts can advise us of trouble brewing beyond our horizons." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p4 N 8 '42 950w

"Much literature has grown up about Pre-Raphaelitism, and its leaders have been the subjects of biographies. But Mr. Gaunt has done a valuable service in presenting this composite biography of them all and a survey of the movement. He is somewhat lacking in appreciation of its permanent values and perhaps over insistent upon the eccentricities of its protagonists, and he is surer than I am that its light really failed with its own disappearance, but a more spritely and diverting 'tragedy' one could not hope to find." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 59:1185 S 30 '42 1300w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore
Churchman 156:31 O 15 '42 300w

"For a whole generation the movement has been under a cloud of misunderstanding. Mr. Gaunt's book will certainly dissipate the cloud, for in writing it he has penetrated to the heart of his subject. He has understood the greatness of these men who could make a dream come true by believing passionately in it and by making works of art that fitted their beliefs." F. N.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 15 '42 330w

"Mr. Gaunt's book begins in a vein of rather ironic superiority, but as it proceeds it takes on gravity from some quality in the Pre-Raphaelites themselves—the quality, perhaps, that justifies Mr. Gaunt in calling their story a tragedy."

+ Nation 156:67 Ja 9 '43 340w

"An interwoven account of the chief Pre-Raphaelite figures which is both brilliant biography and a penetrating study of the movement as a whole. . . Mr. Gaunt's grasp of the elements which combined in Pre-Raphaelitism and his grasp of the personalities, major and minor, through which these elements expressed themselves make his book perhaps the best study of the subject we have, as it is certainly the most readable."

+ New Repub 107:618 N 9 '42 180w

"Mr. Gaunt writes with judgment, knowledge and taste. While alive to all that is comic in the history of the Pre-Raphaelites, he never sinks into a patronizing snigger, and his work is calculated to dispel many false opinions." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:243 Ap 11 '42 1450w

Discussion by Harry Ballam

New Statesman & Nation 23:274 Ap 25 '42 280w

"'The Pre-Raphaelite Tragedy' makes more sprightly reading than its title would lead one to expect, for it is written with zest and sometimes with humor. It is, however, regrettable that while he follows his characters across land and sea, Mr. Gaunt seldom used the plumbline to sound their inner depths." Frances Winwar

+ N Y Times p4 S 13 '42 1050w

"Witty, closely studied account of an un-Victorian Victorian movement. Mr. Gaunt at times reminds us of Strachey and his book is consistently readable, provided you are interested in the subject."

+ New Yorker 18:71 S 19 '42 40w

Time 40:92 S 21 '42 1650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p210 Ap 25 '42 3550w

GAUVREAU, EMILE HENRY, and COHEN, LESTER. Billy Mitchell. 306p map $2.50 Dutton

B or 92 Mitchell, William. Aeronautics, Military (W) 42-20156

Account of the life and struggles of the "founder of our air force and prophet without honor." (Subtitle) General Mitchell fought a long, losing battle for his belief in the importance of the airplane in war. He stressed this factor up to the day of his death, and some of his dire prophecies are coming true in the present war. But in his life time he was discredited by all but a few, and he died "a prophet without honor" in his own country, altho his work was recognized in Germany.

Booklist 39:31 O 1 '42

"The book bears evidence of having been hurriedly organized. Packed with melodrama, it lashes out in every chapter with two fists against the ubiquitous 'air trust' and the other enemies of air power. . . High drama is sprinkled throughout the volume. . . Until a better book on this subject appears this easy-reading, swift-moving book will be read eagerly by those to whom the name of Billy Mitchell is already sainted." W. B. Ziff

+ Books p5 S 6 '42 1350w

"There is much padding in these pages and much careless writing. They bring to mind the profiteering scandals so costly in human lives, and the crooked work of the aviation corporations during the administrations of Wilson and of Harding. Inevitably the authors' failure to name the firms involved throws some doubt on the accuracy of this account; but of course the substance of the story is known to everyone. With all its limitations, the book deserves to be well pondered by the American people."

+ Cath World 156:125 O 42 270w

"There are many things here Americans should know for their own future good. The book is well documented with quotations. There are many Americans who will cry out against raising these issues today. But they are not dead issues. They have vital significance and there is no use in burying our heads in the sand and refusing to face them. The ostrich, however, is a notoriously difficult bird to kill." William Agar

GAUVREAU, E. H.—Continued

+ Commonweal 36:521 S 18 '42 900w

"Controversial in tone, book is timed to meet rising interest in this celebrated quarrel. One-sided picture. Easy adult reading." J. C. Shipman

+ Library J 67:737 S 1 '42 80w

Reviewed by Frederick Graham

N Y Times p7 S 27 '42 1400w

"A dramatic and touching story, done in free-swinging journalese."

+ New Yorker 18:60 S 5 '42 90w

GAVIAN, MRS RUTH (WOOD). Education for economic competence in grades I to VI. 190p $2.10 Teachers college

372.833 Economics—Study and teaching. Education of children 42-16967

"An analysis of courses of study illustrated with sample materials." (Subtitle) "It includes an abundance of concrete material obtained from questionnaires, personal interviews, classroom observations, and the analysis of textbooks and of courses of study used in grade VI and below which have been published since January 1930. Fifteen objectives stated in elementary courses of study were considered to have a bearing on economic competence but 'not one of the curriculum bulletins examined contained all fifteen.' Those most frequently appearing were the practice of thrift, conservation of material resources and property, a knowledge of business terms and practices, occupational orientation, ability to select and use consumer goods, and understanding of social-economic problems." (J Home Econ) Bibliography. Index.

"The volume is a scholarly presentation and is a positive contribution to the literature in the field of social-studies instruction." R. B. Weaver

+ El School J 43:249 D '42 800w

"This study should prove of value to all those concerned with the organization and development of economic education in secondary schools and colleges, as well as on the elementary school level. . . Mrs. Gavian is an experienced writer so that the form in which her study is presented is such as to aid the reader in easily recognizing the relationships and relative importance of the numerous topics considered and the resulting conclusions and recommendations drawn from the study." A. L. Edwards

+ J Home Econ 36:484 S '42 300w

School & Society 55:540 My 9 '42 10w

GAXOTTE, PIERRE. Frederick the Great; tr. by R. A. Bell. 420p il $3.75 Yale univ. press [15s Bell, G]

B or 92 Frederick II, the Great, king of Prussia A42-2150

Biography of Frederick the Great, emphasizing his Franco-German temperament, his friendship with Voltaire, and the politics and wars of eighteenth-century Berlin and Potsdam. Bibliographical note. Maps on end papers. Index.

"The biography is personal but unsympathetic. All sorts of minute and inconsequential items are given about the royal diet, digestion, diseases, and character faults; but the reader has to hunt diligently for signs of greatness in the king as he is pictured here. None of his chicaneries is too petty, none of his villainies too great, to be preserved for the record, none of his blunders concealed or excused. One is left wondering only how he succeeded when he did and why he has been considered great. Approximately two hundred pages are given to the prelude of his life, only 150 to the great drama of its middle period, and nearly a hundred to the epilogue. Chapters are arranged in roughly chronological sequence, but within chapters chronology is disconcertingly disregarded." C. V. Easum

— Am Hist R 48:96 O '42 750w

"Leading personality among the enlightened despots of the eighteenth century, Frederick the Great is a worthy subject of study for this modern French historian, who achieves an unusual and pleasing combination of scholarship with charm and liveliness of style. M. Gaxotte is sufficiently master of his material to trace with an unerring hand the complicated diplomatic background of Frederick's greatest ordeal, the Seven Years' War. But he also shows us der alte Fritz as a human being." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic My '42 200w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

Books p4 My 3 '42 1750w

"The twelve long chapters of this work are undoubtedly the best and most honest that have appeared in English on Frederick the Great." J. H. Fichter

+ Cath World 155:752 S '42 650w

"Though Carlyle recognized the greatness of Frederick II of Prussia, the German king has never been an attractive character to English-speaking peoples. That antipathy probably accounts for the fact that no adequate one-volume biography of him has ever before appeared in English. M. Gaxotte's book thus fills a need, and fills it admirably. To the translator must go some of the credit for its lively style, but its chief merit—its fine balance—belongs to the author."

+ Christian Century 59:1154 S 23 '42 290w

Current Hist 2:462 Ag '42 440w

"Highly recommended for college and larger public libraries." J. B. Fogg

+ Library J 67:317 Ap 1 '42 80w

"The book is readable, but of no great value. What does render it specially readable is the quality of its translation. The book does not read like a translation, but like the work of a good English writer. Should Mr. R. A. Bell translate another book, it is to be hoped that he will choose one of the great works of history for the object of his labours." L. B. Namier

New Statesman & Nation 21:656 Je 28 '41 700w

"This, so far as the commentator knows, is the first sound tightly knit biography of Frederick to appear in English (although it is a translation) and as such it is well deserving of careful attention. It presents the rounded picture of an extraordinary man and gives a rather sweeping view of the Europe that was in turmoil shortly before, during and immediately after our own American War of Independence. There are moments that arouse in the reader's mind parallels with our own time and this would seem to show forth the contemporaneity of power politics and international history." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p6 My 3 '42 1550w

"Superior biography, fluent, scholarly, and entertaining. Good translation, too."

+ New Yorker 18:67 Ap 4 '42 50w

"The fashionable prejudice against the Third French Republic which M. Gaxotte shared with so many young French intellectuals makes his writings on the French Revolution and on Louis XV untrustworthy. Writing on Frederick the Great, however, he is surprisingly fair and trustworthy. He knows and understands eighteenth-century Germany with the thoroughness French students of things German not infrequently display; and though the Third French Republic always crops up in his studies of the First, neither the second nor third Reich comes between him and Frederick." Crane Brinton

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 My 9 '42 700w

"This biography is not a pretentious piece of propaganda, but a straightforward historical study by a writer who knows his period and his sources and has laboured to produce an objective portrait. The result, like many eighteenth-century portraits, is perhaps a little cold and bright, but it is exceptionally clear. This is an achievement, for the fog of legend and controversy which obscures national heroes has always been thick about Frederick the Great." C. V. Wedgwood

+ Spec 166:477 My 2 '41 900w

"Those who have read M. Gaxotte's lively study of the French Revolution, with its frank admiration for the variety in unity of the old regime as compared with the dull uniformity of post-revolutionary France, will expect his life of Frederick the Great to be entertaining reading. But may also expect it to be lacking in scientific impartiality. As regards the first of these expectations they will not be disappointed; for M. Gaxotte's style is clear and vivid, with occasional sparkles of wit but none of the ponderous jocosity which makes Carlyle's monumental life of Frederick so hard for us to read. As regards the second, it may be said at once that the book is written with singular impartiality."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p216 My 3 '41 1100w

"Frederick was a man of letters and a Frenchman.' This is the keynote of M. Gaxotte's delightful volume. It reveals his special interest in the wittiest, the most brilliant, and the most cynical of the Hohenzollerns. Though he has good chapters on Frederick as king—as administrator inspecting his provinces, leading his army, and theorizing on government—he is more intrigued by the king's itch for writing, his philosophy and his friendship with philosophers," S. B. Pay

+ Yale R n s 31:812 summer '42 750w

GEIJERSTAM, RAGNAR AF. Three wives; tr. from the Swedish by Arne H. Ekstrom [il. by Louis Pisillo]. 277p $2.50 Greystone

42-15424

In this novel the reader is given three pictures of what marriage among the upper middle class in Sweden is like. Lars Dellmar, a middle-aged business man, is happily married to Ulla and the father of three children, but he still remembers occasionally two girls of his younger days, and parts two and three are concerned with what marriage would have meant had he married Agnes, the "mother-beast," or Susanne, the flirt.

"The influences that have played on Mr. Geijerstam are apparent almost throughout. He has read and remembered Schnitzler and perhaps Chekov, too, and once or twice he sounds a melancholy note in the Russian manner. But 'Three Wives' is apt to recall 'Three Weeks' more often than it does 'Three Sisters.' Judged solely as a lightly entertaining novel it is assuredly a cut above the ordinary run thanks to some graceful writing." T. Q. Curtiss

+ — Books p10 My 17 '42 650w

Commonweal 36:140 My 29 '42 60w

"Ragnar Af Geijerstam's new book certainly isn't a good novel. Its psychology is flat and its plot . . . is pretty ridiculous, to say the least. However he tells his tale with such outright charm and healthy pleasure that one is almost apt to believe he has something important to say, which he hasn't at all." Marianne Hauser

+ — N Y Times p7 Je 7 '42 650w

GEISMAR, MAXWELL DAVID. Writers in crisis; the American novel between two wars. 299p $3 Houghton

813.09 American fiction. Novelists

(W) 42-15988

"[Essays] covering the American novel of the last two decades. Author selects six outstanding writers—Lardner, Hemingway, Dos Passos, Wolfe, Faulkner, and Steinbeck—and through them shows the rapidly changing phases of American life, from Lardner's boom period in the 1920's to Steinbeck's powerful social studies of the 1940's." (Library J) Author is a member of the faculty of Sarah Lawrence college.

"One could wish he had put a little more yeast in his bread and had served it in smaller loaves; for there is a good deal of repetition of idea and much involution of sentence. He appears stronger in ethical than in aesthetic equipment. Nevertheless the book is admirably balanced and high-minded, and there is no other that gives so much of valuable summary and comment for the period." R. M. Gay

+ — Atlantic 170:146 S '42 150w

Booklist 39:6 S '42

"Whatever reservations one has about 'Writers in Crisis' rise from Mr. Geismar's presentation of the larger issues raised in his book. One wonders, for instance, why these issues have to be outlined so melodramatically. But from any point of view Mr. Geismar's book is a contribution of importance to our understanding of the literature of our time and of the currents shaping that literature." Howard Doughty

+ — Books p3 Je 28 '42 1550w

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy

Cath World 156:241 N '42 800w

Reviewed by Adam Margoshes

Current Hist 2:379 J1 '42 700w

"Brilliantly critical essays. Mr. Geismar treats each writer with humor, understanding, a nice knowledge of psychology, and sound critical ability. . . Heartily recommended." E. M. Olcott

+ Library J 67:531 Je 1 '42 70w

"I will say that I find Mr. Geismar persuasive—until the quotations begin. In general his comments are illuminating and mature. He fulfills one important function of the critic that is too often neglected, in providing a frame of social and cultural reference against which to measure the individual accomplishment. And he shows both sense and courage in recognizing and calling by its true name the cultural illiteracy from which the American writer has not been the only one to suffer. Finally, his style is lively, though he often commits sentences which are, to say the least, queer." Margaret Marshall

+ — Nation 155:154 Ag 22 '42 1000w

"Mr. Geismar's faults are hardly fatal. For all his emphasis on sociology and ethics, often at the expense of literary values; for all his eagerness to mistake projects for achievements and program notes for the finished symphony—an eagerness that leads him to overrate Wolfe and vastly underrate Faulkner; for all his professorial style, sometimes so full of trite phrases that it makes one dubious of his ability to recognize good writing, Mr. Geismar does succeed in making his readers appreciate the richness of American literature during the 1930's. Mr. Geismar is the first critic to have treated the period comprehensively. For all his mistakes, the picture is not inaccurate as a whole; his favorable judgment of the 1930's is likely to stand. Yet he is totally wrong, I believe, in projecting this sense of achievement into the future; in foreseeing a period when our writers, reunited with the nation at large, will be the prophets and priests and lawgivers of a happier age. . . When the young men come home from the army they will not carry on the tradition of Wolfe or Hemingway or any other author used by Mr. Geismar as a portent of the future. Richer or poorer, the literature of the 1940's will be different." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 107:25 J1 6 '42 1800w

"Of the many books on contemporary literature Mr. Geismar's is probably the most direct and dependable. It is well planned for the general reader and its exposition and interpretation are exact, plain and interesting. It is practically a blueprint for critical discussion." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 16 '42 1450w

"Short on technical judgments and occasionally too willing to take the book for the man, but on the whole a fresh and penetrating job of relating each writer to the society surrounding him."

+ — New Yorker 18:63 Je 27 '42 50w

Pratt p16 D '42

"For two years now we have been awaiting a much needed synthetic interpretation of the literature of the nineteen-thirties, that decade when the American literary renaissance came to its fullest fruition. We are still waiting, for 'Writers in Crisis' is not that book. Between the misinterpretation of Ring Lardner in Chapter One and that of Dostoevsky on page 290 (for Dostoevsky can scarcely be equated with his Grand Inquisitor) there is little which is new and considerable which is false; for the chapter on Hemingway is full of contradictions, that on Dos Passos is just plain wrong-headed, and the remaining ones on Faulkner,

GEISMAR, M. D.—Continued

Wolfe, and Steinbeck do not elucidate the work of these men beyond what lies ready to hand for any intelligent reader." Walter Rideout

— + Sat R of Lit 25:5 JI 11 '42 900w

"It is one of the chief merits of Mr. Geismar's book that he maintains an admirable tone. If occasionally he may be a bit smart or sententious, he not only says what most needs to be said today but usually says it both firmly and quietly, with urbanity and humor, without smugness or chauvinism." H. J. Muller

+ Yale R n s 32:174 autumn '42 1000w

GEISTER, EDNA. New ice-breakers. 153p $1.50 Harper

793 Games. Entertaining (W) 42-13366

"A party book for group use, giving directions for games and suggesting the music. Covers entertainment only, not menus nor decorations. Partial contents: Musical mixers; Games requiring little space or action; Fun for small groups; Dance mixers and grand march figures." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 38:365 Je 1 '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:94 Je '42

GELBER, LIONEL MORRIS. Peace by power. 159p $1.50 Oxford

940,531 World war, 1939—. Reconstruction (1939-) 42-7695

"The plain man's guide to the key issue of the war and of the post-war world." (Subtitle) It is a statement of what we may hope for in years to come, depending on who wins, for the author insists that there will have to be a peace by power.

Reviewed by W. P. Maddox

Ann Am Acad 223:226 S '42 430w

"In discussing the politics of victory—the dynamics of conflict, the social revolution, and what should be the attitude of the victors toward the German people—the author shows himself as a stern yet liberal realist. . . . Where many readers will presumably part company with Mr. Gelber is in his theory that 'the fate of civilization rests on the balance of power in Europe,' a balance to be maintained under British leadership. . . . Yet the fate of civilization depends on Russia and China (mentioned casually, if at all, in this book) as decidedly as on the English-speaking nations." G. S. Hellman

+ — Books p47 N 15 '42 360w

"Whether we agree or not with Mr. Gelber on every point, he offers one of the best informed, most clear-headed and most vigorous discussions on the issues of the present war that have been published since its beginning in 1939. And the eloquence and conviction with which he writes make it a first-class literary performance." Alvin Adey

+ Current Hist 2:137 Ap '42 1400w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:773 JI '42 40w

"Mr. Gelber presents his analysis of world politics persuasively and urbanely. Those who hope that the post-war world will achieve forms of unity and integration totally different from anything previously known in world history would do well to read this book. Yet the author is remarkably complacent about the economic and international difficulties of the democratic world and rather simple in his conception of the German malady and its cure. The weaknesses of this book suggest that there might well be a greater exchange of thought between the realists, who understand the perennial problems of politics on any level of human history, and the radicals, who appreciate the unique and revolutionary aspects of particular periods of history." Reinhold Neibuhr

+ — Nation 154:495 Ap 25 '42 270w

New Repub 108:93 Ja 18 '43 120w

"Mr. Gelber's tough-minded little book redresses the balance of much of discussion of peace programs which has been disturbed by an undue emphasis on tender-minded projects for millennial changes in our institutions. His insistence upon the centrality of power in political affairs, both domestic and international, is a salutary warning to those who would forget that without power warfare is impossible of achievement. . . . If this book should therefore be neglected it will be a misfortune. This Canadian publicist should be read with attention." C. H. Grattan

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 31 '43 750w

Reviewed by P. E. Corbett

Pacific Affairs 25:488 D '42 280w

"This little book presents a very much needed approach to the problems of war and peace. Though it too may be regarded as one-sided, it is an indispensable corrective to the many much more one-sided opinions so current for the last twenty years and even held by many today." Hans Kohn

Sat R of Lit 26:22 Ja 2 '43 550w

"Whatever excesses of argument may be charged against this book, its merits are very great." D. W. Brogan

+ — Spec 169:110 JI 31 '42 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p395 Ag 8 '42 300w

GERMANE, CHARLES E., and GERMANE, MRS EDITH (GAYTON). Personnel work in high school; a program for the guidance of youth, educational, social, and vocational. 608p il $4 Silver

371.42 Personnel service in education. High schools 41-12969

A survey of personnel problems in high schools. The book is "much more than a presentation of the objectives in personnel work and a discussion of typical personnel techniques. It is an attempt to present in considerable detail the materials, methods, measurements, and outcomes of a five-year investigation, the purpose of which was to establish the basis for a personnel program in high school that could be initiated and conducted effectively, even under highly unfavorable conditions." (Pref) Index.

School & Society 53:424 N 8 '41 10w

"Personnel Work in High School can be recommended for its empirical method and its emphasis on the teacher as a vital guidance functionary. It should stimulate administrators and teachers in their efforts to individualize and personalize everyday school life." J. M. O'Rourke

+ School R 50:390 My '42 1150w

GERVASI, FRANK. War has seven faces. 296p $2.50 Doubleday

940,548 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Voyages around the world (W) 42-36230

Account of a war correspondent's trip made during the first nine months of 1941, to England, South Africa, North Africa, the Middle East, India, Thailand and the Philippines. This account is set against a background of knowledge gained during six years of European reporting from 1934 to the beginning of the World war.

Booklist 38:365 Je 1 '42

"For all his lusty shouting, Frank Gervasi packs into this admirable book a great deal of information, some very astute interpretation and much sound opinion." W. L. Shirer

+ Books p1 My 17 '42 1450w

New Repub 106:742 My 25 '42 70w

"Every one of this author's points is driven home with specific incident. And at the end he brings statistics as well as citation of great qualities to emphasize his sureness of victory. But it is a people's war, in every sense of that term, as he sees wherover he goes."

+ N Y Times p4 My 24 '42 600w

"The necessary snap judgments aren't much better or worse than most, but, unfortunately, a good deal of his material is written as news and therefore dated. Perhaps the moral is that dead news should be buried, but not in a book."

New Yorker 18:79 My 9 '42 90w

"'War Has Seven Faces' is the vivid reportorial account of what Frank Gervasi saw, heard, and felt, with reviews of antecedent events and forecasts of what is likely to happen. It is not objective reporting, because, as the author quite logically asks, Who can be objective under present conditions? But it is good realistic reporting and sound reasoning by a keen observer long familiar with the international scene." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 My 2 '42 850w

GESSLER, CLIFFORD FRANKLIN. Tropic landfall; the port of Honolulu; il. by A. S. MacLeod. (Seaport ser) 331p $3.50 Doubleday 996.9 Honolulu—History (W) 42-36033

A popular history of the Hawaiian Islands and particularly of the port of Honolulu, with several chapters devoted to stories of pirates and other adventurers. The book begins with a prologue on the attack of December 7th, 1941, but though the defense situation in Hawaii is touched upon several times the book as a whole was written before the war became actual fact. Index.

Bookmark 3:11 Mr '42

"'Tropic Landfall' is a rich fabric of history and legend. All who have lived in Hawaii will thank the author for his effort and so, I hope, will thousands of others who may some day visit that abundant land when war's alarms are ended." P. J. Searles

+ Books p12 F 22 '42 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:576 Ap '42 40w

"It is a gratifying chance that has brought 'Tropic Landfall' to completion just now, as the fifth volume in the American Seaport Series. In a prologue written after the attack on Pearl Harbor Mr. Gessler—who lived for years in Honolulu—brings his book to date. But his purpose has been to tell the whole story of Honolulu, which means to show port and island hinterland to his readers from every point of view. It's a fascinating story in its diverse, changing, many-peopled scene; and in its entirety it's unique." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 F 1 '42 1050w

New Yorker 17:63 F 7 '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 38:66 Ap '42

GHIRARDI, ALFRED A. Radio troubleshooter's handbook; companion book to (Modern radio servicing). rev and enl 2d ed 710p $3.50 Radio 621.384 Radio receivers (W) 41-23180

"A second edition of a very popular book containing technical data. Thoroughly revised, with an additional 200 or more pages of new receiver problems; also new charts and tabulated servicing data." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 38:192 F 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:11 Ja '42

GIACHINO, JOSEPH WILLIAM, and SON-SMITH, HENRY ARTHUR. Airplane drawing. 64p il $1.50; pa $1.25 Goodheart-Willcox 629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction. Mechanical drawing 41-8436

"The purpose of this text is to make possible the introduction of an elementary study of the structure of an airplane through the mechanical drawing courses. This plan will permit students studying drafting techniques to substitute problems dealing with airplane construction for other regular drawing exercises. The text is so arranged that the drawing instructor may teach successfully the material without any aeronautical training." Pref.

Booklist 37:541 Jl 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:52 O '41

Pratt p3 D '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:77 My '42

GIBBS, SIR PHILIP HAMILTON. America speaks. 327p $3 Doubleday

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. Public opinion—U.S. 42-13282

Personal, anecdotal account of the author's lecture tour in the United States during the fall of 1941 and the first weeks of 1942. Sir Philip held conversations with a great variety of people, from taxi drivers to statesmen, from waitresses to society ladies, and from them he has attempted to formulate a picture of how America goes to war.

Reviewed by Emmet Crozier

Books p16 Je 14 '42 800w

Cath World 155:509 Jl '42 200w

"Might be valuable as cross section of public opinion, if it could be accepted as objective account. This reviewer feels it is prejudicial by condescension and lack of comprehension of American life. Style is choppy, lacking in literary merit. Not recommended." L. M. Kinloch

— Library J 67:367 Ap 15 '42 60w

"It is a little difficult at first sight to decide why this book is so depressing, for Sir Philip Gibbs is a very experienced reporter indeed; he has interviewed the great and the little in many countries, and he has, or had, a dramatic style. . . . For all his advantages and all his journalist's experience, his book is painfully flat. . . . The role of a lecturer in America is exhausting, and the trade is dangerous. There is so much kindness, so much interest, so little time to reflect or investigate, that the impression made is sure to be blurred. That Sir Philip's impressions were so kindly speaks well for his own success as a lecturer, but, alas, good writers should be made of sterner stuff." D. W. Brogan

— + Spec 169:197 Ag 28 '42 380w

Times [London] Lit Sup p410 Ag 22 '42 360w

GIBBS, SIR PHILIP HAMILTON. Long alert. 302p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Hutchinson]

(W) 42-9577

The adventures of a Canadian soldier in England during the blitzkrieg in the winter of 1940 and spring of 1941.

"So far as it can be told in novels, in letters, in plays and in personal narratives, life in England during the long months of heaviest bombing, with the threat of invasion drawing closer almost by the hour, has had eloquent coverage. The tragic story has been set down in enduring prose by those for whom writing is a vocation and the natural outlet of their feelings, and it has been recorded with no less force and fitness by the untrained and inarticulate—by children and plain cooks and men who labor with their hands. The novelist who undertakes to add to these archives is hard put to it to find a fresh approach, and Philip Gibbs has done as well as could be expected." George Conrad

Books p10 Ap 5 '42 350w

"Sir Philip Gibbs writes too rapidly to do justice to his themes, but his effort is sincere and workmanlike. He gives the impression, however, of having invented the Canadians who participate in the action merely for the purpose of showing off the charms of English life."

+ — Cath World 155:381 Je '42 200w

"Sir Philip is an expert reporter, but unfortunately his characters converse exclusively in the most hackneyed journalese." Wilfrid Gibson

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 D 19 '41 60w

GIBBS, P. H.—Continued

"The Long Alert" is distinguished by emotional and creative integration far outside Philip Gibbs's usual formula, while in those other respects which we associate with his fictional writing it parallels and occasionally surpasses what has come from him before. It is, in every way, his finest novel." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 12 '42 750w

"Although, in the past, Sir Philip Gibbs's running commentary on contemporary affairs has often furnished a provocative and sometimes inspiring side-light on problems facing all intelligent people, one cannot help wondering, sometimes, if the mechanical way in which these books appear is the best way to produce creative fiction. His latest book is moving, as indeed any book must be which chronicles the bombing of this country during last autumn and winter; often his insight is acute, his observation shrewd and pictorial—above all, he is a first-class reporter. But it is in the presentation of the particular group of characters he now presents to us that, temporarily, he seems to have gone astray."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p629 D 13 '41 270w

GIBSON, KATHARINE. Pictures to grow up with. 152p il $3 Studio

759 Paintings—Juvenile literature (W) 42-36224

Reproductions of famous paintings of many lands and ages, arranged under subjects: small and baby animals, fetes and amusements, gardens and flowers, legends and history, young people, fantasy, and angels and madonnas. Each picture has short descriptive text. Will be useful as an introduction to painting for children, but equally good with adults.

Booklist 38:373 Je 1 '42

"What is said opens a door: the child goes through and uses his own eyes to see with. It would take too long to enumerate the pictures: it would be hard to choose among them, as they range from Persian miniatures to American primitives, from Botticelli to the more intelligible of contemporary experimentalists. Chronology is set aside in the arrangement for beauty scorns time. It is a book for the family, in such ways we need never stop our growth." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 17 '42 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '42

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:253 J 12 130w

"A volume to be treasured at any time, the appearance of this one now is an affirmation of one of the principles for which we are fighting, for this is a war to preserve culture as well as political ideals, and now more than ever do we need to know and appreciate our heritage of art. Its future and the freedom of its expression will depend ultimately upon the understanding and love of it which children will acquire in their formative years, and here is a fine instrument to till that fertile soil, which almost invariably responds to the stimulus of the best." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p8 My 10 '42 440w

GIBSON, KATHARINE, ed. Tenggren tell-it-again book; il. by Gustaf Tenggren. 200p $2.50 Little 398.2 Fairy tales 42-21077

Twenty-eight children's stories, most of them well-known, retold for children of today and illustrated in color.

"The appearance of twenty-eight stories admitted by universal suffrage of children into the canon of stories you 'must know,' told so as to keep the story and its fine flavor not only intact but heightened by artful simplicity of language—this is something to speak about. Katharine Gibson has done this for the nursery favorites. Tenggren has given his best to the many full-page plates and text illustrations that tell the stories in glowing color." M. L. Becker

+ Books p16 N 15 '42 480w

"The Tenggren Tell-It-Again Book seems the best bargain in fairy tale collections which has appeared for a long time."

+ Cath World 156:373 D '42 90w

"The stories are familiar and standard stories for little children, well told. The illustrations, in full color, are marvelous."

+ Christian Century 59:1089 S 9 '42 20w

"Charmingly retold and illustrated."

+ Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 20w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:117 N 20 '42 10w

"Miss Gibson's adaptations are acceptable, if one does not object to softened endings and occasional altered incidents. . . One illustration, of Jack pursued by ferocious giant as he flees toward beanstalk, might be questioned. Not a first purchase. For the fairy tale age." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 67:796 S 15 '42 110w

"These fine old stories which have stood the test of centuries deserve better treatment, and the pictures though gay and striking in color, have a superficial quality which will keep them from becoming as the fairy tale illustrations by Leslie Brooke, Arthur Rackham and H. M. Brock have become, a child's loved companions through the years." A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p10 O 25 '42 600w

GIBSON, WILFRID WILSON. The alert [poems]. 41p pa $1 (pa 3s 6d) Oxford 321 A42-1793

"Wilfrid Gibson writes in a mixture of narrative, description, anecdote, characterization; from London or his native Northumberland. In 'The Alert' we have a series of little pictures of England during the war. The style is largely derived from Thomas Hardy, without Hardy's intensity." N Y Times

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '42

"It is a small book worth looking into for its English idiom and its sense of the wartime scene." P. M. Jack

N Y Times p4 F 1 '42 220w

"There are few lines or single phrases to give immediacy to most of this heavy-footed pedestrian verse. One can only be grateful that the poet never evokes hatred: this is the work of a decent man. Yet decency is not enough, for poetry requires, at the very least, a disciplined mind and a truly passionate heart." Theodore Roethke

Poetry 60:109 My '42 550w

Reviewed by Kathleen Raine

Spec 147:432 O 31 '41 30w

"Mr. Gibson's sombre outlook has been compared with Crabbe's, but he has experienced a brunt of evil and a light of heroism beyond Crabbe's knowledge. He faces the stark facts with a realism that pains; yet amid all that is grim a wind of promise stirs."

Times [London] Lit Sup p57 Ja 31 '42 480w

GIDDINGS, A. R. BEVERLEY. See Beverley-Giddings, A. R.

GILBERT, DOUGLAS. Lost chords. 377p $3.50 Doubleday

784 Music, Popular. Songs (W) 42-22339

An informally written history of American popular songs from post-Civil war days down to the present. Indexes.

"Mr. Gilbert, with his unstable combination of sentiment and big-town flippancy, might have been the perfect reporter of pop tunes if his glib, mannered, and often inaccurate journalism were not a little wearing. Someone should induce Mr. Gilbert to look up the word 'rune,' which to him apparently means a folk ballad. . . But stylistic slips, even aggravated by pretension, cannot spoil a book. They only hurt it. Anyone wanting to get a history of America from the 1860's to the present through the popular song will find much in Lost Chords."

It is all there in the reprinted songs, hundreds of them, though the conclusions a reader draws may differ considerably from Mr. Gilbert's." Wallace Stegner

+ Atlantic 170:150 N '42 250w

"I missed mention of 'Pretty Red Wing' in this book, and also 'Little Annie Rooney,' but hundreds are included that I should have missed even more, and my carping is merely a reviewer's license. This book is a grand one, done with authority and sympathy. Although not in the least sentimental, the author does not, in the manner of today's ultra-sophisticates, find the old songs so damned funny after all. People could at least sing them and did." Stewart Holbrook

+ Books p2 D 20 '42 1000w

"Mr. Douglas Gilbert's 'Lost Chords' has as its subtitle 'The diverting story of American popular songs.' Yes, it is diverting; but as with Mr. Gilbert's diverting 'American Vaudeville,' published two years ago, one has misgivings that the author took an assignment rather than that he begged to cover a subject that fascinated him." F. P. Adams

+ N Y Times p3 S 20 '42 1250w

"The deficiencies of the book inhere in its scope. It tries to cover too much ground. Thus episodes are at times so compressed that they appear without all their meaning. The author's tendency to race through history makes him at times seem glib and superficial—whereas the honesty and thoroughness of his research prove quite the opposite. Also the book is necessarily miscellaneous, changes the subject often. Anecdotes and incidents whet an appetite for further details that the author does not have space to supply." Charles Ferguson

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 O 10 '42 1000w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 13 '42 250w
Theatre Arts 27:65 Ja '43 750w

GILCHRIST, MARIE EMILIE. Story of the Great Lakes; lithographs by C. H. DeWitt. [32p] $1 Harper

977 Great Lakes—Juvenile literature (W) 42-21196

"This large, flat picture book introduces a five to nine-year-old to regional history and geography. From the time of the Indians, to the opening of the Soo Canal, from yellow birch canoes and La Salle's vessel, The Griffin, to the loading of grain ships and the gallant work of the Coast Guard, the big colored pictures dramatize life on the Great Lakes for little American children." Horn Bk

Booklist 39:35 O 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Ag 30 '42 250w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 18:344 S '42 70w

"Concise but interesting information. . . Twenty full-page lithographs in six colors and numerous sketches by C. H. DeWitt add vividness to text and beauty to the format." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 67:847 O 1 '42 50w

New Yorker 18:116 D 12 '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 38:189 D '42

GILES, HARRY H.; MCCUTCHEN, S. P., and ZECHIEL, ALLEN NORRIS. Exploring the curriculum; the work of the thirty schools from the viewpoint of curriculum consultants. (Progressive educ. assn. Comm. on the relation of school and college. Adventure in Am. educ.) 362p $2.50 Harper

373 Education—Curricula. Education, Secondary 42-9966

"The second of the five volumes reporting the Eight-Year Study of the Progressive Education Association is a description of some of the changes brought about in the instructional programs of the schools included in the Study. The three authors are the curriculum associates who were serving the Study on a full-time basis at its conclusion in 1941. . . General problems of the instructional program rather than types of practices, schools, subject fields, or some other scheme, provide the basis of organization." (Social Educ) Index.

School & Society 55:400 Ap 4 '42 50w

"Exploring the Curriculum, like the other four volumes reporting on the Eight-Year Study, will be of considerable historical interest. Whether it justifies or helps to justify the Study can be answered, of course, only in the light of the entire record and perhaps in that of the influence this report as such may be ultimately judged to have. In any case, this volume, because of its analysis of curriculum problems, its consistent point of view, and its many good illustrations of practice, is an important addition to the literature of education, and is a 'must' book for curriculum workers." W. M. Alexander

+ Social Educ 7:44 Ja '43 850w

GILKEY, HERBERT JAMES; MURPHY, GLENN, and BERGMAN, ELMER OTTO. Materials testing; theory, practice and significance of physical tests on engineering materials. 185p il $2.75 McGraw

621.11 Testing. Strength of materials

41-20897

"This manual is the result of evolutionary processes extending over nearly twenty years, being the outgrowth of a long-standing desire to produce a book that harmonizes with the following concept of materials testing and its function in the education of engineers." (Pref) The chapters cover: testing, testing equipment, and testing observations; properties of materials; evaluation of properties from load-displacement data; tensile tests; compressive tests; shearing and torsional tests; flexural tests; column tests; hardness tests; fatigue and impact tests; design, control, and curing of concrete mixtures; experimental aids in stress analysis, etc. Indexes.

Eng N 127:140 O 23 '41 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:13 Ja '42

GILKEY, JAMES GORDON. How to be your best. 166p $1.75 Macmillan

248 Christian life. Psychology, Applied

42-21474

"A case book dealing with twelve familiar personal problems in every-day life which, unsolved, prevent the average normal man from being his best. Dr. Gilkey suggests ways and means of solving these problems by utilizing the hidden resources within us and so realizing a more successful and abundant life. His many appropriate illustrations from real life stimulate the reader's interest. His treatment of cases assumes an essential connection between applied psychology and religious faith." Churchman

"For the most part, good sound sense and practical religion, with psychology applied rather than paraded in its technical trimmings."

+ Christian Century 59:1122 S 16 '42 50w

Churchman 156:17 D 1 '42 90w

GILL, FREDERICK CYRIL. New horizons. 127p $1 Abingdon-Cokesbury [3s 6d Epworth]

239 Christianity

42-14674

"The author is a Methodist pastor in Warwickshire, England. His book is prompted by the conviction that we are losing our sense of religion. We are enslaved by materialism, and possessed of the 'cinema' mind. Has the vision which has inspired men through the ages gone forever? He thinks not. The vision is bound to live, and most of the volume seems to be given to an attempt to reveal new horizons." Crozer Q

"This British Methodist minister writes with intelligence and deep insight of the kind of religion that can be helpfully applied in the world and of the need and methods of applying it."

+ Christian Century 59:433 Ap 1 '42 50w

GILL, F. C.—Continued

Reviewed by J. H. Franklin

Crozer Q 19:256 J1 '42 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p183 Ap 12 '41
90wGILL, RICHARD COCHRAN. Flying death; a Manga story [il. by Merrill D. Doyle]. 238p maps $2 Holt

42-4724

Adventure story of the Amazon jungle. Jimmy Parker, sent there to get information about the drug curare, used in fighting paralysis, is joined by his Indian friend Manga. The two penetrate far into the jungle, find a lost city, and encounter a vicious sloth. They return safely, but with a longing to go back and explore the city. For high school boys.

"A foreword does its best to trip up the story at the start by explaining how much of the yarn is hypothetical and how, for instance, the fortress of Iiti-Tambu is 'a conglomerate of certain features of well known later dynasty ruins.' This sort of explanation belongs at the back of the book, but the story jumps as nimbly over the preface as a boy will do, and no real harm will be done to the reading speed of a story in what used to be called the Rider Haggard manner." M. L. Becker

Books p5 Je 21 '42 450w

"Like its predecessors, this is a well-written tale of adventure set against the fascinating mysteries of jungles which retain the secrets of an ancient civilization. Though the tribes and geography are fictitious, they are based on a first-hand knowledge of archaeological and ethnological parallels." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 9 '42 220w

Wis Lib Bul 38:99 Je '42

GILL, TOM. North to danger. 263p $2 Putnam
42-18290

An adventure story laid in the far North and involving a German plot against the United States.

Booklist 39:103 N 15 '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p20 S 13 '42 80w

GILL, TOM. Wildcat 13; a Tom Gill tropical romance. 278p $2 Putnam [Ts 6d Collins]

41-7329

Adventure story of South America. A young American geologist and his partner are looking for a fortune in a section where oil and politics are controlled by agents of a totalitarian country. When the American will not accept their friendship, the battle is on. A beautiful South American, daughter of a surgeon in the pay of the foreign power, plays an important part.

"Tom Gill delineates character sharply and graphically. The hero is more than mere man stuff and his antagonists—especially Franz Alter—are realistic figures instead of standard type menace." Lisle Bell

+ Books p29 My 11 '41 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p657 D 27 '41
60wGILLESPIE, ROBERT DICK. Psychological effects of war on citizen and soldier. 251p $2.75 Norton

616.8 Neuroses. War

42-7282

"An R.A.F. psychiatrist examines the social factors influencing nervous disorders, the relative scarcity of psychoneuroses among bombed civilians in England, the chances for better human relationships after the war, and the like. Much new material." (New Yorker) Bibliography.

Reviewed by Herbert Blumer

Am J Soc 48:427 N '42 200w

Booklist 38:325 My 1 '42

"The Salmon lectures of the New York Academy of Medicine have never been more timely and arresting than the series published in this volume. The choice of lecturer was as fortunate as the choice of subject matter. . . Whether Dr. Gillespie is discussing war or peace conditions, whether he is discussing psychiatric theory or a healthy social order, he speaks always as a modern psychiatrist fully aware that psychic health and ill health in any civilization are matters not merely of individual heredity and instincts but of the social order which puts inescapable pressures upon the individual." Ruth Benedict

+ New Repub 106:508 Ap 13 '42 1250w

"An absorbing analysis, and only mildly technical."

+ New Yorker 18:80 Mr 14 '42 50w

"Dr. Gillespie is dignified and restrained at all times, but he ascribes to psychiatry a certain omniscience which he himself demonstrably confutes and which the psychiatrist happily does not possess." Gregory Zilboorg
Sat R of Lit 25:13 J1 11 '42 600w

Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 Je '42 480w

GILLIN, JOHN LEWIS, and GILLIN, JOHN PHILIP. Introduction to sociology. 806p il $3.75 Macmillan

301 Sociology

(W) 42-4634

"The senior author was the joint author with the late Frank W. Blackmar of Outlines of Sociology. The present volume differs in some respects from that both in organization and material. . . The bearing of knowledge from other fields—economics, political science, psychology, and many of the natural sciences—upon social relationships has become clearer. . . References to important literature in the field are to be found partly in the footnotes and partly in the readings at the end of each chapter. . . The exercises at the end of each chapter are intended to stimulate the student who has read the chapter to think out the implications of the discussion, and also to assist the young instructor in class discussions." (Pref) The authors are father and son; the first is a sociologist of long standing; the son is an anthropologist. Indexes.

Reviewed by W. E. Gettys

Am J Soc 48:525 Ja '43 950w

"The volume is carefully adapted to classroom use, with a clear and facile style, numerous diagrams and photographs, several cleverly chosen cartoons from the New Yorker that are strikingly à propos, and excellent bibliographies and study questions for discussion. . . The two Gillins have considerably raised the level of textbook writing and contributed immensely to the social understanding of the sociological neophyte." R. A. Schermerhorn
+ Am Soc R 7:567 Ag '42 1400w

Reviewed by J. A. Kinneman

Social Educ 6:338 N '42 450w

"This volume is written for students. It is most readable, and, incidentally, contains numerous illustrations and pertinent cartoons from the New Yorker. Here is no academic aloofness, or attempt to impress their colleagues with a fine spun, hair splitting vocabulary of coined words. . . There are a few minor adverse criticisms. Occasionally a generalization creeps into the text with little or no support." R. H. Abrams

+ Social Studies 33:236 My '42 360w

"The Gillins, pere et fils, have turned out a fine piece of collaboration. It is modern sociology infused with more comprehensive comparative cultural anthropology than most texts exhibit."

+ Survey 78:253 S '42 380w

GILMAN, LA SELLE. The golden horde. 466p $2.75 Smith & Durrell

42-22855

"As if to warn us that worse is to come in these days of disaster and global war, along comes [La Selle] Gilman with a weird tale of what's brewing in the remote fastnesses of central Asia whence Genghis Khan emerged in ruthless conquest. Descendants of that bloody warrior, according to this bizarre and fascinating narrative, are all set to repeat the performance. . . . The novel tells how Mikhail Petrov, White Russian soldier of fortune leading a band of guerrillas who escaped the Red armies, stumbled on the secret of the Mongols while trying to reach China." Books

"'The Golden Horde' is a novel of exceptional scope and dramatic intensity, a sweeping panorama of life in the Far East in the turbulent era culminating in the Japanese invasion of China. The characters include Chinese officers educated in European universities, Russian aristocrats serving as chauffeurs or cabaret entertainers, an English remittance man, assorted journalists and business men." Lisle Bell

+ Books p20 S 20 '42 280w

"Gilman, author of Shanghai Deadline and short stories on the Chinese military, appears at home in strange and somber places and with an international cast of characters. Readers will weigh appeal of mystery, adventure, and love against tedium of endless strife. Recommended." Catherine Van Dyne

+ Library J 67:739 S 1 '42 80w

"Though, necessarily, no more than a sketch, it is a vivid and lucid one that brings the history of China's last two decades into just perspective." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p14 O 4 '42 850w

"Such fabulous adventures ought to make a good tale, and so they do but not with complete success. Mr. Gilman seems never quite to have made up his mind exactly what kind of novel he was writing. Individual episodes are excellently told, with the high spirit of romance shaping their resounding ends and with all manner of exotic decorations heightening their progress. He does not, however, limit himself to this kind of grandiose make-believe. He will suddenly go all Zola or Henry James, and the shock of the change brings bewilderment." C. D. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 O 10 '42 400w

GILMORE, HORACE HERMAN. Model planes for beginners; il. with drawings and diagrams by the author. 94p $1.25 Harper

629.13334 Airplane models (W) 42-25311

Following a very brief history of flight and a description of how planes fly, diagrams for making ten types of planes are given. They include some United States types, R.A.F. bombers, a Stuka and a Zero. For grades four to six. Index.

Booklist 39:186 Ja 1 '43

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ja 3 '43 100w

Horn Bk 19:42 Ja '43 70w

"Should be very useful. Working also streamlined. For beginners of all ages." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 68:39 Ja 1 '43 60w

GILPIN, LAURA. Pueblos; a camera chronicle. 124p il $3 Hastings house

970.3 Pueblo Indians. Pueblos. Photographic books 42-5475

Photographs and brief text trace the development of Indian life in the pueblos of the American southwest from about 700 A.D. to the present.

"As a picture book it is unexcelled. As a picture of Indians as they live, dress, work or worship, it is like a well managed ballet under the marvel of New Mexico sun and shadow. It reflects the attitude of those who would keep the Indian forever in isolated picturesqueness. And that does not in the least detract from its value as a collection of fine photographs." Erna Fergusson

+ Books p18 N 8 '42 250w

"Her photographs in themselves are exquisite; mellow and sensitive, lovely always. But she does not leave to them the whole burden of the task; for the accompanying text is both scholarly and fascinating. Combined, these two media go far to make the public understand this land of the American Southwest, this New Mexico, filled as it is with color and a special lure of peoples and setting." M. W.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 7 '42 550w

"There are several excellent landscape shots and a dozen or so interesting studies of present-day pueblo dwellers. Except for a few fuzzy attempts at atmosphere, the photography is fine; the accompanying text is direct and helpful."

+ New Repub 106:277 F 23 '42 60w

"An interesting [volume] . . . which should interest equally those who have visited the Southwest and those who hope to do so. The author's photographs skillfully enhance the text." Lois Boyle

+ Springf'd Republican p6 F 9 '42 550w

GIPSON, LAWRENCE HENRY. British empire before the American revolution; v. 5; Zones of international friction. 411p maps $5 Knopf

942.07 Great Britain—History—18th century. Great Britain—Colonies. U.S.—History—Colonial period. France—Colonies (36-20870)

In this fifth volume of a monumental work the author examines Franco-British relations in the Great Lakes region, in Canada, in the West Indies and India during the years, 1748 to 1754. For earlier volumes see Book Review Digest, 1936, 1940.

"This is the most significant historical work currently being written in the United States, to be compared favorably in every way with the histories of Francis Parkman of an earlier day. Great credit is due Professor Gipson for persevering, and also his publisher, Alfred A. Knopf for printing with such care and in such a handsome format a work of the greatest scholarly distinction that, at the same time, must have a limited appeal. It is to be hoped that neither will falter, despite the troubled times we are going through." L. M. Hacker

+ Books p4 D 13 '42 750w

"Professor Gipson, who is personally as modest as his work is ambitious, would be the last to claim a style such as has distinguished some of the classics, but there is no denying that his writing has literary quality. It flows with an easy grace, though sometimes it runs too long without reaching a period; and it occasionally develops a positive beauty, particularly in descriptive passages that are reminiscent of Parkman. The substance is equally good, for the thoroughness of his scholarship is generally impressive and rarely oppressive." A. L. Burt

+ Canadian Hist R 23:412 D '42 2150w

"A spirited work, it has somewhat more interest for the general reader than its narrow chronological scope suggests."

+ New Repub 107:422 O 5 '42 60w

"The author is to be congratulated on maintaining the high quality of his undertaking in a time when it must be unusually difficult to do so. I may merely add that the index, always an extremely important part of any serious work, is unusually good and full." J. T. Adams

+ Sat R of Lit 25:9 O 31 '42 800w

GIRVAN, MRS HELEN. Felicity way; il. by Gertrude Howe. 274p $2 Farrar

(W) 42-5828

Mystery story for older girls.

"The story is lifelike, the mystery well kept up, and the people convincing. The scene is Vermont and the immediate locality a herb garden. Moreover, fragrant herbs are so firmly woven into the structure of the mystery that it would be hard to emerge from it without some knowledge of how they are grown and what they are good for." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 26 '42 330w

"Redolent of countryside, with more charm and better characterization than this author's other titles (which we recommend). . . . Recommend buying prebound, as inner margins are narrow." Maude Adams

+ Library J 67:477 My 15 '42 60w

GIRVAN, HELEN—Continued

"Just fair story. For teen-age girls. Poor paper; narrow margins; light cover. Not recommended." Marguerite Nahigian

— Library J 67:477 My 15 '42 70w

"Whether or not they can tell tansy from lavender, older girls will find this as baffling a puzzle as did Dale and her friends, while the background of herb lore, which has recently come so much to the fore, adds a special interest to the problems of the resourceful and lively young people." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 26 '42 280w

GITTLER, JOSEPH B. Social thought among the early Greeks; pref. by William F. Ogburn. 272p $3 Univ. of Ga.

301 Sociology—History. Civilization, Greek 41-15248

"This book consists of a collection of translated passages from Greek literature through the time of Aristotle, but not including any passages from Plato or Aristotle, plus a certain amount of interpretation and summary of the content of the passages, and considerable argumentation by the author over the importance and value of the kind of study represented in the book." Social Forces

Reviewed by J. H. Randall, Jr.
Am Hist R 48:170 O '42 230w

"Whatever may be said of Mr. Gittler's interpretations and method of presentation, his selection of passages from Greek poetry and philosophy offers a rich variety of ideas. In the freshness and directness of their observations, these excerpts might provide not only corroboration but correction of some of the more obscure doctrines to which the student of sociology is being introduced." D. S. M.

+ — J Philos 39:276 My 7 '42 500w
Social Forces 20:531 My '42 100w

GLASER, COMSTOCK. Administrative procedure; a practical handbook for the administrative analyst; introd. [by] Arthur N. Holcombe. 207p $3; pa $2.50 Am. council on public affairs

351 Political science. Office management 41-19710

"An inquiry into the processes of administrative organizations. This book is concerned only with strictly administrative problems—those which arise from the nature of administration itself and not from the particular activities concerned. While the discussion centers on administrative problems of government, many of these problems are similar to those found in private business." Management R

"The reviewer questions very seriously the wisdom of Glaser's reverting to the use of the term 'staff' to cover all of what Professor White has more aptly termed 'auxiliary' agencies. He wonders whether Glaser's assumption that management analysis should generally be set up as 'staff' function independent of 'direct' administration is wise. He is sure that many more difficulties have been experienced with work unit control in the Forest Service than the account in this book indicates. Throughout the volume there is a little more tendency to 'lay down the law' than is justified by our present experience. Most of these matters, however, are debatable. The fact that the reviewer has questions regarding them in his mind does not keep him from feeling a very genuine gratitude to the author for his substantial contribution to a new aspect of public administration literature." G. C. S. Benson

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:1191 D '41 380w

"Dr. Glaser has made a definite contribution to the growing literature dealing with the operation of government." J. W. Martin

+ Ann Am Acad 220:248 Mr '42 500w
Management R 30:431 N '41 70w

GLASPELL, SUSAN. Norma Ashe. 349p $2.50 Lippincott

(W) 42-22856

Story of what happens to the ideals of a group of young college students, in the thirty years of economic ups and downs which follow their graduation. The story concerns chiefly Norma Ashe Utterbach, as wife and widow, boarding house keeper and maid-of-all work, and finally as dependent in her son-in-law's household.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett
Atlantic 170:168 D '42 300w

"Norma Ashe' is an impressively sincere novel and a convincing one. Norma, it should be noted, did not win by changing the world, but, while recognizing its sordidness and her own significance by affirming a faith in which she could be at peace with herself and others. That such a peace is victory doubtless will be disputed by some; it was beyond the reach of the others who had been stirred by the teacher. In so distraught a time as the present, however, this quiet and unpretentious story will have a special appeal to many who are asking questions which Norma put to herself." Mary Ross

+ Books p10 O 18 '42 800w

"The author is sincere, but sincerity is not always a guarantee of lucidity and there are times when the intensity of Miss Glaspell's feeling carries her book out of the range of the average reader. This one should be read and digested slowly."

Boston Globe p21 O 14 '42 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '42

"One inherent weakness of the story's construction is that we know the teacher only by hearsay and in the other characters' memories of him. Norma Ashe, however, is an unusually interesting and discerning novel." E. V. R. Wyatt

+ — Commonweal 37:181 D 4 '42 650w

"Not Susan Glaspell's best, but useful to have around. Recommended for purchase." F. A. Boyle

Library J 67:845 O 1 '42 70w

"To say that 'Norma Ashe' is a notable, a beautifully written novel is not enough; it is a searching and compassionate book that makes the reader one with its lost heroine." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p7 O 18 '42 750w

"When the story is considered with the difficulties of running a second-rate rooming house, it is interesting and credible, but, unfortunately, most of the book is taken up with talk that might have come straight from the pages of Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy."

+ — New Yorker 18:90 O 17 '42 100w

"As a fable of spiritual upheaval and return to ultimate values, the story of this exquisitely sensitive woman has pointed reference to our own time and the need to search our own souls. As a piece of creative writing it regrettably lacks substance and reality." H. M. James

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:15 O 31 '42 320w

GLASSTONE, SAMUEL. Introduction to electrochemistry. 557p $5 Van Nostrand 541.37 Electrochemistry 42-14439

"Textbook for students of physical chemistry. Contains many periodical references and each chapter is supplemented by a list of problems. The author is Professor of Chemistry, University of Oklahoma." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Apparently the author prefers to define electrochemistry as that part of chemistry which is 'mainly concerned with the interconversion of electrical and chemical forms of energy,' a definition which is too vague and too general for the present. . . The volume, therefore, becomes another of the excellent monographs on certain phases of theoretical and physical chemistry, but does not justify the title 'Introduction to Electrochemistry' when a comparison is made with other present-day texts on the theory or principles of electrochemistry." C. L. Mantell Chem & Met Eng 49:175 J1 '42 480w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:40 J1 '42

GLEASON, MRS ELIZA V. ATKINS. Southern Negro and the public library; a study of the gov. and administration of public lib. service to Negroes in the South; with a foreword by Louis R. Wilson. (Studies in lib. science) 218p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

027.636 Libraries and Negroes. Libraries—South 41-52062

"This report on the library services doled out to the nearly nine million Negroes residing in the thirteen southern states is the first full treatment on a subject far-reaching in its ramifications. In spite of unavoidable limitations imposed by scarcity of data, Dr. Gleason, recently appointed director of the Atlanta University School of Library Service, has assembled an illuminating array of information—historical, legal, social, and economic—revealing many inadequacies, problems, and opportunities. Especially valuable are the analyses of the legal basis of free public library service for Negroes, the governmental types of public libraries serving Negroes, and the relationship of private secondary schools and colleges for Negroes to community library service." Survey

Reviewed by Garland Downum
Am Pol Sci R 36:390 Ap '42 100w
Booklist 38:171 Ja 15 '42

"What it comes to is a calm and scholarly demonstration of the need of more adequate resources for this type of adult education, and some specific and well studied recommendations."

+ Christian Century 59:84 Ja 21 '42 90w

"The report of this study includes significant facts regarding financial support and administration of library facilities for Negroes and a description of independent Negro libraries and facilities available through Negro schools and colleges. The interpretations are well supported by concrete illustrations, and important statistics are presented in tables. Mrs. Gleason's conclusions are carefully drawn and indicate the practical procedures, in view of the economic and cultural conditions, by means of which improvements may be effected." D. M. Kelley

+ El School J 42:555 Mr '42 480w

Reviewed by T. D. Barker
Library Q 12:290 Ap '42 700w
School & Society 54:628 D 27 '41 50w

Reviewed by D. B. Porter
Social Forces 20:512 My '42 500w

"This modestly presented bit of scholarship, so fully and accurately documented as to be instructive, and so simply written as to be readable, will be of great worth not only to a profession but to a general public increasingly sensitive these days to the obligations and challenges which confront a society aspiring toward democracy." F. B. Washington

+ Survey 78:94 Mr '42 500w

GLEED, IAN RICHARD. Arise to conquer; with a foreword by John Strachey. 223p $2 Random house [8s 6d Gollancz]

940.544 World war, 1939—Aerial operations. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English (W) 42-17671

An English wing-commander describes his life in a fighter squadron of the R. A. F. during the early months of the World war. His descriptions of the day when the English fighters shot down 184 enemy raiders, and the day when he was given the D. F. C. at Buckingham palace are particularly vivid.

"Recommended." H. A. von Urff
+ Library J 67:531 Je 1 '42 60w

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 19 '42 100w
Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 Ag '42 390w
Spec 169:270 S 18 '42 260w

"Every incident is described with almost startling vividness; he makes the happenings of many months ago still live. His story of the last day in France is a particularly fine piece of descriptive writing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p267 My 30 '42 550w

GLESINGER, EGON. Nazis in the woodpile; Hitler's plot for essential raw material. 262p $2 Bobbs

338.1 Wood. Forest products. Germany—Economic policy 42-51192

A survey of Germany's attempts to obtain a corner in the world's wood supply. The reasons for this course the author shows are two: first that the control of oil is contingent on complete victory over the Anglo-American partners but control of wood is not; and second, that wood has been made the backbone of their war economy.

"Douglas Miller, who wrote the preface, is right in saying that the book is as full 'of thrills and intrigue as an old-time international spy tale,' but it is one of the essentially true stories." Paul Hagen

+ Books p25 D 13 '42 900w

Reviewed by H. A. von Urff
Library J 67:1011 N 15 '42 80w

"A simple topic, projected into the midst of the world political and economic history of the last fifteen years and developed into a book at once scholarly and sound in content, yet breath-taking for the reader—here is the undeniable merit of Dr. Egon Glesinger's book." Milos Safranek

+ N Y Times p27 D 13 '42 1500w

New Yorker 18:104 D 5 '42 70w

"Mr. Glesinger's book is written in a lively style, but his preoccupation with his chosen subject: wood—the diplomacy, techniques, and paramount importance of wood—leads him to exaggerate the importance of the connection between Nazi strategy and forestry. Coal, not wood, is the basic raw material from which Germany derives her major supply of oil and, probably, of artificial rubber; the potato plays in Germany's production of alcohol at least as large a role as wood. . . Mr. Glesinger's book, is a valuable commentary on the personalities and mores of European Big Business in the macabre era of appeasement." Robert Strausz-Hupe

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:10 D 26 '42 900w

GLIDDEN, JONATHAN H. (PETER DAWSON, pseud). Gunsmoke graze. 275p $2 Dodd 42-4609

Western story.

Booklist 38:369 Je 1 '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p18 F 22 '42 130w

GLIDDEN, JONATHAN H. (PETER DAWSON, pseud). Long ride. 233p $2 Dodd

42-21088

Western story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p25 S 27 '42 50w

"Packed with action, tense with excitement and suspense, and all exceptionally well written." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p37 O 4 '42 200w

GLIDDEN, MRS SOPHIA (HALL), and MARCHUS, DOROTHY G. Library classification for public administration materials [pub. in cooperation with the A.L.A.J. 512p $6 Public administration

025.4 Classification—Books—Political science 42-1567

